1. IN the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the the word was God. 1, 2. In the beginning of the world before all time, before any thing was created, the ſon of God had a ſubſiſtence, and that ſubſiſtence with his father, of whom he was begotten from all eternity, and was himſelf eternal God, and being by his Father in his eternal purpoſe deſigned to be the Meſſias, who was among the Jews known by the title of the word of God (ſee note on Luke 1. b.) he is here fitly expreſſed by that title, The word.

2. The ſame was in the beginning with God.]

3. All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made. 3. This eternal word of God I mean by which all things were at firſt created.

4. In him was life, and the life was the light of men.] 4. He brought with him that doctrine which is worthily called life, c. 6. 63. and 12. 50. becauſe it leads to holy life, ſuch as God will be ſure to accept of through Chriſt, and to reward eternally (whereas the law was the bringing in of death) ſee c. 10. 10. and this vivifical doctrine was the means deſigned by God to lead and enlighten all mankind, eſpecially the Jews, to tell them their duty, and therefore is called the light of life, c. 8. 12.

5. And the light ſhineth in darkneſs, and the darkneſs * comprehended it not.] 5. Though through the darkneſs of mens hearts, the greateſt part of the Jews themſelves had no fruit or benefit by it.

* received or apprehended, καταλαβεν

6. There was a man ſent from God,] whoſe name was John. 6. There came a man with commiſſion from God, to preach repentance to the Jews.

7. The ſame came for a † witneſs to bear witneſs of the light, that all men through him might believe.] 7. He was by God ſent on purpoſe to teſtify that Chriſt was the Meſſias, the true teacher ſent from heaven, that ſo by that teſtimony of his all men might believe on him.

8. He was not that light, but was ſent to] bear witneſs of that light. 8. This John was not the Meſſias, but the whole end of his miſſion into the world was to

* which coming into the world enlightneth every man

9. That was the true light * which lighteth every man a that cometh into the world.] 9. That word which now I ſpeak of, that is, Chriſt is a. that true light, eminently that, which light is defined to be able to refreſh and warm the coldeſt, and to enlighten the darkeſt heart, and he, as the ſun after a long darkneſs of night, is now riſen in our hemiſphere (ſee v. 10. and. c. 9. 5. and 12. 46.) and being manifeſted to the world, ſhineth forth to every man therein.

10. He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not.] 10. This word was from the beginning in the world, in ſo eminent a manner, that indeed the world was made by him, but the generality of men did not take notice of him.

11. He came unto his own, and his own received him not.] 11. And therefore there being one peculiar nation, the Jews, which were more fully then all the world beſides inſtructed in this truth, he at laſt came to this people, was pleaſed to be born and live, and do miracles among them, and theſe that were his own people did not entertain him as ſent from God, but rejected and put him to death.

12. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the ſons of God, even to them that believe on his name.] 12. But all that received, that is, believ'd on him, were by him advanced to be the adopted ſons of God.

13. Which were b born not of blood, nor of the will of the fleſh, nor of the will of man, but of God.] 13. To wit, thoſe which live according to the will of b. God, and neither the natural nor carnal, nor bare moral principle.

14. And the word was made fleſh, and c † dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory d as of the only begotten * of the Father) full of grace and truth.] 14. And this eternal word was born in human fleſh, aſ- c. ſumed our nature, and in that fleſh of ours, as in a tabernacle, appeared among us moſt gloriouſly, in ſuch a manner as was not competible to any but the one true eternal ſon of God. And whereas the former tabernacle, wherein God was pleaſed to dwell, had in it the law, that miniſtration only of death, 2 Cor. 3. 7. precepts of exact obedience, he now in the tabernacle of his fleſh, by his incarnation, and paſſion, &c is all full of grace, that is, exceeding mercy: and whereas the whole buſineſs of that tabernacle was nothing but ſhadows, he hath brought the ſubſtance and truth with him, which was meant by all thoſe ſhadows, the inward purity, ſhadowed by the legal precepts of circumciſion, &c. and ſpiritual and eternal promiſes, inſtead of thoſe carnal or temporal, ſee v. 17. d. e.

15. John bare witneſs of him; and cryed, ſaying, * This is he of whom I ſpake, He that cometh after me, is preferred before me, for he e was before me.] 15. John the Baptiſt teſtified and proclaimed concerning him, ſaying, He that follows me, whoſe forerunner I am, hath been, and muſt always be preferred infinitely before me, for e. although he appears after me among you in reſpect of his birth and entring on his office, yet he had a being long before me, and this was moſt truly ſaid of the Baptiſt; for he was before the creation of the world, v. 2, 3. Col. 1. 17.

* This was he, ὅτι Ὁ ἦν

16. And of his fulneſs have we all received, and grace for grace.] 16 And being full of all graces, excellencies, perfections, he hath communicated them to us in that degree, as is neceſſary for us, and in proportion to his abundant charity and goodneſs toward us, we Chriſtians which are his body or fellow-members of his humane nature, receive grace and mercy flowing from him to us (ſee v. 14. and note on 1 Pet. 3. c. and Acts 2. f.)

17. For tho' the law were given by Moſes from God long ago, yet the Goſpel, called Grace, v. 14. (ſee note on Heb. 13. d.) and truth, as oppoſite to the ſhadows and ceremonies of the Law was to be brought in by Jeſus Chriſt.

17. For the law was given by Moſes, but grace and truth came by Jeſus Chriſt.]

18. God is inviſible, and not approachable by us, and ſo his will, and the knowledge of his attributes cannot be conveighed to us but by ſome interceſſor, and of this ſort none can be comparable to Chriſt Jeſus, who is next unto the father, and moſt dearly beloved by him, and knows moſt of his mind (ſee note on Mat. 8. g.) and his end of coming into the world was to declare this unto us.

18. No man hath ſeen God at any time; the only begotten ſon, which is in the boſom of the father, he hath declared him.]

19, 20. Now when the Jews ſent meſſengers to John Baptiſt as he was preaching and baptizing, to know who he was, this was conſtantly his anſwer, that he was not the Meſſias prophecy'd of, and ſo long expected by them.

19. And this is the record of John, when the Jews ſent Prieſts and Levites from Jeruſalem to ask him, Who art thou?

20. And he confeſſed and denied not, but confeſſed, I am not the Chriſt.]

21. No nor Elias, no nor the prophet, (ſome ſpecial prophet, perhaps Jeremy, which had been among them) the return of whom the Jews expected before Elias, as him before the Meſſias.

23. He that was prophecied of by Eſaias in thoſe words, Iſa. 40. 3. (ſee Mat. 3. 3.) The voice of one, &c.

24. And they which were ſent, were of the Phariſees.

25. Why then doſt thou receive diſciples and proſelytes, or followers, and that after the ſolemn manner of receiving proſelytes, by way of baptiſm, or waſhing.

25. And they asked him, and ſaid unto him, [Why baptizeſt thou then,] if thou be not that Chriſt, nor Elias, neither that prophet?

The day after the return of the Phariſees, John ſeeing Jeſus coming to him, ſaid, Behold the perſon ſent from God, as a lamb prepared for the ſlaughter (in whom are ſumm'd up and compleated all the typical Moſaical preſcriptions of lambs to be ſacrificed, either in their daily ſacrifices, or at the paſſover) who ſhall thereby obtain pardon from God for that ſin that all the world is engaged in, on condition they now reform at his coming.

31. And tho' I was not able to diſcriminate him from others, yet a little before his baptiſm it was revealed to me (as appears Mat. 3. 14.) and at his baptiſm by the deſcent of the holy Ghoſt upon him, Mat. 3. 16. I was clearly told it, that he was the Meſſias which was to come into the world; and the grand deſign of my coming and gathering diſciples was by that means to make this people take notice of and receive Chriſt.

31. And I knew him not: but that he ſhould be made manifeſt to Iſrael, therefore am I come baptizing with water.]

37. Hereupon thoſe two diſciples hearing him give that teſtimony of Jeſus, parted from him and followed Jeſus.

37. And the two diſciples heard him ſpeak, and they followed Jeſus.]

38. What would ye have?

38. Then Jeſus turned and ſaw them following, and ſaith unto them, [What ſeek ye?] They ſaid unto him, Rabbi, (which is to ſay, being intepreted, Maſter) where dwelleſt thou?

39. Four in the afternoon.

39. He ſaith unto them, Come and ſee. They came and ſaw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was about [the tenth hour.]

40. One of the two that heard thoſe words of John concerning Jeſus, and which thereupon followed Jeſus, v. 37. was, that Andrew which was brother to Simon, after ſirnamed Peter. 46. And Nathanael ſaid unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip ſaith unto him, Come and ſee.]

46. Nathanael argued againſt this from a known obſervation among the Jews, that Nazareth being in Galilee, and Galilee, as they conceived, looked on by God as a mean deſpicable place, out of which, ſay they, c. 8. 52. never any prophet aroſe, it was incredible that any one born in Nazareth ſhould be the Meſſias. To this deceivable arguing Philip gives no other anſwer then this, that if he would go to him, and ſee and hear him, he would ſoon be of another mind.

47. Jeſus ſaw Nathanael coming to him, and ſaith of him, behold an Iſraelite indeed, in whom is no guile.]

47. As Nathanael made his approach to Jeſus, as ſoon as he was within diſtance of hearing him, Jeſus ſaid, Lo here is a man which is truly an Iſraelite, a man of that ſimplicity and integrity that is much valued with God, of that temper deſcribed in Jacob, Gen. 25. 27.

48. Nathanael ſaid unto him, Whence knoweſt thou me, Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Before that Philip called thee, when thou waſt under the fig-tree, I ſaw thee.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Ἐρχόμενον εἰς τὸν κόσμον.

V. 9. That cometh into the world] That ἐρχόμενον here may be the Nominative caſe in the Neuter gender, and ſo agree with ὃ which. as well as the accuſative Maſculine, and ſo agree with πάντα ἄνθρωπον, every man, is evident. And that it is ſo, may appear by the title, by which Chriſt (that is meant by the light, which is the Antecedent to ὃ which) is ſo frequently expreſs'd in Scripture, that of he that cometh, or cometh into the world. Of the title ὁ ἐρχόμενος, ſee Mat. 11. note a. and for this encreaſe of it, ἐρχόμενος εἰς τὸν κόσμον, coming into the world, ſee John 12. 46. I came a light into the world, directly parallel with this here. Only here it is to be obſerved, that this coming into the world, doth not refer to Chriſts birth in the world, but to the manifeſtation of him to the world, his entring on his office of preaching the will of God to them. So as his coming may be all one with his being ſent, that is, his Commiſſion from God to declare his will unto the world, as John 8. 42. I came not of my ſelf, but he ſent me. So c. 18. 37. For this was I born, and for this I came into the world; whereas coming into the world differs from birth, ſo is it in the next words ſpecified what it peculiarly belongs to, I came into the world that I may bear witneſs to the truth. Thus it is uſed in the other word ſent of the Apoſtles, where it cannot poſſibly be underſtood of their birth, John 17. 18. As thou haſt ſent me into the world, ſo alſo have I ſent them into the World. So 1 Tim 1. 15. Jeſus Chriſt came into the world, and here John 11. 27. I believe that thou art Chriſt the ſon of God, ὁ εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐρχόμενος, that cometh into the world; which was certainly deſigned by Martha as an expreſſion of her belief that he was the Meſſias.

b. Γεννᾶσθαι ἐκ Θεοῦ

V. 13. Born not of blood] To be born of any thing ſignifies to receive his beginning or principle of life and motion from any thing; and ſo here to be born of God is to have received ſome ſpecial influence from him, & proportionably to be a ſon of God is that ſtate which is anſwerable to ſuch a principle, a life proportionable to ſuch a beginning, that higher pitch of Chriſtian living now under the Goſpel. And in oppoſition to that, Firſt, Thoſe that are born of blood, (which is the livelieſt expreſſion of our corrupt birth, or natural eſtate) are thoſe that live the ἀνθρικὸν καὶ πρῶτον βίον, that natural, heathen, firſt life, ſaith Clemens Alexandrinus, the life of the natural man; Secondly, Thoſe that are born of the will of the fleſh are carnal men, thoſe that follow their own vitious carnal will; and Thirdly, Thoſe that are born of the will of man (tho' literally that may note thoſe that are adopted by man, yet) by way of Accommodation, and ſo as may be agreeable to the former phraſes, they ſeem to be thoſe that by the influences of that higher rational principle, live according to the rule of rational nature, that is, of unregenerate morality, to which the rules of Chriſts law ſuperadding much of light and perfection, the believers and receivers of Chriſt are here defined to be thoſe that live according to thoſe rules, that higher principle (and ſo are ſaid to be born of God) and not according to any of theſe lower ſtates.

c. Σκηνῶν

V. 14 Dwelt] What is meant by God's being ſaid to be preſent, or to appear in the Old Teſtament, hath been expreſs'd, Mat. 3. k. to wit, that the Angels which are the courtiers of heaven do appear (as they are wont to do) in ſome ſhining glorious manner. This is wont by the Hebrews to be called שכינה the habitation, or preſence, of God, and in Greek δόξα glory, and ἐπιφάνεια appearing. So Num. 16. 10. the glory of the Lord appeared, and v. 42. the cloud covered, and the glory appeared, and God ſpeaks from thence. So when the glory is ſaid to be departed from Iſrael, 1 Sam. 4. 21. 'tis clear that by glory is meant the preſence of God, which was ſignified by the Ark, and ſo in many other places, ſee note on 1 Pet. 4. f. and 2 Pet. 1. 3. and 17. Rom. 9. c. So Rev. 21. when it had been ſaid of the New Jeruſalem, that 'twas σκηνὴ the Tabernacle of God with us, v. 3. that being repeated again, v. 11. is ſaid in theſe words, ἔχουσα δόξαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, having the glory of God. See Rev. 21. 23. alſo. And becauſe this appearance of God in the fleſh was the moſt viſible permanent, and ſo remarkable appearance, wherein he ever exhibited himſelf among us, therefore it is that here 'tis expreſs'd (as it were by the Schechina) by ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν, he had his Tabernacle pitch'd among us (the Greek σκηνόω coming immediately from the Hebrew שכן and differing from it only by the Greek termination) agreeable to that Prophecy of Noah, Gen. 9. 27. in the Targums underſtanding of it, that God ſhould dwell in the Tents of Sem, that is, ſaith that Chaldee Paraphraſt, that his Schechina ſhould inhabit in the Tabernacle of Sem. The ſame is expreſs'd here again by δόξα in the other part of the verſe, the glory (and ſo moſt probably, 1 Pet. 4. 14. and John 12. 41.) which is the other expreſſion of the preſence of the divine majeſty, and accordingly Procopius on Iſai. c. 40. interprets δόξαν κυρίου, τὸν υἱὸν, the glory of the Lord to be the ſon, who, ſaith he, is above all creatures, of the ſame divinity with the father, but eſpecially being man is capable of this title, title, θαυμαλυργῶν ἀ ἀὶ τῷ τλῶ κλίσιν μεταπλάττων τῷ ῥήματι, γενόμενο πᾶσι σωτῆρι, &c. always working miracles, and transforming the creature by his word, and bringing salvation to all at this his appearance, *Tit.*2. 11. For tho' this incarnation of Christ was the greatest humbling of him, yet was it nevertheless the greatest manifestation of his glory, never so much of the divine power and glory was seen upon the earth, as in this. Thus John 2.11. Christs working miracles, is said to be the means of manifesting his glory, that is, of evidencing the inhabitation of the Godhead in them.

d. Ib. As of the only begotten] For the signification of the particle ὡς as, St. Chrysostoms note is worth reciting, οὐχ ὁμοιώσεως, saith he, ἔστιν ἡ φωνὴ παραβολῆς, ἀλλὰ βεβαιώσεως, καὶ ἀναμφισβητήτου διορισμοῦ, It is not a note of similitude or comparison, but of confirmation, and unquestionable definition; as if saith he, the Evangelist had said, we saw his glory, such as became, and was fit for the only begotten, and true natural son of God, the king of all. To the same purpose saith Adrian, in his εἰσαγωγὴ to the Scripture. *p.*9. Τῶ Ὡς διχῶς λέγει, ἤτοι κατὰ παραβολῶ, ἢ κατὰ βεβαίωσιν, The Scripture useth ὡς, as, Two ways; First, By way of comparison; and Secondly, Of confirmation: and as an instance of the latter he gives ὡς ἀγαθὸς ὁ θεὸς τῷ Ισραὴλ, Truly God is good to Israel, Ps. 73.1. and this text, where, saith he, 'tis used ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀληθοῦς, the glory of the true only begotten son.

e. Πρῶτο- V.15. Was before me] What is the notion of the word πρῶτος first in the New Testament, may here be fitly defined; first, It signifies in many places (being spoken of a person or persons, especially when it hath a Genitive case annexed to it) a ruler or principal person. So Mark 6.21. Τοῖς πρώτοις τῆς Γαλιλαίας, the principal men of Galilee. So Luke 19.47. πρῶτοι τοῦ λαοῦ, the Ruler or Elders, of the people. So Acts 13.50. πρώτους τῆς πόλεως, the governors of the city. So Acts 28.7. πρῶτο τῆς νήσου, the ruler of the Island, and v.17. πρώτους τῶν Ιουδαίων, the rulers of the Jews, that is, of their consistory, which they then had at Rome. In this sense the phrase πρῶτός μου, cannot be taken here, so as to be rendred, my Lord, my Prince, or my captain, for that is certainly the meaning of the phrase precedent ἔμπροσθέν μου γέγονεν, he was preferr'd before me, as appears by v.27. comp. with *Mat.*3.11. Mar. 1.7. *Lu.*3.16. there by the mention of the shoe &c. 'tis plain, that those 4places are parallel, & that which is ἔμπροσθέν μου γέγονεν, was prefer'd before me, in this is by all the other Evang. rend. ἰσχυρότερός μου ἐστὶν, is stronger then I. And therefore S. Chrys. here interprets ἔμπροσθέν μου, before me, by λαμπρότερο, ἐντιμότερο, more excellent, more honourable. From this clear notion of ἔμπροσθεν, precedent, for priority of dignity, will depend the just notion of πρῶτός μου, annexed thereto by the Causal ὅτι for, as the proof of the former, & so somewhat different from it, or else it would be the proving of idem per idem, the same by it's self. Thence it follows, that ἔμπροσθεν noting Christs dignity above Johns, πρῶτός μου, must not be rendred in that sense, and so it remains, that it be referred to priority of time, ὅτι πρῶτός μου ἦν, for (altho' he was born after me, and not yet entred on his office, yet) he was before me, he had a being long, even infinitely before me. The only exception against this rendring of πρῶτο is that the word is of the Superlative degree, not of the Comparative. But that is easily answered, by remembring, that in the New Testament the degrees of comparison are promiscuously used, taken one for another, and that on occasion of the Hebrew idiom, which hath not those degrees of comparison, which other languages have. Thus is μία one, used for πρώτη first, Luke 24.1. and others the like. And thus is πρῶτο first, in the Superlative used for the Comparative πρότερο, former, so 'tis evidently in this Gospel, c. 15. 18. ἐμὲ πρῶτον ὑμῶν μεμίσηκεν, the world hated me before you; *c.*20.8. ὁ ἐλθὼν πρῶτο, he that came first, signifies him that came before Peter, v. 3. and so is taken for the comparative πρότερο. And so when Christ is called the πρωτότοκο πάσης κτίσεως, *Col.*1. 15. literally the first born of all the creation, it must be interpreted, as it is in the Nicene Creed, according to this notion of πρῶ-

Πρωτότοκο πάσης κτίσεως. Μία

τοῦ, begotten of his father before the whole creation, or as it follows, *v.*17. πρὸ πάντων, he is before all things. Thus is the word used sometimes in humane Greek authors also, as πρῶτον Δαρείου in * Aristophanes, before Darius; and that it must be so here appears by the conjunction of μοῦ to it, which (as by being in the Genitive case, it is fit to be joined with a word of the comparative degree, so) by being of a single person, uncapable of distribution or plurality, cannot belong to a Superlative.

* Ορν.

V.29. The next day] Η ἐπαύριον signifies here the day immediately following, not (according to the latitude of the Hebrew) מחר the morrow, that is, any part of the following time: For thus I conceive the whole series and course of this story in St. John is to be made up. As in the other Evangelists, *Mat.*3. 11. Mark 1.7. Luke 3. 16. the testimonies of John Baptist concerning Christ are set down, before Christ was particularly made known unto him, so now, the Spirit having visibly descended on him at his baptism (as the same Evangelists agree in relating) this Evangelist farther mentions John Baptists subsequent testimonies of him, founded in that demonstration of the Spirit, the descending on him. Such is that mention'd, *v.*15. where the Baptist saith, This was he that I spake of, this person on whom the Spirit so visibly descended after my baptizing of him, was he to whom my former obscurer testimonies belonged. And this seems to have been delivered by the Baptist at the time of Christs absence in the wilderness forty days (set down by the other Evangelists) and so all that second testimony (mentioned, *v.*19. &c. to *v.*28.) where of him he saith, *v.*26. μέσος ὑμῶν ἕστηκεν, ὃν ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε, there stood among you, one whom ye knew not, referring again to that time of Christs being baptized of John, at which time he saw (that is, I conceive, John Baptist saw) the Spirit descend upon him, *Mat.*3.16. and so again, Mark 1.10. εὐθὺς ἀναβαίνων, John coming out of the water with him, from baptizing him, saw the heavens opened, &c. noting this descent of the Spirit upon him to have been particularly seen by this Baptist, by which he was enabled thus to testify of him. This second testimony of Johns was caused by the Jews sending to him from Jerusalem, to know whether John were the Messias or no, and this still in the time of Christs absence, and then 'tis added τῇ ἐπαύριον, the day after the return of those messengers, the day after this testimony, and answer of his to the Jews, Jesus came back from the desert to Jordan, where John was, and there John sees him, *v.*29. and testifies again of him at large, *v.*35. and the next day after this is the beginning of a new account, v. 35. and again τῇ ἐπαύριον, v. 44. the next day is the second day of that new account, and then 'tis added distinctly, τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ τρίτῃ, *c.*2.1. on the third day.

f. * Επαύριον.

V.42. Brought him to Jesus] What is here said of Andrews and Peter's coming to Christ, was sometime before their forsaking their trades, and following him in the other Gospels. For here the next day after Christs returning from the wilderness to Jordan, John Baptist is standing still, ver. 35. and two disciples with him, one of them was Andrew, ver. 40. John seeing Christ, points to him in their hearing, and by so doing, doth in a manner put them off from continuing with him, and fastens them on Christ, saying, Behold the Lamb of God, &c. *v.*36. Andrew and the other (who very probably was John the writer of this Gospel, who therefore names the circumstances of the time of day, ver. 40. and the very words that pass'd so punctually, but after this manner in other places conceals his name) go presently to Christ, and ask him where he abides, follow him thither, spend some time with him that evening, soon after that Andrew reveals this to Simon, and both of them together go to Christ, *v.*42. As soon as Christ saw them, he told Simon, that his name was Simon, and that he was the son of Jona or John, and that his name should be changed into a Syriack word, that signifyed a stone, that is πέτρα or πέτρο in Greek, noting that he should be built upon (or added to) Christ, superstructed ſtructed on that great corner ſtone (in this building, the Church, which was now to be erected) and in his chooſing & ſending out Apoſtles ſhould be the firſt, πρῶτος Σίμων, Mat. 10.2. Now of theſe three, Andrew and that other diſciple (probably John) and Peter, none did immediately join themſelves to Chriſt, ſo as to accompany him as yet, but of this ſort, the firſt that we find is Philip, v. 44. whom Chriſt calls (in his journey to Galilee) to follow or go along with him (and therefore the πρωτοκλησία the privilege of their firſt call belongs to him) he doth ſo, and then goes a little way off to Nathanael, and brings him to Chriſt, v. 43. and he is received by Chriſt to be a diſciple alſo (whether choſen after to be one of the Apoſtles under the name of Bartholomew, who is moſtly, and in the Goſpels conſtantly, joined to Philip, and may be be but the expreſſion of Nathanael, by ſignifying him the ſon of Tholemee, as Simon is called Bar, i.e. ſon of Jonah, or John, it is not certain, tho' that he was ſo, 'tis very probable by John 21.22. where Nathanael of Cana in Galilee is named with the reſt of the diſciples who were all Apoſtles.) After this Chriſt goes into Cana of Galilee to the marriage there, c. 2 he and his diſciples with him, v. 2. which notes that he had ſuch conſtant followers; then he and his diſciples went to Capernaum, thence to Jeruſalem at the Paſſover, v. 13. and there caſt out the buyers and ſellers out of the Temple. Then after the diſcourſe with Nicodemus, c. 3. Jeſus and his diſciples went into Judea, and continued there and baptized, v. 22 (that is, his diſciples baptized, tho' he did not, c 4. 2. which ſignifies ſure that he now had diſciples) at which time 'tis ſaid, that John baptized in Ænon, v. 23. and ſome farther time it was before John was put in priſon, for after this, 'tis ſaid, as yet he was not, c. 3 24. But when John was impriſoned, Mat. 4. 12. Mar. 1. 14. then again a ſecond time Jeſus goes into Galilee, Luk. 4. 14. & Joh. 4. 3. and there within a while, walking by the ſea of Galilee, he ſaw Simon and Andrew a fiſhing (as yet living in their vocation) Mat. 4. 18. Mar. 1. 16. and upon the great draught of fiſh, Peter at that time was ſo aſtoniſhed, and Chriſt ſo revealed himſelf to them, that they all, Peter, Andrew, James and John, left all, and followed him; but this clearly after all that was related in the three firſt, and part of the 4th ch. of this Goſpel. By this ordering and marſhalling the Evangeliſts in this particular, as the perplexities of the ſtory will be a little cleared, ſo 'twill alſo appear, what ground there is for the aſſerting the πρωτοκλησία, or priviledge of the firſt call to belong to St. Peter. All that can be ſaid of him in that particular is his coming to Chriſt with Andrew, when Chriſt told him his name ſhould be changed into Cephas, &c. But at that time Chriſt bad him not follow him, and after that 'tis clear he parted from him, and followed his trade ſome time, till Chriſts ſecond coming into Galilee, and 'till after John's impriſonment, and if that which Chriſt then ſaid to him (joined with his coming to, but not ſtaying with him) ſhould be thought ſufficient to date his calling from thence, yet then are Andrew and that other diſciple, (moſt probably St. John the writer of this Goſpel, who had the honour of the πρωτοκλισία, the uppermoſt place next Chriſt at meals, lay with his head at Chriſts boſom; ſee note on Mat. 8. g.) in all reaſon to be reſolved on, as πρωτοκλητοι, the firſt called, having gone to Chriſts abode, and continued that evening with him, c. 1. 40. But if this be not ſufficient to ſettle the πρωτοκλησία in either of theſe, becauſe they and St. Peter returned to their trades 'till after Johns impriſonment, then ſure muſt it be placed ſome where elſe; for 'tis clear Chriſt had diſciples before that, who baptized many, and 'tis clear of Philip that he followed Chriſt, as his inſeparable attendant, & there is little reaſon to doubt it of Nathanael, and ſo in no reſpect can it be ſettled in St. Peter, who (yet farther) when he did forſake all and follow Chriſt, had three more Andrew, and James, and John, which accompanied him in ſo doing.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND the third day there was a * marriage in Cana of Galilee, and the mother of Jeſus was there.

2. And both Jeſus † was called and his diſciples to the marriage.

3. And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jeſus [ſaith unto him, They want wine.]

3. Mention'd the want of wine to Chriſt as an occaſion and ſeaſon of revealing his power, by ſhewing a miracle to all there preſent in ſupplying them.

4. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Woman [a] what have I to do with thee? mine hour is not yet come.]

4. But Chriſt repreſſed her, ſaying, that this matter of his office to which he was ſent by God, was a thing, wherein ſhe, tho' his earthly parent, was not to interpoſe; farther telling her, that 'twas not yet ſeaſonable for him to ſhew forth his power unto all, intimating his purpoſe that he would do it more privately then by her words ſhe appeared to deſign it.

5. His mother ſaith unto the ſervants, Whatſoever he ſaith unto you do it.]

5. Whereupon, that none but the waiters might take notice of it (who knowing the wine was all ſpent, could not chooſe but know if any ſupply were made) ſhe bids them be obedient to him, and without any noiſe, do what he ſhould bid them.

6. And there were ſet there ſix * water-pots of ſtone, after the manner of the † purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins a piece.]

6. And there were there ſix veſſels of ſtone, ciſterns of a competent bigneſs, out of which they were wont to draw water for every mans uſe; theſe were ſet there to waſh in, after the manner of the Jews, who conſtantly waſh before meals. See note on Mark 7. a.

7. Jeſus ſaith unto them, Fill the waterpots with water. And they filled them up to the brim.

8. And he ſaith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the Governour of the feaſt. And they bear it.

9. When the ruler of the feaſt had taſted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was (but the ſervants that drew the water, knew) the Governour of the feaſt called the bridegroom,

10. And ſaith unto him [every man at the beginning doth ſet forth good wine, and when men have well drunk, then that which is * worſe, but thou haſt kept the good wine until now.]

10. It is the manner of men at feaſts, to bring their gueſts the ſtronger, richer wines at the beginning, then that which is not ſo rich, but thou haſt reſerved the richeſt piece till the latter end of the feaſt.

11. This * beginning of miracles did Jeſus in Cana of Galilee, and [manifeſted forth his glory, and his diſciples believed on him.]

11. Gave evidence of the preſence of his divinity (ſee note on c. 1. b.) and accordingly his diſciples believed on him, as the ſon of God.

12. After this he went down to Capernaum, he and his mother, and his brethren, and his diſciples, and they continued there not many days.

13. And the Jews Paſſover was at hand, and Jeſus went up to Jeruſalem,

14. And found in the Temple thoſe [that ſold oxen, and ſheep, and doves, and the † changers of money ſitting.]

14. That ſet up a trade to ſell ſacrifices to them that came thither from far, and that returned money by way of exchange (ſee note on Mat. 21. b.)

* marriage-feaſt, γάμος.

† and his diſciples were invited to the feaſt, ἐκλήθη καὶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν γάμον.

* ciſterns, ὑδρίαι

† cleanſing or waſhing καθαρισμὸν.

* ſmaller, τὸν ἐλάσσω

* Jeſus made the beginning of his miracles, ἐποίησε ταύτην ἀρχὴν τῶν σημείων ὁ Ἰησοῦς

† exchangers, κερματιστὰς

15. And uſing no other weapon but only a whip of little cords, which he found there: he drave them all out of the Temple, no man making any reſiſtance (in like manner as he after did again, Mat. 21. 12.)

15. And when had made a ſcourge of ſmall cords, he drove them all out of the Temple] and the ſheep and the Oxen, and poured out the * changers money, and overthrew their Tables.

* money-merchants κολλυβιςῶν see note on Mat. 21. b.

16. The temple ſet apart for Gods peculiar preſence and ſervice, a ſhop of trade to buy and ſell in it.

16. And ſaid unto them that ſold doves, Take theſe things hence, make not [my fathers houſe a houſe of merchandiſe.]

17. Interpreted that act of his, as an act of zeal, by which ſome malefactors were puniſhed in the very fact, without legal proceſs and condemnation among the Jews, and to that purpoſe call'd to mind that of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 69. 9. The zeal of thy houſe hath fed or gnawed upon me, and the reproaches of them that reproached thee are fallen upon me, that is, I am as tender of any diſhonour done to thy houſe or thee, as if it were done to my ſelf, ſee Rom. 15. 3. and ſo am ſtirr'd up with zeal to vindicate it.

17. And his diſciples [remembred that it was written, The zeal of thine houſe hath eaten me up.]

18. Hereupon the Jews came & queſtion'd him ſaying, What commiſſion doſt thou bring? what evidence of thy coming from God, or, what miracles doſt thou do by which it may appear to us that thou art inveſted with ſuch authority, as theſe acts of thine pretend to?

18. Then anſwered the Jews and ſaid unto him, What ſign ſheweſt thou us, * ſeeing that thou doſt theſe things?]

* that ὅτι

19. Jeſus ſaid unto them, the ſign that is to be ſhewn to you is this, that when you have put me to death, I now tell you, that I ſhall within three days riſe again, ſee Mat. 12. 39.

19. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Deſtroy this temple, and in three days I will raiſe it up.]

20. This being ſaid by him in a parabolical manner calling his body this temple; and the putting him to death, the deſtroying of this temple; and his reſurrection, the rearing it again; they miſtook his meaning, and thought he had ſpoken of the Temple of Jeruſalem (and laid it up as an accuſation againſt him, Mat. 26. 61.) and argued againſt it, as an impoſſible thing for him to rebuild that in ſo ſmall a time.

20. Then ſaid the Jews, Forty and ſix years was this Temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days?]

21. But the truth was, he ſpake of his bodies being kill'd, and riſing again the third day, which after the manner of prophets he thus expreſs'd, and mentioned this as the miracle by which his doctrine was to be confirm'd.

21. But he ſpake of the Temple of his body.]

22. This ſpeech of his the diſciples called to mind after his reſurrection, & upon that, added to many other completions of his own predictions, and the predictions of Scripture concerning him, they believed thoſe prophecies as fulfill'd in him, and believed his own words as agreeable thereto, and ſo reſolved that he was the Meſſias.

22. When therefore he was riſen from the dead, his diſciples remembred that he ſaid this unto them, and they believed the Scripture, and the word which Jeſus had ſaid.]

23. Many others did ſo alſo at Jeruſalem when he came thither, and acknowledged the power by which he acted to be divine, being convinced thereof by the miracles which he did there at the time of the feaſt of the Paſſover and unleavened bread.

23. Now when he was in Jeruſalem at the Paſſover, on the feaſt day, many believed in his name, when they ſaw the miracles which he did.]

24, 25. But Jeſus knowing the ſecrets of Mens hearts, and wanting no information concerning any man (being able to dive into the inſide of a man, into his very thoughts) conſequently diſcern'd what kind of belief this was in theſe men, how unlikely to bear any ſtreſs, to hold out in time of temptation, and his time of ſuffering being not yet come, he would not venture himſelf to the hazard of their unconſtancy, and therefore did not ſo freely converſe as to abide and eat and drink with them.

24. But Jeſus did not commit himſelf unto them, becauſe he knew * all men.
25. And needed not that any ſhould teſtify of man: for he knew what was in man.]

*all things or, every man, for ſome ancient copies read, πάντα

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοί

V. 4. What have I to do with thee] 'tis not eaſy to reſolve what is the importance of this ſpeech of Chriſt to his mother, τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοί; What have I to do with thee? yet by the next verſe, which tells us what Mary did upon it, (viz. ſpake to the attendants, that they ſhould do whatſoever Chriſt bad them) 'tis clear that ſhe did not conclude from his ſpeech, that he would not make uſe of his power to help them to wine, but directly the contrary, that ſhe believed that he would. And 'tis clear by v. 7. that Chriſt immediately goes about it, bids them fill the water pots of water, and immediately turns it into wine. By this 'tis manifeſt that the meaning of Chriſts ſpeech muſt not be, that his time of working miracles was not yet come, but either that it was not yet the fitteſt point of time to do this particular miracle, but 'twould be more fit, becauſe more beneficial, when the wine was quite ſpent, or elſe, that 'twas not yet his time to do his miracles ſo openly & publickly, as Mary ſeemed to believe (and his kindred after inſiſt on, c. 7. 4.) but Chriſt frequently provides againſt (for what reaſons, ſee Mat. 8. b.) to this latter the circumſtances of the context conſider'd all together do moſt encline, and accordingly the reſult is, that tho' he meant to work this miracle, yet he would do it more privately, ſo as it ſhould appear to none of the gueſts, or to the bridegroom, or to the ruler of the feaſt, but only to the waiters and his own diſciples and mother, that came along with him. This is manifeſt by the event, for v. 9. the ἀρχιτρίκλινος, the manager, or orderer of the feaſt knew it not, but only they that drew the water, that is the waiters; nor is there any farther publick notice taken of the miracle, but only that the Evangeliſt mentions it, as a beginning or præludium of his σημεῖα ſigns or wonders, v. 11. by which by little & little he made himſelf known to the world, and manifeſted his glory, that is, made it appear that the Godhead dwelt in him, but this not to all, but his diſciples, of whom peculiarly 'tis added, that they believed on him. As form that for of ſpeech τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοί, it is only a form of repreſſing (as much as ἔα let alone, with which 'tis joined, Mark 1. 24.) and ſo is uſed 2 Sam. 19. 22. Mat. 8. 29. Mar. 5. 7. Luke 8. 28. to expreſs diſlike to the propoſal, in the firſt, in the reſt, to deſire him to let them alone, not to meddle with them. And accordingly it here ſignifies Chriſts diſlike of Maries propoſal, which was (without any care of ſecrecy) publickly to ſupply them with wine, now it was wanting. Which manner of doing it Chriſt diſlikes and gives his reaſon for it, οὔπω ἥκει, 'twas not yet fit to do his miracles ſo publickly. The truth of this interpretation, by which 'tis granted that Chriſt did not ſay, that it was not his ſeaſon to do the miracle (but only not to do it ſo publickly) is ſo convincing, that Gregory Nyſſen, rather then he would grant the meaning of it to be, that his time of doing any miracle was not yet come, thought himſelf obliged to read the latter part of the verſe by way of interrogation alſo, Is not my hour yet come? and to interpret it thus, Am not I yet of age to be maſter of my own actions? wilt thou rule me now at this age ſtill? But there is no need of this altering the punctation, Juſtyn Martyr, or the Author of the Queſt. and Anſw. ad Ortho. would have it rendred thus literally, What is it to me and thee? that is, the care of providing wine belongs not to thee and me? p. 136. but the firſt interpretation is moſt ſatisfactory and beyond exception.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

1. THere was a man of the Phariſees named Nicodemus, [a Ruler of the Jews.]

1. One of the Jewiſh Sanhedrim.

2. The ſame came to Jeſus by night, and ſaid unto him, Rabbi, We know that thou * art a teacher come from God: for no man can do theſe miracles that thou doſt, except God be with him.]

2. Who durſt not be ſeen or known to come to Jeſus & therefore did it by night, and inſtruct us in his way, be allowed by God to confirm falſities.

* come from God a teacher, ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐλήλυθας διδάσκαλος

c 7. 50. and 19. 9. and ſaid unto him, Maſter we are convinced that thou art ſent by God to teach for this thy miracles teſtify, which could not be done without God's ſpecial hand, and would never confirm falſities.

3. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot ſee the kingdom of God.]

3. Jeſus willing to undeceive him, & that he might not flatter himſelf, that the acknowleding of him to be the Meſſias, or ſent from God, would be ſufficient, without the undertaking his ſervice, owning and confeſſing of him (in deſpight of all fear of men) without being his Proſelyte, and forſaking his former courſe, tells him poſitively, that unleſs he would be born again, which is a phraſe to denote a proſelyte of Chriſt, and when occaſion required, forſake all for Chriſts ſake, even his former courſe of life, and dignity in the Jewiſh ſtate (contrary to his coming to him by night, and acknowledging him ſecretly) he ſhould not ſee the kingdom of God, be a Chriſtian here (which is a priviledge of a greater hight, then that of being a Jew, or a member of their Sanhedrim) or a Saint hereafter.

4. Nicodemus ſaith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the ſecond time into his mothers womb and be born?]

4. Nicodemus attending only to the literal ſound, not ſenſe of Chriſts words, asks how a man of full years can again be born.

5. Jeſus anſwered, Verily, verily, I ſay unto thee, Except a man be a born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.]

5. Jeſus anſwers him, except a man be receiv'd as a proſelyte, and that not of an ordinary ſort, ſuch as are among you Jews, but a Chriſtian Proſelyte, ſuch as are received by baptiſm in the Chriſtian Church, ſo as to undertake the law of Chriſt, and renounce his former (whether heathen, or) Jewiſh courſe, the firſt expreſt by being waſht in water, the ceremony of the Jews proſelytiſm (now alſo made uſe of by Chriſt) by which a man was ſaid by the Jews to be new born, and accordingly ſo here in an high degree; the ſecond by being born of the Spirit, entring on a new pure ſpiritual life, and not only paſſing under thoſe external waſhings (agreeable unto which it was, that Chriſts diſciples were admitted not only by water, as Johns and the Jews Proſelytes were, but by the Holy Ghoſts deſcending upon them, ſee note on Acts 1.a.) he cannot enter, &c

6. That which is born of the fleſh is fleſh; and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit.

6. The actions of a natural man, which hath none of this new Chriſtian birth, that hath not thus given himſelf up to a Chriſtian life, will be but natural actions, at leaſt but external purifications, reſtraints of ſin in the outward part. But the actions of a ſpiritual perſon, thus born anew from that higher principle, a proſelyte of Chriſts, they will be ſpiritual, purifications of the very Spirit.

7. Marvel not that I ſaid unto thee, Ye muſt be born again.]

7. And therefore you are not to wonder that I tell you of the neceſſity of this new birth, undertaking this new courſe, and forſaking the former, nor to think there is nothing in it, becauſe 'tis not viſible to your eyes: Many things have great force in them, whoſe beginnings are not viſible to the eye, or at all known by men.

8. The wind bloweth where it liſteſt, and thou hearest the ſound thereof, but canſt not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: So is every one that is born of the Spirit.

8. As for example; the wind which, tho' no body knows from what parts preciſely it comes, what beginning it hath, and how produced, and when it riſeth, or what becomes of it when it ceaſeth, yet hath moſt diſcernible effects, comes with a great force and noiſe (which is evidence enough, that there is ſuch a thing) is heard by all men: And ſo is it in this matter, he that is born anew, that undertakes to be a proſelyte of Chriſt he by the Spirit of God and thoſe influences that are conveyed to him from Chriſt, is able to do wonderful things, is diſcernibly another kind of man then he was before, and ſo his new birth is, and muſt be ſeen by the fruits and growth, &c. diſcernible to himſelf and others, though the beginnings or ſource, or means of conveighing this unto him be undiſcernible. See Mark 4.26.

9. Nicodemus anſwered and ſaid unto him, How can theſe things be?]

9. Nicodemus ſtill continued ignorant of the meaning and poſſibility of the truth of what Chriſt ſaid, and therefore ſtill queſtion'd how this could be?

10. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Art thou a maſter of Iſrael, and knoweſt not theſe things?]

10. To which Jeſus anſwered, This that I ſay of new birth in baptiſm, being not only agreeable to, but perfectly a piece of your doctrine about proſelytes, 'tis ſtrange that thou being a learned Jew, a Phariſee, and Maſter in Iſrael, ſhould not underſtand it: ſee Mat. 3.a. and John 13. b.

11. Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, [We ſpeak that we do know, and teſtify that we have ſeen, and ye receive not our teſtimony.]

11. The things that thou ſo wondreſt at, and wilt not believe, I have perfect knowledge of, and aſſure you of the truth of them, but the Jews will not believe me.

12. If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how ſhall you believe if I tell you of heavenly things?]

12. Your not believing or underſtanding (v. 9.) thoſe things that are ordinary in the jewiſh Law (ſee v. 31.) is an argument, that things of an higher nature will not be received by you.

13. And no man hath aſcended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the ſon of man which is in heaven.]

13. As if I ſhall tell you that I am to aſcend up to heaven, and from thence demonſtrate to you that I came down from heaven, and am the very Meſſias, the eternal ſon of God, that am now a man.

14. And as Moſes lifted up the ſerpent in the wilderneſs, even ſo muſt the ſon of man be lifted up,

15. That whoſoever believeth in him ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life.]

14, 15. And again that I am to be lifted up on the Croſs, and thereby to fulfil what was typified by Moſes's lifting up the brazen ſerpent, and that this is the way, by which I mean to bring all that believe in me to everlaſting life, as all that looked on the brazen ſerpent were cured of whatſoever diſeaſes.

16. For God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten ſon, that whoſoever believeth on him, ſhould not periſh but have everlaſting life.]

16. For herein hath Gods unſpeakable love been expreſt to all mankind, that he hath ſent his eternal ſon to aſſume our nature, and to teach and give examples of holy life, and at laſt to die for them, and riſe again, and aſcend to heaven, all on this one deſign, that every perſon in the world, that ſhall receive and obey him, ſhall be reſcued from eternal death, and then made partaker of eternal life.

17. For God ſent not his ſon into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be ſaved.]

17. For this my commiſſion from God my Father was deſigned all in mercy and charity, not to puniſh or condemn any man, but on purpoſe that all men might be reſcued from puniſhment.

18. He that believeth on him is not condemned, but he that believeth not is condemn'd already, becauſe he hath not believ'd in the name of the only begotten ſon of God.]

18. He that receiveth & obeyeth me, is by me ſecur'd that he ſhall eſcape all puniſhment, only he that rejecteth me is certainly condemn'd (by the purport of that very covenant, of which mercy to believers is the principal part, all others being abſolutely excluded) for that great ſin of refuſing of Chriſt now ſent to him, as having not embraced that only remedy, the only ſon of God now offered to him.

19. And this is it that will aggravate your ſin and puniſhment, that when God made ſuch proviſion for you, when Chriſt came to enlighten and take men off from all their former evil courſes, they were ſo beſotted to their own ſinful ways, that they choſe rather to continue in them, then to be reformed and purified by Chriſt, or but ſo much as to be taught their duty by him.

19. And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkneſs rather then light, becauſe their deeds were evil.]

20. But as he that fears coming into the light, 'tis certain he hath ſomewhat to conceal, and that he hath not a mind to part with it. So the refuſing to come and be inſtructed in the knowledge of his duty by me, is an evidence that that man is a wicked man, and means to continue ſo, who cannot venture his actions in the light, for fear they be found faulty, and he engaged to reform them.

20. For every one that doth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, leſt his deeds ſhould be reproved.]

21. Whereas he that lives a juſtifyable life, or reſolves to amend what is amiſs, a ſincere upright perſon, will be glad of a director, will come cheerfully to be put in the way of ſtricteſt duty, and venture to have his actions judg'd of, whether they be right or no, which is an argument that what he doth he doth in the fear of God, and with a good conſcience.

21. But he that doth the truth, cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifeſt, * that they are wrought in God.]

26. And they came unto John, and ſaid unto him, Rabbi, He that was with thee beyond Jordan, to whom thou beareſt witneſs, behold, the ſame baptizeth, and all men come unto him.]

27. I can do no more then I have commiſſion from God to do, and that commiſſion doth not equal me to him.

27. John anſwered and ſaid, [A man can receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven.]

28. And therefore you cannot but remember that I always ſaid of my ſelf, that I am not the Meſſias, but only his harbinger.

29. b He that hath the bride is the bridegroom, but the friend of the bridegroom which ſtandeth and heareth him, rejoyceth greatly, becauſe of the bridegrooms voice: This my joy therefore is fulfilled.]

31. And it is all reaſon that it ſhould be ſo. For he cometh from heaven, and ſo muſt needs be ſuperior to all ſuch as I, who am an earthly man, having my original from the earth, made up or compounded of earth, and therefore what I ſay or do, is but of an earthy, but what he, of a much higher original, my baptizing is but like the reſt of your Jewiſh baptiſms, (ſee v. 12.) only with water, but his with the holy Ghoſt alſo.

32. And the thing which he teacheth he knows to be true, having received it from his Father, but the multitude of men in the world receive not his teſtimony, believe not that he is ſent from God.

33. He that doth receive it doth in effect no more but bear witneſs unto, and acknowledge the veracity of God himſelf, it being as impoſſible that one ſo ſent from God as Chriſt, ſhould lye, as that God ſhould lye himſelf.

33. He that hath received his teſtimony, hath ſet to his ſeal, that God is true.]

34 The former prophets had the Spirit in a limited meaſure beſtowed on them by God, to go on ſuch or ſuch an errand, on which God ſent them, and 'tis therefore [Thus ſaith the Lord] to all their prophecies, but on Chriſt the Spirit deſcended once for all, and commanded belief of all that he ſhould ſay.

34. For he whom God hath ſent, ſpeaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by meaſure unto him.]

36. Whoſoever gives up his faith and obedience to him is in a courſe which will bring him to all felicity eternally, and on the contrary, he that ſtands out contumaciouſly againſt his doctrine, continues immutably, and inevitably under the wrath of God, due to him both for his former ſins, and this addition of his ſtanding out againſt this powerful method of Gods for the recalling him.

36. He that believeth on the ſon hath everlaſting life, and he that believeth not the Son, ſhall not ſee life, but the wrath of God abideth on him.]

V. 5. Born of water] The nature of Proſelytes among the Jews, and the difference of them hath been ſpoken of (Note on Mat. 23. d.) and alſo the manner of initiating them by waſhing or baptiſm (Note on Mat. 3. a.) as alſo their putting off all their former relations of kindred, and conſanguinity, and ſo being as it were new-born (Note on Mat. 19. 28. d.) From hence it is, that at the receiving of Chriſtian religion, which is the nobler Proſelytiſm, and hath in the ceremony of initiation, not only the waſhing in water, but alſo the baptiſm of the Spirit too, that is, the communication of that Spirit of Chriſt in ſome meaſure that deſcended on the Apoſtles, Acts. 2. a. Man is here ſaid by Chriſt to be born anew of water and the H. Ghoſt; and when Nicodemus, a learned Jew, and a maſter among them, ſeems to be ignorant, and wonders how this can be, and asks this groſs queſtion to that firſt part of it, how one that is of age can be born again, Chriſt wonders at him, v. 10. intimating that this is the very doctrine of Proſelytiſm, which no knowing Jew can be ignorant of, to wit, that he is to be waſh'd and circumcis'd, and being ſo, is by the Jews counted as one recens natus, new born, brought forth by another mother, ſo that he who was kin to him before, is now no longer kin to him. This λοῦτρον παλιγγενεσίας, waſhing of regeneration, Tit. 3. 5. is in effect a being new born, and he that ſo follows Chriſt in this regeneration or new birth, Mat. 19. 28. (if that be be the right punctation) he leaves brothers and ſiſters, father and mother, wife and children, v. 29. and Mar. 10. 29. & Luke 18. 29. And to the ſame purpoſe belongs that which follows, v. 11, 12. intimating that ſpeech of Chriſt, which Nicodemus ſo little underſtood of being born anew of water, to have been a thing ordinarily ſeen and known among the Jews, ὄπιγον, an ordinary, inferior, earthly thing, in compariſon with the ἐπουράνια thoſe higher celeſtial doctrines, (ſo much more contrary to the Jewiſh cuſtoms and laws) that ſhould be revealed, and to the baptizing with the holy Ghoſt, of which alſo he here ſpeaks, referring ſtill to this cuſtom of Proſelytes among the Jews, which is here accommodated to the receiving of Chriſtian Religion, entring into his diſcipleſhip.

b. V. 29. He that hath the bride] Among the Jews in their rites of Eſpouſals, there is frequent mention of חופה, a place where, under a covering, it was uſual for the bridegroom to diſcourſe familiarly but privately with his ſpouſe, whereby their affections might be more knit one to another (in order to marriage) which were not ſuppoſed to be ſo, till the bridegroom came cheerfully out of that Chuppah. To this doth David refer, Pſ. 19. 5. ſpeaking of the Sun, which as a bridegroom comes forth rejoicing מחופתו from the Chuppah. This cuſtom is now ſtill obſerved among the Jews (as in Germany 'tis affirmed) either before the Synagogue in a ſquare place covered over, or, where there is no Synagogue, they throw a garment over the bridegroom and the bride, and that ſerves the turn. See Paulus Fagius Exeg. in Gen 4. Whilſt now the bridegroom thus talks with the bride, the bridegrooms friends, that is, the παράνυμφοι or pronubi, (as in Talmud tit. Sanhedrim, ſpeaking of friends, the example of ſuch there mentioned, is וה שושבינו as the παράνυμφος) uſe to ſtand at the door (agreeable to which is that of Julius Pollux, καλεῖται τὶς τῶν νυμφίου φίλων θυρωρὸς, one of the bridegrooms friends is called the door-keeper, ὁ δ' θύρας ἐφεστηκὼς, he that ſtands at the door, &c.) and hearken whether all do ſucceed well or no, and when they hear the voice of joy, which is an intimation from the bridegroom that all is well, (which Nonnus calls, ἡδέα φωνὴ, that is, a familiar language, ſome form of kindneſs or familiarity) then they rejoyce, and ſo celebrate this news. See Elias Levita in Tiſhbi, in the word ששבין. Of theſe παράνυμφοι or pronubi, it is farther obſervable out of the Greek Liturgies (in the Euchologie, ἀκολυθ. τεφανώμ.) that they are uſed as Mediators between the bridegroom and his bride, and help to make the league between them, (and therefore in the office of marriage, ſpeaking of one of thoſe ἀλλάσσει τὰ δακτυλίδια, he takes the mans ring, and gives it to the woman, and the womans in like manner to the man, and the title that is there beſtowed on him is ὁ σύνεχνος, and otherwiſe (by a corrupt barbarous word fetch'd from the Latin compar) κουμπάρος, as here, the friend of the bridegroom, and Mat. 9. υἱὸς νυμφῶνος, an officer uſed in thoſe Eſpouſals, and defined by Simeon Theſſalonicenſis to be ὁ τὴ σωφροσύνης καὶ ὁμονοίας ἀνάδοχος, the undertaker for chaſtity and kindneſs betwixt the couple, καὶ διδάσκαλος τὴ ὁμοφροσύνης, καὶ ἀγαθῆς συζυγίας ἡγούμενος, one that inſtructs them in the marriage duties of Love and concord, and is as it were, the Suſceptor in marriage, as the Godfather is in Baptiſm, and ſo publickly promiſes for the bridegroom before the Church.

CHAP. IV. Paraphraſe.

1. WHen therefore [the Lord knew how the Phariſees had heard that Jeſus made and baptized more diſciples] then John.

1. Chriſt knew that the Phariſees heard of his receiving more proſelytes by that ceremony of baptiſm or waſhing.

2. Though Jeſus himſelf baptized not, but his diſciples.

3. He left Judea] and departed again into Galilee.

3. Conſidering the danger that this might bring upon him from the Sanhedrim of the Jews, it being not yet a fit ſeaſon for him to leave the world, till he had farther diſſeminated his doctrines, he left Judea for a time.

4. And he muſt needs go through Samaria.]

4. And Samaria was in his way.

5. Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar, near to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his ſon Joſeph.

6. Now Jacobs well was there: Jeſus therefore being wearied with his Journey, ſate thus * on the well? and it was about the ſixth hour.]

6. In this place was the well which Jacob once digged, on which occaſion Jeſus being weary of travel, ſate down cloſe by it on the ground, and it was about twelve of the clock, mid-day.

* By.

7. There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water, Jeſus ſaith unto her, Give me to drink.

8. For his diſciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat.

9. Then ſaith the woman of Samaria unto him, How is it that thou being a Jew, askeſt drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? For the Jews have no [dealings] with the Samaritans.

9. Commerce or communication of familiarity

10. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto her, If thou kneweſt [the gift of God, and who it is that ſaith unto thee, Give me to drink, thou wouldſt have asked of him, and he would have given thee b living water.]

10. What a mercy & bounty of God is now deſigned thee, & who it is that made that requeſt to thee, on purpoſe that thou mighteſt be partaker of a far greater gift, thou wouldſt not have ſtartled at this requeſt, but have made advantage of it to ask, and he would certainly have given thee that fountain water, of a divine ſpecial quality, which would have yielded thee eternal Life.

11. The woman ſaith unto him, Sir, thou haſt nothing to draw with, and the well is deep, from whence then haſt thou that living water?

12. Art thou greater then [our Father Jacob] which gave us the well, and drank thereof himſelf, and his children, and his cattel?

12. Jacob, from whom we Samaritans profeſs to receive our religion (and therefore refuſe to go up to Jeruſalem, which Moſes, later then he, commanded.)

13. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto her, [Whoſoever drinketh of this water, ſhall thirſt again.]

13. It is the nature of this ordinary water to quench thirſt for a ſmall time, but then conſtantly that thirſt within a ſmall time returns again, and ſo there is continual need of ſupply.

14. But whoſoever drinketh of the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall never thirſt; but the water that I ſhall give him ſhall be in him a well of water ſpringing up into everlaſting life.]

14. But that which I mean by water, & which upon thy bare petition I am ready to give thee, v. 10. will ſo refreſh, that he ſhall never thirſt again that drinketh of it, it ſhall be within himſelf a perpetually flowing fountain that of its own accord ſhall yield him daily refreſhment here, and never ceaſe till it end in everlaſting life and bliſs.

15. The woman] ſaith unto him, Sir, give me this water, that I thirſt not, neither come hither to draw.

15. As yet the woman underſtood not his meaning, but applying it groſly to corporal thirſt, ſhe

16. Jeſus

16. And therefore to work more ſenſe in her, Jeſus meaning to give her knowledge in ſome degree that he was the Meſſias, by diſcovering ſome Acts and evidences of his omniſcience.

16. Jeſus] ſaith unto her, Go call thy husband, and come hither.

17. The woman anſwered and ſaid, I have no husband. Jeſus ſaid unto her, Thou haſt well ſaid, I have no husband.

18. For thou haſt had five husbands, and he whom thou now haſt, is not thine husband: in that ſaidſt thou truly.

19. Thou canſt reveal the ſecrets of ones life, haſt prophetick knowledge, If ſo, then I pray tell me, or ſatisfy me in this difficulty.

19. The woman ſaith unto him, Sir, I perceive [thou art a prophet.]

20. Jacob and the Patriarchs before the law (whoſe ſucceſſors the Samaritans pretended to be, and ſo pleaded a greater antiquity for their ſchiſm, then the Jews had for their true worſhip, but this falſly, being indeed Aſſyrians, tranſplanted by Salmaneſer into the cities of Samaria, when the tribe of Ephraim and the reſt of the kingdom of Iſrael, which inhabited there, were by him carried into Aſſyria, 2 Kings 17. 24.) worſhipped in mount Ephraim at Shiloh, in the country of Samaria, where antiently the tabernacle and the ark of God were, long before the building of the temple at Jeruſalem; and yet the Jews ſay that 'tis not lawful to perform the ſolemn worſhip of God in any place but Jeruſalem.

20. Our Fathers worſhipped in this mountain, and ye ſay, that in Jeruſalem is the place where men ought to worſhip]

21. The worſhip of God ſhall be ſo far from being confined to this place, that it ſhall not be confined to Jeruſalem it ſelf, nay a deſolation ſhall ſhortly overwhelm both.

21. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh when [ye ſhall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jeruſalem worſhip the Father.]

22. Ye worſhip the God of the land, 2 Kings 17. 26. without any knowledge who that is, and your own Gods with him, we Jews worſhip the eternal God of heaven, who hath revealed himſelf to us, for the ſpecial revelations of God, beyond that which other nations enjoy, belong to the Jews, and ſo all manner of advantages toward our eternal good.

22. Ye worſhip * ye know not what, we know that we worſhip: for ſalvation is of the Jews.

* that which ye do not know, we worſhip

23. But now the time of reformation approacheth, & God will be worſhipped and obeyed neither in the Judaical rites (which are oft called carnal, and conſiſted in external performances) nor according to the Samaritans falſe worſhip, who worſhipt their own idols together with God, 2 Kin. 17. but in a pure ſpiritual manner extending to the very heart, and ſuch as was typified by thoſe ſhadows; and the ſon of God now comes to draw all men to this way of worſhip, to the Chriſtian from the Judaical or Samaritan way. See note on Luke 9. d.

23. But the hour cometh and now is, when the true worſhippers ſhall worſhip the Father in ſpirit and in truth: For the Father ſeeketh † ſuch to worſhip him.]

† ſuch worſhippers of him, τοιούτους προσκυνητὰς αὐτοῦ.

24. Is eſpecially delighted with the Chriſtian worſhip, which is taught to joyn the ſoul with the external performances, and to worſhip the true God now revealed by Chriſt, after that manner, wherein Chriſt reveals him.

24. God is a Spirit, and [they that worſhip him, muſt worſhip him in ſpirit and in truth.]

25. This reformation thou talkeſt of, we know ſhall be wrought when the Meſſias or Chriſt comes, and him we do expect.

25. The woman ſaith unto him, [I know that the Meſſias cometh, which is called Chriſt, when he is come, he will tell us all things.]

26. I am that Meſſias.

26. Jeſus ſaith unto her [I that ſpeak unto thee am he.]

27. As he ſaid this, the diſciples came back from the city, v. 8. and thought it ſtrange that he ſhould thus diſcourſe with this woman, yet no man was ſo curious as to ask him the reaſon, or require of him an account of this action.

27. And upon this came his diſciples, and marvelled that he talked with the woman; yet no man ſaid, What ſeekeſt thou, or, Why talkeſt thou with her?]

28. The woman then left her water-pot, and went away into the city, and ſaith to the men,

29. Many things of my life, which were ſo ſecret, that it is not imaginable how he ſhould know them, were he not the Meſſias.

29. Come, ſee a man which told me [all things that ever I did: Is not this the Chriſt?]

30. The people of Sychar.

30. Then [they] went out of the city, and came unto him.

G. 31. In the mean while his diſciples c prayed him, ſaying, Maſter, eat.

32. I have ſomewhat to do more valuable to me, than eating.

32. But he ſaid unto them [I have meat to eat that ye know not of.]

33. Therefore ſaid the diſciples one to another, Hath any man brought him ought to eat?

34. My doing the office for which I was ſent, is as pleaſant and more neceſſary to me, then meat or drink.

34. Jeſus ſaith unto them, [My meat is to do the will of him that ſent me, and to finiſh his work.]

35. 'Tis not with my harveſt as 'tis with that in the fields, four months yet to that time, conſider and ye ſhall ſee the great inclinations and forwardneſs of men to receive the Goſpel, if it may be preached unto them.

35. * Say not ye, There are four months, and then cometh harveſt? Behold I ſay unto you, lift up your eyes, and look on the fields, for they are white already to harveſt.]

* Do ye not ſay, that it is yet four months & harveſt comes? οὐχ ὑμεῖς λέγετε ὅτι ἔτι τετράμηνόν ἐστι, καὶ ὁ θερισμὸς ἔρχεται;

36. And they that will but go out, and preach to them, ſhall receive reward for their pains, and by converting others advantage themſelves eternally, and come to reap the fruits of all that ſeed, that the Prophets, &c. from all time have ſowed.

36. And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal; that both he that ſoweth, and he that reapeth may rejoice together.

37. So that to this may the proverb be applied, One ſoweth, &c. that is, the prophets ſowed this ſeed of the Goſpel, in fore-telling Chriſts coming, and the Apoſtles, they reap the harveſt of converts to him.

37. † And herein is that ſaying true, One ſoweth and another reapeth.]

38. the prophets have ſo prepar'd mens hearts to receive the Goſpel, that there needs very little pains of yours, you may at firſt preaching of the Goſpel reap a whole harveſt of proſelytes.

38. I have ſent you to reap that whereon ye beſtowed no labour; other men labored, and ye have entred into their labours.]

39. He told me the ſecrets of my life, which he being a ſtranger could not know, if he were a meer man.

39. And many of the Samaritans of that city believed on him, for the ſaying of the woman which teſtified, [He told me all that ever I did.]

40. And though Mat. 10. 5. he forbad his diſciples at that time to go into any city of the Samaritans (that they might make the Jews ſee they were his peculiar care at that time) yet to ſhew that the Goſpel was not their encloſure, he now himſelf ſtays with the Samaritans two days, and preacheth the Goſpel to them.

40. So when the Samaritans were come unto him, they beſought him that he would tarry with them [and he abode there two days.]

41. Upon what they heard from him themſelves.

41. And many more * believed [becauſe of his own words.]

* believed on him, ſo the Syr. and many copies, αὐτῷ.

42. Meſſias that was to come to redeem the world.

42. And ſaid unto the woman, Now we believe, not becauſe of thy ſaying: for we have heard him our ſelves, and know that this is indeed the [Chriſt, the Saviour of the world.]

43. Now

43. Now after two days he departed thence, and [went into Galilee.
44. For Jeſus himſelf teſtified, that a prophet hath no honour in his own country.]

43,44. Went to Galilee, avoiding or paſſing another way, not by Nazareth, the place of his education, becauſe, according to the proverb, he expected no reception there, he went another way, not by the lake of Geneſareth, but by Thabor and Carmel toward Cana, where he had wrought his firſt miracle.

45. Then when he was come into Galilee, the Galileans received him, having ſeen all the things that he did at Jeruſalem at the feaſt, for they alſo went unto the feaſt.]

45. And upon this ſecond coming of his among the Galileans, they having, ſince he was there laſt, ſeen what miracles he had done at Jeruſalem, at the feaſt of the paſſover, c. 2. 14. they thereupon gave him a very kind reception (and after the cure of the courtiers ſon which follows here, teaching publickly in the Synagogues of Galilee, he was glorified of all, Luke 4. 15.)

46. So Jeſus came again into Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine, and there was a certain d * noble man, whoſe ſon was ſick at Capernaum.

47. When he heard that Jeſus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went unto him, and beſought him that he would come down, and heal his ſon: for he was at the point of death.
48. Then ſaid Jeſus unto him, [Except ye ſee ſigns and wonders, ye will not believe.]

48. I perceive there is need of doing miracles among you, to work faith in you, This weakneſs therefore of yours I will indulge to.

49. The nobleman ſaith unto him, Sir, come down ere my child dye.
50. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Go thy way, thy ſon [liveth.] And the man believed the word that Jeſus had ſpoken unto him, and went his way.

50. Is recovered, ſee v. 52. and 53.

51. And as he was now going down, his ſervants met him, and told him, ſaying, Thy ſon [liveth.]

51. Is recovered.

52. Then enquired he of them the hour when he began to amend; and they ſaid unto him, Yeſterday at the ſeventh hour the fever left him.
53. So the father knew that it was at the ſame hour in the which Jeſus ſaid unto him, Thy ſon liveth, and himſelf believed and his whole houſe.
54. This * is again the ſecond miracle that Jeſus [did] when he was come out of Judea into Galilee.

* ſecond miracle did Jeſus again, πάλιν δεύτερον σημεῖον ἐποίησεν

54. Did in Cana, as he had done one before, John 2. 8. (having done many betwixt theſe in other places at Jeruſalem, and in Judea, c. 3. 2.)

So here ἠρώτων μαθηταὶ, the diſciples asked, for, they intreated, deſired, and v. 40. the Samaritans ἠρώτων αὐτὸν μεῖναι, &c. asked, that is, beſought him to ſtay. So Mat. 15. 23. Ηρώτων λέγοντες, ἀπόλυσον, they (not asked, but) beſought him ſaying, diſmiſs her, or do what ſhe deſires of thee (as appears by Chriſts anſwer rendring a reaſon why he did it not preſently, v. 24. 26.) So Acts 13. 36. ἠρώτων ἐξελθεῖν he deſired them to go out, and c. 23. 20. ἐρωτῆσαί σε, to deſire thee, and 2 Theſ. 2. 1. ἐρωτῶμεν ὑμᾶς ἀδελφοὶ, we beſeech you brethren. So John 17. 9. οὐ περὶ κόσμου ἐρωτῶ I pray not for the world, and v. 15. οὐκ ἐρωτῶ, I pray not, and v. 20. So c. 16. 26. ὅτι ἐρωτήσω, that I will pray, though v. 30. it be uſed in the other ſenſe, for asking queſtions.

V. 46. Noble man] The τὶς βασιλικὸς here ſignifies an officer of the kings, one that had ſome place at the court of Herods Antipas, who was then the Tetrarch of Galilee, St. Jerom renders it Palatinus. The Latin interpreter reads regulus, by a miſtake reading βασιλίσκος; ſee Caſaub. ad Baron. p. 210.

d. Βασιλικὸς

CHAP. V. Paraphraſe.

1. AFter this there was a feaſt of the Jews, and Jeſus went up to Jeruſalem.

2. Now there is at Jeruſalem [* a by the ſheep-market a pool, which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda] having five porches.

* at the ſheep pool a houſe, &c. or, the ſheep-pool, ſurnamed in Hebrew

2. On, or by the pool where the ſacrifices are wont to be waſhed, an houſe, or building, or place, ſurnamed בית חסדא an houſe of mercy, becauſe the ſick lay there to be cured.

† ſick of the palſy, for ſo the ancient Gr. & Lat. MS. adds after ξηρῶν πα ραλυτικῶν, paralyticorum

3. In theſe lay a great multitude of impotent folk, blind, halt, withered, † waiting for [the moving of the water.]

3. A time of advantage to go into the water, which had this healing force in it but at certain times, and when it had been newly troubled; ſee note a.)

4. For *an Angel] * went down into the pool at a certain ſeaſon, and troubled the water, whoſoever then firſt after the troubling of the water ſtepped in, was made whole of whatſoever diſeaſe he had.

4. For an angel, or, as it may be probably ſuppoſed, an officer for that purpoſe, (ſee note on Acts 12. d. and here note a.)

* or a meſſenger at a ſeaſon, ἀγγέλος κατὰ καιρὸν

5. And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity thirty and eight years.
6. When Jeſus ſaw him lie, and knew that he had [been now a long time in that caſe] he ſaith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole?

6. Had a tedious chronical ſickneſs of it.

* deſcended in κατέβαινεν

7. The impotent man anſwered him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool, but while I am coming, another ſteppeth down before me.
8. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Riſe, take up thy bed, and walk.

9. And

9. And immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed and walked: and on the ſame day was the Sabbath.

10. The carrying of thy bed is the carrying of a burthen, and that a labour contrary to the Sabbatick reſt, and therefore unlawful to be done by thee.

10. The Jews therefore ſaid unto him that was cured, It is the ſabbath-day, [it is not lawful for thee to * carry thy bed.]

* take up ἆραι

11. He anſwered them, He that made me whole, the ſame ſaid unto me, Take up thy bed and walk.

12. Then asked they him, What man is he that ſaid unto thee, Take up thy bed and walk?

13. For by reaſon of the great multitude that was there at the time, Jeſus had opportunity to depart from among them, without any mans taking notice of it.

13. And he that was healed wiſt not who it was, [for Jeſus * had conveyed himſelf away, a multitude being in that place.]

*was gone out privately, ἐξένευσεν

14. The cure that was lately wrought upon thee thou kneweſt not by whom, then that diſeaſe was.

14. Afterward Jeſus findeth him in the Temple, and ſaid unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: ſin no more, leſt a worſe thing come unto thee.] muſt oblige thee to an upright reformation of life, or elſe thou art to expect more fearful judgments

15. The man departed and told the Jews, that it was Jeſus, which had made him whole.

16. Both wrought a cure (which they thought unlawful on the ſabbath, Mar. 3.2.) and alſo bad him to carry his bed, v.10.

16. And therefore did the Jews perſecute Jeſus, and ſought to ſlay him, becauſe he had [done theſe things] on the ſabbath-day.

17. To this exception of theirs againſt him, becauſe of his curing on the Sabbath, Jeſus made this reply, God my Father, from whoſe reſt you take the celebration of the Sabbath, did not ſo reſt from all work on the Sabbath-day, but that ever ſince he hath done works of providence (ſee Chryſoſtom, hom. 10. in Gen. p. 63.) and of preſervation and mercy every day, and why may not I his Son do ſo without exception, my Fathers actions and mine being the ſame?

17. But Jeſus anſwered them, My Father worketh * hitherto, and I work.]

18. Which the Jews, that knew that the ſon of God muſt be of the very divine nature (as the ſon is of the ſame nature with his father) and therefore equal with God, interpreted to be a blaſphemy in him, whom they believed not to be the Meſſias, and therefore fit to be puniſhed with death.

18. Therefore the Jews ſought the more to kill him, not only becauſe he had broken the Sabbath, but * ſaid alſo that God was his Father, [making himſelf equal with God.]

*alſo call'd God his own father λὴ πατέρα ἴδιον ἔλεγε τὸν Θεόν.

19. To this exception of theirs againſt Chriſt, he anſwers, although I affirm my ſelf the ſon of God, and ſo am rightly concluded by you to be equal with my Father, yet this is far from being matter of impiety in me, far from oppoſing my ſelf againſt God; For I do nothing but what is the expreſs will of my Father that I ſhould do, and therefore 'twas reaſonable for me to ſay what I did, v. 17. that my Fathers actions will juſtify me in doing the ſame.

19. Then anſwered Jeſus and ſaid unto them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do: for what things ſoever he doth, theſe alſo doth the Son likewiſe.]

20. For out of the infinite love my Father bears to me, he communicates all things to me, and by that means you are likely to have greater matter of wonderment, then this curing a ſick man on the ſabbath can amount to.

20. For the Father loveth the Son, and ſheweth him all things that he doth: and he will ſhew him greater things than theſe, that ye may marvel.]

21. For even to the raiſing of the dead, far greater then the curing of the ſick, my Father hath communicated his power to me, and as my Father raiſeth, ſo will I whomſoever I pleaſe.

21. For as the Father raiſeth up the dead and quickneth them: even ſo the Son quickneth whom he will.]

22. And for the office of judging (Angels, or Men) my Father doth it not himſelf, but hath put all into the Sons hand, both the preſent governing of the Church, and final ſentencing of all.

22. For the Father judgeth no man; but hath committed all judgment unto the Son.]

23. And ſo by this means it appears that as it was no fault in me to ſay what I did, v.17. tho' it were the equalling my ſelf with the Father, ſo it muſt needs be great hypocriſy in you to think and pretend that you zealouſly honour my Father, when you do deſpiſe and diſhonour me, which am ſent with this power at this time, on purpoſe to be honoured by all men, in the ſame manner as my Father is honoured, that ſo I may work a reformation among you.

23. That all men ſhould honour the Son, even as they honour the Father, he that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath ſent him.]

24. This is ſo perfectly the will of my Father, that I muſt tell you, that on your heeding and hearkning to me at this time, and believing and entertaining my doctrine, as the meſſage of God, depends your eternal well-being, your eſcaping eternal death, and attaining eternal Life.

24. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that ſent me, hath everlaſting life, and ſhall not come into condemnation, but is paſſed from death unto life.]

25. And I aſſure you this power which God my Father hath given me at this time, extendeth to the greateſt things, even to raiſing the dead out of their graves (as alſo ſinners out of their graves of ſin) which power you ſhall ſhortly ſee (nay in the ſpiritual ſenſe is already) exerciſed by me.

25. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead ſhall hear the voice of the ſon of God, and they that hear ſhall live.]

26. For as God hath of and from himſelf power to give life to any thing, ſo hath he given this power to me, and I have it.

26. For as the Father hath life in himſelf, ſo hath he given to the ſon to have life in himſelf.]

27. And as I am God-man, that is, in that I have thus humbled my ſelf to this mean eſtate (which ought not to leſſen, but rather encreaſe the account which is due to me in the world) my Father, by way of reward (Phil. 2.8, 9.) hath given me all power and authority, both now and hereafter, in and over his Church. And ſo again in other reſpects, as 1. that men having a merciful high prieſt (not ſuch an one as cannot ſuffer, or conſequently be touched with our infirmities, but one, that is a man upon the earth, in all things, tempted like unto us, yet without ſin) might have confidence of acceſs to him, in his preſent government of all things; and 2. that men which have bodies, and ſo are viſible (and are to be judged hereafter as well as Angels) may have a viſible judge of them, and of all things done in their bodies.

27. And he hath given him authority to execute judgment alſo, becauſe he is the ſon of man.]

28. Let not what I ſay be matter of wonderment to you for certainly there ſhall be (as certainly as if it were come already) a time of general reſurrection for all the dead; (and an eſſay thereof ſhall ſhortly be ſeen among you.)

28. Marvel not at this: for the hour * is coming, in which all that are in their graves ſhall hear his voice.]

*cometh, ἔρχεται.

29. And the righteous ſhall have their bodies and ſouls united in bliſs, and the wicked ſhall alſo have a reſtitution of their bodies, to receive their ſentence and puniſhment.

29. And ſhall come forth, they that have done good unto the reſurrection of life, and they that done evil, unto the reſurrection of damnation.]

30. I

30. I can of mine own ſelf do nothing: as I hear, ſo I judge: and my judgment is juſt; becauſe I ſeek not mine own will, but the will of † the Father which hath ſent me.]

30. My judgment is a righteous judgment, and agreeable to my Fathers method, and decree, that they which believe on me, ſhall be ſaved, and they that reject me, damned. This my Father hath declared, and therefore 'tis not the ſeeking either honour or revenge to my ſelf, that I ſay or do this, but the going according to my Fathers preſcript, and nothing elſe.

31. If I bear witneſs of my ſelf, my witneſs is not true.

32. There is another that beareth witneſs of me, and I know that the witneſs which he witneſſeth of me is true.]

31,32. If I did any thing that tended to mine own honour, and were a ſingle witneſs therein, you might reaſonably except againſt it, but as that which I do, is not to honour my ſelf, but only to execute my Fathers will, ſo for the truth of what I ſay, my Father bears witneſs of me, and hath done it already, by ſending the Spirit, and a voice from heaven, and giving me power to do miracles, and that ſure is a competent teſtimony, which can deceive none.

33. Ye ſent unto John, and he bare witneſs unto the truth.]

33. And for the trial hereof, you have ſent to John, who baptized me, when the Spirit ſo deſcended on me, and he that ſaw it, teſtified to you the truth of it.

34. But I receive not teſtimony from man, but theſe things I ſay, that ye might be Saved.]

34. But as for me, I need not the teſtimony of John, or any man, but yet that you that believe him, may believe him of me, and ſo eſcape and fly from the danger, which approacheth you, I thus mention to you his teſtimony, which was of ſuch authority with you.

* the lamp burning & ſhining, ὁ λύχνος ὁ καιόμενος καὶ φαίνων,

35. He was * a burning and ſhining light, and ye were † willing for a ſeaſon to rejoyce in his light.

35. He was that Elias, deſcribed Eccl. 48. by being like fire and his word burning like a lamp, and for a while you liked well to hear him, but as ſoon as he teſtified of me, then you preſently rejected him.

† pleaſed for a while ἠθελήσατε

36. But I have * greater witneſs then that of John; for the works which the Father hath given me to finiſh, the ſame works that I do, bear witneſs of me, that the Father hath ſent me.]

36. But I have no need of that teſtimony of his, for the working of thoſe miracles which God hath enabled me to work, is a greater demonſtration of my being ſent by God, then John Baptiſts teſtimony, that he ſaw the Spirit deſcend upon me.

* a teſtimony greater τὴν μαρτυρίαν μείζω

37. And the Father himſelf which ſent me, hath born witneſs of me: Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, nor ſeen his † ſhape.]

37. And God the Faher by voice from heaven, hath teſtified of me, but ye, as, according to your Fathers deſire, expreſt Exod. 20. 19. Deut. 5. 25. and 18. 16. ye have not heard the voice of God, nor ſeen his appearance, ſo it appears by your actions, ye behave your ſelves as thoſe that know nothing of God, ungodly, impious men, ſee 1 John 3. 6.

38. And ye have not his word abiding in you: for whom he hath ſent, him ye believe not.]

38. And for that only means, left you, the word of God revealed to you, ye do not make uſe of that, or live according to it, as is apparent by your not believing on me, who have ſeen, and heard, and know his will, and am ſent by God, as the only means of declaring that will to you, and am foretold in the Scripture, as the Meſſias to come.

39. Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think * ye have eternal life, and they are they which teſtify of me.]

39. Look into, and examin the writings of the Old Teſtament, whereon you depend, and believe that through performance of the Moſaical precepts, you ſhall have eternal life. And on examination you ſhall find that all thoſe prophecies are types and fulfilled in me, and that all the promiſes of life there made, have an aſpect on me, the giver of life.

40. And ye will not come to me that ye might have life.]

40. But ye, tho' ye look upon theſe as the repoſitory of your preſent and eternal bliſs, and though they direct you to me as the only means to attain it, yet wilfully reject me, and by that means your eternal bliſs alſo.

41. I receive not honour from men.

42. But I know you that ye have not the love of God in you.

41,42. Alas, 'tis not your approbation, or eſtimation (to be acknowledged or well ſpoken of by you) that I contend for, while I thus ſpeak. But to this purpoſe I ſay it. By your dealing with me, who come with this teſtimony of my Father, it is apparent and diſcernible, how far you are (whatever you pretend) from all piety and love of God, that this teſtimony of God cannot work on you to receive me, but the being well-ſpoken of by men (ſee c. 12. 43.) is all you care for, and becauſe that may be loſt by receiving me, therefore am I rejected by you.

43. I am come in my Fathers name, and ye receive me not; If another ſhall come in his own Name, him ye will receive.]

43. But to ſee the ſottiſhneſs of your dealings: I bring my commiſſion from God, and ye heed it not, and yet if another without any commiſſion from God, a meer counterfeit, ſhall, in his own name, come, and undertake to ſeduce you, ſuch as Simon Magus (ſee Note on 2 Theſ. 2. e.) what multitudes of you Jews will follow him?

44. How can ye believe which receive † honour of one another, and ſeek not the honour, that cometh from God only?]

44. 'Tis not poſſible you ſhould believe aright, that are ſo in love with the praiſe of men, as to take him for a prophet, who hath no other teſtimony that he is ſo, but his own, or the voice of other men, and dare not believe on me; the rulers, for fear of diſpleaſing the people, and the people the rulers, and mean while both contemn the Favour, and approbation of God, and ſet his teſtimony at naught, reject me, who come authoriz'd with that.

45. Do not think that I will accuſe you to my Father, there is one that accuſeth you, even Moſes, * in whom you truſt.]

45. 'Tis not ſo much I to whom you have done, this affront, and therefore I ſhall not need to bring any complaint or indictment againſt you before my Father, but 'tis our own prophet Moſes, on whom you pretend to depend ſo much, and he will riſe up to teſtify againſt you.

46. For had ye believed Moſes, ye would have believed me: For he wrote of me.]

46. Had you but heeded and believed Moſes, that prophet ſo valued by you, his predictions and typical repreſentations would have led you to believe on me, in whom they are all fulfilled.

47. But if you believe not his writings, how ſhall ye believe my words.]

47. But if your own Moſes cannot be heard by you, I cannot expect to have that authority with you.

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. ἐπὶ τῇ προβατικῇ κολυμβήθρᾳ

V. 2. By the ſheep-market a pool] The words being read, as they are now in our beſt Copies, ἐπὶ τῇ προβατικῇ κολυμβήθρᾳ both in the Dative caſe, the only Nominative caſe in the period muſt be ἡ ἐπιλεγομένη Βηθεσδὰ, and then there can be no way of tranſlating it, but by underſtanding the word בית houſe, which is, after contained in the word Bethesda, and which muſt be the ſubject, to which the following adjunct belongs, πέντε στοὰς ἔχουσα, having five porches, which cannot be ſaid ſo properly of any thing, as of an houſe; if this be the reading, then this houſe call'd in Syriack בית חסרה the houſe of mercy, as the Syriack now reads it, that is, the alms-houſe literally (not as Beza would have it domus effuſionis) muſt be reſolved to have been a noſocomium or hoſpital for thoſe that are ſick, and that it was built ἐπὶ τῇ κολυμβήθρᾳ, upon, or adjoining to, that pool (or, as the Kings MS. reads ἐν τῇ on it) and had five porches in it. Others anciently did read it (ſee Rob. Steph. var. lect.) without ὅπι τῇ in the Nominative caſe, ὡ δὲ ἐν τοῖς Ιεροσολύμοις προβατικὴ κολυμβήθρα, there was at Jeruſalem a ſheep pool. So S. Chryſoſtom, and S Cyril of Alexandria, Theophylact, Theophilus Antioch, and St. Jerom, Bethesda (ſaith he, in Locis Hebr.) piſcina in Jeruſalem quæ vocatur Peculialis, Bethesda is a pool in Jeruſalem, called the cattel-pool, which if it be the right reading, then may that pool be there ſet for this houſe and pool together, and both (ὀπλεγομένη) with the agnomen of Bethesda the alms-houſe. or elſe בירה may be taken in a larger notion to ſignify any place, and ſo ſignify the pool only, without ſuppoſing any houſe there, but only ſome buildings, as porches or entrances into the pool, v. 7. As for that third reading which Beza uſed, ὅπι τῇ προβατικῇ, and then κολυμβήθρα in the Nominative, this agrees not with the ancient readings, and being not intelligible, but by underſtanding πύλη, and ſo making it the ſheep-gate, Neh. 12.39. that is no way agreeable to this purpoſe. For ſuppoſing, what is ſo often affirmed by thoſe that favour this reading, that the ſheep that were brought in at this gate for ſacrifice, were there wont to be waſhed, before they were brought into the Temple (or as Beza, potare & merſari, to drink and be waſhed) yet 'tis neither imaginable that the waſhing, or drinking of ſheep there, ſhould make the pool medicinable, nor that being ſo of it ſelf, or made ſo by miracle, it ſhould be thus employed to thoſe common uſes, for which any other pool would have been as good. That which I conceive of it is this, not that here the live Sheep were waſhed by thoſe that brought them, but the carcaſſes or entrails of them, when they were ſlain, and this by the officers of the Temple. So ſaith Benjamin in his Itinerary, ושם נראה ער חיום הזה הברכה &c. There is until this day that pool in which the ancients killed their ſacrifices, and each of the Jews ſet their name there on the wall. Agreeable to which is the Account which Brocardus hath rendred of this matter at large, In area Templi, ſaith he, contra Aquilonem eſt porta vallis ducens in vallem Joſaphat, & hæc etiam vocatur Gregis quòd per eam introducebantur greges in Templo immolandi. Intrantibus porrò portam Gregis ad ſiniſtram occurrit piſcina probatica, in qua Nathinæi lavabant hoſtias quas tradebant ſacerdotibus in Templo offerendas. It was ſo called, becauſe the ſacrifices were there waſhed by the Nethinim (or inferior officers) which they delivered to the prieſts to be offered in the Temple, ſuppoſing this waſhing to be intermediate between the ſlaying, and offering of the Sacrifices, and to belong to all the Sacrifices (as St. Jeromes Peculialis alſo denotes) not the ſheep only. This, it ſeems, Theophylact did believe, who gives this for the commonly aſſigned reaſon of the divine healing Power that theſe waters had, ἀπὸ τῦ πλύνεδαι τὰ ἐντόδια τῶν ἱερείων, becauſe the Entrails of the ſacrifices were waſhed there. And, I ſuppoſe, theſe words in * S. Jerom (lucus alter mirum in modum rubens quaſi cruentis aquis, another pool looking wonderful red, as it were with bloody waters, &c.) do intimate it alſo. And it is obſervable that thoſe that here waited for cures, are not men of all ſorts of diſeaſes, but only the blind, the halt, the withered, and perhaps the Paralytical, v. 3. and therefore perhaps the whatſoever diſeaſe, v. 4. may not denote an unlimited univerſality, but only a reſtrained, ὁποίῳ κατειχῶ νοσήματι, whatſoever diſeaſe he was held with, that is, which ſoever of theſe fore-mention'd, for which they came thither for cure. And that a medicinable force to the cure of Lameneſs, &c. might naturally come to the waters by that means, according to Theophylacts account of the commonly received opinion will not appear ſtrange, if the cures that are wrought by putting the Patient into the belly of a Beaſt newly opened, or into the skin of a ſheep newly flead, or by the application of the warm vital parts of any beaſt, be conſidered. For the like virtue might well be transfuſed to this pool by the daily waſhing of the entrails of the ſacrifices in it, at the time of the feaſts (ſuch as is here mention'd, v. 1.) where ſo many thouſand ſacrifices were killed at once, as may be gueſſed by the number of two hundred fifty five thouſand, and ſix hundred Paſchal ſacrifices, which was teſtified to Ceſtius by the Prieſts at a Paſſover in Neroes time. Theſe might well die and colour the water, and give a force to it, and that at ſuch a time, when the waters were warm with the freſh waſhing of the ſacrifices in it, and eſpecially when by a mans going down to move or trouble the water, v. 4. thoſe groſſer thicker parts, which came from the beaſts, the congelations of blood which went to the bottom, were ſtirr'd up, and made to infuſe themſelves more ſtrongly into the water; which ſeems to be the reaſon, why to the working of a cure by thoſe waters theſe two circumſtances are made neceſſary, 1. that it ſhould be, not at any time, but κατὰ καιρὸν, v. 4. at a ſet ſeaſon, which that it ſignified a feſtival time (if not ſolely that) appears probably, becauſe now v. 1. ἦν ἑορτὴ Ἰυδαίων, there was a feaſt of the Jews, and at this time the ſick man waited that καιρὸν opportunity, tho' he were depriv'd of it, v. 7. and if from v. 6. it be imagined that he had laid a long time in that place, that is a miſtake, for the πολὺν χρόνον, long time belongs to the length of his diſeaſe, v. 5. and to nothing elſe. 2*ly*, that the ſick perſon ſhould go in immediately upon the troubling of the waters, which muſt ſignify, that immediately upon the moving, they had a force which ſoon cool'd or decay'd again, by the ſinking of that which was ſtirr'd up, or by the evaporating of it. All which, if it be a natural, & no miraculous way of curing, it will be the more unlikely, that ἄγγελος here v. 4. ſhould be an Angel of Gods. It may eaſily be ſuppoſed that there was an officer or ſervant, ſent down by them that had skill in it, to trouble the waters at a fit time, & he being a meſſenger ſent before, as it were, to prepare for the ſick mans coming after him, might well be call'd ἄγγελος, not an Angel, but a meſſenger, ſee Act. 12.8. but it is very uncertain, from the variety of copies, what is to be determin'd in this matter. For as the Kings MS. makes one great change here, and reads Ἄγγελος γὰρ Κυρίυ κατὰ καιρὸν ἐλέετο, The Angel of the Lord waſhed, or bathed, at a ſeaſon, v. 4. ſo on the other ſide, the ancient Greek and Lat. MS. which Th. Beza preſented to the Univerſity of Cambridge, wholly leaves out the fourth verſe, wherein the only mention of ἄγγελος, whether Angel or meſſenger is. In this variety we can but reſolve what the Context makes moſt reaſonable, and that is, to adhere to our ordinary reading, without admitting either of thoſe changes, which thoſe venerable copies, ſo contrary one to the other, ſuggeſt to us. For as to the former, the troubling of the water being taken notice of, both v. 4. & v. 7. as the only thing that gave or rather excited (for a very ſhort time) the medicinal virtue in the water, there was no need of the miraculous interpoſition of one of Gods holy Angels to effect that; any ordinary man, ſent down for that purpoſe, was ſufficient thus to move or trouble the water. As for the bathing of an Angel at a certain time, there is no probable account to be given of that, nor can it have any ſpecial energy, to the making of the waters medicinal, for the bare troubling the waters did that, v. 4, 7. as for the latter, which leaves out the whole fourth verſe, the remainder of the Context utterly reſiſts that, being all built on that relation of the medicinal nature of the pool, and the circumſtances of it, which are given us in that verſe. The context then remaining intire, as it doth in our ordinary copies, the chief objection I diſcern to offer it ſelf againſt the way of interpreting it of a medicinable vertue, naturally ariſing from the freſh warm blood of the Entrails of the ſacrifices that were waſh'd there, is, that the cure was limited to one, to him that firſt ſtept in, & this man had been there long in vain, becauſe another ſtill ſtept in before him; which is thought unreconcileable with that opinion of the medicinable virtue of the blood, in that pool, which would as probably miniſter to the cure of more, as of one. To this I anſwer, that it is not improbable, there might be cauſes

Αγγελος

* de loc. Hebr.

cauſes of this (more than one) ariſing from ſome circumſtances of the place, &c. which being not taken notice of in the text, cannot with any certainty be aſſigned by us at this diſtance, and yet this very poſſibility that there were ſuch, be ſufficient to avoid the force of that objection. For inſtance, the place that contained theſe medicinal waters might be of no larger capacity, than to hold one at once (and the ſteps down to it ſomewhat proportionable) and that on purpoſe deſigned in order to curing diſeaſes, to which it was moſt likely to contribute, if the virtue that came from the entrails were kept within ſo narrow a compaſs, as when a medicinal bath is to be provided by infuſion of herbs, &c. 'tis ordinary to uſe a veſſel of no greater capacity then will ſuffice one patient at once, that the infuſion of the drugs may be the ſtronger, and ſo more medicinal. And then conſidering how apt thoſe groſſer parts are, when ſtirred up, to ſink again, and ſome ſpace being allowed to the officer, that moves the water, to aſcend before the patient can deſcend, it follows regularly, that the cure ſhould be thus limited to one patient at one moving of the water, and if * St. Chryſoſtom judge aright, in one year; ἅς μόνῳ τῷ ἐνιαυτῷ ἐκεκράδετο, ſaith he, one only in a year (at this καιρὸς, ſeaſon, or Paſchal feſtival, when the great multitude of ſacrifices were newly waſhed there) was cured by that water. All this is here fitly ſuppoſable, non obſtante, either the mention of the pool, which may be deemed to ſignify a place of a greater capacity, or the five porches, v. 2. For the five porches, thoſe being parts of Betheſda, the houſe of mercy, or hoſpital, as hath been ſhew'd, there might be uſes of them for the ſick, and diſeaſed perſons, which lay there, v. 3. without imagining them to be ſo many entrances to this pool. And then for the κολυμβήθρα, tho' by rendring it in Latin piſcina, and pool in Engliſh, it may ſeem to be of a larger capacity, yet being, we know, by the ancients uſed vulgarly for the font in the Church, and that expreſly from the uſe of it in this place, it need not be ſuppoſed here to have been of any ſuch large capacity. And then this being thus premiſed and ſuppoſed, all that is here ſaid is very conſonant, 1. That after the moving of the water, it ſhould be medicinal only to one at once; and 2. That he only that could make moſt haſte, & ſo come firſt, was likely to receive this benefit by it, and ſo this lame man miſs of it, becauſe he could never get to be foremoſt. Other ways there are alſo ſuppoſeable, to remove all force of this objection, and ſecure the probability of this conjecture; but becauſe I propoſe it only as ſuch (and that not as mine own, but founded in the received opinion, from which Theophylact cites it) I ſhall not farther inſiſt on them, but only add that the Chriſtian religion is no way concerned in the miraculouſneſs of this cure, if ſuch it were, it being afforded the Jews before Chriſts coming, and continued to them, at this time of their reſiſting and crucifying of Chriſt.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphraſe

1. AFter theſe things Jeſus * went over the [ſea of Galilee, which is the ſea of Tiberias.]
   1. Lake of Geneſareth in Galilee, to that part of it which is near the city Tiberias, ſee note on Luke 8. c.
2. And a great multitude followed him, becauſe they ſaw [his miracles which he did] on them that were diſeaſed.
   2. The miraculous cures which he wrought.
3. And Jeſus went up into a [mountain] and there he ſate with his diſciples.
   3. Mountainous deſert part, belonging to the city Bethſaida, Luke 9. 10.
4. And the Paſſover, a feaſt of the Jews, was nigh.
5. When Jeſus then lift up his eyes, and ſaw a great company come unto him, he ſaith unto Philip [Whence ſhall we buy bread that theſe may eat?]
   5. Where ſhall we have money with which we may buy bread enough to feed all this multitude.

(6. And this he ſaid to prove him, for he himſelf knew what he would do.)

7. Philip anſwered him, Two hundred penny-worth of bread is not ſufficient for them, that every one of them may [take a little.]
   7. Receive a ſmall proportion to refreſh him.
8. One of his diſciples, Andrew, Simon Peters brother ſaith unto him,
9. There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two ſmall fiſhes, but what are they among ſo many?
10. And Jeſus ſaid [Make the men * ſit down.] Now there was much graſs in the place. So the men ſate down in number about five thouſand.
    10. Settle and diſpoſe them in ranks, and in a poſture for eating.
11. And Jeſus took the loaves, and [when he had given thanks, he deſtributed to the diſciples, and the diſciples to them that were ſet down, and likewiſe of the fiſhes, as much as they would.]
    11. Having bleſſed the bread and fiſhes, thanked God for them, and implored his bleſſing on them, he as the Maſter of the feaſt gave the ſeveral proportions to the diſciples, and they as waiters diſtributed them to the gueſts, every man his portion of bread, and of fiſh, as much as they deſired to eat.
12. When they were filled, he ſaid unto his diſciples, Gather up the fragments that † remain, that nothing be loſt.
13. Therefore they gathered them together, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten.
14. Then thoſe men when they had ſeen the miracle which Jeſus did, ſaid, This is of a truth [that prophet * which ſhould come into the world.]
    14. The Meſſias, known by the title of him that cometh, &c. See note on Matth. 11. 2.
15. When Jeſus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, [and [a] make him a king, he departed † again into a mountain himſelf alone *.]
    15. To ſet him up for their captain, to fight their battels for 'em againſt their enemies or conquerors (which Chriſt therefore avoided as unagreeable to his office, knowing withal, that he was not to be enthroned by any act of the people, or election of men, but by the immediate power of God, he again retired alone to his privacy and prayers in the mountain, v. 3.
16. And when even was now come, his diſciples went down unto the ſea,
17. And entred into a ſhip, and [went over the ſea towards Capernaum] and it was now dark, and Jeſus was not come to them.
    17. Were paſſing, or in their paſs over the ſea toward Capernaum, ſee Acts 28. 14.
18. And the ſea [aroſe by reaſon of a great wind that blew.]
    18. Began to grow tempeſtuous.
19. So when they had rowed about twenty five or thirty furlongs, they ſee Jeſus walking on the ſea, and drawing nigh unto the ſhip, and they were afraid.]
    19. When therefore by the contrariety of the winds they had been forced to fall to their oars, and had done ſo for ſome ſpace, they diſcern one walking on the ſea, and coming toward the ſhip, this was Jeſus, but they not knowing it was ſo (v. 20.) were affrighted with the ſight.
20. But he ſaith unto them, It is I, be not affraid.

* departed to th'other ſide of the ſea of Galilee, that of Tiberias, or into the coaſts, or parts of Tiberias, for the old Gr. & Lat. MS. reads, ἐπὶ τὰ μέρη τῆς Τιβεριάδος in fines Tiberiadu.

* lie down, ἀναπεσεῖν

† ſuperabound, are to ſpare, περισσεύσαντα

* that cometh, ὁ ἐρχόμενος

† again, is wanting in the Syr. & many cop.

21. Then they [willingly received him into the ſhip; and immediately the ſhip was at the land whither they went.]

21. Gladly took him into the ſhip, ſee Mar. 6. 51. and as ſoon as ever they received him in, the ſhip arrived at their intend ſhore.

22. The day following, when the people which ſtood on the other ſide of the ſea, ſaw that there was none other boat there, ſave that one whereinto his diſciples were entred, and that Jeſus went not with his diſciples into the boat, but that his diſciples were gone away alone.

23. † Howbeit there came other boats from Tiberias, nigh unto the place [where they did eat bread, after that the Lord had given thanks.]

23. Where they now were, and where they had eaten bread, when by bleſſing the five loaves he ſo multiplied them that they were ſufficient to feed five thouſand.

† But other veſſels from Tiberias went near that place, Αλλα ἦλθε πλοιάρια ἐκ Τιβεριάδος ἐγγὺς τοῦ τόπου.

24. When the people therefore ſaw that Jeſus was not there, neither his diſciples, they alſo took ſhipping, and came to Capernaum, ſeeking for Jeſus.]

† 24. When, I ſay, the multitude ſaw Jeſus was gon from that place, as well as his diſciples, v. 17. and from thence concluded it moſt probable, that Jeſus, tho' he went not with the diſciples, was gone after them to Capernaum, his uſual habitation, they having the advantage of veſſels for paſſage, v. 23. took ſhip and went to Capernaum to look for him.

25. And when they had found him on the other ſide of the ſea, [they ſaid unto him] Rabbi, when cameſt thou hither?

25. They conſidering that he went not into the ſhip with the diſciples, v. 22. and not knowing of any paſſage by boat, which he could have to Capernaum, could not imagine which way he came thither, yet becauſe Tiberias was not far off from the place where the miracle of the bread was wrought, and there came other boats from thence, v. 23. they being uncertain what to think, aſked him of the time and way of their conveyance.

26. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, [Ye ſeek me, not becauſe ye ſaw the miracles, but becauſe ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.]

26. That which makes you thus follow me, is not the acknowledgment of my divine power evidenced by my miracles, or conſequent to that, a purpoſe to embrace my doctrine, or deſire to learn of me, but a groſs carnal deſire of the like advantages, which you had of my multiplying loaves to feed you.

27. b Labour not for the meat which periſheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlaſting life, which the ſon of man ſhall give unto you, for him hath * God the Father ſealed.]

b. 27. Set not your hearts on theſe poor external advantages, ſeek not, deſire not, acquire this corporal food, in order to your worldly ends, ſecular victories and greatneſs (ſee note a.) and that which will afford you but a ſhort fading benefit, v. 49. but look out, and get your part of that food which is it ſelf unperiſhable, and will make all that feed on it immortal alſo. This food ſhall the Meſſias (that is, Chriſt) beſtow upon you, for him and his doctrine hath God the Father acknowledged to be his own (ſee note on Epheſ. 4. i.) and by the coming of the Spirit on him, demonſtrated him to be ſent by him, no king of your chooſing or making, v. 15. but as his kingdom is to be a ſpiritual kingdom, ſo is he to be inſtalled to it by God, and not by you.

* the father ſealed, even God, ὁ πατὴρ ἐσφράγισεν, ὁ Θεός

28. Then ſaid they unto him, What ſhall we do that we might c † work the works of God?]

c. 28. Hereupon they ſaid unto him, what is requir'd of us, what courſe wilt thou preſcribe, that we may do that which thou biddeſt us, v. 27. that we may be always employed in Gods tasks, ſo as will be acceptable to him?

29. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe on him, whom he hath ſent.]

29. Jeſus anſwer'd them, that which God requires of you, is, to believe and do all that I, who am ſent by him, do command you.

30. They ſaid therefore unto him, What ſign ſheweſt thou then, that we may ſee and believe in thee? What doſt thou work?]

30. Then tho' they had before believ'd and reſolv'd v. 14. that he was of a certain truth the expected Meſſias, and were therefore minded to ſet him for their captain or king, yet now being checked by Chriſt for their carnal conceits of the Meſſias, v. 26, 27. they retract their former reſolution, and demand farther ſigns, before they will look after ſuch a kind of Meſſias as he now tells them of, and therefore to his requiring them to believe on him, they ſaid, What miracle do you ſhew? what work of wonder, ſuch as may be ſufficient to aſſure us, that thou art the Meſſias?

31. Our fathers did eat Manna in the deſert, as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat.]

31. We have great reaſon to adhere to Moſes, who wrought ſuch miracles, brought down bread ready prepared from heaven for us, and unleſs thou wilt produce ſome atteſtation to thy ſelf, which may at leaſt equal this one, why may not we be allow'd to think it unreaſonable to forſake him, and follow thee?

32. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, Moſes gave you not that bread from heaven, but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven.]

32. Jeſus ſaith unto them, I aſſure you, that Manna came not from heaven, but out of the airy region, and that the work of God, not Moſes, and now the ſame God gives you far more durable food then that was, gives you me who came really down from heaven, and am moſt eminently that which Manna was to your bodies, bread or food to your ſouls.

33. For the bread of God is † he which cometh down from heaven and giveth life unto the world.]

† that

33. That fed but your bodies, and putrified preſently; but that which God now gives you, is for your ſouls, and will feed them to eternity, v. 27. and did really deſcend from the heaven of heavens, not as that Manna for a multitude only, but the feeding and enlivening the whole world.

34. Then ſaid they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread.

35. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, I am [the bread of life: he that cometh to me, ſhall never hunger: and he that believeth on me, ſhall never thirſt.]

35. That durable vivifical bread of God, the excellency whereof is infinitely above that of Manna, as in other things, ſo in this, that the feeding thereof yields a durable ſatisfaction, whereas in Manna, and all corporeal food, there is ſtill a ſucceſſion of appetite.

36. But I ſaid unto you, that * ye alſo have ſeen me, and believe not.]

36. But that which I told you, v. 26. was, that tho' you have ſeen me and taſted of my miracles, yet you do not believe on me, feed not on this true bread, which came down from heaven.

* ye have both ſeen me, καὶ ἑωράκατέ με

37. All that d the Father giveth me, ſhall come to me, and him that cometh to me, I will in no wiſe caſt out.]

d. 37. This is an evidence of great obſtinacy and untowardneſs of improbity and pride in you; for had Gods preventing Grace had any ſucceſs on you, wrought probity, or humility in you, you would certainly come in to my call, and I will not reject any that thus comes, or caſt him forth afterwards, if he will abide with me.

38. For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that ſent me.

39. And this is the Fathers will which hath ſent me, that of all which he hath given me I ſhould loſe nothing, but ſhould raiſe it up again at the laſt day.]

38, 39. For this lies upon me, as the office for which my Father hath ſent me, the fulfilling of which is all my care, viz. that I ſhould be careful to preſerve every one, which with an honeſt heart ſhall thus come and believe on me, and give every one that thus perſeveres (beſide many excellent priviledges here) eternal life of body and ſoul hereafter.

40. And this is the will of him that ſent me, that every one which ſeeth the ſon and believeth on him, may have everlaſting life: and † I will raiſe him up at the laſt day.]

40. That being alſo another part of his commiſſion to me, that whoſoever believeth in his ſon ſhould not periſh, but, whatever by ſo doing befal him here, inherit everlaſting life in that other world.

† that I ſhould, ἀναστήσω.

41. The Jews then murmured at him, becauſe [he ſaid, I am the bread which came from heaven.

42. And they ſaid, Is not this Jeſus the ſon of Joſeph, whoſe father and mother we know? How is it then that he ſaith, I came down from heaven?]

41, 42. By what he ſaid of himſelf, he pretended to come from heaven, whereas they knew his birth here on earth, and his parentage, which they conceived to be contrary to his coming down from heaven.

43. Jeſus therefore anſwered and ſaid unto them, Murmure not among your ſelves.]

43. To this muttering of theirs, Jeſus replied, I have ſaid nothing which 'tis reaſonable for you to murmur at.

44. No man can come to me, except the Father which hath ſent me, draw him, and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day.]

44. 'Tis true, there is ſome pretence for theſe vulgar prejudices againſt me, which would make it impoſſible for thoſe that look no farther, to become my followers (and therefore this makes it ſo unfit and unſafe for you to fix your eyes ſo wholly on this.) And it is an effect of my Fathers preventing grace to fit mens hearts to be ready and willing to come to me (ſee note d.) and without this work firſt wrought, and that probity and humility, which qualifies men to receive my doctrine, I do not expect that any man ſhould believe on me, and therefore I attribute it to that (ſee v. 65.) when any one doth (as, on the other ſide, to your obdurate hearts, that you do not) come unto me. And for every one that doth thus come, and therein obey my call, and follow the duct of my Father, on him moſt certainly will I beſtow everlaſting life.

45. It is written in the prophets, And they ſhall be all * taught of God. Every man therefore that hath † heard and learned of the Father, cometh unto me.]

45. The ſum of what I thus ſay, hath been obſcurely delivered to you by the prophets of old: for they, for example, Iſa. c. 54. 13. ſpeaking of theſe times, have foretold, that God will diſpoſe and prepare the hearts of many men to be fit or ready to receive Chriſt (ſee note d.) to embrace the Meſſias, and therefore it was that I ſaid that every humble honeſt heart, every diſciple of my Father that hath not reſiſted that guidance, and attraction of my Father doth certainly come to me, and believe on me.

* the taught, διδακτοὶ † heard fr. the Father, and learnt, ἀκούσας παρὲ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ μαθών, or, learnt the truth, for the K's. MS. reads, μαθὼν τὸν ἀλήθειαν.

46. Not that any man hath ſeen the Father, ſave he which is of God, he hath ſeen the Father.]

46. Where yet that of learning or being taught of God, doth not imply his ſeeing or talking with my Father, and being ſo taught by him, for this is proper and peculiar to me, who am therefore qualified to reveal his will to all that come unto me.

47. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, He that believeth in me, hath everlaſting life.

48. I am that bread of life.]

47, 48. He that embraceth my doctrine, and is ſincerely my diſciple, to believe and practice what I command him, ſhall undoubtedly live for ever, as having fed on that enlivening bread, v. 33. receiving me his ſpiritual food, by his faith into his ſoul.

49. Your fathers did eat Manna in the wilderneſs, and are dead.

50. This is the bread which came down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof and not dye.

49, 50, 51. The Manna given in the deſert did not make them immortal which did eat of it. But the bread which is now ſent you down from heaven, will give immortality to them that feed

51. I am the living bread, which cometh down from heaven: If any man eat of this bread, he ſhall live for ever: and the bread that I ſhall give him is my fleſh, which I will give for the life of the world.]

on it, that is, to all that truly believe in Chriſt, that receive his doctrine, and digeſt it into the food and nouriſhment of their ſouls, and this is offered and prepared for every man, not only for you Jews. Manna was bread indeed, but firſt, dead, not living. Secondly, it came not down from heaven properly ſo called, v. 32. and Thirdly, they which did eat of it, afterwards dyed. Fourthly, their Manna was contradiſtinct from their quails, that bread from that fleſh. Fifthly, That was given for the preſerving the life only of one nation. But contrariwiſe by theſe ſo many ways of excellency above that Manna, I am, firſt, living bread. Secondly, I came down from heaven properly ſo called, the higheſt heaven. Thirdly, whoſoever feedeth, that is, believeth on me, embraceth my doctrine, and practiſeth accordingly, ſhall not dye, the ſoul whoſe food I am ſhall become immortal in bliſs. Fourthly, this bread which I ſpeak of is very fleſh, even my fleſh which I will give to be crucified for the life of the world, by that death of mine purchaſing grace and pardon for ſin, which are the foundation of immortality. Fifthly, this world is the whole world, all mankind, not only that one nation of the Jews, which received benefit by that.

52. The Jews therefore ſtrove among themſelves, ſaying, How can this man give us his fleſh to eat?]

52. Hereupon the Jews diſputed about this ſaying of his, how 'tis poſſible that men ſhould feed on his fleſh.

53. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, Except [ye eat the fleſh of the ſon of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.]

53. You thus feed on this celeſtial food, that is, be ſincere diſciples of the crucified Saviour, that comes not to be a glorious King, but to dye for the ſins of the world, you have no part in this true, that is, immortal life.

54. Whoſo eateth my fleſh and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life, and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day.

55. For my fleſh is * meat † indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.]

55. For I that am thus ſent in the fleſh to dye for the world, am ſuch food, as will feed you to everlaſting life, and ſo am eminently that which food is ſaid to be, yea in a much higher degree; Food doth not firſt give, but only continues and preſerves life, but my fleſh ſhall give life to the world.

* truly meat or true meat, for in divers ancient cop. 'tis ἀληθῆς in both places of this verſe.

56. He that eateth my fleſh and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him.]

56. He that thus feedeth or believeth on me, that reſigns himſelf up to be ruled by me, in the ſame manner as he abides in me, hath me abiding in him, is ſo made a member of me, that by the life which is in me he ſhall alſo be enlivened by God, by whom I live (ſee note on c. 14. c.) and this is one pre-eminence over corporal food, which corrupt in the Stomach, before they nouriſh any man.

57. As the living father hath ſent me, and I live by the father: ſo he that eateth me, even he ſhall live by me.]

57. For as I that came down from the Father, the fountain of life, his ſon by eternal generation, muſt needs derive life from him, ſo alſo he that believeth on me, and ſo hath digeſted my precepts as the nouriſhment of his ſoul, muſt needs derive life from me.

58. This is that bread which came down from heaven, not as your fathers did eat Manna, and are dead:] he that eateth of this bread ſhall live for ever.

58. This bread from heaven is not like that Manna, which they that eat, did dye for all that.

59. Theſe things ſaid he in the Synagogue as he taught in Capernaum.

60. Many therefore of his diſciples when they had heard this, ſaid, This is an hard ſaying, who can hear it?]

60. Many therefore of thoſe that had hitherto follow'd him ſaid, this doctrine of his is very hard and unintelligible, how he ſhould be ſaid really to have come down from heaven, and how his fleſh ſhould feed men to life eternal.

61. When Jeſus knew in himſelf that his diſciples murmured at it, [he ſaid unto them, Doth this † offend you?]

61. Doth this deter you from my doctrine?

62. What and if ye ſhall ſee the ſon of man aſcend up where he was before?]

62. And asked them, whether it were not as credible that he ſhould have come from heaven, as that he ſhould go up thither telling them that they ſhould ere long ſee him do ſo, and that in reaſon would aſſure them that he came down from thence.

63. It is the ſpirit that quickeneth, the fleſh profiteth nothing, the words that I ſpeak unto you, they are ſpirit, and they are life.]

63. And for the other particular of eating his fleſh, he tells them they cannot but know, that it is the ſoul that enliveneth, and not the body, and agreeably that it is not the groſs carnal eating of his body of fleſh, that he could ſpeak of, when he talked of their eating, and his feeding them to life eternal (ſee note on Lu. 9. d.) but certainly a more ſpiritual divine eating, or feeding on him, which ſhould bring them a durable eternal nal life; his words (ſee v.68.) that is, his doctrine being ſpiritually fed on by them, that is, being received into their hearts, not only their ears, will quicken them to a ſpiritual life here, and that ſhall prove to them an eternal life hereafter (ſo St. Chryſoſtom expounds [the fleſh] that is, the fleſhly hearing profits nothing.)

64. But for this ſpiritual feeding, ſinking down this ſpiritual food into your hearts, there are ſome of you that are far enough from doing ſo. For Jeſus knew at firſt before he received them as diſciples, whether they believed ſincerely or no, and alſo which of them would prove falſe to him, and conſpire with the Jews to put him to death.

64. But there are ſome of you that believe not. For Jeſus knew * from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who † ſhould betray him.]

65. And indeed this was the reaſon that I told you, v. 44. that no man cometh to the faith of Chriſt ſincerely, or continues ſtedfaſt in it, but he that by Gods preventing grace is qualified and diſpoſed for it (ſee note d.) becauſe I ſaw that many that follow me, do not truly believe on me, that is, do not intend to live as I command them, but one keeps his love of money, and for that will betray me, and others retain their other intereſts, and their other ſins.

65. And he ſaid, Therefore I * ſay unto you, that no man can come unto me, except it † were given unto him ‖ of my Father.

66. This ſpeech of Chriſts made many of his followers forſake him, ſeeing he was not ſuch a Meſſias as they lookt for, and would not be content with every kind of following him.

66. From that time many of his diſciples went back, and walked no more with him.]

67. Then ſaid Jeſus unto the twelve, Will ye alſo go away?

68. Thy words, as was ſaid by thee, v. 63. will to thoſe that obey thee, and keep cloſe to them, be a means to beſtow eternal life.

68. Then Simon Peter anſwered him, Lord, [to whom ſhall we go? [Thou haſt the words of eternal life.]

69. And thou haſt demonſtrated to us, that thou art the Meſſias, the eternal ſon of God, and therefore 'tis not poſſible there ſhould be any other fit to draw us from thee to him.

69. And we believe, and are ſure, that thou art that Chriſt, the ſon of the living God.]

70. I have, of all the followers that have believ'd on me, choſen but twelve to be my conſtant attendants, and one of them proves a traitor, a falſe treacherous perſon that will joyn with my enemies againſt me, ſee note on Mat. 4. a.

70. Jeſus anſwered them, [Have not I choſen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?]

71. He ſpake of Judas, for Chriſt foreſaw, (that though perhaps yet he did no ſuch thing, yet) he would deliver him to the Jews, and to that end combine with them, which was the greateſt falſeneſs imaginable in one, whom Chriſt had aſſumed to be ſo neer to him, as to be one of the twelve Apoſtles, whom he ſent out to preach his Goſpel to all people.

71. He ſpake of Judas Iſcariot the ſon of Simon; for he it was that ſhould * betray him, being one of the twelve.]

Annotations on Chap. VI.

a. ὁ Προφήτης Βασιλέα ποιεῖν.

V.15. Make him a king] The Jews expected a Meſſiah (whom they called ὁ προφήτης the prophet, v. 14.) about this time. Tacitus and Suetonius ſay it was a received opinion, that about this time a great king ſhould ariſe in Judah; but this a glorious one, and a powerful king, one that ſhould work their deliverance, free them from, and revenge them on the nations, who had gotten the dominion over them; By this miracle of Chriſts in feeding ſuch a multitude with ſo ſmall proviſion, they conjectured rightly, that he was able to ſuſtain, and feed the greateſt and moſt numerous army with very little charge, and thereupon were ready to come and take him by force to be their king, that is, their judge, or leader, to fight their battels for them like Gideon, &c. and this afterwards they again refer to, when they put him in mind of Moſes's giving them Manna in the wilderneſs, v. 31. which if he will do, or any thing equal to it, they will believe on him. This faith of theirs being unduly founded, and breaking out into a very inordinate expreſſion, our Saviour wholly diſliked, as to the preſent expreſſion of it, meaning not to undertake any ſuch employment; and for the faith it ſelf, that he juſtly ſuſpected would turn into malice, when they ſhould ſee this their hope of temporal deliverance and revenge fruſtrated, and therefore he retired, departed out of their hands to a mountain alone.

b. Ἐργάζεσθαι

V.27. Labour] The word ἐργάζεσθαι to labour, here ſeems to anſwer the Hebrew עשה having here an Accuſative caſe after it, and that ſignifies to acquire, parare, comparare, quærere, acquirere, colligere, poſſidere, lucrari, and is rendred by the Septuagint ἐκτήσατο, *Gen.*12. 5. and Gen. 31.1. For עשה in Hebrew, and πεποίηκα in Greek, the Targum read קנא acquiſivit, and *Deut.*8. 17. inſtead of My hand hath wrought me all this ſtrength, עשה החיל, ἐποίησε δύναμιν, the Targum hath כנש נכסיא hath gathered, or acquired me theſe riches. So Ezek. 28.4. ἐποίησας, thou haſt made the gold and ſilver in thy treaſury, the Targum have וכנשתא, and thou haſt gathered, &c. And thus Luke 19. 16. ἡ μνᾶ σου προσηργάσατο δέκα μνᾶς, and v. 18. ἐποίησε πέντε μνᾶς, thy pound hath made, or wrought, that is, hath gained, acquired, ten, or five pounds. Thus in * Palæphatus Parius, περὶ ἀπίστων, εἰργάσατο βρῶμα, he got himſelf food, ſibi victum comparavit. Another notion there is of the word, 1 *Cor.*9.13. οἱ τὰ ἱερὰ ἐργαζόμενοι, they that work, or labour, or prepare holy things, according to another notion of עשה when 'tis applied to a ſacrifice, or feaſt, or office, and then it notes obſervare, celebrare, præparare, aptare, ordinare, diſponere, to prepare, or fit, or diſpoſe, but that belongs not to this place.

Ἱερὰ ἐργαζόμενοι

c. Ἔργα Θεοῦ

V.28. Work the works of God] That ἔργα Θεοῦ ſignifies here the tasks, or commands of God, is not only evidenced by the Context, but is the affirmation of Procopius in *Gen.*2. Τοῦτ' ἔστι τὸ ἔργον Θεοῦ, ἵνα πιστεύσητε εἰς ὃν ἀπέστειλεν ἐκεῖνος, this is the work of God, the task which God preſcribes us, that you believe on him whom he hath ſent, the very place that immediately follows here, v.29.

d. ὃ Δίδωσί μοι ὁ πατήρ.

V.37. The Father giveth me] What is the meaning of ὃ δίδωσί μοι ὁ πατὴρ, what my father giveth me, may thus be diſcerned; Pſal. 2.8. there is a prediction, or prophecy of Chriſt (of whom in the words immediately precedent it is ſaid, Thou art my ſon, this day have I begotten thee, v.7.) that God will give him the heathen for his inheritance, and the utmoſt parts of the earth for his poſſeſſion, where we diſcern what kind of giving is here meant, giving for an inheritance or poſſeſſion, and that is for Chriſt to be Lord or owner of them, and they, as poſſeſſions, ſubject to his power and diſpoſe. And this is done in the converſion of them (ſee note on Rev. 2. o.) Of this poſſeſſion of his we find mention, *Tit.*2.14. where the περιούσιος λαὸς peculiar people, are λαὸς εἰς περιουσιασμὸν, people for a poſſeſſion, and thoſe are to be purifyed by Chriſt, and his life given for them, that he might redeem them from all iniquity. But who they are that are thus ſaid to be given to Chriſt by God, will firſt appear Negatively; 1. not any peculiar number of men, abſolutely, (without all reſpect to any qualifications) choſen by God to eternal Life; for it is apparent, and expreſly affirmed of one of this number, that he was finally loſt, Thoſe whom thou gaveſt me, ſaith Chriſt, I have kept, and none of them is loſt, ſave the ſon of perdition, John 17. 12. where through his own wretched default, one of thoſe who had by God been given to Chriſt, totally and finally departed, and was loſt from

from him. Secondly, Not those that are already actually believers, or by God looked upon as such; for of these that are here given to Christ, it is said ἥξει πρὸς ἐμὲ ἥξει, they shall come unto me: where coming to Christ is believing on him, and is a consequent of Gods giving them to Christ, not antecedent to it, and therefore when they are given to Christ, they are not looked upon as Believers already, but those which will be such; By these Negative considerations, the positive will, I suppose, be best collected, that they that are so qualified and disposed, as that Christ being proposed and revealed to them, they will follow him, come to him, become his disciples, those are they whom God gives to Christ. For there is a sort and temper of mind, which is most agreeable and proportionable to the believing on, or receiving of Christ, which they that have, are said to be εὐθετοι εἰς βασιλειαν τῦ Θεῦ, fit, or prepared, or disposed, for the kingdom of God, Luke 9. 62. (such as in that place, are ready and willing to undergo Christs conditions, to part with all, and follow him, and contrary to these are they that are not worthy of eternal life, Acts 13.46.) and of such Christ saith that they are not far from the kingdom of God, and that of such is the kingdom of heaven, and St. Luke, that they are τεταγμένοι disposed, in a readiness for eternal life; see note on Acts 13. i. If it be demanded what temper this is, I answer, it is the honest heart described in the parable of the seed, desiring sincerely to know the truth, and to do Gods will, c.7. 17. probity of mind, and, an eminent branch of that, humility, the temper resembled by the little children, whose innocence and humility is so remarkable, and of those poor in spirit is the kingdom of God (the Christian state) made up, Mat. 5 3. and those are Evangelized peculiarly, that is, wrought on by the preaching of the Gospel, and God gives grace to the humble, but resists the proud, refractary, confident person, and accordingly it is set down as the character of the Gospel, that God hath chosen the foolish things of the world, the weak, the base, the dispised, 1 Cor. 1. 27,28. And so of them that are thus qualified it is here truly said, that as God gives them to Christ for his portion, the men that are to be his subjects, (the Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile, is the fittest to be a disciple) so when Christ calls all to come unto him, these shall actually come; as soon as ever Christ is revealed to them, they receive him; as Josephus speaking of Christ, Ant. l. 18. c.4. saith he was διδάσκαλος ἀνθρώπων τῶν ἡδονῇ πάνυ δεχομένων, a teacher of those men that did with pleasure receive the truth; or as the τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, as many as were (in this sense) disposed to eternal life, believed, Acts 13. 18. and as Christ saith expressly here, c.7.17. that if any man will θέλει ποιεῖν, that is, desire sincerely to do Gods will, he shall know of the doctrine, &c. that is, acknowledge it as divine, and believe on it, whereas on the other side, Envy keeps some, Acts 13.45. Covetousness others, Luke 10. 14. Love of the praise of men, John 12. 42. keeps others from believing. And generally the unbelieving heart is an evil heart, *Heb.*3. 12. and a reprobate mind, (see 2 *Cor.*13.5.) and a hard heart, and a foolish, and slow heart in other places (see ch. 16. 3.) Mean while the better dispositions and preparations of the hearts of these here, are to be look'd on as effects wrought by the preventing graces of God, and in that respect they are here said to be drawn by the Father, v. 4. This preventing grace of God, which thus qualifies and disposes them to receive Christ, is by a Metonymie said to draw them to Christ, and that being drawn by God there, is set parallel to Gods giving them here, and is preparatory in both places to coming unto Christ, and then those that thus come to him, Christ will in no wise cast out, that is, by no means reject, but receive them and admit them to him, only he may perish after that, as Judas, which was given to Christ, did; if, as he did, he apostatize from him. By this appears also the meaning of διδακτοὶ τῦ Θεῦ, the taught, or the disciples, of God, v.45. those that have heartily applied themselves to Gods service, that have received this effect or impression of Gods preventing grace, the honest humble hearts, which thereby are qualified to lay hold and adhere to Christ, when others that have not received these precedaneous pious infusions, or are not wrought on by them, resist and stand out against him, (see note on 1 Thes. 4. c.) and so again what is meant by δεδομένον αὐτῷ ἐκ πατρός, *v.*5. given to him by, or from, the Father. He that by this preventing grace of God is thus qualified or disposed, it is said to be given him from the father to come unto Christ, i.e. his coming to Christ is consequent to that probity of mind wrought by the grace of God in him, as Luke 1.74. δοῦναι λατρεύειν, Gods giving us to serve him, is his giving strength or grace, or qualifying us for his service.) An effect of this grace it is, and of that probity produced by it, that any man lays hold on, or receives, the faith of Christ. And therefore from hence will best be discerned what is the meaning of the sheeps hearing the shepherds voice, and all that is added in that parable, ch. 10. 3. The sheep there cannot be understood to be believers or disciples of Christ, for these there are supposed to be sheep, before Christ the shepherd comes to them, and in that to be denominated sheep, that they hear the true shepherds voice when he comes, and so cannot be they that have already received him, as believers must have done, and accordingly, v.8. of the thieves and robbers that came before Christ, 'tis said, that the sheep did not hear them (they were sheep therefore before Christs coming, and so appears by v.26. where their not being his sheep is set as the reason of their not believing, which were not a proof, but tautology, if the sheep were there believers. By all which it is evident that the sheep are a sort of men, not yet considered as Christians, but such as are apt to believe in the true Messias, whensoever he comes, and so to follow him, as knowing his voice, v.4. which last expression is a key to open the meaning of the parable, and resolve who the sheep are. God the Father is in the ἀλληγορία or moral, the chief shepherd that is the owner or master of the sheep (as among the Jews men kept their own sheep) and the sheep are those that are best resembled by that emblem, the honest and humble hearted men, that by the revelation of Gods will, and some measure of grace afforded, before the coming of Christ, have been formed into all probity and humility of manners, living either as Zachary and divers others are said to do, walking in the ways of God blameless, or else after an ill life, recovered by repentance, and these are so well acquainted with the ways of God, that when any false Christ or impostor comes with infusions of impiety or wickedness, they discern them to be contrary to Godliness, and so will not hearken to them; but when Christ the true shepherd (for his Father and he are one, *v.*30.) cometh, and that, as with divine miracles to attest his mission, so with doctrines of piety, perfectly agreeable to that which they formerly practised, as the will of God, and only more elevated, and of higher perfection, Mat. 5. then these discerning the agreeableness of his doctrines with those which they have already received from God, and the addition of all the heavenly promises, which agree with the notion which they had of God as a rewarder, they know him to be the Messias, the shepherd which God hath promised to send them, that is, God himself (not any hired servant, whose own the sheep are not, v.12. but) the true shepherd, who is the owner of the sheep, and that is the meaning of their knowing his voice, upon which it is that they follow him, whereas strangers they fly from, and do not know their voice, *v.*5. By this explication of these so many phrases, all importing the same thing, will appear by way of resultance, what is the method that God is pleased to use to bring men to eternal life. He creates them rational, and so voluntary agents, and because of the weight of the Sensitive part of man, that presseth down the soul, doth by his precepts of good life, and proposals of reward

to it, and by his preventing graces, endeavour and do his part to draw them, and engage them to the performance of these duties, or, upon miscarriages, recals them to repentance. Those that by the strength of these graces (not destroying, but exciting and assisting their free will) do make use of them to that end, and as far as is yet revealed to them, live obediently, these are ready to receive and entertain Christ, his promises, and diviner, more elevated precepts, when they are revealed to them, and to those God elsewhere promiseth those higher dignations, under the title of more grace, and giving abundantly to him that hath; and when they have thus received Christ, his doctrine and his grace going along with it, it is most proper to take them off from the remaining dregs of corruption, to raise them to those pitches (which none but they are qualified to receive) of piety, and suffering any thing for Gods sake, of charity, excesses of that, even to enemies, &c. And they that do not fall off, because of these heights and strictnesses, but adhere to Christ, and pass through all the trials of this life, constant and persevering, they are daily supplied with more grace here, and rewarded with higher proportionable degrees of Glory. One thing only must here be farther added, that there are some that are said to be given to Christ in a more eminent and peculiar degree, and manner, not only to be believers, but constant, close attendants of Christ, such were the Twelve, who are said to be given him, ἐκ τῦ κόσμυ, out of the world, ch. 17. 6. For of them it is said, that no one is lost but only the son of perdition, v. 12. For them he prays, that they may be consecrated to the preaching of the Gospel, v. 17. of them he saith, that he hath sent them, &c. v. 18. given them the same Commission that he himself had. And his praying for them is distinguished from his praying after for believers, v. 20, 21. which being there set down as in a Parenthesis, he returns to his Disciples again, v. 22. and the glory which God had given him he gives them, where the giving them the glory which God had given Christ, seems a distant thing from their beholding his glory, v. 24. the former is the fitting them with gifts to succeed him on earth, the latter, the beatifick vision in heaven. And although it be ordinary for the same phrase to be used in a more eminent and restrained sense sometimes then others, and so they who are given to Christ may sometimes be believers only, in other places (where the Context enforceth it) disciples peculiarly, (and accordingly in that 17th chap. v. 9. & 12. it is only they whom thou hast given me, where yet, as appeared, the disciples only were meant) yet this addition of the words ἐκ τῦ κόσμυ, out of the world, may be reasonably thought to denote this by a propriety, where, by the world sometimes signifies those that deal in the affairs of the world, secular persons: Whereas the Twelve forsook the World, their Trades and Callings there, and followed Christ, and so were peculiarly given to him, ἐκ τῦ κόσμυ, out of the world.

Δέδωκάς μοι ἐκ τῦ κόσμυ.

Δόξα ἣν δέδωκάς μοι.

e. Σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα τῦ υἱῦ τῦ ἀνθρώπυ.

V. 53. Eat the flesh of the son of man, and—] What is meant here by the flesh and blood of the son of man must briefly be explained, and that first by taking notice of a figure or idiom, frequent in these Writers, whereby the parts set down separately do signify the whole, which consists of those parts. So is the heaven and the earth set to signify the whole compages of the (sublunary) world (see note on 2 Pet. 3. e.) and many the like. And so Christ's body, and flesh, and bones, Eph. 5. 30. and here, the flesh and blood of the Son of man, is the Son of man, or Christ himself Secondly, by observing the notion of flesh and blood frequently used not only to signify our mortal condition, which this our flesh and blood is subject to, (whereupon, when St. Paul saith, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, he adds, neither can corruption inherit incorruption, see Note on Mat. 16. e.) but also this mortal Nature, as it is subject to much weakness, and afflictions, &c. as Isa. 31. 3 the Egyptians are men and not God, and their horses flesh and not spirit, that is, weak helpers, unfit to be trusted in, v. 1. So when S. Paul saith, that through the infirmity of the flesh, that is, in many afflictions, and persecutions, he preached unto them, and so it notes Christ in his state of humiliation quite contrary to that which the Jews expected their Messias should come in, that Christ which was look'd on now so meanly, and was afterwards crucified by them. 3*ly*, by observing the occasion of Christs discourse here, (as it is ordinary with Christ to accommodate his speeches to the occasions, so Mat. 4. 19. when he calls the fisher-men, he tells them he will make them fishers of men, so John 4. 10, 14. and v. 31. and here v. 26, 27. and many the like) which was thus begun, they followed him for his loaves, v. 26. he reprehendeth that in him, and bids them seek, and desire that food which endureth to everlasting life, v. 27. that is, that doctrine of his which is food for their Souls, and being received, and digested, and turn'd into encrease of good life in them, would bring them to immortality. They ask him the way for them to do this, he tells them plainly, by believing on him, v. 29. They thereupon call for a sign, a miracle to be wrought by him, or else they will not believe, v. 30. and they instance in Moses who brought them Manna from heaven, and they would have him do some such thing, that they may believe on him, v. 31. Upon this occasion he begins, and compares himself with that Manna, and shews how much he surpasses that, and so continues that comparison betwixt himself and bread, as that is a means to preserve this short life, which deserves not to be call'd life; but he is the author and donor, and publisher of eternal Life, v. 33. Upon this speech of his, the Jews murmur, v. 41. that he should call himself the bread that came down from heaven; Christ resumes that speech, and speaks it with all confidence, I am that bread of life, v. 48. that is, that spiritual food, that will bring men to everlasting life, v. 50. and this bread, saith he, is his flesh, which he will give for the life of the world, v. 51. that is, he will die for this end to bring men to immortal Life, and that is it which he means by his being the bread of life. Upon this, as if they understood nothing all this while (tho' he had first spoken to them in plain terms, and express'd all by believing on him, v. 29 and 35. and only took up this more obscure figurative speech by way of answer to their proposals) they ask in a sensless perverse manner, How can this man give us his flesh to eat? v. 52. to which this verse is a confident answer, Verily, verily I say unto you, Except you eat, &c. still meaning, what all this while he had meant in opposition to their Manna, that his doctrine, for the preaching of which he was sent down from heaven, and that grace, which should be purchased for them by his death, was the most excellent food for their souls, which would establish, or comfort, or sustain their hearts, that is, maintain spiritual life in them, and that which would become eternal, v. 54. all which being put together, makes up this compleat sense of the words, that Christ, this mortal, despised, crucified Christ, that took our flesh on him, came down from heaven, here lived and died, to reveal his Fathers will unto us, and work belief in us, is the food of our souls, the believing and obeying of whom will, as food sustains corporal life, beget and maintain spiritual life in us, and bring us to eternity. By which also appears what Faith it is, which is look'd on by Christ as so highly necessary, even that which is here express'd by feeding on this spiritual food, not only eating, but digesting, and turning it into the nourishment of our Souls, such a believing the doctrine of Christ as hath present influence on our Lives, obeying, not only understanding his commands, embracing his promises upon the terms on which they are made, undertaking the performance of the condition of them, and not only assenting to the truth of them, and so for the humility of his Life, and the charity and zeal to the good of Mens Souls, and the constancy and courage of his death, and the charity so great as to lay down his life even for enemies, to transcribe, and practise that also. This is to eat the flesh of the son of man, and to drink his blood, and without this we have no life in us.

Εδιεν σάρκα

V. 55. Indeed] One principal notion of ἀληθὴς hath been formerly explained (see note on Luke 16. a.) to signify truly valuable, or durable, or truly valuable, because it is durable, and so here ἀληθὴς or ἀληθῶς βρῶσις true meat, or truly meat is explained to be the bread of life, v. 48. that, on which he that feeds shall live for ever, so the βρωσιμένουσα εἰς αἰῶνα, food that endures for ever, v. 27. and opposite to Manna, on which they that feed, die, v. 49. And this 1. as the word ἀληθῶς, truly, noteth some special eminency, wherein any attribute belongs to the subject, and when it is applied to resemblances, it then signifies that, which is spoken of, to be more eminently that, by which 'tis resembled, then that it self is, as I am the true vine, that is, a vine by bearing grapes, (which yield wine, which makes glad the heart of man) is not neer so able, and proper to refresh a thirsty person, as I am, as my commands and promises are. So St. John of Christ, c. 1. 9. that he is the true light, that is, the most excellent. So Heb. 8. 2. Heaven is the true tabernacle, that of which the Tabernacle was but a dark and poor resemblance, and so this is call'd ἀληθινὸς ἄρτος, true bread, v. 32. and truly meat here, that is, more nutritive, and strengthning, and comforting then meat and bread is. 2*dly*, in respect of the particular matter, to which 'tis here applied, viz. βρῶσις food, that which feeds one for an hour, or a day, (and enlargeth his life, but so long) being not truly food, nor worthy to be so called, at least not so, in comparison with that, which keeps him alive, so as life is adequately opposite to death, that is, for ever. And so with us the word false signifies fading, transitory, that which will fail us, when it were most of advantage for us to receive benefit by it.

CHAP. VII.

Paraphrase.

1. After these things Jesus [walked in Galilee, for he would not walk in Jury, because the Jews sought to kill him.]
1. Went about preaching thro' the cities of Galilee, where he rather chose to do it, then in Judea, because the rulers of the Jews, those of the Sanhedrim at Jerusalem, sought for some advantage, or occasion to put him to death.

2. Now the Jews feast of tabernacles was at hand.

3. His brethren therefore said unto him, Depart hence and go into Judea, that thy disciples also may see the works that thou dost.]
3. On this occasion his kindred (v. 5.) said unto him, Go into Judea again, that the many, which were wont to follow thee there, may see the miracles which thou dost.

4. For there is no man that doth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to a be * known openly. If thou do these things, shew thy self to the world.]
4. For whosoever would gain an authority among *in authority the people, in any reason must not do his miracles privately, therefore whatever thou dost, do it in Judea, as publickly as thou canst.

5. For neither did his brethren believe in him.]
5. This they said, as not believing on him, but either suspecting the truth of his miracles, or else desiring that he would do that, which might acquire him that authority, which they conceived him to pretend to.

6. Then Jesus said unto them, My † time is not yet come: but your time is always ready.
† season, καιρὸς
6, 7. Jesus therefore to rectify this mistake of their, said unto them, 'Tis not yet fit for me to be so publick,

7. The world cannot hate you, but me it hateth, because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil.]
because the doctrine that I teach is contrary and odious to the world, or the present prevailing power of the Jews. You may appear whersoever you will, being not under any such hatred, by any thing that you do or teach, as I am sure to be among the Pharisees, and chief of the Jews.

8. Go ye up to this feast: I go not yet up unto this feast, for my * time is not yet full come.]
8. You may go up to Jerusalem, to the feast, as pub-
* season is not yet fulfilled, καιρὸς οὔπω πεπλήρωται.
lickly as you please, but I shall not go yet, when you go, or with you, because my time of going up, in such a publick capacity, v. 10. is not yet come.

9. When he had said these words unto them, he abode still in Galilee.]
9. And accordingly he stayed a while after the rest of his kindred in the place where he now abode.

10. But when his brethren were gone up, then went he also up unto the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret.]
10. Soon after his kindred were gone, he also followed, but more privately, with small company attending him, lest he should stir up the jealousy of the Sanhedrim.

11. Then the Jews sought him at the feast, and said, Where is he?

12. And there was much [murmuring] among the people concerning him: for some said, He is a good man: others said Nay, but he deceiveth the people.]
12. Disputing, arguing among them, some affirming him to be an upright man, and one that taught the truth; others denied, and said that he was a false prophet, and seduced the people.

13. Howbeit, no man spake [openly of him, for fear of the Jews.]
13. By way of oration to the people (see note a.) either for him, or against him, because the people were so divided in their opinions about him, that either speaking for him, or against him, would have been perilous.

14. Now about the midst of the feast,] Jesus went up into the Temple, and taught.
14. Now on some middle day of the feast, on one of the eight days of which the feast consisted, but neither on the first, nor the last of them, v. 37.

15. And the Jews marvelled, saying, How knoweth this man † letters, having never learned?]
15. How comes he to understand the books of the † books, learning, the Scriptures, the Syriack reads, the book, see note g.
Law and Scriptures so well, having not been brought up in the Schools of the prophets? See note on Mat. 5. g.

16. Jesus answered them and said [My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.]
16. What I teach is not from my self, but from God that hath sent me.

17. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of my self.]
17. Any man that hath a willingness to do Gods will, how contrary soever it be to his own, that hath a readiness to serve God in Gods way, and is not wedded to his own, (see c. 6. note d.) that man, and none but he, is likely to pass a right judgment on my doctrine, whether it be of God or no.

18. He that speaketh of himself, seeketh his own glory: but he that seeketh his glory that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him.]
18. For that man will thus judge, he that pretends to be sent by God when he is not, always seeks his own advantage, somewhat of glory or profit to himself. But he that labours only the bringing honour to God, and in pursuit of that, doth what is most contrary to his own interest, conceals nothing, tho' it cost him never so dear, to declare it, He is worth believing (or deserves to be believed) having no false design in what he doth, no deceit, or guile in him.

19. Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law? why go ye about to kill me?]
19. But 'tis otherwise with you, you are not of that making, v. 17. that law which your own beloved Moses gave you, and for the maintaining of which you have so much zeal, and hate hate me as a breaker of it, ye do not your ſelves obſerve, ye do not (the moſt of you) live according to the rules of it. If ye did, ye would not be ſo forward to embrue your hands in my blood, who have no way offended againſt you, or that; This concludes you not likely to judge what doctrine is of God. A man muſt have purged and regulated affections, to do ſo (ſee c.6. note d.)

Annotations on Chap. VII.

a. Παῤῥησία

V. 4. Be known openly] The word παῤῥησία in the New Teſtament hath divers ſignifications. Firſt it ſignifies ἄδειαν, ſaith Heſychius, boldneſs, confidence, fearleſneſs of danger. So John 11. 54. παῤῥησίᾳ περιπατεῖν, to go about fearleſly. So Acts 28. 31. Phil. 1. 20. Heb. 3. 6. & 10. 35. & 1 John 4. 17. boldneſs, or fearleſneſs, when they are called before ſecular Tribunals; and ſo παῤῥησιάζομαι in two places of the Acts, c. 13. 46. where, in oppoſition to the ζῆλος, and ἀντιλογία, and βλασφημίαι of the Jews, their virulency, contradiction, and railing againſt Paul and Barnabas, 'tis ſaid, that they παῤῥησιαζόμενοι εἶπον, ſpake boldly and confidently, that ſpeech of the greateſt danger, that brought all the hatred and perſecution of the Jews upon them, we depart to the Gentiles. So ch. 26. 26. I ſpeak παῤῥησιαζόμενος, with confidence and courage to Agrippa, who knows of theſe things, tho' Feſtus do not. So Eph. 6. 20. & 1 Theſ. 2. 2. Secondly, it ſignifies freeneſs, or liberty, of ſpeaking, ſaying what a man will; ſo Acts 2. 29. Let me ſpeak παῤῥησίᾳ, freely, without any reſtraint, of the Patriarch David (and diſtinctly Elocution (ſuch as is promiſed them, Mat. 10. 19.) Acts 4. 13. for there it is the gift that they prayed for, and which diſcriminated them from other illiterate men, and came upon them by the Spirit, as had been promiſed, Mat. 10. 19.) So 2 Cor. 7. 4. Great is my παῤῥησία πρὸς ὑμᾶς, freeneſs, in ſpeaking largely in their commendation, expreſs'd by the καύχησις following, great is my glorying of you, ſo Heb. 4. 16. Let us come to the throne of Grace, μετὰ παῤῥησίας, with freeneſs, to declare all our wants and requeſts to God. So Phil. 8. having in, or through, Chriſt πολλῇ παῤῥησίᾳ, great liberty, or freeneſs of ſpeech, to ſay or to command him what is fit. So 1 John 2. 28. ἔχωμεν παῤῥησίαν, we may have freneſs of acceſs to him καὶ μὴ αἰσχυνθῶμεν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ, and not be turned with ſhame from him, or as guilty perſons be aſhamed to meet him. So again, c. 3. 21. If our heart condemn us not, we have παῤῥησίαν πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν, partly confidence toward God, in the firſt notion of not fearing any danger from him, and partly in this latter of praying freely to him, asking him what we will, as the next words explain it, Whatſoever we ask, we receive. And ſo again in this latter ſenſe, ch. 5. 14. From this there is alſo a third ſenſe of the word, but lightly changed from the ſecond, to ſignify perſpicuity of ſpeech, as that is oppoſite to darkneſs, or parabolical expreſſions, when the matter is free and not involved, or obſcured by words So John 10. 24. εἰπὲ ἡμῖν παῤῥησίᾳ, tell us plainly, as that is oppoſed to λυχνὸν αἴρειν, to hold them in ſuſpence. So John 11. 14. having ſaid, Lazarus ſleepeth, which was a figurative, and with all equivocal ſpeech, he then ſpeaks παῤῥησία, in plain words, Lazarus is dead. So again, ch. 16. 25. & 29. in both places παῤῥησίᾳ, plainly in oppoſition to ἐν παροιμίαις, in parables. So 2 Cor. 3. 12. we uſe πολλῇ παῤῥησίᾳ, great plainneſs, that is, perſpicuity of ſpeech, in oppoſition to the veil over Moſes's face, the obſcurity of the Old Teſtament, v. 13. Fourthly, it ſignifies ſpeaking in any aſſembly, in a Declamatory way of oration, ſpeaking to the people. Thus doth Phavorinus define παῤῥησίᾳ, that it is, ἡ εἰς τὸ μέσον τῆς ἐκκλησίας ἵστασθαι ἢ καὶ δημηγορίαν πρόσωπον, a going into the midſt of the aſſembly to ſpeak unto the people on any occaſion. And this, ſaith he, according to the making of the word, from παρὰ and ῥῆμι, ῥήσω and ſo παῤῥησιάζομαι (uſed Acts 9. 27, 28. and 14. 3. and 18. 26. and 19. 8.) will be paraphraſed literally, ſaith he, from that of Euripides, Κἂν παρεισὰς ἆπον ἐν μέσοις τάδε, or εἰς μέσον ἐλθὼν, to come and ſtand, or ſpeak in the midſt of an aſſembly. Thus is in Mar. 8. 32. παῤῥησίᾳ ἐλάλει he ſpake it in the hearing of the people. Thus in the 13. v. of this chapter, no man ſpake παῤῥησίᾳ publickly, by way of harangue to the people. No man ſo interpoſed either for, or againſt him, and v. 26. behold he ſpeaks, παῤῥησίᾳ publickly, and ſo c. 18. 20. I ſpake to the world, παῤῥησίᾳ in publick aſſemblies. Laſtly, it ſignifies authority, ſo ſaith Heſychius Παῤῥησίᾳ, ἐξουσίᾳ alſo, power, authority: Thus I conceive it ſignifies in theſe books, whenſoever the Prepoſition ἐν (with or in) is joyned with it. Thus Acts 4. 29. μετὰ παῤῥησίας λαλεῖν λόγον, to ſpeak the word with authority, and v. 31. they ſpake it with authority, being backed with the power of miracles, v. 30. So Eph. 6. 19. that ſpeech may be given me, to open my mouth, ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ with authority, (as when 'tis ſaid of Chriſt that he taught ὡς ἐξουσίαν ἔχων, Mat. 7. 29. as one that had authority) ſo Col. 2. 15. where ſpeaking of Chriſt, as a Conquerour, he ſaith ἐδειγμάτισεν ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ he made open ſhew of them (that is, δειγματίζειν) with authority, as one that triumphed over them. And ſo ſure 'tis here, when his kindred not believing in him, v. 5. firſt find fault with him for doing his miracles, ἐν κρυπτῷ, in a more private place, (δειλίαν ὑγκαλύπτοντες ἅμα καὶ ὑποπτεύσαντες τὰ γινόμενα ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, ὡς οὐκ ἀληθῶς γινόμενα, ſaith St. Chryſoſtom, accuſing his timidity, and alſo ſuſpecting the things that he had done, as not truly done, doubting whether they were true miracles or no) and thereupon adviſe him to go up to Jeruſalem to the feaſt, and do them there; then add, as looking on the authority, which they thought he ſought for among the people, (or wiſhing that he would look after it) ἵνα καὶ οἱ ἐν κρυπτῷ ποιεῖ καὶ ζητεῖ αὐτὸς ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ εἶναι, where none of the four former notions will be agreeable to it, and therefore muſt be rendred in the fifth, No man doth any thing in ſecret, and deſires to be in authority. Of this St. Chryſoſtom, τοῦτο ἐπαγαγεῖν, ὅτι ζητεῖ ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ εἶναι φιλοδοξίας, the adding that phraſe, ſignifies love of glory, either that they thought he deſired to be followed and magnified among men, to be a great Rabbi among the people, or elſe, that they deſired it for him. Thus alſo (in the Accuſa-tive case with ἔχω) it seems to signify, Heb. 10. 19. where the Christian is said to have παῤῥησίαν, that is, liberty, authority, ἐξουσίαν to enter into the holies, as the Priest had typically under the Law, so Eph. 3. 12. In whom we have παῤῥησίαν καὶ τὴν προσαγωγὴν, that is, liberty, and access, or liberty to come freely (not confidence for that is after express'd by the addition of ἐν πεποιθήσει, with confidence) so 1 Tim. 3. 13. when the Deacon ascends to the καλὸν βαθμὸν, good, that is, higher, degree of Bishop, he is said to acquire πολλὴν παῤῥησίαν ἐν πίστει, great power in the faith, authority in the preaching of the Gospel, or in the Church of God, so Theophylact expounds it, εὐδοξότερος γίνεσθαι, to become more honourable, ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ λάμπειν, to shine in the Church, ἐν πρεσβυτερικῷ βαθμῷ καὶ ἐπισκοπικῷ, in the dignity, or degree of Presbyter or Bishop.

b. Δαιμόνιον ἔχειν. V. 20. Thou hast a devil] All sorts of diseases were in those days brought on men (sometimes) by the devil, and so generally they that are brought to Christ for cure, are said to be possess'd (see Note on Mat. 17. c.) but especially those who were more strangely affected, without any visible cause of it, were generally thought to suffer this from the devils getting power to possess them; and of this sort especially mad men (such the δαιμονιζόμενοι, Mat. 8. 28. appear to be by their raving temper there) who being not discernibly sick, or ill affected, did yet behave themselves, as if they were in some strong distemper, which is oft an effect of disease or περιφροσύνη, & therefore were by them thought to be possess'd by some evil spirit. So in Just. Mart. Apol. 2. ὡς δαιμονολήπτους καὶ μανιώδεις καλοῦσι πάντες, they that are possess'd are by all men call'd mad. So c. 10. 20. 'tis plainly said, He hath a devil, and is mad, and Mat. 11. 18.

c. ὧν Διὰ τοῦτο V. 22. Therefore] 'Tis to be observed that as ὅτι in other Gospels, so ὧν in this is a particle of transition, otherwise unsignificant, serving only for passage, not to import any causality. And the same is here to be said of διὰ τοῦτο, in the beginning of this verse, which is only a form of proceeding in the present discourse, and might be rendred, To this purpose you may observe, that which follows being an account of the lawfulness of working cures on the Sabbath day, and not the concluding this from the former, as διὰ τοῦτο, for this cause, or therefore, literally would import. But 'tis possible that διὰ τοῦτο, here might be the concluding of the former verse, and the reading thus, θαυμάζετε διὰ τοῦτο, ye wonder, or are angry with me, for this; (so Theophylact reads it.) But this is a conjecture

d. Διασπορὰ Ἑλλήνων V. 35. Dispersed among the Gentiles] The Jews were dispersed before this time in several places among the Gentiles, some in Europe, others in Asia. Those in Europe had their chief assembly at Alexandria, and there the Septuagints Translation of the Bible into Greek was in use, and thence they are called διασπορὰ Ἑλλήνων, the dispersion of the Hellenists. And of these there were many also in Jerusalem which used the Septuagints translation, being thus skilled in the Greek tongue, and these living not in Greece are yet called Ἑλληνισταὶ, Acts 6. 1. Hellenists, because they used the Greek language, and the Septuagints translation, whereas others are called Ἑβραῖοι, Hebrews (see note on Acts 6. a.) The Asian dispersion is mentioned 1 Pet. 1. 1. and had Babylon for their Metropolis, & used the Targum or Chaldee paraphrase of Onkelos in their Synagogues; Of these two dispersions, see Rev. 12. 14.

Ἑλληνιστὰς

e. Ἑορτὴ V. 37. The feast] This feast was the feast of Tabernacles, and that is sometimes by the Hebrews called, without any more חג, the feast, as in Cod. Middoth, c. a. שבו מכנסין צלוחית של מים ויסוך בחג they carry a vessel of water through them, (that is, thro' the water gates שער המים) to the Sacrifice of the feast, and Joma, c. 2. sect. 5. כחג ביד אחד צלוחית של מים at the feast there was in the hand of one a pot of water (for so that Rabbinical צלוחית is the Greek word σελευκὶς, which in Athenæus, l. 2. signifies a sort of pots, so called, saith he, from the name of a King Seleucus) now it was the custom in that feast of Tabernacles to offer up water unto God, to denote the blessing of rain, which they then prayed for, as of special use against the approaching seed-time, as at the Passover they offered an Omer, to obtain from God his blessing on their harvest, and at Pentecost their first-fruits, to obtain from God his blessing on the fruits of the Trees; see Rab. Levi ben Gersom, on 2 Sam. 23. 16. These waters which they thus offered, they drew out of Siloah, and brought them into the Temple with the sound of the Trumpet, and offered them with singing of voices and instruments. And in relation to these customs of the Jews at that feast Christ here is said to have cryed, ἔκραξε, with a loud voice, supplying the sound of the Trumpet, a voice of proclaiming (as κράζειν and κηρύσσειν, are but several variations of the Hebrew קרן saying, If any man thirst, &c. taking occasion from their custom of drawing water out of Siloah, to excite the people to fetch and draw from him, as from a true fountain, all the gifts of the Spirit, which may tend to the fitting them for a divine heavenly plantation.

Ἔκραξε ἐάν τις διψᾷ

f. Κοιλία V. 38. Out of his Belly] It was ordinary at fountains or springs of water to build receptacles, or vessels of stone, or wells, and in the middle thereof (that is, the κοιλία, the belly here, and in the Hebrew בטן 1 King. 7. 20.) to have pipes or cisterns, Prov. 5. 15. thro' which the water passes, and comes out by cocks, &c. and thus shall it be with every believer, he shall be so filled with the Spirit of God as a spring of water, that it shall, out of his heart (καρδία and κοιλία, being all one, Matth. 12. 40. and both answerable to the Hebrew בטן) break forth continually into his actions.

g. Γραμματεῖς Γραμματεῖς V. 49. This people which knoweth not the law] Among the Jews there were 1. the Doctors of the Law, the wise men, γραμματεῖς, Scribes, or νομοδιδάσκαλοι, teachers of the law, (γράμματα and νόμος writings, and law, being all one, both equally the rendring of the Hebrew ספרה, which signifies the book of the law (by which the Syriack render γράμματα, writings, v. 15. ἱερὰ γράμματα, the holy writings, 2 Tim. 3. 15.) the expounders of the Scripture; and 2*dly, studiosi legis, those that studied the Law,* disciples, or (as the Hebrews called them) תלמידי חכמים scholars of the wise men, & such an one they style חבר a companion of wise men, who is not yet a Rabbi or Teacher, cannot be called Doctor noster excellens, our excellent doctor, but the next degree to one, one of the sons of the Prophets, or as the Targum renders חברין companions, Ezek. 37. אחיהון their brethren, that is, such as are of the same Society or fraternity with the excellentissimus doctor noster: and 3*dly,* the people of the earth, the illiterate man, εἷς τῶν πολλῶν, one of the many, and these are noted by ὁ ὄχλος οὗτος, this rout, or multitude, ὁ μὴ γινώσκων τὸν νόμον, which knoweth not the law.

Ὄχλος οὗτος ὁ μὴ γινώσκων τὸν νόμον

h. ἐκ Γαλιλαίας ὅτι προφήτης V. 52. Out of Galilee ariseth no prophet] That Galilee was under a reproach among the Jews, appears, ch. 1. 46. And as there 'tis said, that no good could come out of Nazareth, so here, that never any prophet came out of Galilee. But upon search it seems to appear, that the Pharisees here were too large in their observation of reproach; for tho' it happened not often, yet of Jonah we find that he was of Gath Hepher, 2 Kings 14. 25. that was a town of the tribe of Zebulon, Josh. 19. 13. and consequently in Galilee, Isa. 9. 1. and this Jonah prophesy'd in the time of Joash, (when he was oppressed by the Syrians) that by his son Jeroboam the kingdom should be delivered out of their hands, 2 Kings 14. 25, 26. and was afterwards sent to Nineveh, Jonah 1. 1.

V. 53. And every —] This verse, and the eleven first verses of ch. 8. the whole story of the woman taken in the act of adultery, are wholly omitted in many ancient copies; St. Chrysostom leaves it out, so doth Nonnus and Theophylact, and the Syriack interpreter and Euthymius saith, that none of the ancients have taken notice of it in their expositions of the Gospel. Maldinate, who strive for it, to make good the Trent Canon, doth yet confess, that of all the Manuscript Greek

* Vers. transfixum.

Greek copies none have it but only one with Leontius's Comment, and that in that alſo it is * daſh'd out with a Pen, and omitted by the Commentator, that it is not in the moſt ancient copy of the Vatican, that none of the 23 authors in the Catena mention it. And in the end of the third Book of Euſebius Eccl. Hiſt. we have theſe words, ſpeaking of Papias ἐκτίθεται ὑπ᾽ αὐτοῦ καὶ γυναικὸς ἐπὶ πολλαῖς ἁμαρτίαις διαβληθείσης ἐπὶ τῷ κυρίῳ, τὸ κατὰ Ἑβραίους εὐαγγέλιον περιέχει, He hath related another ſtory of a woman accuſed to Chriſt of many ſins, which the Goſpel according to the Hebrews contains, implying it not to be in any of the 4 goſpels; other later Greek copies there are which have this ſtory in this place, and ſo the Arabick, and moſt of the Latin, ſo the Author of the σύνοψις attributed, but ('tis thought, not truly) to Athanaſius. In this difficulty the reſolution which is given by the learned H. Grotius, ſeems to be moſt reaſonable, that this part of ſtory was by word of mouth delivered by the Apoſtles to them that heard them, that Papias and others had it (as is teſtified by Euſeb. l.3. c. 39.) from the Scholars and hearers of St. John, that tho' others of Papias's pretended traditions were not, yet this was approved and received by the Church (as ſufficiently teſtified to have come from the Apoſtles, and as S. Jerom affirms, put in into that which was called The Goſpel of the Nazarens) and ſo in later times after the Syriack, but before the Arabick and ancient Latin tranſlations, put into this place of this Goſpel, and accordingly read in the Church of God.

CHAP. VIII. Paraphraſe.

1. JEſus went unto the mount of Olives.

2. And early in the morning he came again into the Temple, and all the people came unto him, and he ſate down and taught them.

3. And the Scribes and Phariſees brought unto him a woman [taken in adultery: and when they had ſet her in the midſt,] 3. Deprehended in the act of adultery, & brought her forth as to judgment. And

4. They ſay unto him, Maſter, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act.

5. Now Moſes in * the law commanded, that [a ſuch ſhould be ſtoned:] but what ſayeſt thou? 5. Thoſe that were thus taken ſhould be ſubject to any the ſevereſt puniſhment, ſuch as ſtoning was. 2.

* our law, ſo many cop. read, ἡμῶν Μωσῆς

6. This they ſaid tempting him, that they might have to accuſe him. [But Jeſus ſtooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, † as though he heard them not.] 6. But Jeſus gave them no anſwer, but as if he heeded not, or underſtood not their queſtion, ſtooped down, &c.

† As ſome copys read μὴ προσποιούμενος making not ſhew, as the word is us'd Luk. 24. 28.) viz. to hear or underſtand him, ſo moſt copies now uſed have not this.

7. So when they continued asking, he lift up himſelf, and ſaid unto them, He that is without ſin among you, let him [firſt caſt a ſtone at her.] 7. Supply the place of the proſecutors, and be the firſt that caſts ſtones at her, Deut. 17. 7.

8. And again he ſtooped down, and wrote on the ground.

9. And they which heard it, [being convicted by their own conſcience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldeſt even unto the laſt: and Jeſus was left alone, and the woman ſtanding in the midſt.] 9. Being every one of them convinced in conſcience that he was guilty of ſome as great commiſſion as this, went out one after another, none remaining but Jeſus and the woman, ſhe ſtanding before him in the poſture of an accuſed perſon before a Judge.

10. When Jeſus had lift up himſelf, and ſaw none but the woman, he ſaid unto her, Where are thoſe thine accuſers? Hath no man, [condemned thee?] 10. Adjudged thee worthy of death.

11. She ſaid, No man, Lord. And Jeſus ſaid unto her, [Neither do I condemn thee: go, and ſin no more.] 11. Neither do I adjudge thee to death, but rather call thee to repentance and reformation.

12. Then ſpake Jeſus again unto them, ſaying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me, ſhall not walk in darkneſs, but ſhall have the light of life.] 12. Then Jeſus ſoon after the delivering thoſe words, c. 7. 38. and in purſuance of the ſame matter, ſaid to them all publickly, I am come to enlighten the hearts of all men, he that will leave his former courſe, and follow me, I will give him that illumination which ſhall bring him to piety and bliſs.

13. The Phariſees therefore ſaid unto him, Thou beareſt record of thy ſelf, thy [record is not true.] 13. Teſtimony is not to be heeded or credited, is no valid teſtimony, or to be received by us.

14. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Though I bear record of my ſelf, yet my record is true: For I know whence I came, and whither I go, but ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go.] 14. Jeſus anſwered, My teſtifying of my ſelf doth not invalidate my teſtimony, my coming from heaven on an embaſſy to you, on anothers, not mine own errand (and that teſtified by the Spirit to John Baptiſt, and by John Baptiſt to you, if ye would believe, but however to my ſelf undoubtedly known) gives a validity to my teſtimony, and joyns God the Father himſelf in the teſtimony with me. And as the Holy Ghoſt hath teſtified, that I am ſent by God, ſo my aſcenſion to heaven (which will ſufficiently prove my miſſion) being known to me before hand, though not to you, and being diſcoverable by the event to you alſo, eſpecially when ſo many eye-witneſſes ſhall have teſtified it to you, it will follow that my teſtimony of my ſelf, though a ſingle one, will be authentick and valid, though perhaps, as the one is not already, ſo the other alſo will not be heeded by you.

15. Ye judge after the fleſh, I judge no man.] 15. Ye that know not my divine original, v. 14. judge of me only according to my humane extraction, and in proportion to that, paſs ſentence of me, I am unwilling to ſay or judge the worſt of you, otherwiſe I could ſay worſe of you.

16. And yet if I judge, my judgment is true: for I am not alone, but I and the father that hath ſent me.] 16. And if I ſhould do ſo, my judgment were valid, according to law, becauſe this is the judgment alſo and teſtimony of my father, who by his Spirit, and miracles, and the voice from heaven, requiring all to believe on me, muſt needs judge them as pertinacious unbelievers, who ſtand out againſt all this.

17. It is alſo written in your law, that the teſtimony of two men is true.] 17. And it is known in all Laws, particularly in that of yours, Deut. 17. 6. that the teſtimony of two men is to be received as valid in any cauſe whatſoever.

* witneſs of my ſelf, εἰ μὴ ὁ μαρτυρῶν

18. I * am one that bear witneſs of my ſelf, and the father that ſent me, beareth witneſs of me.] 18. And I and my father are thoſe two, for as I now witneſs of my ſelf (which is not againſt law or reaſon for me to do, for 'tis not mine own cauſe, but concerns others, to whom I am ſent, and not my ſelf, but only as a witneſs and declarer) ſo my father alſo by voice from heaven, deſcent of his Spirit, miracles, prophecies, teſtifies my commiſſion from him.

19. Then

19. They ſay therefore unto him, Is not Joſeph your father, have you any other? Jeſus replyed, you will not receive any knowledge concerning me or my Father. Your acknowledging of me is the only way to bring you to the knowledge of my Father.

19. Then ſaid they unto him, Where is thy Father? Jeſus anſwered, Ye neither know me nor my Father: if ye had known me, ye would have known my father alſo.]

20. These things Jeſus ſaid in that part of the Temple, where the cheſt ſtood, into which the offerings were put, where he publickly taught the people, and that without any man offering to lay hands on him, God ſo diſpoſing of it for a ſeaſon.

20. Theſe words ſpake Jeſus in the treaſury, as he taught in the Temple: and no man laid hands on him] for his hour was not yet come.

21. I ſhall depart from hence, and then you ſhall ſeek me unprofitably, and by contemning (or as it is interpreted v.24. not believing) me now, bring judgments upon your ſelves, as they that take no warning by the preaching of the Prophet, Ezek. 2.9. And then 'twill be too late to wiſh for this time again, for I ſhall be gone far out of reach of your coming to me.

21. Then ſaid Jeſus again unto them, [I go my way, and ye ſhall ſeek me, and ſhall dye in your ſins: whither I go ye cannot come.]

22. The Jew not underſtanding to what his ſpeech drove, ſaid one to another, what will he kill himſelf, &c.

22. Then ſaid the Jews, will he kill himſelf, becauſe he ſaith, whether I go ye cannot come?]

23,24. You and I are from very contrary diſtant originals, your affections, like your ſelves, are of an earthly temper and original, and therefore can phanſy ſuch black interpretations of my ſpeeches, as if I would kill my ſelf, when my meaning is, that I ſhall aſcend to heaven, whence I came, and if ye believe not that I am the Meſſias, ye ſhall loſe the benefit that I came to bring you, and dye without any remedy in your ſins.

23. And he ſaid unto them, [Ye are from beneath, I am from above: ye are of this world, I am not of this world.

24. I ſaid therefore unto you, that ye ſhall dye in your ſins: for if ye believe not that * I am he, ye ſhall dye in your ſins.]

* I am, ἐγώ εἰμι

25. I have told you all this while. He that is ſent from the Father, the Meſſias, and if you ask me never ſo often, I can tell you no otherwiſe.

25. Then ſaid they unto him, Who art thou? And Jeſus ſaith unto them, [Even the ſame that I ſaid unto you b from the beginning.]

† the very ſame which I tell you.

26. I could by many evidences charge & aggravate your infidelity, but I will uſe no other but the teſtimony of my Father, which is alone ſufficient to convince you, and having my commiſſion from him, I ſpeak nothing but what that commiſſion extends to.

26. I have many things to ſay and to judge of you: but he that ſent me is true, and I ſpeak to the world thoſe things that I have heard of him.]

27. This ſpeech of his they underſtood not, yet conceiving that by him that ſent him, he meant the Father.

27. They underſtood not that he ſpake to them of the Father.]

28. After the Romans crucifying of me, which I now foretel you, and that by your inſtance and urging them to it, there will be thoſe evidences yielded you of my being truly, what now you will not believe me to be, (viz. my reſurrection, aſcenſion, &c.) that you ſhall have no excuſe to deny it, then ſhall ye be convinced (either to the working your repentance or your deſtruction) that I am the Meſſias, and came from God, and do nothing but according to my Commiſſion from him.

28. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them, [When * ye have lift up the ſon of man, then ſhall ye know that I † am he, and that I do nothing of my ſelf: but as my father hath taught me I ſpeak theſe things.]

* ye ſhall hav lift up Οταν ὑψώσητε

† am, and ἐγώ εἰμι, καὶ

29. And as I had at my coming commiſſion from him, ſo is he perpetually preſent with me in all I do, to advance and promote all the deſigns of my coming, that is, to proſper all I ſet about, for I do nothing but by his appointment and commiſſion.

29. And he that ſent me is with me, the Father hath not left me alone: for I do always * that c pleaſe him.]

* which he hath appointed

30. As he ſpake theſe words many believed on him.

31. Conſtantly practiſe my commands, you are truly & really my followers and diſciples.

31. Then ſaid Jeſus to thoſe Jews which believed on him, if ye [continue in my word, then are ye my diſciples indeed.]

32. And thoſe truths which I ſhall reveal to you, ſhall beſtow upon you a moſt valuable freedom.

32. And ye ſhall know the truth, and the truth ſhall make you free.

33. Then the other Jews there preſent (not the believers, v. 31. but thoſe that were more bloodily diſpoſed, v. 37.) replyed ſaying, We are heirs to the promiſes made to Abraham, and never yet ſubdued to be ſlaves to any, and beſides we are exerciſed in the ſtudy of the law, and of all ſuch we have a proverb, that ſuch a man is a ſervant to no man, what can the meaning of thoſe words be, that the truth ſhall make us free.

33. They anſwered him, We be Abrahams ſeed, and were never in bondage to any man, how ſayeſt thou, Ye ſhall be made free?]

34. Jeſus anſwered them, I aſſure you, you are miſtaken in that opinion of your ſelves, in thinking your ſelves to be free Men, your being born of Abrahams ſeed will not prove it, for living and going on in groſs courſes of ſin, ye are to know, that there are no ſuch ſlaves as they that live indulgent in ſin.

34. Jeſus anſwered them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, whoſoever committeth ſin, is the ſervant of ſin.]

35, 36. And being ſuch, you are far from having any right to be continued in Gods family, which belongs only to ſons. In the common account of the world, a ſervant is ſo far from being a ſon, and ſo from having any right to the inheritance of the family, that he is at the mercy of the ſon when he comes to the fathers eſtate, to caſt him quite out of the family, and unleſs the ſon make him free, he cannot be free (nor conſequently be ſo much as capable of being adopted) and this is the caſe of all ſuch as you, of every indulgent ſinner, Chriſt muſt loſe him from his ſpiritual bondage, that of his ſin, or elſe he is not capable of any benefit of ſon-ſhip, ſo much as by adoption.

35. And the ſervant abideth not in the houſe for ever: but the ſon abideth for ever.

36. If the ſon therefore ſhall make you free, ye ſhall be free indeed.]

37. And as long as you are ingaged in any ſuch ſinful courſe, (as by your deſigning my death it ſeems you are) 'tis not your being Abrahams children that will make you, or demonſtrate you free Men.

37. I know that ye are Abrahams ſeed, but ye ſeek to kill me, becauſe my word hath no place in you.]

38. I do after the example of my father, and you of yours in proportion.

38. I ſpeak that which I have ſeen with my Father: and * ye do that which ye have ſeen with your Father.]

* ye therefore, or accordingly do, καὶ ὑμεῖς οὖν ποιεῖτε

39. In his obedience & virtues be like him, as children reſemble their natural parents in their nature and feature.

39. They anſwered and ſaid unto him, Abraham is our father. Jeſus ſaith unto them, If ye were Abrahams children, ye would [do the works of Abraham.]

40. But you are moſt contrary to that, Abraham was an hoſpitable perſon, and obeyed God in all his commands, would have been very far from deſigning the death of any the meaneſt Prophet, for no other crime, but that of bringing Gods truth unto him, and yet this do ye.

40. But now ye ſeek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God: this did not Abraham.]

41. Ye have another father not willingly owned by you, and him you are like in your actions, Hereupon they reply, none have dubious parents, but they that are unlawfully begotten, we are not ſuch, we are none of thoſe to whom the ſtyle of children of whoredoms is given, Hoſ. 2.4. but owned and acknowledged by God as his only children.

41. Ye do the deeds of your Father. Then ſaid they unto him, We be not born of fornication, we have one father, even God.]

42. Jeſus

42. Jeſus ſaid unto them, If God were your father, ye would love me: for I proceeded forth, and came from God, neither came I of my ſelf, but he ſent me.]

42. Jeſus anſwers, your hating of me is a certain argument that God is not your father, for I am ſent immediately from him, I came from heaven, and what I do is by commiſſion from God, not on mine own motion, or any buſineſs or errand of mine, or as falſe Prophets without miſſion.

43. Why do ye not underſtand my ſpeech? even becauſe ye cannot hear my word.]

43. If God were your father, whoſe commands you received and obeyed as children, you would know my language, being indeed the very language of that Father. But the reaſon is clear, the things that makes you not believe in me, is not want of means of conviction, that my doctrine comes from God, but becauſe my doctrine is not agreeable to your humour: You cannot abide to hear it, you have not affections capable of it.

44. Ye are of your father the devil, and the luſts of your father * ye will do: he was a murtherer from the beginning, and † abode not in the truth, becauſe there is no truth in him. When he ſpeaketh a Lye, he ſpeaketh of his own: for he is a lyer, and the father of it.]

44. The practiſes which the devil offers to you, or hath practiſed before you, you like much better, then thoſe which I commend to you, he was from the firſt that we hear of him, malicious, and proud, and bloody, and ſoon apoſtatized from God and the right way, for he is an enemy of truth and goodneſs, and therefore for him to lie, and confirm you in infidelity, is natural, and proper to him.

45.]* And becauſe I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.]

45. 'Tis neither the inevidence of my doctrine, nor the weakneſs of your underſtandings that keeps you from believing me, and embracing my doctrine, the only thing that makes you reject me, is my ſpeaking the truth, that heavenly pure perfect rule of practiſe, which, it ſeems, is not for your turn, is vehemently reſiſted by your paſſions and prejudices.

46. Which of you convinceth me of ſin? And if I ſay the truth, why do ye not believe me?]

46. I am ſure you have no fault or impoſtor to lay to my charge, nothing to produce or prove againſt me, and the tree will be known by the fruits, and yet you will not believe truth, when I ſpeak it.

47. He that is of God, heareth Gods words: ye therefore hear them not, becauſe ye are not of God.]

47. If you had true piety in you, then certainly my doctrine, being from God, would be acceptable to you, and you would embrace it.

48. Then anſwered the Jews and ſaid unto him, Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan, and haſt a devil?]

48. To this the Jews had no other reply, but to fall into reproachful language againſt him, calling him Samaritan (a word of reproach) and mad man, ſee c. 7. 20. b.

49. Jeſus anſwered, I have not a devil, but I honour my father, and ye do diſhonour me.

49. That I do no vicious extravagant thing, appears by my ſeeking no honour to my ſelf, not coming in my own name, but referring all my embaſſy to the honour of God, and you do all that your malice can invent to defame me.

‖ſeeketh it ζητῶν

50. And I ſeek not mine own glory: there is one that ‖ ſeeketh, and judgeth.]

50. And this let me tell you, altho' I do not ſeek after my own glory, yet my father doth tenderly obſerve, whether I am honoured or diſhonoured, and paſſes ſentence on men ſeverely for it, ſee Deut. 18. 19. otherwiſe, as 'tis no glory of mine I look after, ſo your reproaches would not touch me.

* any one ſhall obſerve my word, he ſhall not ſee death for ever, τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐμὸν τηρήσῃ θάνατον οὐ μὴ θεωρήσῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα

51. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, If * a man keep my ſaying, he ſhall never ſee death.]

51. As it is, I cannot be ſo unkind to you as thus to leave you in this contempt, ſo dangerous to you, whereas on the other ſide, your receiving of the meſſage, which I bring you, were the way to bring you to eternal life, and reſcue you from eternal torments.

52. Then ſaid the Jews unto him, Now we know that thou [haſt a devil.] Abraham is dead, and the Prophets, and thou ſayeſt, If a man keep my ſaying, he ſhall never taſte of death.

52. Art mad, ſee c. 7. 20. b.

53. Art thou greater then our Father Abraham, which is dead? and the Prophets are dead: whom makeſt thou thy ſelf?]

53. Abraham & the Prophets were not freed from dying, and what manner of power doſt thou aſſume to thy ſelf, to beſtow priviledges, which God never gave to them whom he ſo much favoured?

54. Jeſus anſwered, If I * honour my ſelf, my honour is nothing: It is my father that honoureth me, of whom ye ſay, that he is your God.]

54. Jeſus replyed, I ſhall ſay nothing of my ſelf, the power which I have, I have from him whom certainly you acknowledge to be greater then Abraham, own him as your God, he hath teſtified ſufficiently of me, by voice from heaven, &c.

55. Yet ye have not known him, but I know him: And if I ſhould ſay, I know him not, I ſhall be a lyer, like unto you: but I know him, and † keep his ſaying.]

55. This father of mine whom you call your God, you know very imperfectly, you know not what kind of worſhip and obedience it is that he requires, but place it in external legal performances, I come to tell you his will more perfectly. And to this end have my meſſage from him, and ſo cannot but know it diſtinctly, and if in compliance with you, or to avoid your reproaches I ſhould ſay otherwiſe, then what I have hitherto ſaid, or confeſs that I came not from him, or knew him not, I ſhould be like you, a down right Lyer, this I will not be guilty of, but do again profeſs, that I am ſent with perfect knowledge of his will, and do exactly obſerve it.

* was exceeding glad that he might ſee my day and he ſaw and rejoyced, ἠγαλλιάσατο ἵνα ἴδῃ· *was born γενέσθαι

56. Your Father Abraham * rejoyced to ſee my day: and he ſaw it, and was glad.]

56. And becauſe you talk ſo much of Abraham, I ſhall now ſay of him, that he having received the promiſe of the Meſſias, Gen. 11. 35. did thereupon vehemently and with great pleaſure and exilleney of mind deſire to look nearer into it, to ſee my coming into the world, and a revelation of it was made unto him, and in it of the ſtate of the Goſpel, and he was heartily joyed at it.

57. Then ſaid the Jews unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and haſt thou ſeen Abraham?]

57. To this the Jews objected, that he was not fifty years old, and therefore how could he ſay that Abraham lived ſince his birth, that Chriſt could ſee Abraham, or be ſeen by him?

58. Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, before Abraham * was, I am.]

58. Jeſus anſwered that objection of theirs, You are much miſtaken in reckoning my age, For 1. I have a Being from all eternity, and ſo before Abraham was born, and therefore as young as you take me to be in reſpect of my age here, I may well have ſeen and known Abraham. But then 2. in reſpect of my preſent appearance here on earth, though that be but a little above thirty years duration, yet long before Abrahams time, it was decreed by my Father, and in kindneſs to Abraham revealed to him, while he lived, in which reſpect 'tis true, that he knew me alſo.

59. Then took they up ſtones to caſt at him:] but Jeſus hid himſelf, and went out of the Temple, going through the midſt of them, and ſo paſſed by.

59. They therefore conceiving this ſpeech of his to be blaſphemous, after the manner of Zelots, were ready to ſtone him preſently.

Annotations

Annotations on Chap. VIII.

a. Λιθοβολεῖσθαι

V. 5. Such ſhould be ſtoned] That all that are guilty of adultery ſhould be ſtoned, we find not in the Law of Moſes, but that they ſhould die the death, which phraſe ſay the Talmudiſts, generally ſignifies ſtrangling. This puniſhment of ſtoning belongs particularly to thoſe that are taken in the Fact, as here the woman was, ver. 4. So ſaith * Philo of ſuch, πάντες ἄνδρων μυρίων ἐνόμισαν, All men have counted them worthy of many deaths, and ſo of ſtoning, which was a high degree of Severity; and ſo Solon in one of his Laws, Ἐάν τις μοιχὸν λάζηται ὅπ ἂν βούληται, χρῆσθαι, If any man take an dulterer in the fact, he may uſe him how he pleaſe; and in the Twelve Tables, Mœchum in adultero deprehenſum impunè necato, He that takes him, may kill him Lawfully and Securely.

Vid. de Joſeph.

b. Τὴν ἀρχὴν

V. 25. From the beginning] The phraſe τὴν ἀρχὴν, may here be Adverbially taken; ſo it is often in other authors: Hippocrates in the beginning of his book περὶ ἀρχ. ἰητρ. Τῶν ἀρχαίων ὡς ἂν εὑρήσῃ τέχνην ἰητρικὴν, ὅτ' ἂν ἐζητήθη, and ſo ἀρχὴν in Herodotus in Thalia, cited by Budæus. But for the ſenſe or notation of the phraſe here, Melanchon, Ep. p. 511. ſeems to have made a good conjecture, that it ſignifies prorſus, a note of affirmation, Even ſo, or altogether, abſolutely. For ſo the Chaldee when they would expreſs any thing to be ſimply lawful or unlawful, they uſe the word לבתחלה that is, τὴν ἀρχὴν literally, from החל incepit, and ſo it will ſignify no more then ἁπλῶς, omnino, &c. So in Alexander Aphrodiſæus περὶ εἱμαρμ. ſpeaking of that honour and piety, which is the end of making the ſtatue or image of any, οὐ' ἂν τὴν ἀρχὴν, ſaith he, ὁ ἀνδριὰς ἐγένετο ἄνευ τοιαύτης αἰτίας, A ſtatue had not at all been made without that cauſe. And after ſpeaking of chance, ἄλλο δὲ ὃ τὴν ἀρχὴν μηδὲ ἠλπίζετο, but ſomewhat that was utterly unexpected. And again ſpeaking of the duties of man, Without them, ſaith he, the life of man is not a life, ᾗ οὐδὲ τὴν ἀρχὴν ἀνθρώπων ἐστὶ, nor indeed at all the life of men any longer; and many the like in that one book. But the other interpretation alſo, τὴν ἀρχὴν, at the firſt, may well enough be born, and hath the example of the Septuagint, Gen. 13.4. and 43.18. and 20. and of * Nemeſius, περὶ φυσ. ἀνθρ. Τὴν ἀρχὴν καρτερήσαντες ὕστερον τὸ τέλος ἐνέδωκαν, having held out at the firſt, they yielded at the end. See Jo. Coch. in Excerpta Gemaræ in Sanhedr. p. 280. And ſo the ſum of Chriſts ſpeech is, that though they made Doubts and Diſputes about him, what he was, yet he ſtill made no ſcruple to ſtand to his affirmations of himſelf, he ſtill affirms, that 'tis even as he tells them all this while, abſolutely ſo, and no otherwiſe, he hath not ſpoken any thing too high of himſelf.

c. Δογμὰ

V. 29. Pleaſe him] The word ἀρεσὸν ſignifies in common uſe the decree or appointment of any court, or judge, or prince (coming from ἀρέσκω, juſt as δόγμα, the ordinary word for an ordinance, doth from δοκέω, agreeable to the form of ἔδοξεν ἡμῖν, Acts 15. 25.) ſo the Principum placita among the Romans, the Arreſts of the Parliament of Paris, &c. among the French, and the Common Pleas in England (that is, communia placita, or ἀρεσὰ) a phraſe to expreſs a court of judicature among us, the word pleas denoting Judgments in one court, as the Kings bench a tribunal in another. So here ἀρεσὰ αὐτῷ, may poſſibly be Gods laws, decrees, determinations, which he as the judge or prince of all, of his good pleaſure, determines to be done, and becauſe Commiſſions are iſſued out of courts, and are a kind of decree of thoſe courts, that ſuch a man ſhould have ſuch a power, therefore ἀρεσὰ may be extended to thoſe. So Acts 6.2. οὐκ ἀρεστόν ἐστι, 'tis not thought fit or appointed, or determined, &c. and ἤρεσεν ὁ λόγος, v. 5. the thing was reſolved on, and agreed on by all. The multitude there having to do in the choice of the men, as follows, and the Apoſtles conſecrating and impoſing hands on them, v. 6. So Acts 12.3. when Herod ſaw ὅτι ἀρεστόν ἐστι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, I ſuppoſe the meaning is, that the Jews had expreſs'd their judgment, paſt their votes in it, that is, either the Sanhedrim of the Jews, or poſſibly the people of the Jews, for ſo ſince the power of capital puniſhments was taken from the Jews, and was now in the Romans hands, the proceeding was after the Roman faſhion, which was, ut injuſſu populi nihil fiat, that nothing ſhould be done without the command of the people. Thus 'twas before in the caſe of Chriſt, Mat. 27.22. where Pilate asks the multitude, What ſhall we do with Jeſus? and they all ſaid, Let him be crucified, this was their ἀρεσὸν there, and v. 24. it ſeems the judge could not reſiſt this vote of theirs, and the whole matter is laid on this ſentence of theirs, Pilate diſclaiming, and waſhing his hands from having any thing to do in it; and ſo in that of James, the Jews, it ſeems, had given their votes (ἀρεσὸν Ἰουδαίοις) and Herod ſeeing how forward they were in it, (for ſo Euſebius expreſſes it, ὡς ἡδονῇ χαρὰν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, they not only conſented, but joyed in it) to gratify them farther, he proceeded to apprehend Peter alſo, and of him 'tis added (agreeably to what hath been now ſaid) that Herod meant after the paſſover to bring him forth to the people, that is, to ask their ſentence, or ἀρεσὸν, or pleaſure, concerning him, and accordingly, if they ſo voted, to put him to Death; and therefore v. 11. when he recounteth his deliverance, he calls it not only a reſcue from the hand of Herod, but from the people of the Jews, and their expectation.

Ἤρεσεν ὁ λόγος

d. Σαμαρεί-της

V. 48. Samaritan] This title of Samaritan here, is by way of reproach affix'd on Chriſt, not that they thought him ſo, but becauſe this was an odious name among the Jews; ſo as Idolaters, Lev. 25. 47. are called Aramei or Syrians, becauſe the Syrians were antiently ſuch, and thus all cruel men we call Turks, & covetous Jews, not that that we think they are ſuch naturally, but that they are like unto them. Or elſe becauſe Chriſt had converſed with the Samaritan woman, which was againſt the Jewiſh rule, John 4.9. he is thought a deſerter of the Jewiſh law, and ſo to be one of them.

CHAP. IX.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND as Jeſus paſſed by, he ſaw a man which was blind from his birth.

2. And his diſciples asked him, ſaying, Maſter, who did ſin, a this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?]

2. And ſome of his followers asked him, ſaying, Sir, was it any ſin of his own, when his ſoul was in another body, or was it ſome ſin of his parents at the time of his conception, which cauſed this blindneſs in him?

3. Jeſus anſwered, [Neither hath this man ſinned, nor his parents; but that the works of God ſhould be made manifeſt in him.]

3. Neither his own nor his parents ſins were the cauſe of this blindneſs of his, but Gods ſecret wiſdom, who meant by this means to ſhew forth in me his miraculous power among you.

4. I muſt work the works of him that ſent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work.

5. As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.]

4,5. And having receiv'd ſuch power from him, I ought, while I am here, to exerciſe it, and ſhew the world that I am ſent to enlighten it, by this emblem of curing him that is born blind.

6. When

6. When he had thus ſpoken, he ſpat on the ground, and made * clay with the ſpittle, and anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay.

*dirt with the ſpittle, & ſpread the dirt upon the eyes of the blind, πηλὸν ἐπέχρισε τὸν πηλὸν ἐπὶ τοῖς ὀφθ---

7. And ſaid unto him, Go waſh in the pool [of Siloam (which is by interpretation, ſent.)] He went his way therefore and waſhed and came ſeeing.

7. Which by the name of it, may put you in mind of the Meſſias (who is ſtyled, The ſent) by whom the cure is wrought.

8. The neighbours therefore, and they that [before had ſeen him, that he was blind, ſaid, Is not this he that ſate and begged?]

8 Had oft ſeen him before, & ſo knew that he had been wont to ſit and beg at ſuch a place?

9. Some ſaid, this is he: others ſaid, he is like him: but he ſaid, I am he.

10. Therefore ſaid they unto him, How were thine eyes opened?

11. He anſwered and ſaid, A man that is called Jeſus, made clay and [anointed] my eyes, and ſaid unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and waſh: and I went and waſhed, and I received ſight.

11. Beſmeared.

12. Then ſaid they unto him, Where is he? He ſaid, I know not.

13. They brought to the Phariſees him that afore time was blind.

14. And it was the ſabbath day when Jeſus had made [the clay] and opened his eyes.

14. That mixture of earth and ſpittle,

15. Then again the Phariſees alſo asked him, how he had received his ſight: he ſaid unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I waſhed, and do ſee.

16. Therefore ſaid ſome of the Phariſees, This man is not of God, becauſe he keepeth not the ſabbath day: Others ſaid, How can a man that is a ſinner do ſuch miracles? and there was a diviſion among them.

16. Certainly ſuch miracles cannot be wrought but by the finger of God, and ſo cannot be the work of an impoſtor, a man of ſin, a great ſinner.

17. They ſay unto the blind man again, What ſayeſt thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? he ſaid, He is a prophet.

17. What opinion of him hath this work of power and mercy to thee wrought in thee.

18. But the Jews did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his ſight, until they called the parents of him that had received his ſight.

18. The conſequent of this diſpute was, that the Jews at length would not believe the plain matter of fact, that the man that now ſaw had ever been blind, till the teſtimony of the parents made that clear.

19. And they asked them, ſaying, Is this your ſon, who ye ſay was born blind? how then doth he now ſee:]

19. And asked them theſe three queſtions, 1. whether this were their ſon? 2. whether they will affirm upon their knowledge that he was born blind? 3. Whether they know how this cure was wrought, or by whom?

† will tell you concerning himſelf, λαλήσει περὶ---

20. His parents anſwered and ſaid, [We know that this is our ſon, and that he was born blind.]

20. For two of the queſtions we anſwer diſtinctly, We know, &c.

21. But by what means he now ſeeth we know not, or who hath opened his eyes we know not; [he is of age ask him, he † ſhall ſpeak for himſelf.]

21. He is of age and underſtanding to anſwer that third queſtion, and certainly is the fitteſt to give you an account for that matter which himſelf is ſo nearly concerned in.

22. Theſe words ſpake his parents becauſe they feared the Jews: for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confeſs that he was Chriſt [he ſhould be [b] put out of the ſynagogue.]

22. He ſhould be ignominiouſly uſed, and put out of the court.

23. Therefore ſaid his parents, He is of age, ask him.]

23. To avoid which danger it was that his parents waved the anſwering of this queſtion, and put it off to their ſon, for this was a thing of ſuch a nature, that the affirming Jeſus to have done it, was in effect the affirming him to be the Meſſias.

24. Then again called they the man that * was blind, and ſaid unto him, Give God the praiſe, we know that this man is a ſinner.]

24. Then a ſecond time they ſent for and examined the man that had this miraculous cure wrought on him, attempting to draw him from that opinion of Chriſt which he ſeemed to have, by bidding him aſcribe the praiſe of his cure wholly to God, and not to look on Chriſt with any veneration, telling him that if he did it on the day, and in the manner fore-mentioned, it was thereby evident, that he was one that broke the ſabbath, and ſo not from God, but an impoſtor, (ſee v. 16. and 2 Theſ. 2. 3.) who conſequently had no ſuch virtue, or piety, as could contribute any thing to this matter.

25. He anſwered and ſaid, Whether he be [a ſinner] or no, I know not: one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I ſee.

25. An impoſtor.

26. Then ſaid they to him again, What did he to thee? how opened he thine eyes?

* ſome copies omit οὐκ, not, ſaith Rob. Stephanus.

27. He anſwered them, [I have told you already, and ye * did not hear:] wherefore would you hear it again? will ye alſo be his diſciples?

27. I have told you, and you did not heed it; or elſe, I have told you plainly and diſtinctly enough already.

28. Then reviled they him, ſaying, Thou art his diſciple, but we are Moſes diſciples.

29. We know that God ſpake unto Moſes: as for this fellow, we know not [from whence he is.]

29. Of any commiſſion from God which he hath, not can give any account of him.

30. The man anſwered and ſaid unto them, [Why herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened mine eyes.]

30. 'Tis ſtrange that one ſhould do ſuch miracles as theſe, and you learned men not know whether he be ſent from God or no.

31. Now we know that God heareth not ſinners, but if any man be a worſhipper of God, and doth his will, him he heareth.]

31. It being reſolved on among all men, that an impoſtor or falſe teacher is not enabled by God to work ſuch miracles as theſe (or if he were, God muſt be thought to aſſiſt him in his impoſtors) but only pious and faithful ſervants of God, that came to do his will, not their own.

32. Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened] the eyes of one that was born blind.

32. 'Tis above all humane power to open

33. If this man were not of God, he could do nothing.]

33. If he were not ſent & impowered by God, he could never do ſuch things as theſe.

34. They anſwered and ſaid unto him, [Thou waſt altogether born in ſins, and doſt thou teach us? and they caſt him out.]

34. Thy being born blind is a mark and character of ſome extraordinary ill in thee, which makes thee very unfit to teach Doctors and Rabbi's in matters of this moment. And they caſt him out of the court (ſee note b.) with diſgrace.

35. Jeſus heard that they had caſt him out, and when he had found him, he ſaid unto him, Doſt thou believe on the ſon of God?

36. He answered and said, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him?
37. And Jesus said unto him, Thou hast seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee.
38. And he said, Lord, I believe. And he [worshipped him.]

38. Bowed down, & made a most lowly obeysance to him as to the Messias.

39. And Jesus said, [For judgment I am come into this world; that they which see not, might see; and that they which see, might be made blind.]

39. This will be the effect of my coming into the world, not only that those that are blind shall receive sight, but also that the most seeing learned men, Pharisees, &c. will not see the things before their eyes.

40. And some of the Pharisees which were with him heard these words, and said unto him, [Are we blind also?]

40. Are we the men that he means by the latter part of his speech? are we then become blind in his opinion?

41. Jesus said unto them, [If ye were blind, ye should have no sin; but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth.]

41. Jesus said unto them, It were well for you, if it could be truly pronounced of you, that you are blind, if your sin were of impotence or unability to see, it would be more pardonable, but now by your acknowledging your selves not to be blind, and so that all that you do you do knowingly and deliberately, your sins receive a very great aggravation.

Annotations on Chap. IX.

a. V. 2. This man or his parents] The Jew that asked this question, seems to have been of the Pythagoreans opinion (or, as they call it, de Sapientibus Mechar) who believed the transmigration of souls from body to body, called μεταγγισμὸς, the removal from vessel to vessel, and so supposes by his question that the soul of this man, having formerly offended, is now thus punished by being put into a blind body. That this was the conceit of those ancient Philosophers, that according to the degrees of proficiency either in virtue or sin, Souls were put into more honourable or less honourable bodies; upon demerit removed from the body of a male to a female, then from a perfect to an imperfect man, and after upon demerit again into a beast, may be seen in Alcinous, δόγμ. πλάτων. and the rest of the Pythagorean writers, which with other the like opinions certainly enough were infused before this time into some of the Jews, and so these disciples here might have imbibed this, and not so early or speedily have laid it aside, but might think it possible, and so ask a question about it. The other part of the question concerning the parents sin, seems to refer to some particular sin in the act of generation, which might have some influence on the child begotten, and make it imperfect in this or some other kind. This is by learned Jews affirmed of that conjugal sin, which is forbidden by the Law, Lev. 20. 18. and Ezek. 18. 6. which, they say, may reasonably hinder, on the womans part, a just or compleat conception. Of Christs answer to this question, which followeth, see Masius, on Jos. 1. 6. p. 115.

b. V. 22. Put out of the synagogue] That συναγωγαὶ, the synagogues of the Jews signify all manner of assemblies hath been said, Mat. 6. d. agreeably the ἀποσυναγωγὴν removing or turning out of the Synagogues, is the separating any offender from such assemblies, setting a mark of reproach upon him, that he might not be familiarly convers'd with by any, which is ἀφορίζειν, Luk. 6. 22. the Nidui so known among the Jews. This was always done with circumstances of contumely, and so hath ἐνειδίζειν added to it, contumelious usage, Luk. 6. 22. And so v. 35. of this chapter their casting the man out of the synagogue, signifies that ceremony of reproach, the officers of the court taking him that was condemn'd and thrusting him out of the assembly. What thus belonged to excluding him out of the assembly, though it belonged to civil commerce, yet certainly excluded him out of the sacred assembly also, for the lowest degree of Excommunication among the Jews, being to the separating for the space of four paces, this must needs belong to all kind of assemblies sacred as well as civil. And therefore S. Chrysostom here affirms ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἐκ τῆς ἱερᾶς, they cast him out of the Temple, Hom. 59. and Nonnus,

Ἀποσυναγωγὴν

Ἀφορίζειν

Ὀνειδίζειν

——ἀπέλασαν ἐκὸς ἰοῦς, γαῖ

and of the disciples in Christs name,

Ὑμέας ἐξελάσσει συναλήϊος μεγάθυμος, they shall drive you out of Gods house. Where only it must be observed, that this separation being only for four paces, that is, from familiar commerce, or cum discrimine, to set a mark upon them, the Excommunication did not always reach to total exclusion out of the Temple, but confined them to a particular part and entrance into the Temple, called the gate of mourners, and excommunicate persons, as others were admitted to that of bridegrooms, as 'twas called. This word is, beside this place, used twice more in this Gospel, c. 16. 2. It clearly signifies what here it doth, excluding them from familiar conversation of men, and those liberties which all others enjoyed. But in the third place, c. 12. 42. it doth by accident come to signify somewhat more, loosing the dignity of being one of the Sanhedrim; for being there spoken of the rulers or members of the Sanhedrim, the interdicting them the assemblies, casting them out, must by consequence deprive them of that dignity or office, as in the Christian Church the excommunicating of a Priest must necessarily be the degrading or suspending him from his Priesthood. This punishment among the Jews (refered to Rev. 22. 15.) being the making any man infamous (shaming, in order to reforming him) is by Christ accommodated to Christian, Ecclesiastical uses, by removing men from the Sacrament and prayers of the Church, to work the like reformation on them, when admonitions will not work upon them.

Paraphrase. CHAP. X.

1. He that comes & pretends to be the Messias, and comes not as he ought to do, with miracles and doctrine, such as may testify him to be sent by God, he is to be lookt on as an impostor, that means to seduce and ruine those that follow him.

1. VErily, verily, I say unto you, [He that entreth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief, and a robber.

2. But he that thus approves himself to be employed and sent by the owner, or master of the sheep, he comes on purpose to feed and preserve his sheep, and is to have power over them.

2. But he that entreth in by the door, is the shepheard of the sheep.]

a. 3. To him all they who are to guard the door, and keep out thieves, are by the Master of the sheep commanded to give admission, and to that purpose have a token to discern him by, the Messias is so described in the prophets, and the doctrine truly divine so far revealed there, that by accordance with that, all the true watchmen of the Church acknowledge him, and all truly pious men obey and follow him, and he on the other side looks on these, as the peculiar flock that he is to take charge of, and hath a particular care of every such pious man, and as the shepheard careth for his sheep, makes all necessary provision for them.

3. To him the porter openeth, and the sheep hear his voice, and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out.]

4. And

* brings out.

4. And when he * putteth forth his own ſheep, he goeth before them, and the ſheep follow him, for they know his voice.]

4. And when he thus brings forth his ſheep (ſee note on Mat. 9. i.) to the water or paſture, it is not his manner to drive, but only go before: and call or lead them, tell them what they are to do, and ſhew them the way by his example, and all truly pious men qualified to be diſciples of his (ſee note on ch. 6. d.) they will certainly follow him, diſtinguiſhing his voice, his doctrine from all others, from all impoſtors.

5. And a ſtranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of ſtrangers.]

5. An impoſtor or falſe Chriſt that teacheth doctrines contrary to piety, they will not follow, but fly from him as from a wolf, having ſuch certain tokens, by which to know the true doctrine of God, the true ſhepheards voice, that they can tell how to avoid all others that come to ſeduce them, by this very mark, becauſe 'tis a ſtrange voice, quite contrary to that piety and probity which they have been taught by God.

6. This parable ſpake Jeſus unto them, but they underſtood not what things they were, which he ſpake unto them.

6, 7. Thus much Chriſt ſpake thus parabolically and obſcurely to them, and becauſe they underſtood not his meaning in it, he added

7. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them again, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, I am the door of the ſheep.]

farther, as the fathers miſſion and commiſſion, v. 1. is the door by which the ſhepheard himſelf is to enter, (and whoſoever doth not ſo, being not ſent by God, betrays himſelf to be an impoſtor) and as his making known the will of God, not preaching any doctrine contrary to piety, but all to the advancing of it, is a certain evidence of his being ſent by God, ſo in another reſpect, I am the door, that is, the only way for the ſheep, the true ſervants of God, to enter by, into that fold, the Church, where all are to live regularly, and not to go out, or depart from him.

*all, as many as have come, for many cop. leave out, πρὸ ἐμοῦ before me, †made ſafe σωθήσεται

8. * All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers: but the ſheep did not hear them.]

8. All others that have come of late pretending to be vindicators of the Jews from the Roman yoke (ſuch as Theudas, Judas Gaulonites, &c.) have been impoſtors, which no pious perſon would heed, as neither coming with commiſſion from God, nor bringing Divine doctrine with them, but doctrines of rebellion and bloodineſs, and the like.

9. I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he ſhall be † ſaved, and ſhall go in and out, and find paſture.]

9. I am the door, that all pious men muſt paſs thorow and whereſoever he turns, and whereſoever he goes, and whoſoever doth ſo, he ſhall be (as in a fenced encloſure) in a ſafe, a rich, a plentiful condition, ſhall find paſture.

10. The thief cometh not, but for to ſteal, and to kill, and to deſtroy, I am come that they might have life, * and that they might have it more abundantly.]

10. Thus contrary am I to thoſe that come without commiſſion, v. 1. all thoſe impoſtors come to get advantage to themſelves, to deceive and ruin you. But my only end of coming is to help my ſheep to life, inſtead of butchering them, to help them to plenty, to provide abundantly for them, not to gain any thing to my ſelf.

†lays down his own life τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ τίθησι.

11. I am the good ſhepheard: the good ſhepheard † giveth his life for the ſheep.]

11. Nay, ſo far am I from the thief that comes to kill the flock, that like the good ſhepheard (which keeps his own ſheep, is not hired to keep anothers, ſee note a.) who ventures when there is occaſion (pawns, engages) his life for his ſheep, rather then they ſhall come to hurt, grapples with wild Beaſts that come to deſtroy his flock, ſo do I.

12. But he that is an hireling, and not the ſhepheard, whoſe own the ſheep are not, ſeeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the ſheep and flyeth: and the wolf catcheth them, and ſcattereth the ſheep.

12, 13. This is far from the manner of impoſtors; nay, it is peculiar to the good ſhepheard, whoſe flock is (not entruſted by another to his keeping, and he paid for that ſervice, but) his own goods, and himſelf makes it his calling to look to them. He that keeps another mans ſheep, and is paid for his labour, will never venture his life to preſerve them, prefers his life before the advantage of his ſervice, and thereupon, whenever a wolf comes, that will endanger his life if he defends his ſheep, he runs away, and to ſave his life deſtitutes them, and this upon this very ſcore, becauſe he is not the owner, but only a ſervant hired to keep the fold. Whereas he whoſe own they are, will hazard his life, rather then leave his flock, (his whole eſtate, as 'twas oft among the Jews) to be torn, and worried by the devourer.

13. The hireling flyeth, becauſe he is an hireling, and careth not for the ſheep.]

* I know mine own, and γινώσκω τὰ ἐμὰ, καὶ † and I know the father, καθὼς γινώσκει με ὁ πατὴρ * read, ἀγαπῶ

14. I am the good ſhepheard, and * know my ſheep, and am known of mine.

15. As the Father knoweth me, † even ſo know I the Father, and I lay down my life for the ſheep.]

14, 15. Juſt ſuch a ſhepheard am I, who, as I reſemble the ſhepheard in other things, knowing my ſheep particularly, and being known by them (ſee v. 3.) (in the ſame manner as my Father knoweth me, and I him, my Father owning, and giving me perfect knowledge of his will, and I obeying and following my Father in all things) ſo alſo I venture my life for my ſheep, and will moſt willingly ſuffer death, in regard to the benefits that will come to my ſheep, my diſciples (all that receive and obey my voice) by that means.

16. And other ſheep I have, which are not of this fold, them alſo I muſt * bring, and they ſhall hear my voice, and there ſhall be one fold, and one ſhepheard.]

16. But for you Jews, let me tell you, my flock is not all within this pale of Judea, I have others that will believe and obey me, receive the faith, beſide and beyond the Jewiſh nation, and the care and rule of thoſe I muſt undertake, and they will follow my call more obediently then the Jews, own and obey me, and all believers, both of Jews and Gentiles, ſhall unite very ſociably together, and become one fold, under me the one ſhepheard of them all, who lay down my life for them alſo, as well as for the Jews.

17. Therefore doth my Father love me, becauſe I lay down my life, that I might take it again.]

17. This careful diſcharge of the office entruſted and committed to me by my Father, is that to which it is but proportionable, that my Father ſhould love and value, and reward me, and therefore it is, that as I venture my life for my Flock, ſo when I ſhall have loſt my life, by the care and power of my Father, I ſhall be able to riſe again, and the lower I ſuffer here, the higher ſhall I be exalted, Phil. 2. 9.

18. No man taketh it away from me, but I lay it down of my ſelf; I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again, this commandment have I received of my Father.]

18. 'Tis not in the power of man to take my life away from me, if I did not thus voluntarily of my own accord lay it down; I can give my ſelf up to be crucified, and then can riſe to life again. And thus to do my father hath appointed me, this is a prime part of my commiſſion.

19. There was a diviſion therefore again among the Jews, becauſe of theſe ſayings.

20. And many of them ſaid, [He hath a devil and is mad, why hear ye him?]

20. He is mad (ſee note on ch. 7. b.) why do you give heed to what he ſaith?

21. Others ſaid, [Theſe are not the words of him that hath a devil. Can a devil open the eyes of the blind?]

21. Theſe are neither the words nor actions of a mad man. Can the devil himſelf, or conſequently his being mad, or poſſeſs'd with the devil, help him to do the things that he doth? to cure one that was born blind?

22. And it was at Jeruſalem the feaſt of Dedication, and it was winter.]

22. And it was the time of the feaſt of Dedication, a feaſt ordained by the Jews, 1 Mac. 4. 59. and 2 Mac. 10. 8. in commemoration of the new conſecrating of the Altar, after it was profaned by Antiochus, which upon that inſtitution was obſerved by them at this time, on Novemb. 14 and approved here by the preſence of Chriſt, though it were not preſcribed by God in the Law.

23. And Jeſus walked in the Temple in Solomons porch.]

23. And according to the cuſtom of that ſeaſon, he walked now in Solomon's Porch, under covert, as in the ſummer they uſed to walk in the open air in the courts without any roof over them.

* hold our ſoul in ſuſpence, τὴν ψυχὴν ἡμῶν αἴρεις,

24. Then came the Jews round about him, and ſaid unto him, How long doſt thou * make us to doubt? If thou be the Chriſt, tell us plainly.]

24. By this means the people being all in a narrower compaſs or leſſer room, they came about him cloſe, and ſaid unto him, how long doſt thou by obſcure expreſſions continue our doubts whether thou art the Meſſias or no? if thou art, tell us perſpicuouſly; ſee note on ch. 7. a.

25. Jeſus

25. Jeſus ſaid, I have told you in words ſignificant enough, if ye would believe, and the miracles that I have done (in my Fathers name, whom I affirm to have ſent me) through his power, and authority from him, have born teſtimony that I am ſent by him, and therefore that whatever I affirm of my ſelf, is true.

25. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, I told you, and ye believed not: The works that I do in my Fathers name, they bear witneſs of me.]

26,27. But all this works no belief in you, which is an evidence, and demonſtration from the effect, that you are not thoſe ſheep that hear the good ſhepheards voice, v.3,4. (ſee note on ch.6. d.) and are known by him, v.14. (ſee note a.)

26. But ye believe not, † becauſe ye are not of my ſheep, as I ſaid unto you. † for 28

27. My ſheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me.]

28. And I make that proviſion for them intimated v. 10. and my care over them ſhall be ſuch, that while they keep cloſe to me, no devourer ſhall ever be able to annoy them, or pluck them from me.

28. And I give unto them eternal life, and they ſhall never periſh, neither ſhall any man pluck them out of my hand.]

29. Certainly my father is ſtronger then any that can oppoſe himſelf againſt them, and his ſpecial work it is, that all the true ſheep of his fold, all truly pious perſons, ſhould come to me, and that infinite power of his is engaged for it, that none ſuch ſhall by any violence be taken from him, deprived of that life, which here I promiſe to give them.

29. My Father who gave them me, is greater then all: and no man is able to pluck them out of my Fathers hand:]

30. And ſeeing my father and I are one, it follows that I ſhall defend them alſo, and that none ſhall be able to pluck them out of my hand, v.28.

30. I and my Father are one.]

31. Upon this again the Jews attempted to ſtone him.

31. Then the Jews took up ſtones again to ſtone him.]

32. And Jeſus ſaid, many miracles of mercy to you, miraculous cures, &c. have I wrought, as teſtimonies of my miſſion from my Father, and never a deſtructive one, none that you have been the worſe for, for which of theſe my ſaving miracles do you deſtroy me?

32. Jeſus anſwered them, Many good works have I ſhewed you from my father, for which of thoſe works do you ſtone me?]

33. The Jews ſaid, 'tis not for any of thy miracles, (which are not denied to be all ſuch, and acts of mercy in thee) for which we think thee worthy of death, but becauſe thou haſt ſpoken blaſphemy, that is, becauſe thou, who art but a man, makeſt thy ſelf God by that ſpeech of thine, v.30. (ſee Rom 16.25.) where, tho' thou calledſt God thy Father, yet thou affirmedſt that he and thou were one.

33. The Jews anſwered him, ſaying, For a good work we ſtone thee not, but for blaſphemy, and becauſe that thou being a man; makeſt thy ſelf God.]

34. Jeſus anſwer'd, theſe words in the Pſalmiſt you cannot but remember, Pſal. 82. 6. I have ſaid, ye are Gods, and that book is canonical Scripture with you.

34. Jeſus anſwered them, Is it not written in your law, I ſaid, ye are Gods?]

b. 35. If therefore they who are there ſpoken of by God, that is, rulers or judges, ordinarily ſo called, who received their Commiſſion from men, not from God immediately (only perſons to whom the execution of Gods law was entruſted among men) be by God himſelf called Gods, and whatſoever is ſaid in the books of Scripture is true.

35. If he called them Gods, unto b whom the word of God * came, and the ſcripture cannot be broken.] * was, or was ſpoken.

36 Is it reaſonable for you to affirm of him, whom God immediately, and in an extraordinary manner hath firſt conſecrated, then ſent into the world, then by the deſcent of the Spirit and voice from heaven teſtified his miſſion to ſo eminent (and with ſo peculiar) an office, that of the Meſſiah of the world, that he is guilty of blaſphemy, for affirming himſelf to be the ſon of God?

36. Say ye of him whom the Father hath ſanctified, and ſent into the world, Thou blaſphemeſt, becauſe I ſaid, I am the ſon of God?]

37. If I performed not thoſe works among you, which might teſtify me to come from God, you might with ſome reaſon doubt of me.

37. If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not.]

h 38. But if I do, then, tough you believe nothing that I ſay, yet your faith is due to thoſe works of God my Father, wrought by me, by which 'tis evident that the Father acts in me, and I in him, wholly by his power, and ſo that he and I are one, which was the ſpeech you charged as blaſphemous in me.

38. But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works: that ye may know and believe that the Father is in me, and I in him.]

39. On this ſpeech again they attempt to lay hands on him, not now to ſtone him preſently, by the law of Zelots, as a blaſphemer, as v.31. but to bring him before the Sanhedrim, and charge ſome other crime againſt him. But he went out, and eſcaped their violence at that time alſo.

39. Therefore they ſought again to take him, but he eſcaped out of their hands.]

40. And went away again beyond Jordan, into the place where John † at firſt baptized, and there he abode. † was, when he firſt baptiz'd, ἦν Ἰωάνης βαπτίζων.

41. And many reſorted unto him, and ſaid, John did no miracle: but all things that John ſpake of this man were true.

42. And in that place being the place where John had baptized and teſtified of Chriſt, they that had heard John, comparing what they remembred from him, with what they had by experience ſeen in Chriſt, by this means were enclin'd, many of them, to believe in him.

42. And many believed on him there.]

a. Ἴδια πρόβατα

V. 3. His own ſheep] What the προβατα ſheep here, ſignify in this Parable hath been largely ſet down, (Note on c. 6. d.) viz. the obedient ſervants of God conſidered before and without the revelation of Chriſt unto them, who being ſo qualified are moſt ready to embrace the precepts of the Chriſtian perfection, when they are offered to them; theſe alſo is Chriſt ready to receive, or any that having been engaged in ſin, come with penitence, and reſolution of mind to be ſuch; and conſequently, when theſe come to Chriſt, they are ſtyled here, and looked on by him as ἴδια προβατα, that is, either peculiar ſheep, thoſe that by Gods prevenient graces are thus fitted beyond all others, to come to Chriſt, or elſe, as the 12th verſe imports, (where the ſhepherd is ſet oppoſite to the hireling, whoſe own the ſheep are not) his own ſheep, thoſe to whom Chriſt hath a peculiar title beyond all others, who are therefore ſaid to be given by God to Chriſt as his poſſeſſion; ſee note on ch. 6. d. Now of theſe thus own'd or acknowledg'd by Chriſt, it is here ſaid, that he doth καλεῖν κατ' ὄνομα, call them by name. That refers to the cuſtom of ſhepherds, that are ſo converſant among their ſheep, that they know them ſeverally (ſee ver. 14. & 27. I know them) and have a ſeveral name for every of them, by which they diſtinguiſh and call them, and each of them knows, and anſwers by obediential coming, or following, to that call. So ver. 3. They hear his voice, and know it, ver. 4. and he is known of them, ver. 14. Thus among us, huntſmen do with their hounds, and ploughmen with their cattle: And it ſeems in Jewry, where the feeding of cattle was the great trade, and where other cuſtoms obtained, then thoſe that are among us, the Shepherd did thus with his ſheep. For want of their art, and uſage of going before, and leading and calling their ſheep after them, which is known in the Scripture to have been among them, Pſal. 23. 2, 3. and Pſ. 80. 1. and Pſ. 77. 20. our ſhepherds herds now go after, and drive the ſheep. But the change and diverſity of cuſtoms in divers countries is very ordinary. And here it is evident that this cuſtom of the Jews is referr'd to, by v. 4. where anſwerable to the ſhepherds calling, and leading, and going before, is the ſheeps following, and knowing his voice, whereas, v. 5. a ſtranger they will not follow, for they know not the voice of ſtrangers. By which it is clear, that his calling his own ſheep by name, and leading them, is the ſhepherds particular care, and providence for his ſheep, and, in the moral, denotes Chriſts peculiar owning theſe honeſt, obedient, humble creatures, that come to him not in the cloathing, but real qualities of the ſheep, and making proviſion for them.

b. Ὡῷ ὃς ὁ Λόγος τῦ Θεῦ ἐγένετο.

V. 35. Unto whom the word of God came] The coming of the word of the Lord to any man ſignifies among the Hebrews frequently in the Old Teſtament, Gods ſending a man, deſigning him, appointing him to any office, and ſo 'tis conſtantly uſed in the writings of the Prophets, who begin their Prophecies ſolemnly in this form, The word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying, which is but their ſhewing or vouching their Commiſſion, and ſo when Rom. 10. 17. it is ſaid ἀκοὴ, that is, preaching of the word, (not their hearing, but their being heard, as in Plato in Phedro, Ἐπιθυμῶ πρὸς ἄμυρον λόγῳ ἁλμυρὰν ἀκοὴν ἀποκλύσασθαι, I deſire to temper the brackiſh hearing with ſweet, or potable ſpeech, where ἀκοὴ hearing is uſed for the word or ſpeech, which is heard (is διὰ ῥήματος Θεῦ, by the word of God, the meaning of it is, that no man muſt preach, except he be ſent, v. 15. where the word of God ſignifies not the word which they preach, but the Commiſſion from which they are authorized to preach to others. And ſo for the office of judge, &c. it is as proper, the word of the Lord ſignifying a Commiſſion from God mediately or immediately for any ſuch, which when it comes to any man for the execution of power over others, it is the inſtating of him in that office of power, and the ſame will be ſaid of the Sacerdotal alſo. But the truth is, the phraſe here is not, Thoſe to whom the word of the Lord came, upon which ſuppoſition this interpretation is built, but ὡῷ ὃς ὁ Λόγος τῦ Θεῦ ἐγένετο, to whom the word of God was, or was ſpoken, and that may thus be interpreted, David, Pſal. 82. 1. hath theſe words, God ſtandeth in the congregation of the mighty, he judgeth among the gods, How long will ye judge unjuſtly? &c. In that place the Judges or Rulers of the Sanhedrim are called gods by the Pſalmiſt, in the perſon of God, and again, v. 6. I have ſaid, ye are gods, and ye are all children of the moſt High; Chriſt referring here to this, ſaith, Is it not written in your law, I have ſaid, ye are Gods? from whence he concludeth, εἰ ἐκείνους εἶπε Θεοὺς, If he called them Gods, to whom the word of God was, that is, to whom, or of, or concerning whom God ſpake in that place of the Law, that is, in the book of Pſalms (comprehended ſometimes under the word Law (ſee chap. 12. 34.) as the whole Old Teſtament is called the Law and the Prophets, though elſe there is a third mention of the diviſion of thoſe books, ἁγιόγραφα, the book of Pſalms contained under that branch) if he called thoſe Gods, and ſons of God, who were but ordinary Judges of thoſe times, choſen by men, and by impoſition of hands of the Sanhedrim advanced to that office, after the common manner of all (nothing peculiar, or extraordinary, or of immediate miſſion from heaven in all this) then how much more may he, whom God the Father hath ſent, with his immediate commiſſion into the world (the Spirit deſcending on him, which is called the ſanctifying of him, and the voice from heaven, This is my beloved ſon, &c. being the very words of his Commiſſion) ſay without blaſphemy, that he is the ſon of God? ver. 36. And this ſeems the moſt obvious clear meaning of the place.

CHAP. XI.

Paraphraſe.

1. NOW a certain man was ſick, named Lazarus of Bethany, the town of Mary and her ſiſter Martha.

2. (It was that Mary [which anointed the Lord with oyntment] and wiped his feet with her hair, whoſe brother Lazarus was ſick.)

2. Which (as is chap. 12. 3. ſet down) anointed Chriſt, &c. (See note on Luke 7. b.)

3. Therefore his ſiſters] ſent unto him, ſaying, Lord, behold he whom thou loveſt is ſick.

3. These two women being diſciples of Chriſt, known to him, and knowing his kindneſs to Lazarus.

4. When Jeſus heard that, he ſaid, This ſickneſs [is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the ſon of God might be glorified thereby.]

4. Of his is deſign'd as a means to glorify God, and for an opportunity for me to ſhew my power of doing miracles in reſtoring him to life. See ch. 9. 3.

5. Now Jeſus loved Martha, and her ſiſter, and Lazarus.

6. When he had heard therefore that he was ſick, he abode two days ſtill in the ſame place where he was.

7. *Then after that he ſaith to his diſciples, Let us go into Judea again.

8. His diſciples ſay unto him, Maſter the Jews † of late ſought to ſtone thee, and goeſt thou thither again?

*at length, after this, ὕστερα

†but now, νῦν.

9. Jeſus anſwered, Are there not twelve hours in the day? If any man walk in the day, he ſtumbleth not, becauſe he ſeeth the light of this world.

10. But if a man walk in the night, he ſtumbleth becauſe there is no light in him.]

9, 10. As he that goes in the day, having the light of the ſun to ſhine to him, is in no danger of ſtumbling, but only in the night, when that light is gone: So as long as my time of exerciſing my function here laſteth, there is that providence about me, which will ſecure me from all danger, and till that time be paſt, and ſo that providence withdrawn, I ſhall be ſafe. As long as I am about my buſineſs, on which I was ſent, I ſhall fear nothing, no not tho' I go to Judea, where I have by frequent experience found that they ſeek to kill me.

11. These things ſaid he, and after that he ſaith unto them, Our friend Lazarus ſleepeth, but [I go] that I may awake him out of ſleep.

11. I will go.

* he will eſcape, σωθήσεται

12. Then ſaid his diſciples, Lord, [if he ſleep *he ſhall do well.]

12. His ſleeping is a very good and known ſign that he will recover.

13. Howbeit Jeſus ſpake of his death, but they thought that he had ſpoken of [taking reſt in ſleep.]

13. Sleeping in the ordinary acception of the word.

14. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them [plainly] Lazarus is dead.

14. In words without all obſcurity. Note on ch. 7. a.

† glad for you (that you may believe) that I was not there, but— χαίρω δι' ὑμᾶς (ἵνα πιστεύσητε) ὅτι οὐκ ἤμην ἐκεῖ·

15. And I am †glad for your ſakes that I was not there [to the intent ye may believe] nevertheleſs let us go to him.

15. That you may have the benefit of the miracle, to confirm your faith.

16. Then

16. Either, Let us go along with our Maſter and run any hazard that he runneth, or, if we go, we may very probably be ſtoned, and die as well as Lazarus, referring to the danger mentioned by them, v.8. (the latter is the more probable interpretation.)

16. Then ſaid Thomas, which is called Didymus, unto his fellow diſciples, [Let us alſo go that we may die with him.]

17. Then when Jeſus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already.

18. (Now Bethany was nigh unto Jeruſalem, about fifteen furlongs off.)

19. And Martha and Mary being in great ſadneſs, & keeping themſelves up in a cloſe retirement, many of the Jews came to the houſe to thoſe that were near them, to get acceſs, to bewail the loſs, and to reſcue them from this great ſadneſs.

19. And many of the Jews came * to Martha and Mary, to comfort them concerning their brother.]

* to thoſe that were about Martha and Mary. πρὸς τὰς περὶ Μάρθαν καὶ Μαρίαν

20. Then Martha, as ſoon as ſhe heard that Jeſus was coming, went and met him: but Mary ſat ſtill in the houſe.

21. Then ſaid Martha unto Jeſus, Lord, if thou hadſt been here my brother had not died.

22. Enable thee to do it.

22. But I know that even now whatſoever thou wilt ask of God, God will [give it thee.]

23. I will raiſe thy brother again to life, ſee v.40.

23. Jeſus ſaith unto her, [Thy brother ſhall riſe again.]

24. Martha ſaid unto him, I know that he ſhall riſe again at the reſurrection of the laſt day.

25. I am able to raiſe the dead to life again, whenſoever I pleaſe, whether now or hereafter, one that is a Believer, and faithful diſciple of mine, ſuch as thy brother Lazarus was, I can, though he be dead and buried, raiſe him preſently to life again.

25. Jeſus ſaid unto her, [I am the reſurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though † he were dead, yet ſhall he live.]

† the have died, or, is dead καὶ ἐὰν ἀποθάνῃ

26. And he that is now alive, and ſo not capable of ſuch a preſent miracle, ſhall, if he receiveth and obeyeth my doctrine, though he dies after the manner of other men, riſe again unto life immortal, the latter of theſe thou ſayeſt thou believeſt, v.24. But doſt thou believe the former alſo?

26. And whoſoever liveth and believeth in me, * ſhall never dye: Believeſt thou this?]

* ſhall not die for ever, οὐ μὴ ἀποθάνῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα.

27. Meſſias known by the title of [he that cometh] (ſee Mat. 11. a.) the ſon of God, who conſequently haſt power of life and death, and ſo canſt raiſe him how and when thou pleaſeſt.

27. She ſaith unto him, Yea, Lord: I believe that thou art the [Chriſt, the ſon of God, which † ſhould come into the world.]

cometh, ὁ ἐρχόμενος

28. And when ſhe had ſo ſaid, ſhe went her way, and called Mary her ſiſter ſecretly, ſaying, The Maſter is come, and calleth for thee.

29. As ſoon as ſhe heard that, ſhe aroſe quickly, and came unto him.

30. Continued.

30. Now Jeſus was not yet come into the town, but [was] in that place where Martha met him.

31. The Jews then which were with her in the houſe and comforted her, when they ſaw Mary, that ſhe roſe up haſtily, and went out, followed her, * ſaying, ſhe goeth unto the † grave to weep there.

* or, thinking, ſuppoſing, for the Syriack and ſome copies read δόξασα: † tomb, or, monument, μνημεῖον.

32. Then when Mary was come where Jeſus was, and ſaw him, ſhe fell down at his feet, ſaying unto him, Lord, if thou hadſt been here, my brother had not died.

33. Was very paſſionately affected with it, & appeared to be in a great perturbation of mind, which ſoon broke out into tears, v.35.

33. When Jeſus therefore ſaw her * weeping, and the Jews alſo which came with her, he [groaned in the ſpirit, and a was troubled.]

* wailing, and the Jews that were aſſembled to her, wailing, he groaned in ſpirit, and troubled himſelf, κλαίουσαν, καὶ τοὺς συνελθόντας αὐτῇ Ἰουδαίους κλαίοντας

34. And ſaid, Where have ye laid him? They ſay unto him, Lord, come, and ſee.

35. And although he had reſolved to raiſe him from the dead, v.23. And though at other times when he meant to do ſo, he had ſuppreſſed the mourners tears, Luke 8.52. and Luke 7.13. yet now he indulgeth ſo much to the juſtice of their ſorrow, as himſelf to weep with them.

35. Jeſus wept.

36. Then ſaid the Jews, Behold how he loved him.

37. And ſome of them ſaid, Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have cauſed that even this man ſhould not have died?

38. Jeſus therefore again groaning in himſelf, cometh to the grave. It was a cave, and a ſtone lay upon it.

39. This is the fourth day ſince his death, and ſo according to experience of dead bodies, which after a revolution of the humours (which is compleated in ſeventy two hours) tend naturally to putrefaction, he muſt needs be putrefied, and ſo ſtink before this time.

39. Jeſus ſaid, Take away the ſtone. Martha, the ſiſter of him that was dead, ſaith unto him, Lord, [† by this time he ſtinketh: for he hath been dead four days.]

† he already ſmells. ἤδη ὄζει.

40. A glorious miracle wrought on him, by raiſing him to life again, v. 23, & 25.

40. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldeſt believe, thou ſhouldeſt ſee [the glory of God?]

41. Faſtned his eyes on heaven.

41. Then they took away the ſtone from the place * where the dead was laid. And Jeſus [lift up his eyes] and ſaid, Father I thank thee that thou haſt heard me.

* in ſome copies, as alſo in the Syriack, and old Latin, and Nonnus, theſe words, οὗ ἦν ὁ τεθνηκὼς κείμενος, are left out.

42. They hearing me acknowledge it to be done by thy power, in anſwer to my prayers, may by that be convinced that I came by commiſſion from thee.

42. And I knew that thou heareſt me always: but becauſe of the people which ſtand by, I ſaid it, that [they may believe that thou haſt ſent me.]

43. And when he thus had ſpoken, he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth.

44. See Note on ch. 19. g.

44. And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with [grave-cloaths,] and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jeſus ſaith unto them. Looſe him, and let him go.

45. Then many of the Jews, which came to Mary, and had ſeen the things which Jeſus did, believed on him.

46. But ſome of them went their ways to the Phariſees, and told them what things Jeſus had done.

47. It is not a ſeaſon for us to ſit ſtill and do nothing, to permit this perſon to go on without interruption.

47. Then gathered the chief prieſts and the phariſees a counſel, ſaying, [What do we?] for this man doth many miracles.

48. Deſtroy both our Temple and Nation, our religion and government, and wholly enſlave us.

48. If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him; and b the Romans ſhall come, and [take away both our place and nation.]

49. And

49. And one of them named Caiaphas, being the high prieſt that ſame year, ſaid unto them, Ye know nothing at all,

50. Nor conſider that it is expedient for us, that one man ſhould die for the people, and that the whole nation periſh not.]

49, 50. And Caiaphas, put into the high prieſts office by the Procurator (ſee Luke 3. b.) made a ſpeech of which this was the ſum, this is no time of conſulting or conſidering at large what is juſt to do, in what way of juſtice to proceed with this man, we are to conſider what is our intereſt, and 'tis a politick maxim that we may do any thing (be it otherwiſe never ſo unlawful) to keep the publick from deſtruction.

51. And this ſpake he not of himſelf, but being high prieſt that year, he prophecied that Jeſus ſhould die for that nation.]

51. This he ſpake in words that were a direct prophecy of what God had now deſigned ſhould come to paſs, not that he meant it in that ſenſe, or thought at all of prophecying, but being in place of authority among the Jews at that time, he was a fit perſon for God to make uſe of, as his miniſter to foretel the purpoſe of God, that Chriſt ſhould die for the Jews.

52. And not for that nation only, but that alſo he ſhould gather together in one, the children of God that were ſcattered abroad.]

52. And not for the Jews only, but that he might call all the Gentiles into the ſame fold, the ſame Church, all the ſervants of God, all that would receive the faith all the world over.

53. Then from that day forth they took counſel together for to put him to death.]

53. From that time they entred into a conſultation, which they gave not over, till they had contrived it to have put him to death.

54. Jeſus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews] but went thence into a country near to the wilderneſs, into a city called Ephraim, and there continued with his diſciples.

54. Hereupon Jeſus did not publickly (ſee note on ch. 7. a.) do any thing among the people of Judea.

55. And the Jews Paſſover was nigh at hand: and many went out of the country up to Jeruſalem before the Paſſover, [to purify themſelves.]

55. That they might be cleanſed from legal impurity, from which till they were cleanſed, they could not celebrate the Paſſover, and that all that were under any vow of Nazaritiſm might timely perform it, ſee note on Acts 21.23.

56. Then ſought they for Jeſus, and ſpake among themſelves as they ſtood in the Temple, [What think ye, that * he will not come to the feaſt?]

56. This being that feaſt unto which every one was to come to Jeruſalem, and no excuſe being ſufficient for not coming, but that of invincible neceſſity, what can be conceived the reaſon why he cometh not up.

* he comes not, ὁ μὴ ἔλθῃ

57. Now both the chief prieſts and the Phariſees had given a commandment, that if any man knew where he were, he ſhould ſhew it, that they might take him.

Annotations on Chap. XI.

a. Ταράττεσθαι

V.33. Was troubled] Ταράττεσθαι is to be troubled with any paſſion, but in this Goſpel peculiarly with grief; ſo ch. 12. 27. Now is my ſoul troubled, τετάρακται in reſpect of death approaching, ſo ch. 13.21. Jeſus having ſaid this ἐταράχθη τῷ πνεύματι, was troubled in ſpirit, to think of his being delivered up by Judas. So in his exhortation to the diſciples, when he tells them of his death, ch. 14.1. μὴ ταρασσέσθω, &c. Let not your heart be troubled, and *v.*27. 'tis ſet diſtinct from fear the other paſſion, Let not your heart be troubled, nor cowardly, ſo here 'tis joined with groaning in ſpirit, as expreſſions of inward grief, as the tears that follow, *v.*35. are outward evidences of it. As for the form of ſpeech in the Greek ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτὸν, he troubled himſelf, that is but an idiom of the Hebrews, who oft uſe the reciprocal voice Hithpael for a paſſive.

Ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτὸν

b. Ῥωμαῖοι ἐλεύσονται

V.48. The Romans ſhall come] The Jews in Councel, ſeeing the miracles which Jeſus did, this eſpecially of raiſing Lazarus, did much fear that profeſſing himſelf to be the Meſſias, he would ſoon attempt to make himſelf king, and by the admiration which he had gotten among the people, be quickly aſſiſted to it, if he were not timely hindred. If this were done, the conſequent ſeemed viſible to them, that the Romans to whom they were ſubject, muſt look upon this as a rebellion, and be by that temptation provoked to come with an army, and deſtroy them utterly. That this was their fear is evident by their many groundleſs objections made afterwards againſt him, that he forbad to give tribute to Ceſar, that he made himſelf a king, and ſo oppoſed himſelf againſt Ceſar, not that they deſired the continuance of Ceſar's power over them, but that their fear of a yet farther conqueſt from the Romans made them unwilling to provoke 'em, & this the rather, becauſe of a tradition among them, that a little before the end of the world, there ſhould come one to deſtroy them, called ארמילום (which is by an eaſy change Romulus.) This ſeems to be but the depravation of ſome prophecy from God, which foretold the coming of the Romans in the laſt days, meaning the days of the Meſſias to deſtroy them, and demonſtrates their expecting and believing, that the Romans were the people from whence the change of their Religion, and over-running their nation ſhould come. And therefore when they ſee the doctrine of Chriſt thrive ſo well, gather ſo many Proſelytes, and that the miracles which he did were ſo great as might well ſet him up for a king, or Meſſias (which they thro' their unbelief would not acknowledge him to be truly) it follows that they preſently apprehend the Romans coming in (the ארמילום now mentioned) to deſtroy their religion, ſignified by the word place, and carry them out of their country (that is, deſtroy their nation) or elſe wholly to change their laws, rule them as conquer'd people. But in this, poor men, they were ſadly miſtaken, the prophecy of the Romans coming in to conquer them and deſtroy their Temple (which I ſuppoſe was ſcatter'd among them, and became the occaſion of their miſtake in expecting ארמילום to deſtroy them) being thus perfectly fulfilled on them, not by their letting Chriſt alone, or believing on him, but by the contrary, by this their reſiſting, and bandying againſt (and at laſt crucifying) him; (ſee note on Mat. 24. m.)

CHAP. XII. Paraphraſe.

1. THen Jeſus, ſix days before the paſſover, came to Bethany, where Lazarus was, which had been dead, whom he raiſed from the dead.

2. There they made him a ſupper, and Martha ſerved: but Lazarus was one of them that * ſate at the table with him.

* lay at meat, συνανακ. κλίνων

3. Then Mary took a pound of ointment of ſpikenard, very coſtly] and anointed the feet of Jeſus, and wiped his feet with her hair, and the houſe was filled with the odour of the ointment.

3. Then Mary the ſiſter of Lazarus, not Mary Magdalen (ſee note on Luke 7.6.) took a pound of the richeſt nard, a very coſtly ointment (ſee Mar. 14. a.)

4. Then

4. Who was the perſon that ſoon after this agreed to deliver him into the hands and power of the Jews.

4. Then ſaith one of his diſciples, Judas Iſcariot, Simon's ſon, [which ſhould betray him.]

5. Why was not this Oyntment ſold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?

6. Becauſe he having the office of receiving all that was brought or preſented to Chriſt, and being a covetous perſon, who purloined much to his own uſes, conceived himſelf to be a loſer by what was thus beſtow'd on Chriſt.

6. This he ſaid, not that he cared for the poor, but [becauſe he was a thief and had the † bag, and bare what was put therein.]

† purſe, γλωσσόκομον

7. She hath performed this as a fit ceremony to ſolemnize my approaching death, after which men uſe to be embalmed with perfumes and ſpices, &c.

7. Then ſaid Jeſus, Let her alone: [* againſt the day of my burying hath ſhe kept this.]

* ſhe hath obſerved this for the day of my imbalming εἰς τὴν ἡμέραν τοῦ ἐνταφιασμοῦ μου τετήρηκεν αὐτο.

8. And therefore this was a very ſeaſonable charity in her, ye will have opportunities enough to ſhew your charity to the poor, but this was the laſt opportunity ſhe could have had of expreſſing it to me, who am ſuddenly to be gone from you.

8. For the poor always ye have with you, but me ye have not always.]

9. Much people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there; and they came, not for Jeſus ſake only, but that they might ſee Lazarus alſo, whom he had raiſed from the dead.

10. And ſeeing that Lazarus was apprehended by the Sanhedrim to be ſo dangerous a means to bring men to believe on Chriſt, upon conſultation it was thought fit to put Lazarus to death.

10. But the chief prieſts conſulted that they might put Lazarus alſo to death.]

11. Many Jews forſook the Judaical way of oppoſition againſt Chriſt, upon ſeeing that miracle of his in raiſing Lazarus.

11. Becauſe that [by reaſon of him, many of the Jews went away] and believed on Jeſus.

12. On the next day much people that were come to the feaſt, when they heard that Jeſus was coming to Jeruſalem,

13. Took palm branches (ſee note on Mat. 21. a.) and ſolemniz'd his entrance into the city with the ceremonies of a kings inauguration, acknowledging him to be the Meſſias (ſee Mat. 11. a.) and uſing the words of Pſal. 118. 29. and ſtyling him king of Iſrael.

13. Took branches of Palm-trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried, Hoſanna, † bleſſed is the king of Iſrael that cometh in the name of the Lord.]

†bleſſed in the name of the Lord be he that cometh, the king of Iſrael, Εὐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου, ὁ Βασιλεὺς τοῦ Ἰσραήλ.

14. At the ſame time alſo the diſciples of Jeſus fetching a young aſs, and bringing it to him according to his appointment, he rode on it into Jeruſalem, and ſo that other prophecy of ſcripture, Zach. 9. 9. was fulfilled in him alſo.

14 And Jeſus when he had found a young aſs, ſate thereon, as it is written,]

15. Now, O Jeruſalem, there is matter of rejoycing to thee, for he that is now thy king, cometh in an equipage not of pomp and ſtate, but of humility, as one that is likely to be author of all good to thee.

15. Fear not, daughter of Sion: behold thy king cometh ſitting on an aſſes colt.]

16. Theſe things at firſt his diſciples underſtood not to be a completion of any ſuch prophecy, till the coming of the holy Ghoſt upon them, after Chriſts aſcenſion, then they conſidered and remembred that that was now done unto him, which had been ſo long ago, ſo plainly prophecied of him.

16. Theſe things underſtood not his diſciples at the firſt: but when Jeſus was glorified, then remembred they that theſe things were written of him, and that they had done theſe things unto him.]

17. At this time before the peoples Hoſanna's, thoſe of the multitude that had been preſent at that mighty work of his, in raiſing Lazarus from the dead, freely made acknowledgment of it in Jeruſalem.

17. The people therefore that was with him, when he called Lazarus out of his grave, and raiſed him from the dead, bare record.]

18. And that cauſed the peoples coming out to him, v. 13. as to the Meſſias, whom alone they ſuppoſed able to do ſuch a miracle, v. 11.

18. For this cauſe the people alſo met him, for that they heard that he had done this miracle.]

19. Upon this the Phariſees ſaid one to another, we are ſo far from having ſuppreſſed him by all our oppoſition made againſt him, that all men believe on him in deſpight of us. And therefore ſome other ſudden courſe muſt be taken with him.

19. The Phariſees therefore ſaid among themſelves, Perceive ye how ye prevail nothing? Behold * the world is gone after him.]

*the whole world, for moſt ancient copies read, ὅλος

20. There were at this time ſome Gentile worſhippers, Proſelytes of the Gates, which being not permitted to celebrate the feaſts with the Jews, were yet come up to pray in the outward court of the Temple.

20. And there were certain a Greeks among them that came up to worſhip at the feaſt.]

21. Theſe living not far from Bethſaida in Galilee, and ſo having ſome knowledge of Philip, who was of that city, came to him, and beſought him that he would help them to ſee Jeſus, and ſpeak with him.

21. The ſame came therefore to Philip, which was of Bethſaida in Galilee, and deſired him, ſaying, Sir, we would ſee Jeſus.]

22. Philip firſt conſulteth with Andrew, and both together mention it to Jeſus.

22. Philip cometh and telleth Andrew, and again Andrew and Philip told Jeſus.]

23. Jeſus did not refuſe or reject theſe Gentiles from coming to him, but in general words intimated that the preaching the Goſpel to the Gentiles was now ſhortly at hand, and in order to that, Chriſt ſhould be rejected by the Jews, ſuffer, riſe, and aſcend to heaven, and then upon the Jews obſtinate holding out, the Goſpel ſhould be preached to the Greeks, and all the reſt of the heathen world.

23. And Jeſus anſwered them, ſaying, The hour is come that the ſon of man † ſhould be glorified.]

† be glorified, δοξασθῇ

24. Aſſuredly my death, ſaith he, is a means of bringing more unto the faith, then my life would be, as it fares with corn put into the earth, which by that means dies, but ariſes with abundance of encreaſe.

24. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit.]

25. And ſo in proportion it ſhall be with you, the venturing of your lives, and ſticking faſt to me is the thrivingſt ſureſt way of preſerving your ſelves.

25. He that loveth his life, ſhall loſe it; and he that hateth his life in this world, ſhall keep it unto life eternal.]

26. If any man will be my diſciple (ſee Luke 8. a.) he muſt provide to ſuffer, as I ſhall. And if he thus keep cloſe to me, he ſhall fare as well as I do, whatſoever he ſuffer here, be rewarded by my Father abundantly (ſee note on 1 Tim. 5. d.)

26. If any man ſerve me, let him follow me, and where I am, there ſhall alſo my ſervant be; if any man ſerve me, him will my father honour.]

27. I am not impaſſible, or ſubject to no affection, ſuch as deſire of life, &c. but in all theſe, juſt as you are. The apprehenſion of that which is now approaching is a great perturbation turbation to me, Which way ſhall I turn me? Shall I pray to my Father to deliver me from the danger, to reſcue me from dying? But this was it for which I came into the world, that I might ſuffer, and therefore I ſhall not abſolutely pray againſt that.

28. Father Glorify thy name. Then came there [b] a voice from heaven, ſaying, I have both glorified it and will glorify it again.]

28. No, this ſhall be my prayer, that my Father will ſo diſpoſe of me, that I may do whatſoever it is that may moſt tend to the glorifying of his name in me. Upon his ſaying thoſe words, there came a clap of thunder, and with it a voice from heaven audible, in theſe words, I have, &c. b.

29. The people therefore that ſtood by and heard it, ſaid that it thundered. Others ſaid, an Angel ſpake to him.]

29. And of the multitude there preſent ſome took notice of the thunder, with which that voice came, others of the voice it ſelf.

30. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, This voice came not becauſe of me, but for your ſakes.

30, 31. Upon this Jeſus ſaid to them, This voice from heaven came not to anſwer or ſatisfy me, but to convince you, & bring you to the faith, or aſſure you that my death ſhall tend to the glory of God, and bringing down of ſin and Satan, ch. 16. 11.

31. Now is the judgment of this world, now ſhall the prince of this world be caſt out.]

32. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.]

32. And I being crucified (ſee note on Mat. 1. h.) will by that means bring a great part of the whole world to believe on me, Gentiles as well as Jews.

33. (This he ſaid, ſignifying what death he ſhould dye.)

33. (This ſpeech Chriſt meant as an intimation not only that he ſhould be put to death, but alſo what kind of death this ſhould be, viz. crucifixion, which is an elevation, or lifting up to the Croſs, and an holding out the hands, as if it were to invite all to him, promiſing an hoſpitable reception. See Luke 9. d.)

34. The people anſwered him, We have heard out of the Law, that * Chriſt abideth for ever: and how ſayeſt thou, The ſon of man muſt be lift up? Who is this ſon of man?]

* the Chriſt ὁ Χριστὸς

34. To this diſcourſe about his death the people made an objection, that their Doctors had taught them out of Scripture, Pſ. 110. (ſo the word Law ſignifies, c. 10. 34. ſee note a.) and perhaps Iſa. 40. 8. that the Meſſias ſhould endure for ever, and never die, and therefore if it were true, what he ſaid, that the ſon of Man muſt be put to death, they could not gueſs what he meant by the ſon of Man, ſure not the Meſſias.

35. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you: walk while ye have light, leſt darkneſs † come upon you: for he that walketh in darkneſs knoweth not whither he goeth.]

† ſurprize, καταλάβῃ

35. To this he anſwer'd, I am not likely to ſtay long amongſt you, here on earth, make uſe of me, the light of the world, while I am with you, or elſe you are likely to be left in the dark, in a blind unhappy condition for ever; and do not, upon your traditions, perſwade your ſelves, that I ſhall alway continue among you here, becauſe I am the Meſſias.

36. While ye have the light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light. Theſe things ſpake Jeſus, and departed and did hide himſelf from them.]

36. I ſhall continue with you but a while, and therefore be ſure ye make haſte to learn ſufficient for your whole lives to come, to get your directions complete, that you may live like Chriſtians. When Jeſus had ſaid this he went away, and concealed himſelf from them (at Bethany probably) for a while.

37. But though he had done ſo many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him.]

37. All this did not effectually work on them, but though he had done all theſe miracles in their ſight, yet they did not believe on him.

38. That the ſaying of Eſaias the prophet might be fulfilled which he ſpake, Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed?]

38. And thereby the prophecy of Iſaias, ch. 53 1. was fulfilled, which was to this purpoſe, how few are there that have been by all Chriſts miracles convinced, that he is the Meſſias?

39. Therefore they [c] could not believe, becauſe that Eſaias ſaid again, 39, 40. That other prophecy alſo had not been fulfilled, had they not thus diſbelieved him, wherein the juſt judgment of God forſaking and bringing the puniſhment of blindneſs upon them, was pronounced by that prophet againſt the ſtubborn obdurate Jews, who by this means are likely never to be converted or pardoned. c.

40. He hath blinded their eyes, and hardned their heart, that * they ſhould not ſee with their eyes, nor underſtand with their heart, and be converted, that I ſhould heal them.]

* they ſee not, μὴ ἴδωσι

41. Theſe things ſaid Eſaias, when he ſaw his glory and ſpake of him.]

41. Theſe things were ſpoken by that prophet in ſetting down a viſion of his, when Chriſts being on the earth was revealed to him, ſee note on ch. 1. b.

42. Nevertheleſs among the chief rulers alſo many believed on him, but becauſe of the Phariſees they did not confeſs him, leſt they ſhould put him out of the ſynagogues.]

42. Yet for all this, many of the rulers of the people, the members of the Sanhedrim, did believe him to be the Meſſias, ſuch was Nicodemus, c. 3. 1. &c. But the ſect of the Phariſees was of ſuch authority and power in the Sanhedrim, and they were ſo violently bent againſt him, and all that received him, that as Nicodemus, ch. 7. 50. and 19. 19. durſt not come to him by day time, ſo the reſt durſt not make any publick acknowledgment of their believing on him, for fear they ſhould be reproachfully cenſured (ſee ch. 9. note b.) and being rulers, be turned out of their dignities in the Conſiſtory.

43. For they loved the † praiſe of men, more then the praiſe of God.]

† glory of men, more then the glory of God, δόξαν τῶν ἀνθρώπων μᾶλλον ἤπερ τὴν δόξαν--

43. For they valued their reputation with men (eſpecially their places in the Sanhedrim) their reputation with the Phariſees, that they were good Patriots, conſtant to their old way, more then the teſtimony of, or reputation with God himſelf, ſee ch. 5. 41.

44. Jeſus cried and ſaid, He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that ſent me.]

44. The believing on me is nothing elſe but the believing on my Father, whoſe commiſſion I have, and whoſe doctrine I teach.

45. And he that ſeeth me, ſeeth him that ſent me.]

45. And he that ſeeth my miracles, in them ſeeth my Father's Power, the works of miracles which I do, being wrought by my Father.

46. I am come a light into the world, that whoſoever believeth on me ſhould not abide in darkneſs.]

46. I am ſent by my Father to enlighten the world to lead them, that will receive my doctrine, into all that is neceſſary for them to know for the ordering of their lives, ſo as will be acceptable to God my Father.

47. And if any man hear my words, and ‖ believe not, [d] I judge him not: for I came not to judge the world, but to ſave the world.]

‖ or, keep them not, for the K's. MS. and the old Greek and Latine read φυλάξῃ and ſo the Syriack & other cop.

47. They that hear my preaching, & reject it, I do not mean to accuſe them to my Father, to make any complaint againſt them, 'twas not the deſign of my coming, to accuſe any man, and ſo to bring any judgment on any, 'tis more agreeable to my deſign to reſcue all out of their ſins, and puniſhment due to them for ſin.

48. He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have ſpoken, the ſame ſhall judge him at the laſt day.]

48. That which will accuſe, and condemn ſuch an one is, that which I teach and he deſpiſeth, it is the thing that my Father ſent me to preach, and that on purpoſe to bring them to eternal bliſs that receive and obey it, and the deſpiſing of that which was meant for his ſo great good, and came backt with authority and commiſſion from God the Father, is an accuſation which will be heavily charged on him at the day of judgment.

49. Every word, or part of doctrine taught by me, is by expreſs commiſſion of him.

49. For I have not ſpoken of my ſelf, but the Father which ſent me [he gave me a commandment what I ſhould ſay, and what I ſhould ſpeak.]

50. And of this I am ſure that obedience to his precepts as they are now preached by me, is the only way to bring men to eternal life.

50. And I know that his commandment is life everlaſting:] Whatſoever I ſpeak therefore, even as the Father hath ſaid unto me, ſo I ſpeak.

Annotations on Chap. XII.

a. Ἕλληνες

V. 20. Greeks] The Grecians here are ſuppoſed to be proſelytes of the gates, who yet were not permitted among the Jews to celebrate the feaſt with them, but only either to behold their ſolemnities, or holy feſtivities and πανηγύρεις, or, as it is here peculiarly ſaid, ἵνα προσκυνήσωσιν ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ, that they might worſhip at that time of publick worſhip, which in atrio Gentilium, in the Court of the Gentiles, they were permitted to do, as appears by the Eunuch, Acts 8. 27. ὃς ἐληλύθει προσκυνήσων ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ, who came to worſhip at Jeruſalem, where that Temple was, which is ſtyled the houſe of prayer to all people; ſo the pious men, that is, Proſelytes, Acts 2. 5. which came up to Jeruſalem at the feaſt of Pentecoſt.

Προσκυνῶν ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ

b. Φωνὴ

V. 28. A voice] The voice here was an articulate ſound in the midſt of thunder. φωνὴ and βροντὴ voice and thunder are all one among theſe writers, the Hebrew קולות voices ordinarily ſignifying thunder. Thus bath col, the daughter of voice (the only way of oracle or revelation of God's will among the Jews after the Babyloniſh captivity) is among them, the will of God revealed in thunder from heaven, Ex. 19. 16, 19. Hence it is that in this place, v. 29. the by-ſtanders ſay, It thunders, and others, that an angel ſpake, both together ſaying the truth, that there was a thunder joined with a voice from heaven, which is the daughter of thunder. This is the meaning of βρονταὶ καὶ φωναὶ, thunders and voices, Apoc. 4. 5. & 8. 5. ſo Mat. 3. 17. φωνὴ λέγουσα, a voice ſaying, is the thunder uttering ſuch a voice, and ſo c. 17. 5. Luke 9. 35. And by this will be explained a ſeeming difference in the Acts in the ſtory of Sauls converſion of hearing, and not hearing the voice, which ſhall be referred to that place, Note on Acts 9. b.

Βρονταὶ καὶ φωναὶ φωνὴ λέγουσα

c. Οὐκ ἠδύνατο

V. 39. Could not believe] The οὐκ ἠδύναντο here may be rendred, by Analogy with the ſame phraſe, uſed ch. 5. 19. ſo, as to ſignify not any impotence in them, but that, as 'tis ſaid, v. 39. they believed not. So doth the Hebrew phraſe ſignify, Gen. 19. 22. and ſo ſaith Iſidorus Peluſiota of that, John 5. 19. expounding τὸ δύνασθαι by ἐνδέχεσθαι, he cannot, that is, he doth not. So the phraſe is uſed, Mar. 6. 5. Luke 16. 2. and ſo the Context here imports, being no more then this, that this unbelief of theirs was foretold by the Prophets, which indeed was an argument to prove what the effect would be, thro' their own contumacious wills, but no way a cauſe of their unbelief, or that which laid an impoſſibility of believing on them.

Δύνασθαι

d. Κρίνω

V. 47. I judge him not] The word κρίνειν judging here ſeemeth to be taken in the ſenſe of accuſing, as a plantiff, or witneſs accuſeth, and not of condemning, which is the office of a judge. For firſt it is here, v. 41. ſpoken of the word or Goſpel of Chriſt, which had been preached unto them, & not of Chriſt himſelf in that place. 2*ly*, 'tis affirmed of Chriſt, c. 5. 22. that all judgment is committed to the Son, and that he hath authority to execute judgment, and that his judgment is juſt, &c. And therefore tho' it may be ſaid that that judgment of his belongs in thoſe places to the judgment, to which his Reſurrection inſtates him, and the place here belongs to his condition here in this world, and ſo that that affirmative, and this negative are reconcileable, yet becauſe the judging, v. 48. is alſo ſaid to be at the laſt day, it will be fit to aſſign ſuch a notion of judging in both theſe verſes, as that the ſaying he judgeth not, may be reconcileable with thoſe other places, where judgment is committed to the Son, & that will be by interpreting the judging here, of accuſing. And thus it will be agreeable with John 5. 45. do not think that I will accuſe you to the Father; there is one that accuſeth you, Moſes, whoſe writings producible againſt them are there ſaid to accuſe them, as here Chriſts words are ſaid to do. Thus Luke 6. 37. Judge not, and ye ſhall not be judged, is ſet as diſtinct from condemn not, and ye ſhall not be condemned, and ſet preparative to it, as accuſing regularly is to giving of ſentence in any judicature.

21. At this time, as he ſpake theſe words, Jeſus was much troubled, not only in apprehenſion of the approaching danger, but eſpecially he was grieved to think of it, that any diſciple of his ſhould be ſo wicked and ſo unhappy, and told them openly and plainly, that one of the twelve ſhould be hired and undertake to deliver him up to the Jews to be put to death by them.

Annotations on Chap. XIII.

V. 1. Depart] This word μεταβῇ pass, refers to the Passover mention'd in the beginning of the verse, to signify that that legal Passover, or, the occasion of it, Gods passing over the house of Israel, and the Israelites passing or going out of Egypt, did note the passing of Christ out of this world, (where he was a servant) into the land of liberty, that is, heaven. See note on Luke 9. b.

a. Μεταβῇ

V. 10. Washed] The Hebrews had their λόυσις, and their βαπτισμοὶ or νίψεις, the former washing of the whole body, which they call חבילה, the other two of the hands or feet, of one part alone, either by immersion, or pouring on of water; which they call קדוש, Sanctifying. So in Joma, c. 3. sect. 3. חמש טבילות ועשרה קדושין טובל וכהן גדול, the high priest on the day of expiation washes five washings, and ten sanctifications, that is, washes his whole body five times, at every changing of his vestment once, and his hands and feet ten times, that is, at every washing of his whole body twice. The former were used by the Priest (after the building of the Temple) before the entring into the Temple, (no man, saith Joma, c. 3. sect. 3. enters into the court of the Temple to minister, tho' he be clean, that is, tho' he be not under any legal pollution, until he have washed all over) and so also by the Proselytes at their initiation. (See note on Mat. 3. a.) The latter was of every days use: and to those our Saviour seems here to refer, and by the ὁ λελουμένος he means him that hath been totally wash'd, that is, hath been initiated, and entred into Christ, hath undertaken his discipleship, and so renounced sincerely all the profaneness of his former life; and he that had done so is said to be καθαρὸς ὅλος, in the words following whole clean, and he hath no need to be so washed again, that is, all over. For that ceremony of initiation was never repeated, say the Jewish writers. All that is needful to him is the βαπτισμοὶ or νίψεις, the immersion or pouring of water, and so rinsing of the hands and feet, the daily ministry of the word and grace of Christ (thereby signified) to cleanse and wash off, and purify (more and more daily) the frailties and imperfections, and lapses of our weak nature, those feet of the soul, τὰ ζαχικὰ διαβήματα, saith Eulogius, even after he is converted.

b. Λελουμένος. Καθαρὸς ὅλος. λόυσθαι Νίψασθαι

V. 26. A Sop] What ψωμίον signifies is clear by Hesychius, ψώμιον (ψωμὸν is a false print) τὸ κατακόπτον τῆς ἄρτου, the lower side of the bread, and ψωμία (not ψωμία again) τὰ τῆς ἄρτου ἐπιθραύσματα, broken pieces of the loaf, crusts of bread. Such was it that was wont to be given about to each of the guests in the postcœnium (the breaking of bread after Supper) among the Jews, to signify that charity that should be among them, and so the cup of grace, or charity also, μετὰ τὸ δειπνῆσαι, after supper, saith St. Luke, ch. 22. 20. And such was this here, that Christ on purpose did to express his love to his disciples now at parting with them, v. 1. and to engage them to the like among one another. That this was the post cœnium there can be no doubt, if δείπνου, v. 2. be rendred supper being ended, for then there could be nothing after that but the post cœnium. But although γενομένου being the Aorist. Med. importeth no more, but it being come, or when supper was come, in supper time, yet 'tis apparent that after this he rose from supper, to wash their feet, and accordingly 'tis said expressly, v. 12. ἀναπεσὼν πάλιν, lying down again, which signifies that he was before lain down to meat. And therefore in reason this washing their feet, coming between the supper, and the post cœnium, that which here follows the washing, and his second lying down, is the post cœnium, wherein, as it is evident by the other Evangelists, he instituted the Lords Supper. See Mat. 26. 26. where it is the last thing that is done, but the singing of the hymn, before their going to the mount of Olives, v. 30. and so Mark 14. 28. and Luke saith expressly, ch. 22. 20. that he took the cup after supper. Which being supposed, and the mention being here express of Christs giving the ψωμίον, or crust to Judas, as it is necessarily consequent, that Judas was present at the institution of the Sacrament, & not only at the first part of the supper which that concluded, so it is not probable that the crust now mention'd to be given him, should be dip'd or moisten'd in the juice of the herbs, as it might be thought, if it had been at the former part of the supper. For the custom of giving about bread in the post cœnium, was, surely, to give a crust of dry bread, broken off from the loaf, or a loaf cut in a dish, to that purpose, to give every one a piece, and the cup of wine following it, there was no use, or occasion of moistning it; and besides, the first course, & the dishes of that service were in all reason taken away, to give place to this concluding course, as we know it is, wherever the custom of the Grace-cup is still retained, and if so, there was then no moist thing on the table but the wine to dip, or wet it in, & that being in a cup or pot, & not in a dish (which is mention'd in Matthew and Mark at his pointing at the traditor) there is no pretence of believing, that the bread was dip'd in that. Upon these grounds it seems not unreasonable to interpose a conjecture, that the word βάψας, or ἐμβάψας may here be mistaken, and misapplied to ψωμίον, the piece of bread (which from thence is usually rendred a sop, supposing it to be βαπτισμὸν, dip'd in wet, and so moisten'd) when it may signify no more then his putting, or dipping his hand into the dish. For the putting ones hand into any hollow vessel, which is made hollow, that it may contain liquids in it, may fitly be thus express'd, altho' there be not any liquid thing in it at that time. So ἐμβάπτειν χεῖρα, to dip, or put in the hand, Mat. 26. 23. signifies to take meat, & eat bread (Ps. 41. 9. & here, v. 18.) without any notion of wetting it, & so ἐμβαπτόμενος, Mar. 14. 20. which may as well conclude that Judas was made wet in the dish there, as that the bread was sopt here. It is ordinary for words to lose their native significations, and to be used in a greater latitude then originally belongs to them, and so we know βαπτίζεσθαι, to be dip'd or wash'd, is used not only of water, but of the holy Ghost and fire; and then, why may not the words be thus rendred, ᾧ ἐγὼ βάψας τὸ ψωμίον ἐπιδώσω, to whom having dip'd, I shall give the piece of bread, by dipping meaning putting the hand into the dish, and then ἐμβάψας τὸ ψωμίον δίδωσιν, having dip'd, that is, put in his hand, he gives the crust, or piece of bread to Judas, telling John at the same time, that he, should next give it to, was he that should deliver him up.

CHAP. XIV.

Paraphrase.

1. LET not not your heart be troubled: * ye believe in God, believe also in me.]

1. As your believing in God my father will afford you many priviledges, and antidotes against worldly trouble, so will also your believing in me.

2. In my Fathers house are many mansions; † If it were not so, I would have told you; I go to prepare a place for you.

2, 3. In heaven there is room for you abundantly as well as for me, and so there is no need that I should tell you this truth (which otherwise I would have told you, and which would give you cause to rejoyce, and not be sad at my departure) that my going is but as your harbinger to prepare for you, and when I have done that, then, as an harbinger, I will come back again and meet you, and so introduce you thither, Acts 1. 11.

3. And if I go * and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto my self, that where I am ye may be also.]

4. And whither I go ye know, and the way you know.]

4. I suppose you know the place to which I go, and the way which will bring you thither also.

5. Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way?

6. Jesus saith unto him, [I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father but by me.]

6. I am the true and living way, sent by my Father to direct all men to that way, wherein he expects and requires to be served, and there is no other way to come to the knowledge of his will, or the enjoyment of life with him, but by me, and the same way that I go before you.

7. If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also; and from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him.]

7. If you had thoroughly known me, who come only in my Fathers name, and to reveal his will to you, ye had also known my Father, who being invisible is no other ways to be known, but as he is revealed in me, and now (see Mat. 23. note m.) although ye never saw my Father, yet having seen and known me, who am his image, ye have both seen and known him.

8. Philip saith unto him, Lord, shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us.]

8. Philip not considering the sense of that last speech, saith unto him, Lord, shew us the Father, and that one thing, the shewing us the Father, will sure convince all without any other argument.

9. Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, [Philip? He that hath sent me hath seen the Father, and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father?]

9. I tell thee again, Philip, I am the image of my Father, and so he that hath seen me, and heard my doctrine, hath seen my Father, and knows his will also. And after this, this of thine is an impertinent unnecessary demand.

10. Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? The words that I speak unto you, I speak not of my self: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doth the works.]

10. Let me ask you, do you not believe confidently, that whatsoever I do or teach I do by the Fathers appointment, and that it is the power of him that acts in me? whatsoever I say or do, doctrine, or miracles, is of him; see note c.

11. Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me; † or else believe me for the very works sake.]

11. Take my word for it, but if you will not do so let my miracles demonstrate it to you.

12. Verily, verily, I say unto you, [He that believeth on me, the works that I do, shall he do also, and greater works then these shall he do, because I go unto my Father.]

12. Those that have now been my disciples shall be able to do the same miracles that I do, Mar. 16. 17. nay greater, upon my sending down the holy Ghost upon you, shall speak with tongues, &c.

13. And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son.]

13. And whatever miracle you shall in my name pray for power to do, that I will enable you to do, and so by the shewing forth my power in you after my departure, glorify him who hath sent me.

14. If ye shall ask any thing in my name, I will do it.]

14. And of this be confident, whatsoever miracle you pray for power to do, and pray for it in my name, grounding your requests on this promise of mine unto you, and doing it in order to my service for the propagating of the Gospel, it shall be granted you.

15. If ye a love me, keep my commandments.]

15. Do but ye express the sincerity of your love to me by obedience to my precepts. a.

16. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another b * Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever.]

16. And I will ask my Father, and when I am gone he shall send you the Holy Ghost, who for the several parts of his office, 1. to intercede as an advocate, 2. to exhort, 3. to comfort, is best expresst by the word [Paraclete,] which in Greek signifies all these three, and he, when he cometh, shall abide with you for ever, not departing, as now I do, but continuing with you as long as you adhere and continue obedient to my precepts, v. 15. b.

17. Even the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him, † for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.]

17. This Paraclete is the Spirit of my Father, that shall lead you into all truth, Him carnal and worldly men (that value nothing but the visible pomps and powers of the world, they that have looked for a temporal glorious Messias) shall make nothing of, because he is far from any part of that, he is not so much as visible to outward eyes, but only by inward effects, and so neither known nor valued by them. But by you, I suppose, and all true disciples of mine, he is highly valued, therefore (see note on Luke 7. d.) he shall abide with (not only come to) you, he shall for ever continue among you, v. 16.

18. I will not leave you * comfortless, I will come to you.]

19. Ye are my little children, ch. 13. 33. and therefore when I leave you, I will have more care of you, than to leave you destitute, I will hasten to come unto you, as to so many young children deprived of their parents, tho I am slain, and so depart from you, yet I will rise again, and give you the comfort of seeing me after my resurrection, see v. 18. c.

19. Yet a little while and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: † because I live, ye shall live also.]

19. After a little space I shall be taken from this earth, where now I move, and so taken, that the impenitent unbelieving Jews shall never see more of my miracles, which have hitherto been so ineffectual among them, never see me again (so as to take comfort or reap benefit by seeing me) but it is not my death it self that shall separate me from you, I shall rise from death, and appear to you after my resurrection, and from thence ascend to heaven there to live eternally; and as that shall be matter of great rejoycing to you (see note on 1 Thes.

20. And when I shall after my death thus appear unto you, and make good what I now promise, then shall ye be convinced (more perfectly then yet ye have been) 1. that I have taught nothing but what is the will of my Father, 2. that by your keeping close to that faith which I have taught you, my power and commission which I have received from my Father, shall be communicated to you, Luk. 22.28.

20. At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you.]

21. And this I say to all obedient servants of mine, whosoever they are, not only to you Apostles; every faithful lover of me, v. 15. shall be loved of my Father, and from me receive that evidence of my love, I will effectually make my self known to him after my resurrection, either by appearing to him my self, or by the testimony of those to whom I will appear.

21. He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me and he that loveth me, shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest my self to him.]

22. Upon this Judas, one of his disciples still looking after a present shewing himself as a temporal Messias, asked him (see c. 7:4.) what was the reason that he would not manifest himself to the world, as well as to them?

Annotations on Chap. XIV.

V. 15. Love] The notion of loving God in Scripture, but especially in the New Testament, seems most fitly to be taken from one most eminent act, and expression of love amongst all men, viz. that of doing those things which are esteemed most grateful and acceptable to the beloved, either as tending most to his good, or any other way most desirable to him. For this indeed is the one expression of loving one another, all other being effects of love to our selves. But because God wants no contributions of ours to the advancing of his good or (indeed) of his glory, and our only way of doing grateful things to him is our performing what he commands, therefore it is consequent, that our obedience to the will, or commands of God in the highest and most perfect manner, is styled the loving of him, being indeed the prime, if not only way of demonstrating our love to him. So here, If ye love me, keep my commandments, if ye are so affected to me, as to desire to gratify me, obedience to all my precepts is the way of doing it. So v. 21. He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me, &c. and I will love him, and (as the most grateful thing to him, that can be done from one lover to another) I will shew my self to him. So v. 23. If any man love me, he will keep my word, and my Father shall love him, and we will (as the most grateful obliging thing again) come to him, and make our abode with him, and so v. 24. & 1 John 2. 5. He that keeps my word, in him is the love of God made perfect, and c. 5. 3. this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments. And so saith Christ, ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you. From whence it is, that, as in some places compared together, love is equivalent, or parallel, to keeping the commandments of God, as Exod. 20. 5. Deut. 5.9. & Gal. 5.6. compared with 1 Cor. 7. 19. (and disobedience to enmity, Rom. 8.7. Jam. 4. 4.) so the whole condition available to our acceptation with God, and salvation is oft express'd by this style of Love. And because those duties that are to be perform'd to God immediately, are most accepacceptable and grateful to him, but especially that of confessing him, and in despight of dangers, and death it self, keeping close to him, therefore that is many times express'd by loving of Christ, 1 Cor. 8. 3. & 16. 22. Eph. 6. 24. Ja. 1. 12. Rev. 2. 4. Another notion there is of the love of God, a desire of union, and near conjunction with him, but this but seldom look'd on in the Scriptures.

b. Παράκλητος

V. 16. Comforter] the word Paraclete in the Greek comes from a word of a large, and so ambiguous signification, and consequently may be rendred advocate, exhorter, or comforter, and every one of these do fitly accord to the offices of the Holy Ghost among the Apostles (on whom he was to descend) and ever since in the Church, and therefore ought not to be so rendred by any one of these, as to exclude the others, but to be left in the latitude of the signification, which belongs to the Greek word: Yet the truth is, one notion there is of the word, which seems to be especially referr'd to, both here, when he is called Paraclete, and ch. 16. 8. as shall there appear, and that is the first notion, that of an advocate or interlocutor, an advocate of the Christians cause with God, Rom. 8. 26. and so also with men, teaching the Apostles what they shall say, when they are brought before Kings, &c. Matth. 10. 20. and an advocate or actor of Christ's cause against the World of unbelievers, and crucifiers, John 15. 26. and efficaciously convincing the adversaries, John 16. 8. and this is the notion of the word retained among the Talmudists, who continue the Greek word without the Termination, and set it in opposition to קטגור κλήτωρ an accuser. And proportionably to what is here said of παράκλητος, must, I suppose, be resolved of παράκλησις τῆς ἁγίας πνεύματος, Acts 9. 31. not that it be restrained to note comfort particularly, but be taken in the latitude, for the whole work of the ministry, to which the Apostles were set apart, and consecrated, and enabled by the Holy Ghosts coming down upon them, and so indeed the word is generally used in the Acts, to denote the preaching of the word, speaking to the people, as the Apostles did in the synagogues, or elsewhere, to tell them their duty of all kinds. So Acts 11. 23. παρεκάλει πάντας, the sum of his speech or sermon to them all, was, that they should cleave unto the Lord. So Acts 14. 2. παρακαλοῦντες ἐμμένειν τῇ πίστει, preaching to, or interceding with, them to abide in the faith; and 15. 32. διὰ λόγου πολλοῦ παρεκάλεσαν, and λόγῳ πολλῷ, c. 22. with much speech they exhorted, or taught, or preached, to the brethren. So ch. 16. 40. παρεκάλεσαν αὐτὰς, they preached to, or exhorted them. So λόγος παρακλήσεως, Acts 13. 15. a word of exhortation, according to their custom of saying something seasonably to the people at their publick assemblies, after their reading of the Law, &c. So Acts 15. 31. the whole message of the Synod at Jerusalem, and their decision of the controversy, is called παράκλησις exhortation. Consolation

c. Κἀγὼ

V. 20. And I in you] The word κἀγὼ in this writer especially, hath oft a peculiar elegancy in it, and is not fully understood, but by adding the word So in the rendring of it, so also I, and then it hath an influence on the former part of the period, and makes that the first part of a similitude or comparison, as it is it self ἀπαράβολος or second. Thus it is oft in other places, see ch. 6. 56. ὁ ἐμοὶ μένει, κἀγὼ ἐν αὐτῷ, as he remaineth in me, so also I in him. So κἀγὼ αὐτὸς, 1 John 4. 15. ὁ Θεὸς ἐν αὐτῷ μένει, κἀγὼ ἐν τῷ Θεῷ, as God abides in him, so be also in God, and again, v. 16. and here in this verse, where two parts (not three) of conviction seem to be set down, as the effects of Christs resurrection, &c. 1. They shall know that Christ is in his Father, that is, that he came truly with Commission from him, and hath kept close to the discharge of it, varied not from it in the least, That this is the meaning of being in his Father may appear by the use of it again, ch. 17. 21. that they all may be one, as thou father art in me, and I in thee, that is, that they may agree in the same doctrine, as my Father and I agree perfectly in the same, I teaching what is his will should be taught, and nothing else. But more evidently here, v. 10. Dost thou not believe that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? i. e. whatsoever I do or teach is the power of God, and the doctrine of God in me, as it follows, the words which I speak, are not from my self, but the Father that abideth in me, he doth the works, v. 10. & v. 11. to the same purpose, that the miracles, which he doth, he doth from God, and that is a proof that his doctrine is the doctrine of God. This the Fathers raising him from the dead, and taking him up to heaven will convince them of, see c. 16. 10. where his going to the Father is mentioned as a means to convince them of righteousness, i. e. both that he was a righteous person, and that he taught them the true way of righteousness. 2ly, They shall know that Christ continues in them, communicates and derives his power to them, that he hath not forsaken them, v. 18. as by his death they were apt to suspect he did, but are convinced of the contrary by his resurrection, 1. by his appearing to them, 2. by his going to heaven, only (as he saith) to prepare a place for them, and then to come, meet and conduct them thither, v. 3. and 3dly, by his sending his Spirit to them to fit them to be his successors on earth, which is the principal thing in this chapter. Now their obedience, and the sincerity thereof to him, is not any third principal thing, that they were thus to be convinced of by this miracle of Christs resurrection, being a thing, which if it were in them, they might possibly know without Gods working miracles to testify it, and again, their knowing of this would be an effect or consequent of those former convictions, and not a principal branch antecedent (as in the order of the words it lies) to the latter of them. That therefore which the mention of ὑμεῖς ἐν ἐμοὶ, ye in me, seems to point at in this place, is only this, that whereas the world should never see Christ again, so they that remained in him, his faithful and obedient disciples, (upon which the whole promise of the Paraclete is built in this chapter, v. 15.) should partake of the blessing and fruits of his appearance, and of the Paraclete, and that as they had continued faithful to him, he in like manner would be sure to perform his promise to them, make them his successors in his power in the Church, and preachers of the same doctrine which he had taught from his Father. And so that is the plain meaning of these words, ὑμεῖς ἐν ἐμοὶ, κἀγὼ ὑμῖν, as you are in me, so I in you, which was the only second thing they needed to be convinced of. Tho' by the way, I say, as this was the rewarding of their obedience and fidelity to him, so also would it be a testimony from God of the sincerity of it, which he was pleased thus to accept and reward. That this is the right interpretation of this verse, appears by the next verse 21. where he that loves Christ, and keeps his commandments, that is, that is in Christ here, is the subject, to whom the promise is made of Christs manifesting himself unto him, which hath appeared to be the importance of κἀγὼ ἐν αὐτῷ, and I in him. By which it appears that the fidelity to Christ is the qualification or condition required in the subject, to make a man capable of the manifestation of Christ to him, which would not be afforded to any others. And the same is the importance of v. 23.

CHAP. XV.

1. And as he was going on the way, he ſaid to thoſe that were near him, John, &c. I am the true (ſee ch. 6. 1.) generous fruit-bearing Vine, Jer. 2. 21. my blood is the blood of the Grape, ſhall rejoyce the Heart of GOD and Man, Judg. 9. 12. And my Father who hath thus planted me in this world here below, hath the whole ordering of all that belongs to me, and every branch, every believer, every member of my myſtical body.

1. I Am the true Vine, and my Father the husbandman.]

2. Every barren member of my body (every unprofitable diſciple or Chriſtian) he proceeds to exciſion of, every one that is fruitful, he diligently pruneth, and uſeth all other probable means to render it more fruitful.

2. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit, he taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit, he * purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.]

* will purge, the ancient Gr. and Lat. MS. reads, καθαιρεῖ.

Do ye therefore take care by your obedience and conſtancy, that I may be ſo faſtned in your hearts, that I may never be out of them, or be provoked to withdraw my ſelf from you; for this preſence of mine is abſolutely neceſſary to you, to make you fruitful; as a branch cut off from the vine withers preſently, is far from bringing forth any fruit, ſo he that falls off, or is, by my Fathers juſt judgment on him, broken off from me, deprived of that grace, which, as juyce, is diſtributed to all the branches, as long as they are in the body, can never bring forth any good.

4. Abide in me and I in you: As the branch cannot bear fruit of it ſelf, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me.]

5. He that adheres and keeps faſt to me, and conſequently I to him, he by the grace communicated from me to him, will be enabled to bring forth much fruit, he and none but he.

And certainly I have long dealt with you as friends far above the condition of ſervants, who uſe not to know their maſters intentions, or counſels, or purpoſes, but only to do his commands, but I have received you as friends, and confidents into my boſom, to make known all my Fathers will unto you.

15. Henceforth I call you not ſervants, for the ſervant knoweth not what his Lord doth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you.]

16. And this I have done toward you by way of prevention, out of free undeſerved kindneſs to you, and of my own own accord, put you in this bleſſed courſe, enabled you to fructify, and bring forth abundance of fruit, to the honour and praiſe of God, appointed you to go abroad into all the world, and bring in an harveſt of Converts to Heaven, which is a real and a durable Fruit, and that which ſhall be advantagious to you alſo, devolve on you the benefit of having all your Prayers heard by God, all your wants ſupplied by him, which you ſhall preſent to him in my name.

And if ye find by experience, that impious and hypocritical worldlings, do inſtead of believing, reſiſt and perſecute you, there is no reaſon that this ſhould give you any diſcouragement; you are to expect that, and arm your ſelves againſt it by this conſideration, that ſuch as theſe perſecuted me before you, and ſo as I began in love to you, ſo I have had the firſt taſte of the enmity, and hatred of the wicked men of this world.

19. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but becauſe ye are not of the world, but I have choſen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.]

20. And that you are likely to meet with ſuch entertainment need not be ſtrange to you, when you remember how oft I have foretold you of it, that you could not in reaſon expect any better treating, then I have met with before you: if they have perſecuted me, in all probability they will perſecute you alſo, and on the other ſide, you have no more reaſon to expect of the world, then it ſhould receive your preaching, then that it ſhould receive mine.

Annotations on Chap. XV.

a. Τηρεῖν

V. 20. Kept] The joining of εἰ ἐτήρησαν here with εἰ ἐδίωξαν makes it seem a little probable that τηρεῖν should be here taken in an ill sense, for an insidious observing or treacherous watching of Christ's words, as τηρεῖν and παρατηρεῖν are sometimes used (see Luke 20. 26.) and so also the Hebrew שמר (Ps. 56. 7.) They observe, that is, watch my steps, when they laid wait for my soul) and Job 7.20. נצר when God is said to be the observer of men. But the use of this phrase τηρεῖν λόγους in the New Testament, especially in the writings of S. John, *c.*8.55. *c.*14.23,24. *c.*17.6. 1 John 2.5. Rev. 3.8. and *ch.*10. 22. 7, 9. and that with ἐντολάς, commands instead of λόγους words very often) and particularly in this chapter, v. 10. twice) will be sufficient reason to reject this rendring, and to read it literally, If they have kept my word, they will also keep your word, that is, obey and observe it, making their not observing the word of Christ an argument that they will not observe the Apostles neither; or, that by this experiment of their dealing with Christ they may learn what kind of dealing or entertainment is to be looked for from the world for the disciples of Christ, agreeable perfectly to what was before said of the worlds persecuting them also.

b. Δωρεάν

V. 25. Without a cause] The Greek δωρεὰν which properly signifies gratis, without any hire, freely, without intuition of wages, and is so taken *Mat.*10.8. Rom. 3. 24. 2 *Cor.*11.7. Apoc. 21.6. 22.17. is here, and *Gal.*2. 21. taken for without a cause whether impellens, (as here, they hated me without any motive, or impulsive to hatred on my part offered to them) or Final, as in the Galat. Then did Christ die in vain, or to no purpose. The reason of these various acceptions of the word beyond its native extent, is to be fetch'd from the like use of the Hebrew חנם which signifies both these, & proportionably the Greek, tho' naturally it do not extend to these, is, according to the custom of these writers, used in the same largeness as the Hebrew is.

26. In that day ye shall ask in my name: and I say not unto you that I will pray the Father for you.

27. For the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God.]

28. I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again I leave the world, and go to the Father.

See note on c. 7. a.

29. His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou [plainly] and speakest no proverb.

30. Now we discern that as thou knowest all things, so thou art pleased to reveal all saving truth evidently to us, of thine own accord, this convinces us that God sent thee, and that thou camest to reveal his will.

30. Now are we sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee: by this we believe that thou camest forth from God.]

31. You speak a little confidently of your belief now, at a distance from danger.

31. Jesus answered them, [Do ye now believe?]

32. But the time is now at hand, that ye shall fly from me to your homes every one of you, and so though ye believe on me, ye will not yet confess me, but forsake me, and, as much as in you is, leave me alone; But although ye forsake me my Father will not, he will continue close to me, and acknowledge me even in death it self, yea and raise me up from death.

32. Behold, the hour cometh, yea is now come, that ye shall be scattered every man to his own, and shall leave me alone; and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me.]

33. This I have foretold you, that you may depend on me for all kind of prosperity, by consideration of my conquest over all that is formidable in the world, take courage, and hold out against all the terrors and threats of the world, and the sufferings in it.

33. These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye * might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world.]

Annotations on Chap. XVI.

a. Παράκλητος

V. 7. Comforter] What is meant by the word Paraclete here attributed to the Holy Ghoſt, hath been mentioned, Note on c. 14.16. and will more fully be diſcernible by this place. For of the Paraclete, taken in the notion of an advocate or actor, this is the office, to convince the κατήγορας or accuſer, or, as it is, Tit. 1. 9. ἐλέγχειν ἀντιλέγοντας to juſtify the cauſe againſt all gain-ſayers, to convince them, or to convince others, that they have complained or acted unjuſtly. So that all that here follows, muſt in any reaſon ſo be interpreted, as ſhall agree with the cuſtoms of pleading cauſes among the Jews. Now there were three ſorts of cauſes or actions among the Jews, 1. publick judgments, περὶ ἁμαρτίας, לחטא that is, concerning criminal matters, and thoſe conſiſted in the condemnation & puniſhing of offenders againſt God, falſe prophets, &c. 2*ly*, in the defending of the juſt or upright, againſt all oppreſſion, or invaſion, or falſe teſtimony, and that is called לצדקה concerning juſtice, or equity, or righteouſneſs, περὶ δικαιοσύνης; the third in pleading againſt any for treſpaſs againſt his neighbour, as in robbery, &c. and urging the law of retaliation, to ſuffer as he hath done, and this is called למשפט περὶ κρίσεως, concerning judgment. In every one of theſe was the Holy Ghoſt at his coming to be the advocate for Chriſt againſt the world, who had rejected and crucified him, one action he ſhould put in againſt the world of the firſt kind, לחטא περὶ ἁμαρτίας, concerning that queſtion, whether Chriſt were guilty of being a falſe prophet, or they of not believing a true prophet, the Meſſias of the world, and ſhould demonſtrate or prove them guilty of a great crime, viz. of not believing the Meſſias, and that ſhould be managed thus, There are rules ſet down, Deut. 18. 22. to diſcern and diſtinguiſh a falſe prophet from a true, and particularly to diſcern the Chriſt or Meſſias, v. 18. viz. if undertaking to be the Meſſias, and to prove that by foretelling things, which were not in the power of the devil to work or to foretel, all the things which he foretold came to paſs. Now one of the things foretold by Chriſt, was, that the Spirit or Paraclete ſhould come, which being fulfilled by his coming, and his coming from God, and not from the devil, but deſtructive to his kingdom, this would be a convincing argument, that he was a true prophet, and ſo the Meſſias, which he affirmed himſelf to be, and ſo that they were guilty of a great ſin, in not believing on him, of a greater in crucifying him, and therefore that they ought to expect that puniſhment of exciſion, Deut. 18. 19. which after, within a while, did accordingly befal that nation. A ſecond action which the Holy Ghoſt did put in for Chriſt againſt the world, was to vindicate his innocence, tho' he had ſuffered among them as a malefactor, and his way of managing that was, by giving them aſſurance and convincing them, that he which was thus condemned and crucified by them, was by God taken up into heaven, (as a clear teſtimony of his innocence) to partake of his own glory there. The third action was that of judgment (or of puniſhing injurious perſons by way of retaliation) againſt Satan, the cauſe and author of the death of Chriſt, who put it into Judas's heart, & the chief Prieſts and Phariſees, the former to deliver up, the latter to put him to death: And by the coming of the H. Ghoſt, & preaching of the word thorough the world, and ſo the ſpreading of Chriſtianity among the Gentiles (which was an effect of his coming, and office of the H. Ghoſt) this work of Retaliation was wrought moſt diſcernibly on Satan, or the Prince of this world; he put Chriſt to death, and he himſelf is ſlain (as it were) his kingdom deſtroyed, his idols, oracles, abominable ſins, (whereby he reigned every where among the Gentiles in the heathen world) were remarkably deſtroyed by this coming of the H. Ghoſt, and ſo the world, and the prince thereof judged, ſentenced, and condemned, judicio talionis, to ſuffer from Chriſt, as he had dealt with him, and that was the convincing the world, περὶ κρίσεως, concerning judgment. This ſeems to be the meaning of this very difficult place, to the underſtanding of which I acknowledge to have received light from the learned Hugo Grotius in his Annotations on the Goſpels, and from Val. Schindler in his Pentaglott. in the word צדקה p. 1521.

περὶ Κρίσεως

V. 23. In that day] Ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, In that day here, may poſſibly be miſtaken, by aſſigning too reſtrained a ſenſe to it. For if it be applied to that part only of the precedent verſe, But I will ſee you again, which notes the ſpace immediately following his reſurrection (ſee c. 14.19.) and antecedent to his Aſcenſion, it will not then be proper to affirm of that ſpace, that they ſhould ask him nothing; for it is evident that at that time of ſeeing him, they aſked him many things (ſee Acts 1.6.) But as this Reſurrection of Chriſt was attended with his aſcenſion to heaven, and ſending the Paraclete, ſo it is moſt exactly true which here follows, In that day ye ſhall ask me nothing, that is, ſhall have no need of asking more queſtions. The Paraclete ſhall teach you all things. That this is the meaning of ἐρωτήσετε here, which is rendred asking, and not that other notion of asking for praying in the following words may appear, firſt by v. 19. where they being dubious and uncertain what he meant by, yet a little while, and ye ſhall not ſee me, &c. it is ſaid, Jeſus knew that they would, ἐρωτᾶν αὐτὸν, ask him, that is, ask him the meaning of that ſpeech, and to that he here refers in the ſame word, In that day, when that courſe ſhall be taken for the inſtructing you ſo perfectly, ἐμὲ ἐρωτήσετε οὐδὲν ye ſhall ask me nothing. 2*ly*, By the changing of the word in the other part of this verſe, where it is ὅσα ἂν αἰτήσητε, whatſoever ye ſhall ask or beg of the Father, &c. & not, as it is here, ἐρωτήσητε. In the ſame ſenſe muſt the phraſe ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, in that day be taken again, v. 26. that which is there ſaid, belonging not peculiarly to that time between his Reſurrection and Aſcenſion, but to the ſtate of them, and all Chriſtians after Chriſt's departure from them, to the right hand of his Father

CHAP. XVII. Paraphraſe.

1. THeſe words ſpake Jeſus, and lift up his eyes to heaven, and ſaid, Father [the hour is come, glorify thy ſon, that thy ſon alſo may glorify thee.]

2. According as thou haſt given me power of ſentenI may give eternal life to ſee note on c. 6. d.

3. And this is life eternal, that * they might know thee the only true God, and † Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent.]
this eternal life, is, beſide the knowledge of the Father, the only true God (together with obedience to his commands formerly revealed by him) the embracing Chriſt, and acknowledging his commiſſion from the Father (and him as the only true God alſo, 1 John 5. 20.) and ſo receiving and obſerving all that is ſaid and commanded by him.

3. And all that is required to make men partakers of this world, and ſo glorified thee here, and have done all, which thou haſt appointed me to do by way of office or miniſtry here.

*They know thee ἵνα γινώσκωσί σε †Whom thou haſt ſent Jeſus Chriſt, ἀπέστειλας Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν. *that I ſhould do it, ἵνα ποιήσω.

4. I have teſtified and proclaimed thy will here in

5. And do thou now, O Father, deal with me proportionably, assume this passible, mortal, humane nature of mine, wherein I have served thee, unto a participation of that honour and dignity and glory, which, before I took this nature on me, I enjoyed with thee before the foundation of the world, even from all eternity, see Phil. 2. 6, 9.

5. And now, O Father, glorify me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before thee world was.]

6. I have made known thy will to those peculiar disciples, v. 18. whom thou wert pleased by thy grace to fit, and so to bring to me, to undertake my discipleship, and attend me in the nearest relation, who being servants of thine, have received my word, and obeyed it as thine, (see note on c. 6. d.) and served me in the publishing of it.

6. I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gavest them me, and they have kept thy word.]

7. These have cordially acknowledged that all that message, v. 4. on which I was sent, was committed to me by thee.

7. Now they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me, are of thee.]

8. For that message by thee committed to me, I have committed to them, and they have received it, as that which in my name they will communicate from thee to the world, being sufficiently assured that my coming and preaching was all by commission from thee.

8. For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me, and they have received them, and have known surely, that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me]

9, 10. I now offer up a prayer peculiarly for them, which I know are most precious in thy sight (praying for all believers, v. 20. and at other times, though not now, for his very Crucifyers) and that prayer for that, which for others I cannot pray, a prayer for their constancy (in persecutions, v. 15.) and continuance in the faith, and union with me, v. 12. this I can ask only for believers (for they only are capable of it) not for the world of impenitent unbelievers, (who will be sure to despise and trample on, and persecute them, v. 14.) for believers I say, and peculiarly for my disciples, whom thou, by having given them to me in an eminent manner, must look on as thine own, and also reward them, for having received, and confess'd, and performed service to me.

9. I pray for them; I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me, for they are thine.

10. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine, and * I am glorified in them.]

* I have been glorified, δεδόξασμαι

11. And this, because now I am likely to leave them to hazards and persecutions and whilst I am a leaving the world they tarry in it, therefore, Holy Father, I beseech thee, take them into thy tuition, and protect them in the discharge of their Apostleship, which after my departure lies wholly on them, keep all my disciples by thy power, (and by that declaration of thy will, which thou hast afforded me, by the Gospel, thy power unto salvation of all believers) from peril and defection, that they may live to teach and preach uniformly (all agreeing in the same) what I have taught them, in like manner as I have taught (without any alteration) what I had from thee.

11. And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, ‖ keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are.]

‖ keep 'em through thy name which thou hast given to me, for the K's. MS. & many antient copies read, ᾧ δέδωκάς μοι, and so the Syriack, Euthymius, Theophyl. Cyril.

12. All this while of my continuing among them, I have laboured, by revealing thy will to them, to confirm them, and also to preserve them from danger, and it hath succeeded well, of all those whose hearts were by thy preventing grace so prepared, as that they came to me and undertook my service (see Note on chap. 6. d.) none hath miscarried or fallen off, (see chap. 18. 9. and here v. 15.) but only that wicked traytor prophesied of, Psal. 109.

12. While I was with them in the world, I have kept them in thy name: those that thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition; that the scripture might be fulfilled.]

13. But now that I am to depart from them, I beseech thee, and express this request of mine publickly, while I am here, that that courage which I exhort them to, and that cheerfulness, in passing thorough all hazards, may, by their knowing that I thus pray for them, be confirmed in them, and that the joy which my presence among them now maintains and holds up in them, may be continued to them completely, when I am gone, by remembring what I have now done for them.

13. * And now come I to thee, and these things I speak in the world, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves.]

* But now I come to thee, Νῦν δὲ

14, 15. By receiving that doctrine which I have taught them from thee, they are sure to be persecuted by the men of this world, and all I beseech for them, is, not that they should be taken hence from preaching it to the world, but preserved constant in all affliction, that they fall not off from thee, nor miscarry in the approaching danger, (see v. 12. c. 18. 9.) but live to testify thy truth to the world.

14. I have given them thy word, and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

15. I pray thee not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil.]

16. They will not be for the world to like or entertain, any more then I have been.

16. They are not of the world, Even as I am not of the world.]

17. Be thou pleased therefore to set them apart, to fit them, and consecrate them for the preaching of thy truth, the Gospel. See v. 19. and St. Chrysostom.

18, 19. For to this office and undertaking they are sent by me, as I was by thee, (see c. 20. 21.) therefore I intercede, and withal I offer my self up a sacrifice, for the consecrating of them, that they may do as I do, venture their lives in the preaching thy Will, and by this offering of mine, as the ceremony of their Consecration, be Consecrated or set apart for that Function.

18. As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world.

19. And for their sakes I sanctify my self, that they also might be sanctified * thro'

20, 21. And what I beg for them I beg also for all succeeding believers which shall by them hereafter be brought to the faith (and succeed them in the government of the Church) that they also may accord and continue uniformly in one faith and doctrine, that which I from thee have taught, and this by obeying our example, following the copy, which we have set them, by agreeing one with the other in all things, that so this agreement of all (thee, and me, and them) may be a powerful means of convincing the world that I am sent by thee, which the divisions (and dissentions) of my disciples may bring into suspicion.

20. † Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word,

21. That they all may be one, as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.]

† yet do I not pray for them only, οὐ--δὲ--

22. As for my disciples (to whom he returns again, the the 20th and 21th verses being included in a Parenthesis, see chap. 6. note d.) To this end I have furnished them with the power of working miracles (called the glory of God, chap. 11. 40. and the glorious things done by him, Luke 13. 13.) that they may preach this doctrine. Do thou therefore sanctify them also, that as I have been able to do whatsoever works of Power thou art able to work, so they may be able to do also, through the presence of our power working in them.

22. And the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them: that they may be one, even as we are one.

23. I working in, and enabling them, as thou dost me, that they may be thus fitted and consecrated to their office, in being partakers of the same miraculous power, and through zeal to thy truth, confer all all their endeavours to the propagating thereof. And this, as it may appear to be an effect of thy favour toward them, in like manner as it was to me, will be a means of convincing the world, that thou haſt ſent me, and in like manner them alſo, becauſe ſuch power can be had from none but thee.

24. Father, I will that they alſo whom thou haſt given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory, which thou * haſt given me; for thou lovedſt me before the foundation of the world.]

24. And for all that thus ſincerely come from thee to me, which from being thy ſervants come and receive, and believe in me (ſee ch. 6. note d.) obey my meſſage alſo, for them I pray, that they may follow me to heaven, that they may manifeſtly ſee the honour wherewith thou haſt magnified me (an effect of thine infinite love towards me) before all eternity, and not look on me any longer as a mortal paſſible man, ſuch as now I am, ſee v. 5.

* or gaveſt me before the foundation of the world, becauſe thou haſt loved me.

25. O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee, but I have known thee, and theſe have known that thou haſt ſent me.]

25. And yet for all this, righteous Father, the rulers and great men of the world do not acknowledge thee after all thy goodneſs to them, as appears by their not receiving of me, who am ſent by thee: But as I have received the revelation of thy will, known thy ſecret counſels, ſo, though the world have not, yet theſe diſciples of mine, for whom I now pray, have been convinced, and acknowledge that I come from thee.

26. And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it: that the love wherewith thou haſt loved me, may be in them, and I in them.]

26. And therefore I have revealed thee, and thy attributes, and purpoſes to them, and will do ſo ſtill; that as thou haſt expreſſed thy love to me, ſo I may expreſs mine to them, and enable them to work the ſame works, that I am able to work.

CHAP. XVIII.

Paraphraſe.

1. WHen Jeſus had ſpoken theſe words, he went forth with his diſciples over the brook Cedron, where was a garden, into the which he entred and his diſciples.

2. And Judas alſo which betrayed him, [knew the place:] for Jeſus oft times * reſorted thither with his diſciples.

3. Judas then having received a band of men, and officers from the chief prieſts and Phariſees, cometh thither † with a lanthorns and torches, and weapons.]

3. Jeſus therefore furniſhing himſelf with a band of ſoldiers, and ſome of the miniſters of the Sanhedrim, cometh to that place with candles and lamps, many of both ſorts (which, though it were full moon, might yet be needful, by reaſon of clouds) and withal, weapons, to apprehend, when they had found him.

* were coming upon him, came out, πὶ ἐρχόμενα ἐξελθὼν.

4. Jeſus therefore knowing all things that * ſhould come upon him] went forth, and ſaid unto them, Whom ſeek ye?

4. Jeſus therefore knowing all that was done by them, & what was approaching to him.

5. They anſwered him Jeſus of Nazareth. Jeſus ſaith unto them I am he. And Judas alſo which betrayed him, ſtood with them.

6. As ſoon then as he had ſaid unto them, I am he, [they] went backward, and fell to the ground.

6. The ſoldiers, &c.

7. Then asked he them again, Whom ſeek ye? And they ſaid, Jeſus of Nazareth.

8. Jeſus anſwered, I have told you that I am he. If therefore ye ſeek me, [let theſe go their way.]

8. Let my diſciples, all but my ſelf, be diſmiſt, or not apprehended.

9. That the ſaying might be fulfilled which he ſpake, Of them which thou gaveſt me, have I loſt none.]

9. And by this means that ſpeech of his (ſee ch. 17.12, 15.) had another, beſide the ordinary completion, that no one of his diſciples was cut off with him.

10. Then Simon Peter having a ſword, drew it, and ſmote the high prieſts ſervant, and cut off his ear: the ſervants name was Malchus.

11. Then ſaid Jeſus unto Peter, [Put up thy ſword into the ſheath: the cup which my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it?]

11. This ought not to have been done by thee: ſhall I not ſuffer patiently, without reſiſting, what my heavenly Father hath determined I ſhall ſuffer?

See Luke 3. 2.

14. Now Caiaphas was he which gave counſel to the Jews] that it was expedient that one man ſhould die for the people.

14. This was that Caiaphas, who ſpake thoſe words in the Sanhedrim, as they were conſulting about Chriſt, ch. 11. 50.

17. Then ſaith the damoſel that kept the door unto Peter, Art not thou alſo one of this mans diſciples? he ſaith, I am not.

20. Jeſus anſwered him, I ſpake [openly] to the world, I ever taught in the Synagogue, and in the Temple, whither the Jews * always reſort, and in ſecret have I ſaid nothing.

20. Publickly, before an aſſembly, (ſee note on c. 7. 2.)

23. Jeſus

23. Jeſus anſwered him, If there were any ill in my ſpeech, accuſe me and prove it; but if there were no crime in me, why doſt thou ſtrike me?

23. Jeſus anſwered him, If I have ſpoken evil, bear witneſs of the evil; but if well, why ſmiteſt thou me?

24. Now Annas had ſent him bound unto Caiaphas the high prieſt.

27. Peter then denied again, and immediately the cock crew.

29. Pilate then went out unto them, and ſaid, What accuſation bring you againſt this man?

30. They anſwered and ſaid unto him, If he were not a malefactor, he would not have delivered him up unto thee.

31. Do ye take him, and proceed with him according to your own laws. But they replied, You know that we cannot proceed in a capital matter, according as our laws require, the power of puniſhing capitally being taken away from us by the Romans.

31. Then ſaid Pilate unto them, [Take ye him and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore ſaid unto him, * [c] It is not lawful for us to put any man to death.]

32. Jeſus had foretold that he ſhould be lifted up or crucified, which was a Roman puniſhment. This prediction of his was now to be fulfilled, and to that tends the Jews ſaying, that the power of putting men to death was taken from them, and was only in the power of the Roman Procurator.

33. Then Pilate entred into the Judgment hall again, and called Jeſus, and ſaid unto him, Art thou the king of the Jews?

34. Doſt thou ask this queſtion for thine own ſatisfaction, or as a crime laid to my charge by the Jews?

34. Jeſus anſwered him, [Sayeſt thou this thing of thy ſelf, or did others tell it thee of me?]

35. Can I know what the Jews out of their books & propheeies expect and promiſe themſelves? The Jews have laid this to your charge, that you pretend to be their king, What have you done to give occaſion to this charge?

35. Pilate anſwered, [Am I a Jew? thine own nation and the chief Prieſts have delivered thee unto me: What haſt thou done?]

36. In anſwer to Pilate's queſtion, v. 33. Jeſus ſaid, I pretend not to, or aim at any earthly kingdom, if I did, I ſhould engage my followers in a military manner to aſſiſt me as their king, and defend me from being delivered into the Jews power; but now by the contrary (as appears by the reproof of Peter, v. 11.) it appears that I do not pretend to any ſuch earthly kingdom.

36. Jeſus anſwered, My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my ſervants fight, that I ſhould not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence.]

37. It is as thou ſayeſt, I am a king, I was born in humane fleſh to this end, namely to be a king, Luke 1. 32. and for this cauſe came I into the world, (ſee note on ch. 1. a.) that I ſhould teſtify the truth of God, therefore I teſtify this, and every ſervant of God is convinced of it, and accordingly receives and obeys me.

37. Pilate therefore ſaid unto him, Art thou a king then? Jeſus anſwered [Thou ſayeſt that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cauſe came I into the world, that I ſhould bear witneſs unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice]

38. What meaneſt thou by the truth?

38. Pilate ſaith unto him, [What is truth?] And when he had ſaid this, he went out again unto the Jews, and ſaith unto them, I find in him no fault at all.

39. Set one priſoner at liberty at your entreaty.

39. But ye have a cuſtom that I ſhould [releaſe unto you one] at the Paſſover: will ye therefore that I releaſe unto you the king of the Jews?

40. No by no means, but releaſe to us Barabbas. This Barabbas was one that in an inſurrection had been guilty of murther, Acts 3. 14. and was a robber alſo.

40. Then cried they all again, ſaying, [Not this man, but Barabbas. Now Barabbas was a robber.

a. φανὸς

V. 3. Lanthourns] The word φανὸς from φαίνω is uſed ſaith Phavorinus, ἀπὸ τ̃ λαμπάδος, for a Lamp, or Light, but that, ſaith he, expreſly μὴ ἀπὸ τῶν κερατίνων, not for a lanthorn, but, as he goes on, (τοῦτο δ' λυχνοῦχον λέγω) any thing that hath a light on it, which being as 'tis there, contradiſtinct to the lanthorn, is a candle on a candleſtick, or ſomewhat proportionable to that among the Jews, which we uſually expreſs by the word Lights, that is candles, &c. ſet out for uſe and ſervice.

b. πραιτωρίου ἵνα μὴ Μιανθῶσιν

V. 28. Leſt they ſhould be defiled] The Prætors hall was full of Pilate's Roman ſoldiers; now theſe being Gentiles, are in that condition; of which Maimonides ſaith, that they are to be accounted for ſuch, as have a perpetual iſſue of blood upon them, whenſoever any thing is to be done wherein the queſtion of cleanneſs or uncleanneſs is conſiderable. As here in the eating the Paſſover, of which no unclean perſon was to partake. So that by preſence among the Gentiles this legal uncleanneſs is contracted, as much as by any thing. Hence is that of Acts 10. 28. Ἀθέμιτον ἀνδρὶ Ἰουδαίῳ κολλᾶσθαι ἢ προσέρχεσθαι ἀλλοφύλῳ, It is unlawful for a Jew to be joined to, or converſe with an heathen: ſo Acts 11. 3. Why didſt thou go in to thoſe that were uncircumciſed, and didſt eat with them? And Juſtin out of Trogus, ſpeaking of the Jews, and affirming falſly, that they were baniſh'd out of Egypt, for fear of infecting the Egyptians with ſome diſeaſe, leſt, ſaith he, they ſhould be avoided, and hated by all other Nations for the ſame cauſe, Caverunt nè cum Peregrinis communicarent, quod ex cauſa factum, paulatim in diſciplinam religionemque convertit, they took care never to communicate with ſtrangers, which being firſt done on this cauſe (ſo this heathen had reſolved to defame them) by degrees turned into diſcipline and religion, that is, became a ſettled Law among them. So Apollonius Molo in Joſephus, l. 2. cont. Appion, μηδὲ κοινωνεῖν τοῖς καθ' ἑτέραν Ἰουδαίων βίου ζῶσι μεταμφίοις, They might not Converſe with them which choſe to live after other cuſtoms of life.

c. οὐκ ἔξεστιν Ἀποκτεῖναι

V. 31. It is not lawful for us to——] The Jewiſh Rabbins were wont to ſay, that Forty years before the deſtruction of the ſecond Temple, the power of Judicature in capital crimes was taken from them, becauſe, ſay they, murtherers prevailed and diſſipated capital puniſhments punishments from Israel. And accordingly it appears that Christ here was crucified by the Romans, the Jewish form of hanging being by stoning first, and then setting up a stake and a piece of wood across it, and hanging the dead person up (his hands being joined and nailed together) toward the West, and then taking him down, and burying the wood with him: But for crucifying men alive, as the Romans did Christ, there is nothing to be found among the Jews, who, if they had had the execution of him, would first have stoned him, which they often attempted to do. See Paul Fagius on the Chald. Paraph. Deut. 21. 22.

CHAP. XIX.

Paraphrase.

1. THen Pilate therefore took Jesus and scourged him.] 1. Then Pilate thinking to satisfy the Jews importunity by inflicting this lighter punishment on him, appointed Jesus to be scourged, meaning, when he had done so, to release him, see Luke 23. 16.

2. And the soldiers platted a crown of thorns, and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple robe.

3. And said, Hail king] of the Jews: and they *smote him with their hands. 3. And saluted him as a mock-king.

*or, struck him with rods or cudgels, ῥάβδοις αὐτὸν ἐπάισμασι seeMat.26. note m.

4. Pilate therefore went forth again, and saith unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you [that ye may know that I find no fault in him.] 4. And profess to you, that having scourged him I found nothing capital in him, or which may deserve farther punishment, or indeed any at all.

5. Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe, and Pilate saith unto them, [Behold the man.] 5. See him that ye accuse for taking upon him to be King of the Jews, these are all the ensigns of his dignity. You see he hath been scourged and reproachfully used. This may suffice for any fact by him committed, Luke 23. 16.

6. When the chief priests therefore and officers saw him, 'they cryed out, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Take ye him and crucify him, for I find no fault in him. 6. When therefore those of the Sanhedrim, and the officers that attended them, saw him, they called to have him crucified; but Pilate profest he could find nothing for which to do it, and therefore they must do it themselves, if they would have it done, for he could not.

7. The Jews answered him, We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, because he [made himself] the son of God. 7. Took upon him to be

8. When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he was the more [afraid.] 8. Afraid of passing any sentence against him.

9. And went again into the judgment-hall, and saith unto Jesus [Whence art thou?] But Jesus gave him no answer. 9. What is thy stock or extraction?

10. Then saith Pilate unto him [Speakest thou not unto me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?] 10. Wilt thou behave thy self thus obstinately toward me, who have it in my power either to put thee to death, or to free thee from it?

11. Jesus answered, [Thou couldst have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above, therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin.] 11. I am under no crime at all, in which thou may'st found the right of putting me judicially to death, and having the whole host of Angels at my command, I am also able to rescue my self out of thy hands; so that thou hast neither right nor power to inflict any punishment on me, were it not that God, who is my Father, hath in his great wisdom, and divine counsels, for most glorious ends, to the good of the world, determined to deliver me up into thy power, to suffer death under thee. And this is a great aggravation of the sin of Judas, and the Jewish Sanhedrim, he to deliver me up to them, they to make thee their instrument to serve their malice, in crucifying me, not only an innocent person, but even the son of God himself. This they have had means to know better then thou, and therefore, tho' thy sin be great, yet theirs being against more light, is much more criminous, and shall accordingly be more severely punished.

And * from thenceforth Pilate sought to release him: but the Jews cried out, saying, If thou let this man go, [thou art not Cesars friend:] whosoever maketh himself a king, † speaketh against Cesar. 12. This speech of Christs was so resented by Pilate, that from that time he was very solicitous to have him set at liberty. But the Jews clamours and threats over-awed him, telling him that this Jesus was a stirrer of sedition, and disturber of the government, and if he did not put him to death, he should not perform the part of a Procurator of the Roman Empire.

15. But they cried out, Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your king? The chief priests answered, We have no king but Cesar.

16. Then delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified: and they took Jesus and led him away.] 16. Thereupon he passed sentence against him, according to the votes of the Jews, that he should be crucified, and the soldiers, v. 23. led him away to execution.

After this, Jeſus conſidering that all this while, or thus far, all the prophecies concerning him had punctually been fulfilled, to give farther occaſion to the fulfilling that of Pſ. 69. 22. he ſaith, I thirſt. Or, ſeeing that now all was compleated, ſave only that one particular prediction, he calls for ſomewhat to drink, knowing that, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, they would give him vinegar, and accordingly ſo they did.

30. When Jeſus therefore had received the vinegar, he ſaid, It is finiſhed; and he bowed his head, and gave up the Ghoſt.]

30. And as ſoon as he had drunk of that, he ſaid aloud, All prophecies are now fulfilled, as far as belongs to my life, and bowing his head, as in a geſture of adoration and prayer, he ſaid, Father, into thine hands I commend my ſpirit, and ſo expired.

31. The Jews therefore, becauſe it was the preparation, that the bodies ſhould not remain upon the croſs on the ſabbath-day, (for * that ſabbath day was d an high day]) beſought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and they taken away.

d. 31. Then the Jews, that the bodies of the dead might be quickly taken from the croſs, & not hang there on the day following, which was the firſt day of unleavened bread (to which the day of the Paſch was the eve or preparation) and alſo Saturday, and ſo a feaſt and a ſabbath together.

32. Then came the ſoldiers, and brake the legs of the firſt, and of the other which was crucified with him.]

32. The ſoldiers therefore according to appointment went to take them down, and leſt there ſhould be any life in them, and ſo being taken down they ſhould run away and eſcape, they break the legs of the two thieves.

Annotations on Chap. XIX.

V. 13. In the Hebrew Gabbatha] The word is Syriack or Chaldee, and ſo called Hebrew here, according to the cuſtom of the New Teſtament, which calls the Syriack language, (being at that time the vulgar of the Jews) the Hebrew, and therefore Nonnus in his paraphraſe reads and v. 17.

Γολγοθὰ δ' ἁλίεσκε Σύρων στόμα and of the inſcription on the croſs

the Syrian ſtill, where the Evangeliſts read Hebrew.

b. V. 14. About the ſixth hour] Here is a ſeeming difference between the Evangeliſts & S. Mark, in the ſpecifying the time of day, wherein Chriſt was condemn'd and led immediately to crucifixion. It is here ὥρα ὡσεὶ ἕκτη, about the ſixth hour, but there, Mar. 15. 25. ὥρα τρίτη καὶ ἐσταύρωσαν— It was the third hour and they crucified him. If the reading of the ancient Greek and Latin MS. were here to be heeded, this controverſy were ſoon at an end, for that reads here ὡσὶ ὥρα τρίτη, it was about the third hour. And ſo Peter Biſhop of Alexandria reads it, adding καθὼς τὰ ἀκριβῆ βιβλία σφεύγει, αὐτότατα τὸ ἰδιόχειρον τῷ εὐαγγελιστῇ ὃ πρὸς μέχρι τῆς νῦν περιφυλάξαι χάριτι θεοῦ ἐν τῇ Ἐφεσίων ἁγιωτάτῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ, καὶ ὑπὸ τῶν πιστῶν ἐκεῖσε περισκωπεῖται, as the accurate copies have it, and that written with St. Johns own hand, which is ſtill preſerved in the Church of Epheſus, and is had in great great reverence by the faithful there. But of what authority that relation is may yet be queſtioned, and the ancient Alexandrian Copy which we have oft cited by the name of the King's MS. accords in the main with the printed copies ὡσ ὡς ἕκτη, it was as it were the ſixth. And it is more probable that the reading τρίτη the third in Mark ſhould move ſome tranſcribers here to read τρίτη too, (to take away this ſeeming difference, and to accord the Evangeliſts, which they conceived to differ, if it were read ἕκτη, the ſixth,) then for any to turn τρίτη to ἕκτη, contrary to what was before in S. Mark, if they had found it otherwiſe. This otherway then will be more proper to ſalve the difficulty. That the whole νυχθήμερον, night and day, or four and twenty hours, was divided into eight parts among the Jews, is ordinarily known, each of them containing three hours, the third, the ſixth, the ninth, and the twelfth hour, and then the like again for the ſeveral watches of the night; Theſe alſo were hours of prayer, and of going up to the Temple in the day time, and at each of them the trumpet ſounded to congregate, or call pious perſons thither. This ſound of the trumpet was it that gave denomination to the hour; when the trumpet had ſounded to the ſixth hour-prayers, it was then ſaid to be the ſixth hour, and not till then. Only when that time approached, and was nigh at hand, it was ſaid to be ὡς, or ὡσεὶ, about, or as 'twere, the ſixth hour. Now not only that time, when that hour came, was call'd by that name, but alſo from that, all the ſpace of the three hours, till the next came, was called by the name of the former; all the ſpace from nine of clock till twelve was called the third hour. All from twelve till three after noon, the ſixth hour. So that the time of Chriſt's crucifixion being ſuppoſed to be ſomewhat before, but yet near our twelve of clock, or midday, as it may truly be here ſaid that it was ὡσεὶ ἕκτη about, or as 'twere the ſixth hour, (and ſo S. Luke hath it, chap. 23. 44.) ſo it is as truly and fitly ſaid by S. Mark, that it was ἅμα τρίτη, the third hour, that ſpace which is call'd by the name of the third hour, being not yet paſs'd, though it drew toward an end.

c. βαστάζειν σταυρόν.

V. 17. Bearing his Croſs.] Chriſt's carrying his croſs, was a part of the Roman cuſtom of crucifying; ſo ſaith Plutarch, de ſer. num. Vin. τῷ σώματι τῶν κολαζομένων ἕκαστος τὸν κακοῦργον ἐκφέρει καὶ ἀυτὸν σταυρόν, Every one of the malefactors, that are to be put to death, carries out his own croſs. So Artemidorus, ὁ μέλλων προσηλοῦσθαι πρῶτον σταυὸν βαστάζει, he that is to be nailed to the croſs firſt carries it upon his ſhoulders, and ſo Plautus diſtinctly, Patibulum ferat per urbem, deinde affigatur cruci, Let him carry it through the city, and then be faſtned to it. And whereas in the other Goſpels, there is no mention of this, but only of their preſſing Simon of Cyrene, to carry it for him (which is not mentioned here) the way of reconciling that difficulty is very eaſy, by affirming, that he firſt bare it himſelf, according to the Roman cuſtom (which S. John, according to his wont, mentions, becauſe it was omitted by the reſt) but after meeting Simon by the way, they made him bear it for him.

d. Μεγάλη ἡμέρα τῶν Σαββάτων.

V. 31. An high day.] That day was the firſt of Unleavened bread, and the ſabbath too, and therefore a ſabbath, and a great day. For that which is among the Hebrews חג a feaſt, מקרא קרא, convocatio cœtus, the day of ſolemn aſſembly in any feaſt, (ſuch were the firſt day, and the laſt of the feaſt of Tabernacles, the firſt and ſeventh of the feaſt of Unleavened bread, and the day of Pentecoſt) is by the Jews writing in Greek called, μεγάλη ἡμέρα, a great day. So it is rendred by the Greek, Iſa. 1. 13. μεγάλην ἡμέραν, where we read calling of aſſemblies. Hence is that of Tertul. cont. Marci. l. 5. Dies obſervatis, &c. Ye obſerve days, and among them he names jejunia & dies magnos, faſts and great days, ſo John 7. 37. the laſt day of the feaſt of Tabernacles, which was a day of calling aſſemblies, is there call'd μεγάλη ἡμέρα τῆς ἑορτῆς, the great day of the feaſt. See Scal. proleg. de Emend. Temp. p. 7. & 6.

e. ὁ Εὐαγγελιστὴς μεμαρτύρηκε.

V. 35. Saw it.] This ſpeech of this Evangeliſt, and his ſo much care in the teſtifying of this fact from his own ſight of it, is an argument that he looked on it as a very weighty and conſiderable paſſage. And ſo 1 Joh. 5. 6. he makes uſe of it as ſuch; This is he that came with water and blood, not by water only, but by water and blood, and v. 8. There be three that bear witneſs on earth, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood, and theſe three agree in one. What the particular is, wherein the weight of this paſſage lies, will be worth conſidering. And firſt it is ordinarily affirmed that there is a capſula on the left ſide of the heart, called the pericardium, which hath water in it, of continual uſe for the cooling of the heart, and that the coming out of water with the blood here, was a teſtimony of the wounding his very heart, the entring of that iron, the ſpear, into his ſoul. Againſt this others have framed an objection, that it was not the left, but the right ſide of Chriſt, which was at this time wounded by the Soldier, and that the Arabick texts generally expreſs it ſo, (ſee Kirſtenius Arab. Gram. p. 5.) and conſequently that the αἱματος καὶ ὑδατος ἔκχυσις, the waters flowing out together with the blood, could not be any natural effect of that wound. But that objection is of little force; for 1. ſuch is the poſture of the heart in the body, rather in the middle than inclining to the left ſide; and 2ly. So great is that pericardium, as Anatomiſts find, eſpecially after death when the water much increaſeth, that if the right ſide were pierced ſo deep as to the heart, it would ſend out water. And therefore this may firſt be reſolved, that this being an evidence of the wounding of the heart, and the Phyſicians Maxim being certain, καρδιαλγῶς ἀποθανεῖν, he that is wounded in the heart muſt certainly die, and Sanantur nullâ vulnera cordis ope,

Wounds in the heart are abſolutely incurable, this flowing of water with the blood was an evidence and demonſtration of his being truly dead (this one wound being ſufficient to ſecure that, if he had not been dead before, v. 33.) and ſo the confutation of moſt Hereticks of the firſt ages, which affirmed him to have ſuffered death only in appearance. But beſides this, another concluſion S. John in his Epiſtle is willing to draw from it, viz. that believing Jeſus to be the ſon of God, is an effectual means of overcoming the world, 1 John 5. 5. for to the proving of that it is, that this obſervation is made uſe of by him, This is he that came with water and blood, v. 6. And that argument lies thus, The baits, or temptations which the world uſeth, are of two ſorts, allurements of carnal pleaſures, and terrors from apprehenſion of perſecutions; the Gnoſticks at the time of his writing that Epiſtle made uſe of both theſe to ſeduce the Orthodox Chriſtians, the all kind of carnal pleaſures which they profeſs'd, was one bait, and the perſecutions from the Jews upon the Orthodox Chriſtians, which the Gnoſticks, by complying with them, avoided, was the other temptation. Againſt theſe two S. John ſets up purity and patience, as the two prime doctrines and commands of Chriſt, (which every true believer is ſtrictly concerned in) exemplified by himſelf, (who was 1. pure and ſinleſs, and yet 2ly. ſuffered death, the death of the Croſs) and moſt lively adumbrated by the water and blood, which he had obſerved to come from Chriſt's ſide in this place. The water that was the emblem of all ſpotleſs purity, and the blood was the evidence of his fortitude and conſtant patience, laying down his life for the truth of God, and theſe two, μαρτυροῦσι, teſtifie and declare the neceſſity of theſe two (and ſo of overcoming the world) in every one that believes aright in Chriſt. And whereas 'tis there added, that the Spirit teſtifies alſo, and that the Spirit (i.e. the Spirit as a witneſs. i. e. the teſtimony of the Spirit) agrees in one with theſe two, i. e. with the teſtimonies of the water and blood, that is thus to be interpreted, not only that the Spirit coming down on Chriſt, who was after crucified by the Jews, did teſtifie that he was the beloved ſon of God in whom he was well pleaſed, i.e. perfectly innocent, though he ſuffered for ſin, but alſo that the Spirit after the reſurrection of Chriſt, coming on the Apoſtles, came as Chriſt's advocate to defend him, and convince the world, both in that action concerning righteouſneſs, proving that Chriſt was a moſt innocent and righteous perſon, and that other concerning judgment, in puniſhing and retaliating taliating his crucifiers, the Jews, and Satan himself, destroying their kingdom for their destroying of him, (see Note on c. 16. a.) Besides this importance of the water and blood, the ancients have observed another also, that by a special act of God's providence there flowed at this time from Christ's side the two Sacraments of his Church, Baptism and the supper of the Lord.

f. Ὀψονται εἰς ὃν ἐξεκέντησαν. V. 27. They shall look on him whom —] This is one of the places in which (as also Rev. 1. 7.) the Evangelist quotes the testimony of the Old Testament, not from the Septuagint, but from the Hebrew text. For in the place of Zach. 12. 10. the Septuagint or Greek translators read καὶ βλέψονται πρὸς μὲ ἀνθ' ὧν κατωρχήσαντο, reading, it seems, דקרו for דקרו by the mistake of the two letters which are so like, ד and ר.

V. 40. Linnen cloths.] Ὀθόνιον as ὀθόνη in Hesychius signifies σινδών, ζώνη, τελαμών, and τελαμὼν is by him rendred δεσμὸς, φασκία, a band, or swath; so ch. 20. 7. and so the κειρία in the story of Lazarus, ch. 11. 44. which word is by Grammarians derived from κὴρ, mors, and so signifies peculiarly those swathes that belong to dead men, wherein their whole body was wound,

CHAP. XX.

Paraphrase.

1. Came Mary Magdalen (and divers other women, that had followed Jesus in his life-time, Luke 24. 10.)

1. THE first day of the week [cometh Mary Magdalen] * early when it was yet dark unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre,

* In the morning, πρωΐ.

2. John, the writer of this Gospel, and told them, The body of the Lord is taken.

2. Then she runneth away and cometh to Simon Peter, and to [the other disciple, whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, They have taken away the Lord] out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

3. Peter therefore, went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre.

4. So they ran both together, and that other disciple did outrun Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

5. † And he stooping down and looking in, saw the linnen cloaths lying, yet went he not in.

† And stooping down to look, he sees the swathes, ὁρᾷ τὰ ὀθόνια βλέπει.

6. Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linnen cloaths lie,

7. And the napkin that was about his head not lying with the linnen cloaths, but * wrapped together in a place by it self.

* Folded up, ἐντετυλιγμένον

8. † Then went in also that other disciple, which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw and believed.]

† Then therefore, τότε οὖν.

8. And then upon his report John also, that other disciple which came before Peter (see ch. 1. c.) to the sepulchre, went in, and saw how the swathes and napkin were laid, and believed what Mary and Peter had told him, and was thereby convinced that he was risen.

9. For as yet they were not assured by the prophecies of scripture that it was to be so, neither did they believe the testimonies of those that saw him risen, Mark 16. 11, 12, 13, 14.

9. For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he * must rise again from the dead.]

* Ought to rise, δεῖ ἀναστῆναι.

10. Then the disciples went away again † unto their own home.

† To themselves, πρὸς ἑαυτοὺς, see note a.

11. But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping, and as she wept, she stooped down, and [a] looked into the sepulchre,

a.

12. And seeth two Angels in white, sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, [where the body of Jesus had lain.]

12. Of the tomb.

13. And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

14. And when she had thus said, she turned her self back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.]

14. And having said so, and received answer from the Angels that he was risen from the dead, and that she should go and tell his disciples, &c. Mat. 28. 5, 6. Mark 16. 6, 7. Luke 24. 6. she went from the sepulchre towards the place where the disciples were, Mat. 28. 8. and as she goes, (see note a.) she sees a person standing, which indeed was Jesus, though she knew him not.

15. Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She supposing him to be the Gardner, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have born him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, [and I will take him away.]

15. And I will carry him to his grave again, or provide some other burying place for him.

16. Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned her self and saith unto him, Rabboni, which is to say, Master.

17. Jesus saith unto her, [Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father; but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father and your Father, and to my God, and your God.]

17. This is not a time for me to company with you, as I was wont, but I go to prepare a place for you in heaven, where you shall hereafter enjoy me.

18. Mary Magdalen came, and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

19. * Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors [were shut, where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews,] came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

19. Doors of the room where they were together were shut, for the more secrecy to avoid danger from the Jews.

* And when it was evening, that day being the first day of the week, and the doors being shut, ὄψιας οὔσης τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ τῇ μιᾷ τῶν σαββάτων, καὶ τῶν θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων.

20. And when he had so said, he shewed unto them his hands and his side. Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord.

21. Then said Jesus to them again, [Peace be unto you. As my Father hath sent me, even [c] so send I you.]

21. I take my leave of you (see c. 14. 27.) And do now give you the same Commission to execute in the Church when I am gone, which my father gave me at my coming.

b.

22. And by that emblem signified to them the holy Ghost which should shortly come down upon them, and thereby all those gifts of the Spirit of God, which should be necessary to fit them for the discharge of their office) Acts 2. 1. till which time they were to wait at Jerusalem, Luke 24. 49.

22. And when he had said this, he breathed on them, [and saith unto them, [c] Receive ye the holy Ghost.]

c.

23. See Mat. 16. note h. and Tract. Of the Power of the Keys.

23. [d] Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained.

24. But

* The Twin, Δίδυμος.

24. But Thomas, one of the twelve, [called * Didymus] was not with them, when Jeſus came.

24. Otherwiſe called Didymus, which by interpretation ſignifies the Twin.

25. The other diſciples therefore ſaid unto him, We have ſeen the Lord. But he ſaid unto them, Except I ſhall ſee in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thruſt my hand into his ſide, [I will not believe.]

25. I ſhall not be perſwaded that it is he.

26. And [e after eight days again his diſciples were within, and Thomas with them; then came Jeſus, the doors being ſhut,] and ſtood in the midſt, and ſaid, Peace be unto you.

26. The week after, the next week, that day ſeven nights, the diſciples were again met at the ſervice of God, and Thomas was with them, and when the doors had been faſt ſhut, for the more ſecrecy and ſecurity, Jeſus again, as v. 19. came in upon them.

27. Then ſaith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thruſt it into my ſide, and be not faithleſs, but believing.

28. And Thomas anſwered, and ſaid unto him, [My Lord and my God.]

28. I acknowledge that thou art my very Lord and Maſter, and that is an evidence to me that thou art the omnipotent God of heaven.

29. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Thomas, becauſe thou haſt ſeen me, thou haſt believed, [bleſſed are they that have not ſeen, and yet have believed.]

29. Thy faith would have been more excellent, and more eminently rewardable, if without ſuch demonſtrative evidence, thou hadſt believed, and ſo is their faith, who have believed without it.

30. And many other ſigns truly did Jeſus in the preſence of his diſciples, which are not written in this book.

31. But theſe are written that ye might believe that Jeſus is the [Chriſt,] the ſon of God, and that believing, ye might have life through his name.

31. Meſſias.

Annotations on Chap. XX.

V. 11. Looked into the ſepulchre] Some difference there ſeemeth to be betwixt theſe narrations in this, and in S. Luke's Goſpel, As 1. Mary's going to Peter, and his coming to the ſepulchre are here ſet down before the appearance of the Angels, but in Luke the viſion of the Angels is firſt mentioned, c. 24.4. and her going, v.9. and Peter's running to the ſepulchre, v.12. And in the other Goſpels there is no mention of her going, till ſhe had ſeen the viſion. This ſeeming difference will be reconciled only by obſerving this one thing (which hath been formerly obſerved, Note b. on the Title of the Goſpel, and Lu. 6. Note d.) that Luke writing from notes, which he had collected from eye-witneſſes, and not from his own knowledge, obſerves not ſo exactly the order of time, where things were done or ſpoken, but oft-times in another method, puts together things of affinity to one another, though not done or ſaid at the ſame time, and ſo here ſets down all that concerns the women together, and then after, that which concerns Peter, though part of that which concern'd the women were done after that which is mentioned of Peter. The punctual obſervation of the order being not neceſſary, when the things themſelves are truly recited. The true order of the ſtory ſeems to ſtand thus, Mary and the women came to the ſepulchre, Mat. 28. 1. Mar. 16. 2. Lu. 24. 1. Joh. 20. 1. and coming they find, that before they came, an Angel with an earthquake had rolled away the ſtone, Mat. 28. 2. where the Σεισμὸς ἐγένετο, there was an earthquake, muſt be taken in the time perfectly paſt, there had been an earthquake, and an Angel had rolled away the ſtone, for in all the other Goſpels it is ſaid at their coming, Mat. 16. 3. that it was rolled away, and they found, Mat. 28. 2. and here, ſhe ſeeth the ſtone rolled away, and then, going in, they found not the body of Jeſus, Lu. 24. 2. Upon this Mary runs to Peter and John, which paſſage is only mentioned here. Then Peter, Lu. 24. 12. and Peter and John here, run to the ſepulchre, and ſatisfy themſelves of the truth of her report, and having done ſo, Peter in Luke, and both of them here, v. 10. return to their own abodes. Where by the way the phraſe here uſed for their returning home, being ἀπῆλθον πάλιν εἰς ἑαυτούς, they went away again, or back to themſelves, gives us reaſon to think that Lu. 24. 12. the words ſhould not be read ὁ δὲ ἀπῆλθε, πρὸς ἑαυτὸν θαυμάζων τὸ γεγονὸς, and he departed, wondring in himſelf, &c. but he departed to himſelf, that is, to his place of abode, wondring, &c. While they returned, the women, it ſeems ſtay at the ſepulchre, Mary here, v. 11. and the women, Lu. 24. 4. doubting what it ſhould be; and then follows the appearance of the Angels, one or more, two here, v. 12. and Lu. 24. 4. one in Matthew and Mark, ſitting on the ſtone, Mat. 28. 2. on the right ſide of the monument, Mar. 16. 5. which being ſuppoſed to be one and the ſame Angel, doth not yet exclude a ſecond mentioned by theſe other two Evangeliſts. The Angels ſpeak to the women, in all the Goſpels, and aſſure them of the reſurrection of Chriſt, and upon that the women depart to tell the news. This is here ſaid in theſe words, Ταῦτα εἰποῦσα ἐστράφη ὀπίσω, having ſaid this ſhe turned backward, not that ſhe did ſo, before ſhe received any anſwer to her ſpeech, but the anſwer being at large ſet down in all the Goſpels, that Chriſt was riſen, that he had before told them he ſhould riſe, Lu. 24. 7. that they ſhould carry the diſciples word of it, and that they ſhould ſee him in Galilee, Mat. 28. 7. Mar. 16. 7. there was no need for John that wrote thoſe things eſpecially that were omitted by the other, to mention this. And therefore ſuppoſing that anſwer to intervene after her ſpeech to the Angel, it follows agreeably to the other Goſpels, that ſhe departed from the ſepulchre, now the ſecond time, to report his reſurrection to all his diſciples, according to the Angels appointment. And in that paſſage all the Evangeliſts concur, Lu. 24. 9. the women returned, which is all one with, ſhe turned backward here, and in Matthew, and Mark, they went out with haſte to tell the diſciples.

V. 21. So ſend I you.] The Jews have a ſaying that A man's Apoſtle is as himſelf, that is, is his vicarius or proxy. For the Jews had Apoſtles, whom they ſent on their Affairs into the countries, and are not to be looked on as bare meſſengers, but as their proxies or deputies to receive their dues, and to act for them. So Saul was an Apoſtle of the Conſiſtory to Damaſcus, Act. 9. with letters of Commiſſion from the Rulers. Thus the Twelve, after Chriſt's departure, had others, whom they ſent on ſome parts of their charge, and then they were called their Apoſtles; So Paul and Barnabas had John, Act. 13. 5. Paul had Timothy and Eraſtus, Acts 19. 22. and Mark, 2 Tim. 4. 11. Theſe when they were employed in preaching the Goſpel to them that had not yet received it, the Scripture calls Evangeliſts, that is, diſciples of the Apoſtles, ſent with commiſſion by them to publiſh the Goſpel, where the Apoſtles could not go, and therefore are by S. Paul placed next the Apoſtles, 1 Cor. 12. 28. Epheſ. 4. 11. Thus Philip the Deacon, being employed by the Twelve to Preach at Samaria, is called Philip the Evangeliſt, Act. 8. 5. 12. and c. 21. 8. ſo was Steven to the Jews, Act. 6. 9. and ſo Timothy, 2 Tim. 4. 5. Phil. 2. 19. and ſo Luke and others are called Apoſtles of the Churches, 2 Cor. 8. 18, 19, 23. and, as ſuch, δόξα Χριστοῦ, the glory of Chriſt, the word which is uſed to denote the preſence of God in any place, and ſo there intimates

b. Καθὼ πέμπω ὑμᾶς. Ἀπόστολοι. Εὐαγγελισταί. δόξα Χριστοῦ.

intimates the preſence of Chriſt in them his ſubſtitutes or proxies. Thus S. Peter preached at Rome by himſelf, at Alexandria by S. Mark, his Apoſtle; S. Paul at Rome by his Apoſtles, of whom Andronicus and Junias were the moſt eminent, Rom. 16. 7. which ſeems to be the reaſon of the difference among the Eccleſiaſtical writers about the next ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles in ſome Sees. By all this appears the meaning of this ſpeech of Chriſt, that as he was God's Apoſtle or meſſenger, and ſo his proxy or vicarius on the earth, ſo the Diſciples were now made his, μαθηταὶ diſciples, attendants of his, before, v. 20. but now by this ſending, ἀπόστολοι Apoſtles for ever after; ſent as Commiſſioners to ſupply his place, to perform thoſe offices over the world (to plant a Church) which he being now about to return to his father, could not corporally do, and ſo to ſucceed him in his office, and they again to ſend or conſtitute others in the like manner; ſee Note on Lu. 6. d.

c. Λάβετε πνεῦμα

V. 22. Receive ye the Holy Ghoſt] λάβετε πνεῦμα ἅγιον, receive the holy Ghoſt, ſignifies here not the actual giving of the holy Ghoſt (for that came not on them till Act. 2. and they are appointed to ſtay at Jeruſalem Lu. 24. 49. till they were endued with power from above, which therefore, now before his Aſcenſion they had not received, and when the Spirit came it would lead them into all truth, and as yet it appears by their queſtion, Act. 1. 6. that they were not thus led into all truth) but only the confirming to them this former promiſe, (and by the ceremony of breathing on them, to expreſs the τὸ πνεῦμα, the eternal breath and Spirit of God, ſealing it, as it were ſolemnly unto them) and preparing and fitting them for the receiving of it. So ſaith Theophylact, τὸ γὰρ [λάβετε πνεῦμα] ἀντὶ τοῦ γίνεσθε ἑτοίμως πρὸς τὸ λαβεῖν πνεῦμα, The words [receive the holy Ghoſt] ſignifie, be ye ready to receive him. And again ἐμφυσᾷ, ὡς τὴν τελείαν δωρεὰν τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος νῦν αὐτοῖς νέμων, &c. He breathed on them, not now diſtributing the perfect gift of the holy Ghoſt, for that was to be done at Penteceſt, but fitting them for the receiving of it. For though in the next words, whoſe ſigns, &c. the power of the Keys, or ſtewardſhip in the Church were actually inſtated on them, yet was not this to be exerciſed by them, till the holy Ghoſt came down upon them, as Epheſ. 4. 8. It is firſt, he gave gifts unto men, (at the deſcent of the Spirit) and then, gave ſome Apoſtles, &c. v. 11. This interpretation of this place, will direct to the full importance of thoſe words, Luke 4. 49. I ſend the promiſe of my father upon you ſo as to render them directly parallel to this. The promiſe of the Father was the holy Ghoſt, Joh. 15. 26. and the I ſend upon you all one with λάβετε receive him. And then the power from on high in the end of the verſe, clearly ſignifies that viſible miſſion of the holy Ghoſt. And all this moſt aptly delivered for the proof of the words here immediately precedent, As my father ſent me, ſo ſend I you, intimating that as at his miſſion from his Father to his office, we was anointed, or conſecrated with, or by the holy Ghoſt, Act. 10. 38. by deſcent of the holy Ghoſt on him at his Baptiſm, Lu. 3. 23. ſo the Apoſtles at their miſſion or entrance on their power ſhould be conſecrated alſo.

Ἐπαγγελία τοῦ πατρὸς

d. V. 23. Whoſoever ſins ye remit] That the power of binding and looſing in Saint Matthew, firſt promiſed c. 16. then farther deſcribed for the manner of it, c. 18. the power of the Keys, of admitting and excluding out of the Church, and ſo the power of Excommunication put into the hands of the Apoſtles firſt, and from them communicated to the ſucceeding Governours of the Church, is it which is here given by Chriſt, may appear by the words ἀφίημι remit, and κρατῶν retain, which are perfectly all one with λύω and δέω looſing and binding in S. Matthew. If there be any difference, it is only this, that δέω ſignifies to bind, κρατέω ſignifies to keep bound as well as to bind, in which reſpect κρατέω is here more proper in this place, than the other, becauſe the order is here inverted, and κρατῆτε retaining put after ἀφῆτε remitting, and ſo the word which ſignifies to keep bound, is more critically adapted to this place, than δέω to bind would have been, and yet when binding is mentioned firſt, δῆσαι (as in the other places) is as exact as κρατῆσαι. This ſlight difference being granted, the words are otherwiſe to all uſes perfectly Synonymous, Ἀφῆτε remit, and λύσητε looſe, eſpecially as applied to ſin, both ſignifie forgiving of it, the firſt referring to ſin in the notion of a debt or thraldome (to both which it is applied in the New Teſtament, to ὀφειλήματα debts, Mat. 6. 12. αἰχμαλωσία captivity, Lu. 4. 18.) the ſecond to ſin in the notion of a band, ſo Gen. 4. 12. μείζων ἡ ἀνομία, or ἁμαρτία μου τοῦ ἀφεθῆναι, my ſin is greater than can be forgiven. So Exod. 32. 21. εἰ μὲν ἀφὲς αὐτοῖς ἁμαρτίαν, O that thou wouldeſt forgive them that ſin. And ſo λύειν, Job 42. 9. ἔλυσε τὴν ἁμαρτίαν αὐτοῖς διὰ Ἰὼβ, he forgave them their ſin by Job, that is, by his mediation, where the Hebrew read נשא פנים God accepted the perſon of Job. So alſo for δέω and κρατέω, the ſame Hebrew word עצר is by the Septuagint rendred by both of them, δέω, Jer. 33. 1. κρατέω, Dan. 10. 8. and 11. 6. and ſo Act. 2. 24. κρατεῖσθαι, being holden, is ſet oppoſite to λύσας looſing, and ſo muſt ſignifie being kept bound, and ſo almoſt in all other places it ſignifies to hold faſt, or take hold of, and is ſometimes joyned with ἔδησαν (as holding faſt is preparative to binding) Mat. 14. 3. κρατήσας ἔδησε, laying hold on him bound him, and Rev. 20. 2. ἐκράτησε καὶ ἔδησε he held faſt and bound. So in S. Baſil ſpeaking of the freedom of Chriſtians in their bands, he ſaith they are κεκραμένοι ἀκράτητοι, bound but not capable of binding. And accordingly it is affirmed by Theophylact on Mat. 13. that Chriſt's promiſe of the power of binding and looſing was fulfilled in theſe words, Whoſe ſins you do remit they are remitted, &c. And therefore whatſoever is brought by * ſome to avoid the force of thoſe places in S. Matthew, and to caſt off the cenſures of the Church, (by affirming that to bind there, is to declare forbidden, and to looſe, to declare lawfull) being utterly unappliable to this place, where it is not whatſoever, as there, (which is more lyable to that miſinterpretation) but whoſe ſins, &c. (which is no way capable of it; for it cannot be imagined that Chriſt ſhould mean whoſe ſins ye ſhall declare lawful, or unlawful) by this one method of ſearching the meaning of theſe two words in this place, is proved utterly uneffectual. Of this ſee more at large in the Tract of the power of binding and looſing.

e. Μεθ' ἡμέρας ὀκτὼ

V. 26. After eight days] The phraſe μεθ' ἡμέρας ὀκτὼ, ſignifies after another week (that is, as it ſeems, on the firſt day of the week, as before, ver. 19. For ſo the Jews expreſs a week by eight days; ſo Joſephus Ant. lib. 7. cap. 9. having ſaid, ἐπ' ἡμέρας ὀκτὼ, preſently he explains it by ἀπὸ Σαββάτου ἐπὶ Σάββατον, from week to week. Thus when S. Luke ſaith, chap. 9. 28. ὡσεὶ ἡμέρας ὀκτὼ, about eight days, S. Matthew, c. 17. 1. hath, μεθ' ἡμέρας ἓξ, after ſix days, the truth being that it was that day ſeven-night, which including the firſt and the laſt day is called eight days, and excluding them, and referring only to the interval betwixt, is called ſix days. Thus do we in the diſtinction of Agues, which we call the quartan and the tertian, in each including the two days which are the extreams, and not only the interval between the fits.

5. Then Jeſus ſaith unto them, Children,] have ye any meat? They anſwered him, No.

5. Then Jeſus calling to them in a familiar manner, asked them, ſaying,

10. Jeſus ſaith unto them, Bring of the fiſh, which ye have now caught.

11. Simon Peter went up and drew the net to land, full of great fiſhes, an hundred and fifty and three, and for all there were ſo many, yet was not their net broken.

18. Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, [when thou waſt young, thou girdeſt thy ſelf, and walkedſt whither thou wouldeſt; but when thou ſhalt be old, thou ſhalt ſtretch forth thy hands, and another ſhall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldeſt not.]

20. Then Peter turning about, ſeeth [the diſciple, whom Jeſus loved, following, which alſo leaned on his breaſt at ſupper, and ſaid,] Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?

24. This is he that is the author of this Goſpel, which he preach'd in Aſia, and about two and thirty years after Chriſt's aſcenſion, by the entreaty of the Aſian Biſhops wrote and publiſh'd it. And the Chriſtians of Aſia, eſpecially of the Church of Epheſus, know ſo much of his good life, miracles and veracity, and with all of the agreeableneſs of his time of death with what is here affirmed to be foretold by Chriſt, that we cannot but appove his teſtimony, and affix our ſeal to all that is in this Goſpel affirmed by him.

Annotations

a. Επενδύτης. V. 7. Fiſher's coat] What ἐπενδύτης ſignifies, may thus be collected, 1 *Sam.*18.4. Jonathan is ſaid to put it off, and give it to David. Where, as the Hebrew hath אֶת חֻמְעִיל. pallium (ſee Matt. 5. Note 1.) the upper garment, ſo by Jonathan's giving it to David, it appears it was of ſome value, and that agrees alſo to the upper garment, which was ſuch. Now though Suidas in one place interprets it τὸ ἐσώτατον ἱμάτιον, ὃ καὶ ἀποκάμισον λέγεται, the inner garment, or ſhirt, yet it is clear by him elſewhere, that this was his notion not of ἐπενδύτης, but ἀποδύτης, for ſo he ſets down the difference between theſe two, making ἀποδύτης, to ſignifie τὸ ἐσώτερον ἱμάτιον, the inner garment, and ἐπενδύτης, τὸ ἐπάνω, the outer. So the old Greek and Latine Lexicon, Επενδύτης, Inſtita ſuperaria, garments that are put over. Nonnus expreſſes this here to be caſt over them, to cover their thighs, ——κεκαλασμένον εἰς πλύνα μηρῶν

Ἰχθυβόλοι φορέουσιν ἀθηήτῳ σκέπας αἰδῶς,

A covering to their nakedneſs. Theophylact gives a larger deſcription of it, ἐστὶ λινοῦν τι ἐνδύτιον, ὃ ὅτε φοίνικες καὶ οἱ Σύριοι ἁλιεῖς περιελίξωσιν ἑαυτοῖς——It is a linnen garment that the Phenician and Syrian fiſhermen gird about them, either when they are naked, or when they have other garments on, ſuch as the Painters put on the Apoſtles, over their other cloaths; and this was the reaſon why Peter being naked, toiled about catching of fiſh, to cover his nakedneſs, girt this garment about him. This deſcription of his inclines me to believe that it was ſimply an apron, which is worn over cloaths ſometimes to keep them clean, ſometimes is caſt over the naked body to hide the ſhame, as we read in the ſtory of Adam.

b. Ἀγαπᾷς με; V. 15. Loveſt thou me?]To love Chriſt is ſo to love, as to hold out in confeſſing of him in the time of the greateſt danger; ſee Note on Rev. 2. 4. that love that caſteth out fear, 1 Joh. 4. 18. So here it is oppoſed to renouncing,or denying of Chriſt in the time of trial. Peter had reſolved he would never thus renounce Chriſt, though all others ſhould, which was in effect that he loved Chriſt more than any other diſciple did. But having failed foully in that particular, at the time of Chriſt's arraignment,and denied him three times,when no other diſciple, ſave Judas did once, Chriſt now calls to his mind that former ſpeech and contrary performance of his, and by thrice repeating this queſtion, Peter loveſt thou me? in reſpect of his three denials, and the firſt time adding the words more than theſe? in reſpect of magnifying his love beyond all others,he now engageth him by the ſenſe of his fall,to a better diſcharge, and more conſtant expreſſion of his love in converting men to the faith of Chriſt, and labouring in the Goſpel, and to raiſe him up with ſome comfort after ſo ſharp an admonition,he foretells him, that now indeed he ſhould ſuffer death for the teſtimony of his Truth.

c. ἕως ἔρχομαι V. 22. Till I come] What is oft meant in the Goſpels by the coming of Chriſt (viz. that famous execution upon the Jews) hath been often mention'd, (ſee Note on Matth. 16. o. & 24. b.) This John did ſurvive Peter, of whom Chriſt propheſies here, ver. 18. being put to death in Nero's time, but John continuing not only till Titus's time, but through Domitian's and Cocceius Nerva's to Trajan's reign, above an hundred years after Chriſt's birth, and ſo thirty years after this coming of Chriſt was paſt. So ſaith Iren. l. 2. p. 192. A. and by what he adds of the Seniores qui non ſolùm Joannem viderint, ſed & alios Apoſtolos, the Elders which ſaw not John only, but the other Apoſtles alſo, 'tis probable, that ſome others of the Apoſtles lived to that time of Trajane alſo.

d. Οἴδαμεν ὅτι ἀληθής. V. 25. I ſuppoſe that——] That S. John wrote this Goſpel at the entreaty of the Biſhops of Aſia conſtituted by him, is affirmed by Euſebius. To which it is agreeable that they ſhould ſet their ſignal, or Teſtimony to it,to recommend it to other Churches reception, And accordingly, the atteſtation is given in the plural number, ver. 24. οἴδαμεν ὅτι ἀληθής, we know that his teſtimony is true. And then this laſt verſe, though it may be a concluſion of S. John's,(the former atteſtation being included as in a parentheſis) yet may it alſo well be a part of that atteſtation, cauſed by the conſideration of the fabrick of this Goſpel, on purpoſe deſigned not to ſet down all the Paſſages of Chriſt's ſtory, but ſome eminent ones,paſs'd by the other Evangeliſts:The reaſon of which is here rendred, becauſe it would be too long to ſet down all; One only objection there is againſt the Biſhops of Aſia being Authors of this laſt verſe, becauſe the word οἶμαι, I ſuppoſe, is here in the Singular number; but that is anſwered by obſerving that that word is a form uſual in hyperboles, which as it keeps this, and the like ſpeeches from being falſe, as they would be, were they by way of poſitive affirmation, ſo is it uſed indifferently, whether it be one, or more that ſpeak it. οἶμαι:

The Acts of the Holy Apoſtles.

Περὶ τῶν Ἀποστόλων. THat which is uſeful to be premiſed concerning this book of the Acts of the Apoſtles, may be reduced to theſe few Heads: a.

1. That Saint Luke the Phyſitian, which wrote the Goſpel from the advertiſements, which he had received from the followers and diſciples of Chriſt which were preſent and eye-witneſſes of the relations, wrote this hiſtory, partly from other mens, partly from his own knowledge, being a companion of S. Paul's travels, for ſome time.

2. That this ſtory is confined to the paſſages of two (not enlarged to the travels of all the) Apoſtles, viz. of S. Peter and S. Paul, and ſo doth no way pretend to give us any full relation of the plantation of Chriſtianity in all parts, (whither all the reſt of the Apoſtles muſt be preſumed to have gone out, as to their ſeveral μερίδες, or κλήροι, or τόποι, c. 1. 25. their lots, or places, or provinces,) but only affords us an eſſay, or taſte, firſt of what was done in Judæa and Samaria among the Jews remaining there, and in other Cities of Syria, Aſia, Macedonia, &c. even to Rome, among the Jews in their diſperſions; and ſecondly of the revealing the Goſpel to the Gentiles, firſt to ſome ſingle families, as that of Cornelius; and, after the Jews had given evidences of their obſtinate reſolutions of oppoſing them (upon that account eſpecially, that they preach'd to the Gentiles) then to whole cities and regions, profeſs'dly departing to the Gentiles, as thoſe among whom they were aſſured of better ſucceſſes than they had found among the Jews. According to which pattern it is reaſonable to believe (what we learn not from holy Scriptures more particularly, but from other ſtories) that the reſt of the Apoſtles proceeded and acted in their ſeveral journeyings, and ſo likewiſe other Apoſtolical perſons imployed by the Primary Apoſtles, whither they were not at leaſure to go themſelves.

themſelves. All which, as it concludes the uſefulneſs, and neceſſity of other Hiſtories to give us a perfect knowledge of thoſe firſt Apoſtolical times, ſo it is far from prejudging the authority and credit of thoſe other Records and relations, which having no ſacred character upon them, are yet written by thoſe whom we have no reaſon to ſuſpect as deceivers, though we acknowledge them fallible.

3. That of S. Peter's actions or travels, the relations here given us are very few, not to be compared with the many other, which are not mentioned: And they proceed no farther than to his deliverance from Herod's impriſonment, and the death of that perſecutor, which happen'd in the year of Chriſt 44. After which he is known to have lived four and twenty years, and certainly was not an unprofitable ſteward of God's talent entruſted to him all that time.

4. That the Paſſages of S. Paul's travels are alſo but ſummarily and ſhortly ſet down, ſave only for ſome part of that ſmall ſpace, wherein S. Luke, the writer of this ſtory, was preſent with him; and accordingly as from the converſion of S. Paul, Anno Ch. 34. there is very little ſaid of him, till his coming to Iconium, which was twelve years after, to the ſtory proceeds no farther than his firſt coming to Rome, An. Ch. 58. After which he lived ten years, and having preached the Goſpel in Spain and other parts of the Weſt, at laſt came to Rome again, and ſuffered martyrdom there, after Ceſtius's ſiege of Jeruſalem, and the Chriſtians departure to Pella, which conſequently both he and S. Peter lived to ſee, and died both of them (before the taking of it by Titus) An. Ch. 68.

20. To him therefore belongeth that, which Pſal. 69. 25. and Pſal. 109. 8. was ſaid, not by way of execration, but by way of prediction, that as he ſhall come to a deſperate miſerable end, ſo that office of power and authority, which Chriſt hath deſigned to be given him with the reſt of the twelve (which was, firſt to plant, and then to overſee, and govern the Church, as a Biſhop of it) ſhall be beſtowed on another man.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Βαπτίζεσθαι ἁγίῳ πνεύματι

V. 5. Baptized with the holy Ghoſt.] What is meant by this phraſe βαπτισθήσεσθε ἐν ἁγίῳ πνεύματι, ye ſhall be baptized with the holy Ghoſt, in this place, is determined by the circumſtance of the time, then future, and yet not many days after Chriſt's ſpeaking of it; And it is clearly meant of the holy Ghoſt's viſible deſcending upon the diſciples, c. 2. 2. by which he ſhould do two things eſpecially, 1. He ſhould give them teſtimony of the truth of all that Chriſt had ſaid unto them, John 15. 26. as by his deſcending on Chriſt at his Baptiſm he teſtified (and thereby God the Father himſelf) that Chriſt was the beloved Son of God, in whom he was well pleaſed, i. e. who declared nothing, but the truth and good pleaſure of God to them. 2ly. He ſhould teſtifie to others, that whatſoever they ſhould teach was alſo the will of God, and ſo authorize them for the ſolemn teſtifying of Chriſt's reſurrection, &c. give them power, and commiſſion, and graces to diſcharge their whole miniſtry, as witneſſes now deſigned and pointed out by him to declare and teſtifie to all Iſrael what Chriſt had done and ſaid in their preſence, v. 8. and that he was riſen from the dead, v. 22. This may the more appear by taking notice of the oppoſition here ſet between John's baptizing with water, and the baptizing of the Apoſtles with the Spirit, here ſpoken of. To baptize is to waſh and purifie, belonging to all the kinds of purifications among the Jews, (ſee Note on Mark 7. c.) and from thence more eſpecially to the receiving of Proſelytes, admitting Diſciples: This John did, after the manner of the Jews, by water only, or by the ceremony of immerſion in water, which among them was the way of ſanctifying any thing, (i.e. fitting or ſetting apart for holy uſes) and therefore the Prieſt's waſhings of himſelf, before his officiating, are called in the Talmud, קרושין (Joma c. 3. §. 3.) ſanctifications. Beſide this, John did nothing elſe to his diſciples, or thoſe that came in to him upon his preaching; But Chriſt's diſciples, that were to be conſecrated to an office, in a more eminent manner than John's, being to have the whole power of diſſeminating the Goſpel, and governing the Church of Chriſt after him, were not only to be received in, as proſelytes, with that ceremony of waſhing, but God from heaven was viſibly to inſtate this power upon them, and withal to teſtifie the truth of that doctrine, which they were to preach; And this was to be done by the holy Ghoſt's deſcending in a viſible manner, i. e. revealing himſelf gloriouſly by the appearance of Angels (whoſe appearance ſignifies God's peculiar preſence.) And thus we ſee it fulfilled, Acts 2. 2, &c. And what befel the Apoſtles there, as the firſt fruits of the Church of the Jews, converted to Chriſtianity, the ſame was, in the effects of it, vouchſafed by God to Cornelius, and his family, as the firſt fruits of the Gentile converts, Acts 10. 44. which, ſaith S. Peter, put him in mind of this ſpeech of Chriſt's, that John baptized with water, but ye ſhall be baptized with the holy Ghoſt, c. 11. 16. i. e. was a demonſtration to him, that God had accepted theſe Gentiles, and ſo that they were fit to be baptized, Acts 10. 47. By this will appear the meaning of thoſe places in the Goſpels, Mat. 3. 11. I baptize you, i. e. John baptizeth you with, or by water (that was the ceremony of his receiving men to repentance, or abſolution, and pardon of ſin upon repentance, and that was all

all that John did, but he that comes after me, he ſhall baptize you with the holy Ghoſt, and with fire, i. e. Chriſt ſhall ſend the Holy Ghoſt, in a glorious appearance, in flames of fire, to come down viſibly upon you, and ſo to aſſure you of the truth of the doctrine which I teach you, or elſe (as fire was uſed for conſecration, fire upon the altar, to devour the ſacrifice, and that fire firſt coming down from God to do it, Lev. 9.24. and fire from the altar, a coal from thence, to touch Iſaiahs lips, and ſet him apart for his prophetick office) to ſeparate, and conſecrate you for your Apoſtleſhip, and after that, upon all unreformed impenitents, he ſhall come with fearful judgments; ſee Mat. 3. 11. Acts 2.17,19. &c. So 'tis alſo, Luke 3.16. mentioning both the holy Ghoſt, and the fire too, tho' Mark 1.8. and John 1.33. mention not the fire, but only the holy Ghoſt. Beſides theſe two ſpecial uſes of the holy Ghoſt deſcending on them, one common conſtant uſe there was alſo, which belonged to all Chriſtians, not only Apoſtles, (as appears by John 7.39. where Chriſt mentions the Spirit, which not only the Apoſtles, but believers in common, i.e. all Chriſtians ſhould receive after his Aſcenſion) the giving them ſtrength to perform what God now required of them, and therefore all that came into the Chriſtian Church, as proſelytes of Chriſt, (not only thoſe that were ſet apart for the miniſtry) are ſaid to be born anew, i. e. received as Chriſtian proſelytes, and baptized with water, and the holy Ghoſt, John 3.5. not only made partakers of the ceremony of John's Baptiſm, water, which ſignifies purging from ſin, but, over and above that, made partakers of the holy Ghoſt, being received into the Chriſtian Church by thoſe, on whom the holy Ghoſt came down, Acts 2. (and that not only for themſelves, to confirm the truth of Chriſts preaching, and to give them their commiſſion, but alſo) to reſt upon them, as the founders of the Chriſtian Church, ſo that they might communicate the benefit, and influences of it to others, to the end of the world, ſo far as was uſeful to the condition of every one; and that is to fit every one, and enable him to diſcharge that calling, whereunto he is admitted; as if he be admitted barely into the Church, to be a Chriſtian, then beſide water, wherein he is baptized, after the manner of all other Proſelytes, he hath alſo from God, by the Apoſtles bleſſing of him, the holy Ghoſt beſtowed on him, i.e. thoſe benefits of it, which belongs and are neceſſary for every Chriſtian, viz. pardon of ſin, and grace to lead a new life; and this ſtyled being born anew of water, and of the holy Ghoſt, John 3.5. and is intimated to be an effect or conſequent of Chriſts Aſcenſion, *v.*13.14. (after which it was that the holy Ghoſt came down upon the Apoſtles here) and to be a ſuperior thing (and that which more effectually tended to the ſalvation of believers, that is, Chriſtians, John 3. 15.) then either the Jewiſh or John's Baptiſm, which, being the baptiſm of water alone, was not able to beſtow this, and therefore it is, that they that had been baptized only with John's Baptiſm, Acts 19. were by the Apoſtles, when they knew it, baptized farther in the name of the Lord Jeſus (ſee c.2. note d.) In like manner, they that were admitted into the Church, to any ſpecial function, as to that of Biſhops, (which conſiſted in the exerciſe of Cenſures, and in the power of ordaining others) or *c.*6. to that of Deacons, (& of Presbyters afterwards) who had ſome parts of ſacred functions communicated to them, that of preaching the Goſpel, Acts 8. 12. and of baptizing, were thus admitted alſo by the Apoſtles (and after them by the Biſhops their ſucceſſors) by laying their hands on them, and bleſſing, or conſecrating them, that is, giving them the holy Ghoſt alſo, that is, that external commiſſion, which here they had, by the holy Ghoſt's deſcent upon them, and alſo (for ſome time) extraordinary gifts of tongues, and miracles, and prophecying, uſeful for the diſcharge of thoſe functions.

Jos. 6.6.

b. V.7. The ſeaſons] The word καιρὸς, which ſometimes ſignifies an opportunity, or ſeaſonable time, ſometimes alſo ſignifies a moment, or leaſt particle of time. Thus 'tis wont to be defined, καιρός ἐστιν, ἐν ᾧ οὐκ ἔστι χρόνος, It is that wherein there is no time; and ſo it ſeems to ſignify here, where Gods reſerving the χρόνους καὶ καιρὰς, times and moments, in his own hands, ſo that they ſhall not be known by them, ſeems parallel to the day and hour knoweth no man, the day, and the times noting a larger proportion of time, and the hour, and the moment a leſſer, and accordingly the Vulgar reads vel momenta, or moments.

c. V.9. A cloud] The appearance of Angels is ordinarily deſcribed by a cloud, as hath been formerly ſaid; and ſo here the clouds receiving him, ſignifies the Angels receiving him. Thus when Exod. 25. 22. it is ſaid of the covering of the ark, There will I meet thee, and commune with thee from betwixt the two Cherubims, &c. It is *Lev.*16.2. I will appear in the cloud upon that propitiatory, or covering of the ark. Νεφέλη

d. V. 13. An upper room] It is ſaid by the writer of this Book, Luke 24.53. that the Apoſtles after Chriſts aſſumption returned to Jeruſalem, and were διαπαντὸς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, continually in the Temple, praiſing and bleſſing God (which clearly ſignifies that the Temple at Jeruſalem was the place (not of their continual abode, but) of their conſtant daily performance of their devotions; ſee Luke 2. 37.) and ſo he concludes that Goſpel. And here where he begins another book, and in that, the ſtory after the Aſcenſion of Chriſt, and ſo repeats that again, v. 9. &c he adds, *v.*12. as he had ſaid in the Goſpel, that they returned to Jeruſalem; and when they came thither, ἀνέβησαν εἰς τὸ ὑπερῷον, they went up into an upper room, and there, that is, in that upper room, ſaith he (the ſame S. Luke that before had ſaid they were continually, or at the times of devotion, conſtantly in the Temple) all the eleven diſciples, ἦσαν προσκαρτεροῦντες ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ καὶ τῇ δεήσει, continued unanimouſly in prayer and ſupplication, that is, did there daily perform their devotions, and religious offices, manifeſtly referring to the ὑπερῷον, or upper room, where they daily did ſo; and ſo c. 2. 1. where they are ſaid to be all unanimouſly ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ together, (a phraſe to denote their ſacred aſſemblies, or ἐπισυναγωγαὶ) this ſure denotes the ὑπερῶον, the upper room, as the conſtant place of their daily devotions. From the comparing of theſe two places, and the phraſes uſed in the ſeveral places, ἦσαν διατελοῦντες, they were continually, and ἦσαν διατελοῦντες, they were continuing, being perfectly equivalent, ſome difficulty would ariſe, how the Temple ſhould by the ſame hiſtorian be ſet down as the daily conſtant place of their devotions, in one place, and the upper room in the ſame manner and phraſe, to be it, in the other, were not this way of reconciling that difficulty near at hand (taken notice of by ſome late Criticks, but not favoured by others) viz. that the Temple had many chambers, and upper rooms in its circuit (which ſerved not only for the uſes of the Prieſts, & for the keeping of the holy things, but ſtood open ſome of them for religious meetings alſo.) So 1 Chron. 28. 11. in the pattern that David gave to Solomon, we have expreſs mention of the Porch, and the houſes thereof, & of the treaſures thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, &c. So again in Solomons building, 1 Kings 6. 5,6. chambers round about, of the 1ſt, 2d, and 3d ſtory, and 2 *Chron.*3.9. he overlaid the upper chambers with gold, and ſo, I ſuppoſe, *Jer.*26.10. the chamber of Gemariah in the higher court, might be one of theſe. And ſo in the ſecond Temple there will be little reaſon to doubt, the ſtructure being the ſame, tho' not ſo ſumptuous, as the former, and the names of the ſeveral parts continuing in the New Teſtament, which had belonged to the firſt building, as Solomons porch, &c. And ſo often in the Talmud, Joma, c. 1. the chief prieſt ſeven days before the day of expiation is fetch'd from his own houſe, ללשכה מרוררין to the chamber of the paredrin, and ſo in the Gemara, he that offered the red Cow, was brought ללשכת בית האבן to the chamber of the houſe of the ſtone, and many the like, as to the chamber of the houſe Abtines, and that peculiarly called עלוה בית אבטינס the high, or upper room of the houſe Abtines, and ſo in like manner, the chamber where the Prieſt waſh'd himſelf, is deſcribed to be over the הפרוה, and ſo to be an upper room. And ſo theſe upper rooms being parts of the Temple, whoſoever were aſſembled in any of them (as it is ſaid the Apoſtles were) are truly ſaid to be in the Temple. If this be granted, as it will be hard to give any other tolerable ſenſe of it, then, in all probability, the κατ' οἶκον, c. 2. 46. the houſe where they break bread, or received the Sacrament, joined with their continuing daily with one accord in the Temple, will be this place alſo, where they did that more privately, which could not, we may preſume, be done in the Temple in any more publick place. For that the phraſe κατ' οἶκον ſignifies no more then ἐν οἴκῳ, in the houſe, may appear by comparing Rom. 16. 4. with 1 Cor. 16. 19. where the Church in their houſe in one place, is κατ' οἶκον αὐτῶν in the other; ſee note on 1 Cor. 16. c. And for the word Houſe that that is uſed for the Temple, or any part of it, even for theſe upper rooms which we now ſpeak of, is clear both by comparing the Goſpels, Mat. 23. 35. with Luke 11. 51. (where that which is οἶκος houſe in one, is ναὸς Temple in the other) and alſo by the Talmud, where the Temple it ſelf is frequently call'd בית houſe, and ſo alſo the ſeveral rooms or chambers in it, בית האבן before mentioned, the houſe of the ſtone, בית חסבולה, the houſe of waſhing, Joma, c. 3. ſect. 2. (and that called קדש an holy place, in oppoſition to common or prophane) על בית הפרוה over the houſe of Happarvah; which houſe of Happarvah, being explained what it is, in Middoth, c. 5. (to wit, the place where the skins of the ſacrifices were ſalted) is there called שכת הפרוה Conclave Happarvæ, the chamber of Happarvah, Houſe, and Chamber, being there uſed in the ſame notion, and noting the ſeveral chambers in the Temple to be called οἶκοι houſes, and thoſe holy places, fit for ſacred uſes, and ſo here uſed by the Chriſtians for their meetings, to eat the Lords ſupper together, which they could not hope to be permitted to do more openly in the Temple, the Chriſtian religion being not much favoured by the Jews. Of theſe rooms or houſes in the Temple we find mention in Ephanius de ponder. c. 14. where of Adrian he ſaith, that viſiting Jeruſalem, he found the Temple demoliſhed πλὴν ὀλίγων οἰκημάτων, except a few houſes, ἢ τῆς τῶν Θεοῦ ἐκκλησίας μικρᾶς ὄντος, &c. and the little Church of God, where the diſciples returning from the mount Olivet went up to the upper room, ἐκεῖ γὰρ ᾠκοδόμητο, τέθειντο ἐν τῷ μέρει Σιὼν, &c. for there it was built, that is, in part of mount Sion, which clearly affirms this upper room to have been a part of Sion, and ſo of the Temple, as was ſaid, and afterwards to have been by the Chriſtians built into a Church. And accordingly Theophylact and Oecumenius, οἶκον τὸ ἱερὸν νῦν λέγει, ἐν ᾧ καὶ ἦσαν, by the houſe he means the Temple, for in that they did eat.

V. 15. Names] That the word ὄνομα name is here taken for a perſon, not literally a name, will eaſily appear by the like uſe of שם in the Hebrew, for tho' that primarily ſignify a name, yet 'tis ordinarily uſed in the Hebrew writers in this other ſenſe for perſon, and with an Emphatical adjunct (השם the name) it is commonly ſet to ſignify God, who is κατ' ἐξοχὴν, ὁ ὤν, he that is; and from thence, in Ignatius's Epiſtle to the Epheſians, τὸ ὄνομα βαστάσαι, to carry the name is to carry God, that is, Chriſt about with him (the importance of that Martyrs title Θεοφόρος) and is therefore rendred by the vulgar tranſlator, Nomen Chriſti circumportare, to bear about the name of Chriſt. And ſo St. Cyprian uſes the word nomen, name. So St. Chryſoſtom, Hom. 1. in Rom. † οὐκ ἐπαρκοῦσιν εἰκοσὶν ὀνόμασιν, not ſufficient for twenty names, that is, for an aſſembly of ſo many perſons.

Ib. Together] Ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ is the Greek expreſſion in the Old Teſtament to interpret the Hebrew word, יחד together, ſo Pſ. 2. 2. יתיסדו יחד, Συνήχθησαν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, they aſſembled together, as in a councel, all about the ſame buſineſs, and deſign, all as one man, and ſo here, and ch. 2, 1. and 1 Cor. 11. 20. the phraſe ſignifies, and notes theſe aſſemblies for the ſervice of God, to be deſigned for the uniting of the prayers and ſervice of all into one, every action being to be accounted not the action of private men, but of the whole body, and therefore 1 Cor. 11. the eating there ἴδιον δεῖπνον v. 21. a man's own meal, a man's eating that there which himſelf had brought, is ſet contrary to the κυριακὸν δεῖπνον, the Lords ſupper, or the Church meal, which is eaten Συνερχομένων ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, when they are come together to one, or the ſame, that is, all to be as one, not as ſeveral.

V. 18. Falling headlong] That Judas's death was cauſed by a ſuffocation of grief was ſhewed, Note on Mat. 27. a. The death is here deſcribed by πρηνὴς γενόμενος, and that doth not neceſſarily import any more than falling forward on the face, (contrary to ſupinus falling, or lying on the back) as it is on the place in Matthew, expounded from the Grammarians; but it is poſſible alſo it may denote the throwing himſelf down a precipice, which among humane authors is frequently mentioned of thoſe, who thro' exceſs of melancholy, or oppreſſion of conſcience, eſpecially upon guilt of blood, are weary of their lives, and have this ready way to deliver themſelves from that burthen. 'Twere impertinent to multiply teſtimonies to that purpoſe; the authors of the Ἰατρικὰ mention it of other creatures, that on occaſion of great ſadneſs have done the like. But whether this were the manner of his death or no, the context gives us no means to define.

Ib. Burſt aſunder] The word ἐλάκησε is the Greek by which the old Gloſſary renders diſſiluit, not as that ſignifies to leap down, but to break aſunder, and μέσος added to it, ſignifies no more then in Latin medius diſcerpitur or diſrumpitur, or ἐχύθη μέσον, Luke 23. 45. that is, that he was broken in pieces, a natural conſequent of which it is, which here follows, that his bowels guſhed out at the wound, or rupture.

V. 20. Biſhoprick] the word ἐπισκοπὴ and ἐπίσκοπος, is frequently uſed in the Old and New Teſtament. In the Old Teſtament there be two Hebrew words rendred by the Greek ἐπίσκοπος 1. אדר which as it is oft rendred θεὸς, κύριος, ἄγγελος, God, Lord, Angel, ſo once ἐπίσκοπος. So among prophane authors 'tis all one with ἄρχων ruler, (as in * Ariſtides, where after the mention of Kings are added οἱ κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν ἐπίσκοποι ἐκπεμπόμενοι, they that come annually, as Epiſcopi, overſeers, of which he had ſaid before, ἡγεμόνες δ' ἡμῖν ἐκ νόμου πεμπόμενοι κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν ἔτος, there come rulers by law every year, by which it appears that ἡγεμόνες and ἐπίσκοποι, rulers and Biſhops are all one, and ſo Juſtinian calls thoſe which Ariſtides ſpeaks of, ἄρχοντας ἐπαρχιῶν and μητροπόλεων, the rulers of provinces and Metropoles, and accordingly Heſychius explains ἐπίσκοπον by βασιλέα King or Governour.) The ſecond Hebrew word which is rendred by it, is נפקד and other the Derivatives of פקד viſitavit, פקוד, פקוד, all which note a Prefect or Governour, or any impowred by commiſſion to exerciſe any authority entruſted to him. And as 'tis ſometimes rendred ἐπίσκοπος, ſo elſewhere ἐπιστάτης, ὑπάρχης, ἄρχων, ταμίας, κωμάρχης, all words of government, of prefecture, and once θυρωρὸς, door-keeper, to whom the keys of the houſe of the Lord were committed, Ezek. 44. 2. when 'tis rendred ἐπίσκοπος, 'tis taken in five ſenſes, 1. in an army ἐπίσκοπος ἐν δυνάμεως, Num. 31. 14. Judg. 9. 28. 2 Kings 11. 15. the captain of the hoſt, 2dly, among workmen, the principal that were ſet over all others in the building of the Temple, 2 Chron. 34. 12, 17. 3dly, in the city, the ruler or prince, Neh. 11. 9, 14. and eſpecially of the Prieſts, v. 10. and of the Levites, v. 15. 4thly, in the miniſtry of the Temple, Eleazar the ſon of Aharon (who Num. 3. 32. is ἀρχόντων τῶν ἀρχόντων τῶν Λευιτῶν ἄρχων, the ruler of the rulers of the Levites) Numb. 4. 16. is called ἐπίσκοπος Ἐλεάζαρ, Biſhop Eleazar. 5thly, In the houſe of the Lord, over which he that was ſet is ἐπίσκοπος ἐπὶ τοῦ οἴκου κυρίου, 2 Kings 11. 18. The Biſhop over the houſe of the Lord. By all which it appears, that agreeable to the notion of the word in the Old Teſtament, ἐπισκοπὴ here (and ἐπίσκοπος elſewhere) in in the New, denotes prefecture, or ruling power in the Church, viz. that Apoſtolick power, which at the coming of the H. Ghoſt was to be inſtated upon him that ſhould now be choſen into Judas's place, to be an Apoſtle. See note on Phil. 1. b.

k. Ὁ τόπος ὁ ἴδιος

V. 25. His own place] What is here meant by ὁ τόπος ὁ ἴδιος, may be beſt collected from the κλῆρος διακονίας καὶ Ἀποστολῆς, lot, or portion of miniſtry and Apoſtleſhip that is, of Apoſtolical miniſtry, in the beginning of the verſe, the taking of which is preparative here, to his going to this. That certainly ſignifies μέρος, λαχμὸν, μερίδα. in Phavorinus, a part or portion that falls to any, particularly a province that belongs to any Governor, and (if that be a Biſhop or Governor of the Church, then) ſuch a Province (ſtyled v. 20. out of the Pſalmiſt, ἐπισκοπὴ, Biſhoprick) which he that ſucceeds in, is ſaid λαβεῖν to take there, as here λαβεῖν κλῆρον to take the portion of miniſtry, &c. And then that which is thus become any mans aſſigned province, cannot more fitly be expreſſed than by ἴδιος τόπος, the place, or province, proper to that man, aſſigned to him. This therefore regularly belonging to Judas, if he had not by his treaſon againſt his maſter, forfeited it, (which is here ſaid, as in a parentheſis, being incloſed with two comma's. ἐξ ἧς παρέδη Ἰούδας) Matthias now ſucceeds him in it, takes his κλῆρον lot or portion, and ſo is now to go to this, as his own place, or province, which had elſe belonged to another. Many prejudices there are againſt underſtanding this phraſe of Hell, as ſome have underſtood it; as the place whither Judas was to go. For 1. That was not his ἴδιος τόπος, the proper place, or aſſignation of Judas, but common to all other damned ſpirits. 2. 'Twas not St. Luke's office to paſs ſentence on Judas, any farther, then by ſetting down the hainouſneſs of his crime, which he had done, v. 16, 17, 18, 19. and was not to proceed to judge, or affirm ought of Gods ſecrets, ſuch is his going into hell. And 'tis St. Chryſoſtom's obſervation on v. 16. Ἰδὲ τὸ φιλόσοφον τῆς ἀνδρὸς, πῶς οὐκ ὑβρίζει, οὐδὲ ἐπάλληλα, behold the wiſdom of St. Luke, how he doth not reproach or inſult on Judas; but ſimply ſets down the matter of fact, without any deſcant on it, and what he adds, περὶ τῆς παρούσης δίκης διαλέγεται, he diſcourſes of the preſent vengeance, belongs evidently to what befel him in this preſent world, and ſo excludes all inlarging to his future damnation. 3. There is no propriety in ſaying of the one, that he ſinned to go to hell, but of the other 'tis moſt proper to ſay, that he was elected to ſuch a κλῆρος or portion, to go, or that he might go, to it. To this accords Theophylact, ἴδιον τόπον—— He calls that his own place which Matthias ſhould obtain—— So Oecumenius, ἢ ὅτι τῷ Ἰούδᾳ ἐξαπωσμένῳ ὅτος ἴδιον σχοίη τὸν ἐκείνου λαμβάνων ἐπισκοπὴν, It may be interpreted of Matthias, that Judas being fallen, he ſhould have his place, for his own, receiving his biſhoprick, making place and Biſhoprick ſynonim. So Didymus; the word τόπος among many things ſignifies, ſaith he, an order, as the the place of a Biſhop or an Elder. So the ordinary Gloſs, ut abiret in locum ſuum, that is, ſortem Apoſtolicam, his own place, that is, the Apoſtolical lot, making κλῆρος and τόπος all one, juſt as I have interpreted it.

26. Was numbred] The word συγκατεψηφίσθη is acknowledged to come from ψῆφος calculus, a ſtone, or the like, of which there were two uſes, one in choices, or judgments, wherein they gave their votes by this means, Rev. 2. 17. the other in accounting or numbring. Hence ψῆφος is expreſſed in Heſychius by λόγος, as that ſignifies counting, and by κρίσις judgment. Now for the uſe of it in this place, firſt it is evident that Matthias being here choſen by lot, was not choſen by the ſuffrages or votes of men; 2*ly* that καταψηφίζω proportionably to ψῆφος, ſignifying originally two things, numbring as well as chooſing, it may moſt probably in this place ſignify being numbred, and ſo συγκατεψηφίσθη μετὰ τῶν ἕνδεκα, he was numbred together with the eleven Apoſtles, will be all one with καταριθμημένος ἦν σὺν ἡμῖν, he was numbred with us, v. 17. (or with σὺν ἡμῖν γενέσθαι, to be with us, v. 22.) and that is explained by ἔλαχε κλῆρον, he obtained his portion of this miniſtry, that is, office Apoſtolical; or if it ſhould poſſibly refer to the notion of election, it muſt then denote Gods choice of him, v. 24. by the diſpoſing of the lot, & not any votes, or ſuffrages of others, which had nothing to do in this matter: for tho' Joſeph and Matthias were by the Eleven nominated, or choſen, to prepare for the lot, that Matthias was pitch'd on and added to the Eleven, it was meerly the deciſion of the lot, and ſo the diſpoſition of the Lord. So vain is the pretenſion of thoſe that will have this rendred, Communibus calculis annumerabatur, he was by common votes, or ſuffrages, added to that number, and then make their own deductions from thence.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

* was come 1. AND when the day of Pentecoſt * was a fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.]

1. On the approach of the Lords day following the ſabbath, on which the Jewiſh Pentecoſt was celebrated, they were (all the Apoſtles together) aſſembled at the ſervice of God, in their accuſtomed place. See c. 1. 13. & note c.

† violent wind brought or coming, φερομένης πνοῆς βιαίας. 2. And ſuddenly there came a ſound from heaven, as of a † ruſhing mighty wind, and it filled all the houſe where they were ſitting.]

2. And whilſt they were ſo imployed, ſuddenly they heard a great noiſe come down from heaven, like that of a mighty boiſterous wind (to note the efficacy of this Spirit of God now deſcending) and it came into the upper room where they were aſſembled, and filled all the room.

3. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it ſat upon each of them.]

3. And there was an appearance of ſomewhat, like flaming fire, lighting on every one of them, which divided aſunder, and ſo became the reſemblance of tongues, with that part of them which was next their heads, divided, or cloven, (ſee note on Mat. 3. k.)

* to ſpeak, ἀποφθέγγεσθαι 4. And they were all filled with the holy Ghoſt, and began to ſpeak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them * utterance.]

4. And they were endued every one with gifts of the holy Ghoſt, that of ſpeaking with tongues, which they never had learnt, and other miraculous powers, this coming of the holy Ghoſt beſtowed on them.

† were abiding, κατοικοῦντες 5. And there † were [dwelling at Jeruſalem, Jews, devout men out of every nation under heaven.]

5. Abiding at Jeruſalem many Jews that came up to all quarters of the world to worſhip the true God at Jeruſalem, (ſee note on Mat. 23. e. and John 12. a.)

6. Now when this was noiſed abroad, the multitude came together, [and were confounded, becauſe that every man heard them ſpeak in his own language.]

6. And were aſtoniſhed, becauſe they being of ſeveral nations, every of them heard the Apoſtles ſpeak the language of his nation.

7. And they were all amazed, and marvelled, ſaying one to another, Behold, are not all theſe which ſpeak [Galileans.]

7. Men born in Galilee, and that have lived there all their times?

8. And how hear we every man in our own tongue wherein we were born?]

8. And how doth every one of us hear them ſpeak every of thoſe languages which are native to us?

9. Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Meſopotamia, and in Judea, and Cappadocia, in Pontus and Aſia.

10. Phrygia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Lybia about Cyrene, and ſtrangers of Rome, * Jews and Proſelytes,

11. Cretes and Arabians, we do hear them [ſpeak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.]

11. Preaching the doctrine of Chriſt, and the great things which God hath wrought by him and on him, every of us in our own language.

12. And they were all amazed and were in doubt, ſaying one to another [† What meaneth this?]

12. This certainly abodes ſome great matter.

13. Others mocking ſaid, Theſe men are [full of * new wine.]

13. Drunk, and that infuſes this faculty into them.

14. But Peter ſtanding up with the eleven, lift up his voice and ſaid unto them, Ye men of Judea, and all ye † that dwell at Jeruſalem, [be this known unto you, and hearken to my words,]

14. I make it known, or proclaim it to you,

15. For theſe men are not drunken as ye ſuppoſe, ſeeing it is but the third hour of the day.]

15. That theſe men are not drunk, as ye ſay, for it is but nine in the morning, the time of morning prayers, to which the Jews generally came faſting, (ſee note on Mat. 12. a.)

16. But this is that which is ſpoken by the prophet Joel,]

16. But the truth is, that which is now done is the completion of a famous prophecy, Joel 2. 28.

17. And it ſhall come to paſs in the b laſt days (ſaith God) I will pour out of my Spirit upon all fleſh: and your ſons and your daughters ſhall prophecy, and your young men ſhall ſee viſions, and your old men ſhall dream dreams.

18. And on my ſervants, and on my hand-maidens, I will pour out in thoſe days of my Spirit, and they ſhall prophecy.]

b. 17, 18. In the days of the Meſſias, ſaith God, there ſhall be a moſt remarkable effuſion of the Spirit of God upon men of all ranks, and qualities, enabling them which were never brought up in the ſchools of the prophets to go and preach the Goſpel of Chriſt in every City (and this was fulfilled in the deſcent of the holy Ghoſt upon the diſciples, ſending them to preach, and fitting them with the gift of prophecy, and of tongues, both as a miracle to beget faith, and as a means to ſpeak intelligibly to men of all languages.

19. And I will ſhew wonders in heaven above, and ſigns in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of ſmoak.

20. The ſun ſhall be turned into darkneſs, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come.

21. And it ſhall come to paſs that whoſoever ſhall call upon the name of the Lord * ſhall be ſaved.]

19,20,21. And after that there ſhall be many fearful ſtupendious ſights and prodigies, and many great ſlaughters in Judea, as forerunners and preſignifications of the great famous deſtruction (ſee Mat. 3. 11, 12.) which ſhall befal this people (foretold by Chriſt, Mat. 24. ſee Heb. 10. a.) for their crucifying of Chriſt, and from which the only way to reſcue any, is to repent and acknowledge Chriſt, which to gain men to, was the deſign of the coming of the Holy Ghoſt, John 10. 8.

22. Ye men of Iſrael hear theſe words, [Jeſus of Nazareth, a man † approved of God among you by miracles, wonders and ſigns, which God did by him in the midſt of you, as ye your ſelves alſo know.]

22. This Jeſus of Nazareth being demonſtrated to be ſent from God by the mighty works which by him God hath done among you, all which you know to be true, and of which ye your ſelves are witneſſes.

23. Him being delivered by the determinate counſel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and ſlain.]

23. Him, being permitted by God to fall into your hands, God withdrawing that protection, which was neceſſary to have preſerved him from them, (and this by his decree, that he ſhould lay down his life for his ſheep, in order to that great deſign of mans ſalvation, toward which he did by his fore-knowledge diſcern this the fitteſt expedient) ye apprehended and crucified moſt wickedly.

24. Whom God raiſed up, having looſed * the c pains of death: becauſe it was not poſſible that he ſhould be holden of it.]

c. 24. But God hath raiſed him again, delivering him from the power of death, not ſuffering him to continue dead, the goodneſs of god being engaged in this, not to ſuffer an innocent perſon (ſo unjuſtly and unthankfully handled by the Jews) to lye under death, and, beſides many other things, the prophecies of him neceſſarily requiring that he ſhould not.

25. For David ſpeaketh concerning him, I foreſaw the Lord always before my face, for he is on my right hand, that I ſhould not be moved.]

25. For of him ſaith David, Pſ. 16. 8. I waited and looked with all affiance and confidence on God, for he is my defender, ſo as to keep me from miſcarrying.

26. Therefore did my heart rejoyce, and my tongue was glad: moreover alſo my fleſh ſhall reſt in hope.]

26. For this, my glory, that is, my tongue (becauſe that is the member, the inſtrument of glorifying God) ſhall rejoyce, and my fleſh ſhall reſt confident.

27. Becauſe thou wilt not leave my ſoul in † hell, neither wilt thou ſuffer thine holy one to ſee corruption.]

27. For tho' I die, yet ſhalt thou not leave me ſo long dead, as that my body ſhould be putrefied, that is, thou ſhalt raiſe me from death before the third day be paſt.

28. Thou haſt made known to me the ways of life, thou ſhalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.]

28. Thou haſt cheered me, & abundantly refreſhed me with thy favour.

29. Men and brethren, let me freely ſpeak unto you of the Patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his ſepulchre is with us until this day.]

29. Let me therefore ſpeak to you freely & without any reſervedneſs (ſee note on John 7. 13.) concerning that David that thus ſpake, that he died like other men, and had a ſolemn interment, and we ſtill have his monument to ſhew, from whence he never roſe.

30. Being therefore a prophet, and knowing that God had ſworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loyns according to the fleſh, he would raiſe up Chriſt to ſit on his throne,]

30. And therefore not ſpeaking of himſelf but by way of prediction of the Meſſias, knowing that he ſhould infallibly ſpring from his Loyns, that was to be prince and ruler of his Church.

31. He ſeeing this before, ſpake of the reſurrection of Chriſt, that his ſoul was not left in hell, neither his fleſh did ſee corruption.]

31. This ſpeech of his was prophetick, referring to this reſurrection of Chriſt, whereupon 'tis ſaid, that his ſoul ſhould not continue in ſtate of ſeparation from the body, in which ſtate, though it were for a while, yet it continued not ſo long, 'till the body was corrupted, that is, not the ſpace of 72 hours, or three days.

32. This Jeſus hath God raiſed up, whereof we all are witneſſes.]

32. And accordingly hath God raiſed up Chriſt within that ſpace of time, within three days, and all we Apoſtles are eye-witneſſes of it.

33. Therefore being * by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promiſe of the Holy Ghoſt, he hath ſhed forth this which we now ſee and hear.]

33. Being therefore aſſumed to his regal ſtate, and office in heaven, and God having performed to him, (as all his other, ſo peculiarly) this promiſe made to him, of giving him power to ſend the holy Ghoſt, he hath accordingly now ſent him, and this prodigy, which ye now ſee and hear, is an effect of that, viz. the ſpeaking with tongues, which the hour before they underſtood not.

35. Until I make thy foes thy footſtool.]

34, 35. For this cannot be interpreted of David himſelf, tho' he ſpake it in his own perſon, for he never went to heaven bodily, and ſo cannot be ſaid to be exalted to Gods right hand, while his enemies are made his footſtool: but he ſpeaks of him, of whom this was to be verified, as of his Lord, The Lord, ſaith he, ſaid to my Lord, Pſ. 110. 1.

36. Therefore let all the houſe of Iſrael know aſſuredly, that God hath made that ſame Jeſus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Chriſt.]

36. This great important truth therefore I now proclaim unto you, that that Chriſt whom ye Jews have crucified, God the Father hath raiſed up, and by aſſuming him to his right hand, ſettled him there, as a head of his Church, inſtated him in the true kingly office of the Meſſias.

37. Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and ſaid unto Peter, and to the reſt of the Apoſtles, Men and brethren, what ſhall we do?]

37. Upon theſe words of Peter, they had great compunction, and as men that were willing to do any thing to reſcue themſelves from the guilt of ſo horrible a ſin, as crucifying the Meſſias, they cried out moſt paſſionately to Peter, and the reſt of the Apoſtles that were preſent, beſeeching their directions what to do in this caſe.

38. Then Peter ſaid unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jeſus Chriſt for the remiſſion of ſins, and ye ſhall receive the d gift of the holy Ghoſt.]

38. And Peter anſwered them, that there was now but one poſſible way left, & that was with true contrition, and acknowledgment of their ſin, to haſten out of this infidelity, and with a ſincere and thorough change, to come as Proſelytes to Chriſt, and enter upon Chriſtian profeſſion with a vow of never falling off from it, and ſo to receive baptiſm from the Apoſtles, that ſacrament, wherein Chriſt enabled them to beſtow, or conveigh from him, remiſſion of ſins to all true penitents, farther promiſing them that they ſhould be made partakers of the holy Ghoſt alſo, and of thoſe gifts, which by the deſcent of the Spirit were poured out on the Church, and ſome among them of thoſe miraculous powers which they now ſaw and admired in the Apoſtles (ſee c.4.31. and note on c.6. c.) d.

39. For the promiſe is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God ſhall call.]

39. For to you, ſaith he, the benefit of that promiſe appertains, if you will lay hold on it; and indeed primarily to you Jews this promiſe of the holy Ghoſt was made, on purpoſe for this, that by our preaching to you, ye might be converted, and convinced of the vileneſs of what you have done, and upon repentance, be received into mercy, and receive abſolution from us, as the deputies and proxies of Chriſt, which is gone. And as the advantage hereof belongs primarily to you, to whom our firſt addreſs was to be made; ſo in the next place, upon your rejecting it, it muſt be extended to the reſt of the world, to all the Gentiles which ſhall obey and come in to Chriſt at his call, or upon our preaching to them.

41. Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the ſame day there were added unto them about three thouſand ſouls.]

41. And all that were really affected by what he ſaid, came and renounced their former courſes, and approved the ſincerity of their change, and received baptiſm: and that day about 3000 men were converted to Chriſtianity.

43. And a general aſtoniſhment ſurprized men to ſee firſt thoſe ſtrange operations of the holy Ghoſt, v. 4. (a conſequent of which was this wonderful acceſſion of converts, v. 41.) Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Συμπληροῦσθαι

V. 1. Fully come] The word συμπληροῦσθαι here is all one with the ſimple πληροῦσθαι in other places. And that is taken in a peculiar notion, when 'tis applied to times ſignifying that ſuch a time is come. So Gen. 25. 24. when her days to be delivered were fulfilled, that is, when her time of child-birth was come. For which the Evangeliſt reads ἐπλήσθη ὁ χρόνος τοῦ τεκεῖν αὐτήν, The time of her bringing forth was fulfilled, Luke 1. 57. So Gen. 29. 21. my days are fulfilled, that is, the time agreed upon for my taking her to marriage is now come. So Mar. 11. 15. πεπλήρωται ὁ καιρός, the time is fulfilled, that is, now is that due ſeaſon come, the critical point, wherein, if they repent not, they ſhall periſh. So Luk. 21. 24. Jeruſalem ſhall be trodden down by the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles πληρωθῶσι be fulfilled, that is, till the peculiar ſeaſon concerning the Gentiles (ſee the place) do come. And this this very συμπληροῦσθαι is ſo uſed, Luke 9. 51. ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς ἀναλήμψεως αὐτοῦ, when the days were fulfilled, that is, were come, of his being taken up. Accordingly ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι ἡμέραν τῆς πεντηκοστῆς here, is no more then, when the day of Pentecoſt was come, or upon that day.

V. 17. Laſt days] Ἔσχαται ἡμέραι, the laſt days, do in that place of Joel literally ſignify the laſt days of the Jews immediately preceding their deſtruction, called there the great and terrible day of the Lord: and accordingly the laſt days have among the Jews proverbially ſignified the days of the Meſſias, which they call אחרית הימים the laſt days; and both theſe notions are very reconcileable. For as the coming of the Meſſias ſignifies, beſide the coming of him in the fleſh, his entring on his kingdom, and as a branch of b. Ἔσχαται ἡμέραι of that, his coming to be avenged on his crucifiers, Mat. 24. 1. ſo the laſt days here ſignify peculiarly the time beginning after the reſurrection and aſcenſion of Chriſt, as here appears by the pouring of the Spirit, and the prodigies, v. 19. before the great and terrible day of the Lord, v. 26. that is, this deſtruction of Jeruſalem. So 2 Tim. 3. 1. ἐν ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις, in the laſt days, that is, not long after the Reſurrection of Chriſt, ſhould come thoſe hard times, to wit, before the deſtruction of the Jews, and ſo in the latter times, 1 Tim. 4. 1. So Heb. 1. 2. ἐν ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις, the days of the Meſſias, and 1 Cor. 10. 11. we, that is, Chriſtians, on whom τὰ τέλη τῶν αἰώνων κατήντησεν, the end of the ages are come. So Jam. 5. 3. ſpeaking of the wealthy Jews, he ſaith, that they have treaſured up their wealth as fire, ἐν ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις, in, or againſt the laſt days, that is, againſt thoſe times of deſtruction, when their wealth ſhould but do them miſchief, mark them out for prizes and preys before other men. So 1 Pet. 1. 5. ἐν καιρῷ ἐσχάτῳ, in the laſt time, noting, no queſtion, that time then at hand, wherein the incredulous Jews ſhould be deſtroyed, and the believers reſcued out of their perſecutions and dangers, which is there denoted by σωτηρία ἑτοίμη ἀποκαλυφθῆναι, deliverance ready to be revealed, according to the notion of σωτηρία formerly mentioned, Luke 13. 23. a. and again by ὀλίγον ἄρτι (ἐὰν δέον ἐστὶ) v. 6. after a little time yet of temptations or ſufferings. So again for the time of Chriſt in general, 1 Pet. 1. 20. ἐπ' ἐσχάτων τῶν χρόνων, and 2 Pet. 3. 3. and Jude 18. ἐν ἐσχάτῳ χρόνῳ, in the more ſpecial ſenſe, that there ſhould be Atheiſtical ſcoffers, that ſhould accuſe Chriſt of breaking his promiſe in coming to avenge himſelf on the crucifiers, and to reſcue the Chriſtians from their perſecutors. So 1 John 2. 18. ἐσχάτη ὥρα ἐστὶν It is the laſt hour, to the ſame ſenſe of that approaching judgment, which was then nearer at hand. And all this taken from that prophecy of Moſes, Deut. 31. 29. Evil will befal you in the latter days. In reciting this parcel of Joel's prophecy, it may not be unworthy our notice, that where the Prophet mentions the great ונורא and terrible day of the Lord, the Hebrew word being regularly derived from ורא to fear (and accordingly 'tis rendred by the Chaldee דחילא fearful, and ſo by the Syriack alſo) yet the LXXII. there render it ἐπιφανῆ, conſpicuous or notable, as if it had been נראה from ראה to ſee, to behold, to obſerve, (ſo Deut. 1. 19. where the Hebrew hath, that great והנורא and terrible wilderneſs, the LXXII. read ἐπιφανές, illuſtrious or notable; ſo 2 Sam. 14. 15. for וראני made me afraid, they read ὄψεταί με, ſhall ſee me, as if it were וראני from ראה) and yet from them St. Luke here retains it, μεγάλῃ καὶ ἐπιφανῆ, great and conſpicuous, or notable. The account of this is clear, 1. becauſe thoſe, for whoſe uſe he wrote this book, made uſe of the LXXII for whom therefore he was to recite it, as there he found it. 2ly, Becauſe this Greek did very fully expreſs what was deſigned in the Hebrew, the word ἐπιφανὴς, obſervable, notable, illuſtrious, being perfectly applicable to fearful, as well as grateful appearances, and when it is ſo, expreſſing the great terribleneſs and dreadfulneſs of them.

V. 24. Pains of death] The Hebrew חבלי ſignifies two things, a cord or band, and a pang, eſpecially of women in Travel. Hence the Septuagint meeting with the word, Pſal. 18. 2. (where it certainly ſignifies χοινία cords or bands) have yet rendred it ὠδῖνες pangs, and ſo again, 1 Kings 20. 31. and in other places; and from their example here St. Luke hath uſed τὰς ὠδῖνας θανάτου, the pains, or pangs of death, when both the addition of the word λύσας looſing, and κρατεῖσθαι being holden faſt, do ſhew that the ſenſe is bands or cords.

Ὠδῖνες

V. 38. Gift of the holy Ghoſt] What δωρεὰ πνεύματος ἁγίου, the gift of the holy Ghoſt ſignifies, in relation to the perſons that are here ſpoken to, as many as ſhould now repent, and believe on Chriſt, is apparent by the proceſs of the ſtory. There were that day three thouſand which received the faith of Chriſt, v. 41. and theſe aſſociated, and joined themſelves with the Apoſtles, v. 42. and that in a wonderful, charitable manner, had all things common, &c. v. 44. In the third chapter, the Apoſtles work that cure on the impotent man, and on that occaſion preach Chriſt to the Jews again, and chap. 4. the Sanhedrim, &c. apprehend them, and upon conſultation diſmiſs them again, and they return to their auditors, the believers forementioned, v. 23, 24. And they bleſſing and praiſing God, and applying the Pſalmiſts predictions to their preſent condition, and praying to God for his powerful aſſiſtance to propagate the Goſpel, it follows, v. 31. that as they prayed, the place was ſhaken, (in like manner as chap. 2. 2. when the holy Ghoſt deſcended on the Apoſtles) and they were all filled with the holy Ghoſt, that is, certainly all the believers forementioned (not the Apoſtles, who were thus filled before.) And ſo this promiſe of St. Peter's was punctually fulfilled upon them. What the effect of this gift was among them is no farther there ſet down, then that they ſpake the word of God with boldneſs; that is, they were wonderfully confirmed by this means in their aſſurance of the truth of the Goſpel, and ſo making no queſtion of the truth of what they had learnt from the Apoſtles, they ſpake of it among themſelves, and to others with all cheerfulneſs and confidence, deſpiſing the terrors of the Jews, as they did their worldly poſſeſſions; v. 32. and continuing that high pitch of charity, which had before been obſerved to be among them, ch. 2. 44. And ſo thus far this gift of the holy Ghoſt ſignifies no more then a miraculous confirmation of theſe believers (formerly baptized) in the faith, and Chriſtian practices, which they had received; but this no doubt then attended with other extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt, in reſpect of which they are there ſaid to be fill'd (ἐπλήσθησαν) with the holy Ghoſt. And then the only difficulty will be, what kind of gifts theſe were, whether inward or outward. For both theſe are promiſed indefinitely to believers. To the inward that ſpeech of Chriſt, John 7. 38. ſeems to pertain, He that believeth on me, out of his belly ſhall flow rivers of living waters; where the belly denoting the heart, or inward part of the man, the flowing of the living water from thence, denotes ſome effects of the holy Spirits deſcent upon, and in the hearts of Believers, the Evangeliſt there diſtinctly referring thoſe words to the then future deſcent of the holy Ghoſt, ver. 39. This he ſpake of the Spirit which they which believe on him ſhould receive, οὔπω γὰρ ἦν πνεῦμα, for as yet the holy Ghoſt was not (among, or upon them) becauſe Jeſus was not yet glorified. Where it is evident, that that ſpeech of Chriſt belonged to ſome inward gifts in the hearts of men, which upon the deſcent of the holy Ghoſt upon the Apoſtles, ſhould be poured upon the Chriſtian world, convey'd by the preaching, baptizing, confirming, and other miniſtry of the Apoſtles, their farther inſtructing them in the Goſpel, which is therefore elſewhere called διακονία πνεύματος, the miniſtration of the Spirit, or means of communicating it to believers. What this inward gift is appears in ſeveral places, wiſdom, ch. 6. 3. knowledge, 1 Cor. 12. 8. and ſo likewiſe the aſſiſtances of God's ſpirit, joined with his word, enabling humble, ſincere Chriſtians for the duties of Chriſtian life, which are required of them, called the renewing of the holy Spirit, and joined, as here, to the Laver of regeneration, Tit. 3. 5. and ſo the earneſt of the Spirit in our hearts, 2 Cor. 1. 22. ſee note on Acts 1. a. The outward gifts are thoſe χαρίσματα, gifts of tongues, of healing, &c. And thoſe are evidently called the δωρεὰ πνεύματος ἁγίου, the gift of the holy Ghoſt, Acts 10. 45. and that was there poured upon the Gentiles of Cornelius's Family, immediately on their receiving the faith, even before Baptiſm. And to theſe belongs another promiſe of Chriſt, Mark 16. 17. Theſe ſigns ſhall follow thoſe that believe, they ſhall take up ſerpents, &c. Now for thereſolving of

Πόταμοὶ ἐκ κοιλίας

of the Query, What ſort of gift it is which is here meant, the ſureſt way will be, not ſo to define of either, as to exclude the other, but to comprehend both under this phraſe; not that both, and every branch of each ſhould be poured on each Believer, but that they all ſhould be ſcatter'd among them, the inward by Baptiſm or Confirmation ſigned on all, and the outward beſtow'd on ſome of them, to teſtify to all the truth and excellency of the Goſpel, and to fit and prepare ſome perſons for ſacred Employments; not all the outward again, upon each, on whom the outward were beſtow'd, but ſome on one, ſome on another, the gift of tongues to one, of healing to a ſecond, of propheſying to a third: and they that had moſt, or the higheſt degrees of theſe, are called πλήρεις, full of the Spirit, ſee chap. 6. note b. and note on Eph. 1. c.

Πλήρεις πνεύματος

V. 42. Fellowſhip] The word κοινωνία is to be rendred (as from the Verb κοινωνέω) not communion, but communication, by that, meaning diſtribution, liberality, effuſion, or participation, by which any are made partakers of ſome gift, ſpiritual or temporal, ſuch as here beneficence to the poor, &c. Thus in Simplicius on Ariſtot. Phyſ. l. 1. deſcribing magnanimous men, ὀλίγοις ἀρχομένους, καὶ ὧν ἔχουσι κοινωνικοὺς ἑτοίμους, They are, ſaith he, content with a little, and diſtribute, or communicate, readily of that which they have. And in Lucian, ὅτι. Χρὴ. Κοινωνοῦντας ὧν ἔχουσι τοῖς πενεστέροις, communicating to the poorer ſort of what they have: and again, εἰ φθονήσει κοινωνοῦντι καὶ διδόντι; Will he envy him that communicates and gives? Where it ſignifies liberality, or giving to the poor. Thus is Almſgiving defined by the Arabians, Communicatio in miſeriis, Abul. Faraii de Mor. Arab. p. 29. And thus Caſſander out of Chryſoſtom renders μυστηρίων κοινωνίαν, Myſteriorum communicationem, Liturg. p. 14. As Excommunication is defined by Tertullian excluſion from communication (not from Communion as that is now uſed for the Sacrament) à communicatione orationis & conventus & omnis ſancti commercii relegatio, a baniſhing from participation of all prayer, aſſembly, and ſacred commerce (and not only of the Sacrament) ſo as the word be compounded, like ex. lex, without any change of the termination. In this notion is the word generally uſed in Scripture for liberality, or ſome kind of diſtributing or diſpenſing to others. So here προσκαρτεροῦντες τῇ κοινωνίᾳ, καὶ τῇ κλάσει τοῦ ἄρτου, καὶ ταῖς προσευχαῖς, Continuing in liberality and breaking of bread, and prayers; where, as προσευχαὶ ſignifies publick prayers, and κλάσις ἄρτου, the breaking of bread in the adminiſtration of the Sacrament, ſo κοινωνία is the peoples bringing and preſenting of the Bread and Wine, and the Fruits of the Earth, for the acknowledging God the Creator of all, part of it to be eaten in commemoration of Chriſts Sacrifice, and the reſt to be diſtributed among the poor, ver. 44. Whereupon κοινωνῆσαι in Heſychius and Phavorinus (for which the copies read corruptly κοινῶσαι) is προσενεγκεῖν, to offer, or preſent. From which Gloſſaries, theſe explications alſo of the word are to be had, κοινωνεῖτω μεταδιδότω, to diſtribute, or diſpenſe, κοινωνία μετάληψις τῶν μυστηρίων ἁγίων, participation of the holy Myſteries, κοινωνῶ σοι δόξης, συμμετέχω, to partake, κοινωνοῦσιν οἱ μεταδιδόντες ἀλλήλοις, καὶ μεταλαμβάνοντες παρ' ἀλλήλων φιλίας ἢ γνώσεως, &c. They are ſaid to communicate, who diſtribute to one another, and they that partake and receive from one another, whether friendſhip or knowledge. Whence it appears, 1. that the word ſignifies both to diſtribute, and to receive, to make others partake, and to be partaker. Secondly, That it is appliable to friendſhip or ſociety, no otherwiſe then to knowledge, or any thing elſe. Thus Rom. 15. 26. κοινωνίαν ποιήσασθαι, is to make a contribution. So 2 Cor. 8. 4. τὴν χάριν καὶ τὴν κοινωνίαν τῆς διακονίας τῆς εἰς τοὺς ἁγίους, charity, and communication of adminiſtration, that is, liberality toward the Saints. So ἁπλότης τῆς κοινωνίας, 2 Cor. 9. 13. liberality of diſtribution, ſo κοινωνία εἰς εὐαγγέλιον, Phil. 1. 5. liberality toward the preaching or propagating the Goſpel. So Heb. 13. 16. where 'tis joined with εὐποιΐα, beneficence, as 1 Tim. 1. 18. εὐμετάδοτοι, and κοινωνικοί, diſtributive, and communicative, are all one: ſo Philem. 6. κοινωνία τῆς πίστεώς σου, is his liberality to the poor, (by which the bowels of the Saints are refreſhed, ver. 7.) flowing from his Faith. From this notion of the word κοινωνία, as it ſtrictly ſignifies liberality toward the poor, may be fetch'd the ſenſe of that Article in the Creed, κοινωνία τῶν ἁγίων, the communication, or liberality of the Saints, to note this great liberality here mentioned of the firſt converts to Chriſtianity in the Apoſtles time (ſee Philo of the θεραπευταὶ in Egypt, in Euſeb. Hiſt. l. 2. c. ιζ'.) eſpecially in their meetings for the commemorating of Chriſt in the Sacrament, as appears in this chapter, ver. 44, 45, 47. where, ſaith the Text, They had all things common, ſold their poſſeſſions and parted them to all, as every man had need, &c. living all as it were out of one common ſtock, as thoſe that are joynt-ſharers, and partners in all. To which purpoſe it is obſervable from Levit. 6. 2. that the common or joynt-intereſt, that Merchants or Tradeſmen oft-times have in Traffick, called there by the Hebrew תשומת יד, the putting to of the hand, is by the Septuagint rendred κοινωνία, communication, or communion, or (which is uſed alſo in this ſenſe of joynt-intereſt) fellowſhip, and in the Chaldee, שותפות ידא a ſociety of hand, from שתף ſociavit, participem fecit, a trading of partners; and ſo in the Syriack alſo, in the ſame word, which they uſe in the New Teſtament to render κοινωνία, and particularly here in this 42 verſe. And this is thought fit to be recorded by the Apoſtles among the very few things, fit to be preached and proclaim'd by thoſe that declar'd the Goſpel to all the World, that, when the height of the Pythagorean Philoſophy was to have all things common, and Epicurus went yet higher, (not by bringing all together into ſome common magazine, (which, ſaid he, was an argument of diffidence, and ſo unreconcileable with friendſhip) but) by cheerful communicating to every one that had need, out of that which every man hath, the Chriſtian religion might appear to have arrived to the higheſt pitch; every man ſelling that which he had immoveable, that ſo he might have ready to diſtribute to any, nay, that he might not truſt himſelf in the diſtribution, bringing and laying it at the Apoſtles feet, that they might diſtribute it moſt impartially, and ſo approving themſelves to be עם נדבות a people of free-will-offerings in the day of Chriſts power, Pſ. 110. now when he was inſtall'd in his kingdom. So in a ſpiritual ſenſe, κοινωνία υἱοῦ, 1 Cor. 1. 9. is the participation of the Son, or communication, liberality, all one with his ἀνεξιχνίαστος πλοῦτος, Epheſ. 3. 8. his unſearchable riches, as they are poured out on us. So Epheſ. 3. 9. κοινωνία μυστηρίου, the communication of the myſtery, or that myſtery kept hid ſo long, is now communicated or made known; ſo Phil. 3. 10. κοινωνία παθημάτων is the communicating his ſufferings to us, that is, our partaking and ſo ſuffering with or after him, in a ſpiritual ſenſe, dying to ſin, as he dyed to the world, which is there called being conformed to his death. So 1 Cor. 10. 16. κοινωνία σώματος and αἵματος, the participating of the body and blood of Chriſt. So κοινωνία πνεύματος, communication of the Spirit, Phil. 2. 1. that liberal effuſion of graces from the Spirit of God. And ſo when in the ſolemn cloſe of the Epiſtles, κοινωνία τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος, the communication of the holy Spirit, is joined with χάρις Χριστοῦ, καὶ ἀγάπη τοῦ Θεοῦ, the grace of Chriſt, and love of God, 2 Cor. 13. 14. it muſt ſignify proportionably to theſe many other places, the liberal effuſion of that holy Spirit: and ſo 1 John 1. 3. ἵνα κοινωνίαν ἔχητε μεθ' ἡμῶν, that you may have partnerſhip with us, καὶ ἡ κοινωνία δὲ ἡμετέρα μετὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς, and our partnerſhip is indeed with the Father, &c. the gifts and life that God and Chriſt hath, are communicated to us, and v. 6. ἐὰν εἴπωμεν ὅτι κοινωνίαν ἔχομεν μετ' αὐτοῦ, If we ſay that we are partakers with him of that grace and life, &c. By this might be explained the uſe

of the κοινωνικὰ χαρίσματα in the ancient Church, but that the words are not found in Scripture, and will be mention'd more ſeaſonably on occaſion of the Ευαγγελικαὶ ὑποθῆκαι, 2 Cor. 3. Note a.

f. Ἔχειν Χάριν

V. 47. Having favour] Ἔχειν ſignifies to uſe, or to exerciſe, as when Chriſt ſaith, to him that hath ſhall be given, and let us have grace, Heb. 12. 28. And as for χάρις, that is the very word Charity, and is by Cicero ſo rendred, and frequently ſignifies liberality (as in Epicurus's book entituled περὶ δόσεων καὶ χάριτος, of gifts and charity, or liberality, mentioned by Sextus Empir. l. cont. Gramm.) and ſo is uſed, 2 Cor. 8. 4. and ſo Acts 4. 33. where μεγάλη χάρις is by the Syriack rendred טיבותא רבתא, that is, great goodneſs or benignity, (tho' Guido Fabritius render it gratia magna, following the notion which, it ſeems he had of the Greek, without conſidering the Syriack) and ſo the conſequents demonſtrate it to ſignify: and therefore the phraſe ἔχοντες χάριν is by the Syriack rendred ויהבין ברחמא, that is, they gave alms before all the people, not as Guido Fabritius again renders the Greek, rather then that, cum iniiſſent gratiam, when they got favour; for יהב ſignifies dedit, gave, and רחמא miſericordia, gratia, eleemoſyna, ἀγαλλίαμα, bowels of mercy, abundant liberality; ſee 2 Cor. 8. 1. and note on 1 Pet. 3. d.

CHAP. III.

1. At three in the afternoon, which was one of the times of day, generally ſet apart for prayer.

1. NOW Peter and John went up together into the Temple (at the hour of prayer being the ninth hour.]

2. And a certain man, lame from his mothers womb, was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the Temple, which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entred into the Temple.]

2. And there was an impotent man, who was ſo from his birth, who was therefore daily carried by others, and laid at the gate of the Temple toward the Eaſt, in Solomons porch, v. 11. which was called the beautiful gate, that there he might beg and receive the alms of thoſe that went up daily to pray there, by which means this man was known to all the pious men of the city that uſed to go that way, v. 10.

3. Who ſeeing Peter and John about to go into the Temple, asked * an alms.

4. And Peter faſtning his eyes on him, with John, ſaid, Look on us.

5. And he † gave heed unto them, expecting to receive ſomething of them.

6. Then Peter ſaid, [Silver and Gold have I none, but ſuch as I have give I thee.] In the name of Jeſus Chriſt of Nazareth, riſe up and walk.

6. I cannot give thee that alms thou lookeſt for, that of money to relieve thy wants; but that which will eminently ſupply all thy wants, and make it unneceſſary for thee to ask any more, I am able and willing to beſtow upon thee.

7. He was able to ſtand and go, was perfectly cured of his lameneſs.

7. And he took him by the right hand, and lift him up, and immediately [his feet and ancle-bones * received ſtrength.]

8. And he demonſtrated the perfectneſs of the cure by uſing his legs to all ſervices, leaping, ſtanding, walking, and as a teſtimony of his thankfulneſs to God the author, he

8. And he leaping up ſtood, and walked, and] entred with them into the Temple, walking, and leaping, and praiſing God.

9. And all the people ſaw him walking, and praiſing God,

10. And they knew that it was he which ſate for alms at the beautiful gate of the Temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.

11. And as this perſon which was thus healed kept cloſe to Peter and John, and was unwilling to depart from them, from whom he had received ſo great a mercy.

11. And as the lame man which was healed held Peter and John] all the people ran together unto them in the porch that is call'd Solomons, greatly wondring.

12. Why do you look upon this cure as a ſtrange thing to be wrought? (the miracles of Jeſus are far greater then this) or, why do ye attribute any thing to us in this matter, as if 'twere any thing of our own, either ſtrength to do ſuch a work, or excellency (for which we might be thought worthy to be uſed in theſe works, rather then other men) to which this were to be imputed.

12. And when Peter ſaw it, he anſwered unto the people, Ye men of Iſrael, [why marvel ye at this, or why look ye ſo earneſtly on us, as tho' by our own power, or holineſs we had made this man to walk?]

13. Hath given this power of working miracles to that Jeſus whom ye deliver'd up to Pilate to be crucified, and when he would fain have releaſed him, ye refuſed to have him releaſed, and abſolutely againſt Pilate's will, required him to be put to death.

13. The God of Abraham, and of Iſaac, and of Jacob, the God of our Fathers [hath glorified his ſon Jeſus, whom ye delivered up, and denied him † in the preſence of Pilate, when he was determined * to let him go.]

14. And when ye had your choice, which ſhould be releaſed, Chriſt or Barabbas, ye choſe the murtherer before him.

14. But ye denied the Holy one and the Juſt, [and deſired a murtherer to to be granted unto you,]

15. And murthered the Meſſias, put him to death, who came to bring life into the world. And when you had done ſo, God was then pleaſed to raiſe him from the dead, and to make us witneſſes thereof.

15. And killed the ‖ prince of life, whom God hath raiſed from the dead, whereof we are witneſſes.]

16. And now 'tis by belief in him, that he (or his power) hath recovered this man from his lameneſs, whom you now ſee to be cured, and know before, for many years, to have been unable to go. And this faith, or believing on him, working not by its ſelf, but by his power on whom we believe, is it that hath wrought this ſo remarkable cure on him, which you all ſo wonder at.

16. And his name, through faith in his name, hath made this man ſtrong, whom ye ſee and † know, yea, the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect ſoundneſs in the preſence of you all.]

17. Now this, I ſuppoſe, brethren, that you of the multitude, which did thus reject Chriſt, did not know him to be the Meſſias, and the ſame I ſuppoſe of you rulers, thoſe of the Sanhedrim.

17. And now, brethren, I wote that through ignorance ye did it, as did alſo your rulers.]

18. And ſo the many prophecies of ſcripture that the Meſſias ſhould be put to death, have by this means had their completion.

18. But thoſe things which God before had ſhewed by the mouth of all his prophets, that Chriſt ſhould ſuffer, he hath ſo fulfilled.]

19,20. Do you therefore amend your lives that this may be pardon'd, that ſo the ſecond coming of Chriſt, ſo often ſpoken of Mat. 24. for the delivery and reſcue of all the faithful (giving them reſt from their troubles and perſecutions, and a quiet profeſſion of the Goſpel) but withal for the deſtruction of all the obdurate (which is

Ye are the peculiar perſons, of whom the prophets foretold, and to whom the covenant belongs, which was made to Abraham, in which was promiſed, that the poſterity of him, that is the Jews ſhould be ſo bleſſed by God, in having Chriſt given to them, (beſide many other ſpecial prerogatives beſtowed on them) that all the families and people of the world alſo, that would bleſs themſelves or others, ſhould uſe this form, God bleſs them, as he bleſſed Abraham's ſeed, (ſee note on Gal. 3. c.)

For God having raiſed this Chriſt again, hath by our preaching his reſurrection firſt to you over all your Cities, ſent him again in a moſt gracious manner to bleſs his enemies, to do all the good to them imaginable, to work upon the moſt obdurate crucifiers, and turn every one of you from your unbelief and impenitence, and ſo to make you capable of his pardon and mercy if you ſhall be thus wrought on, and converted by ſo efficacious means.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Ἀναψύξεως καιροὶ

V. 19. Times of refreſhing.] Καιροὶ ἀναψύξεως, days of refreſhment, or comfort, are proverbially taken among the Hebrews, for the time of any ſpecial deliverance, whether temporal here, or eternal in the Reſurrection; ſo Gen. 21. Jonathan's Chaldee paraphraſe ſaith, that Leviathan is prepared ליום נחמתה for the day of conſolation, that is, the day of deliverance, and feſtivity in commemoration thereof, wherein, ſaid the Jews, God was wont to make merry, and to ſport with Leviathan. So the name of Noach, from that ſame Hebrew word, which is rendred conſolation, ſignifies deliverance, and was impoſed as a prophecy, that mankind, which otherwiſe had been univerſally deſtroyed, ſhould in him be reſcued from that utter ruine. To this belongs the reviving, Ezr. 9. 9. which ſignifies their reſtoring from captivity. So for the other deliverance, when Hoſ. 6. 3. we read, after three days he ſhall quicken, Jonathan reads again ליומי נחמתה in the days of conſolation, which ſhall come ביום אחיות מיתיא in the day of the reſurrection of the dead. And ſo when John 11. 24. we read he ſhall riſe in the reſurrection, the Syriack reads בנוחמא in the conſolation. Now the connexion of this with the exhortation to repentance lies thus, Should Chriſt come again in judgment upon the Jews, foretold Mat. 24. while you lie impenitent in your ſins, his coming muſt be the greateſt judgment in the world (and ſo it will be to the impenitent Jews, utter deſtruction and vaſtation,) That therefore that coming of his (which as it is a terrible time to the impenitent, ſo is a time of deliverance to all penitent believers) may in that notion of conſolation and deliverance befal you, that God may thus ſend his ſon to you. Do you now timely repent, ſo as to have your ſins blotted out, ſee 2 Pet. 3. 6. The ſame thing is called, ἀπολύτρωσις, deliverance, Luke 21. 28. and σωτηρία, ſalvation, or deliverance again, Rom. 13. 11. ſee Note c.

Ἀπολύτρωσις.

b. Δέξεσθαι οὐρανὸν.

V. 21. The Heaven muſt receive.] Beſide the ordinary rendring of ὃν δεῖ δέξασθαι οὐρανὸν, whom heaven muſt receive, another there is, of which the words are capable literally, and to which the Context more enclines them, that Chriſt muſt, or that God hath decreed he ſhould receive heaven in the ſenſe that Camillus is ſaid δέξασθαι πόλιν, to receive the city, that is, to undertake the government of the city, parallel to that of Pſal. 75. 2. ſpeaking of Chriſt's exaltation, when I ſhall receive the congregation, and ſo this place will be all one with 1 Cor. 15. 25. he muſt reign, &c. and that peculiarly in the ſubduing and conquering all his enemies, converting ſome, and rooting out (v. 23.) all others, who ſtand out in hoſtility againſt him.

c. ἀπὸ Σαμουήλ.

V. 24. Samuel.] The account of the prophets is here begun from Samuel, becauſe the ſchools of the prophets were firſt inſtituted and erected by him, and not that there was no prophet before him. Thus we read 1 Sam. 19. 20. the college, or company, of the prophets at Ramah, and Samuel ſtanding as appointed over them, making him the preſident of that College, as after Eliah was, and therefore before his aſſenſion he goes about from one College to another, 2 Kings 2. 3, &c. and after him, Eliſha, to whom therefore the ſons of the prophets ſay, The place in which we dwell before thee, (that is, under thee, under thy government) is too narrow for us, and ſo they build a larger. Theſe ſons of the prophets ſpent their time in ſtudying the Law, and praiſing and ſerving of God (ſee note on Luke 1. m.) and of them, becauſe (though ſome were, yet) all were not call'd by God to the prophetick office, ſent of meſſages to the people, therefore 'tis here added, ὅσοι ἐλάλησαν, as many as ſpake, that is, as many as out of the ſchools of the prophets were by God call'd to that publick office, προκατήγγειλαν, foretold what was now to come to paſs.

V. 26. In turning away.] It is matter of ſome queſtion, whether the ἀποστρέφειν, turning, refer to Chriſt, or the Jews. It may fitly refer to Chriſt, turning them by his grace, and ſo bleſſing them. But Oecumenius refers it to the Jews, εἰ ἄρα ἐθέλοιτε ἐπιστρέψαι, if ye will turn every one from his iniquities. And ſo it may be alſo as an effect of Chriſt's grace in us, and as a condition to qualifie us to receive benefit by his Reſurrection and bleſſing of us.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND as they ſpake unto the people, the Prieſts, and [the Captain of the Temple, and the Sadducees came upon them,]

7. And cauſing the diſciples to be brought before them, they examined them on theſe interrogatories, 1. how they came to be able to do that miracle, ch. 3. 7. and whoſe name they called upon that infirm man (ſee ver. 10.) in the working of the cure, (ſee ch. 3. 6.) and conſequently from whom they pretended to have commiſſion to do what they did, thus to preach unto the people?

7. And when they had ſet them in the midſt, they asked, By what power, or by what name have ye done this?]

8. Then Peter being by the Spirit of God (ſuch as was promiſed Mat. 10. 19, 20.) endued with a great extraordinary preſentneſs of ſpeech, and elocution, v. 13.) and taking great boldneſs and confidence upon him, began thus.

This is he that was propheſied of under the title of a refuſe ſtone rejected by you, the chief men among the Jews, and looked upon with deſpight and contempt, but is now by his reſurrection inſtall'd in all power and dignity, (an effect of which is this miracle wrought in his name) and is indeed become the ruler and king of the whole Church, the prime foundation ſtone of the whole fabrick.

For there is no other religion in the world, whether that which was delivered by Moſes, or by any other, by which ſalvation can be had for thoſe, which do not now come into this, at the preaching of it.

And when they obſerved the elocution, v. 8. and freeneſs of ſpeech, with which they taught (ſee note on John 7. a.) and withal conſidering that their education had not thus elevated them above other men, being neither skilled in the learning of the Jews, nor, as men of place, or magiſtracy among them, inſtructed in their laws, they were amazed at it, but withal they either remembred or were told that they were thoſe that had been attending on Jeſus in his life time.

18. Talk privately, or teach publickly, any thing concerning the faith of Chriſt.

18. And they called them, and commanded them, not to [ſpeak at all, nor teach in the name of Jeſus.]

19. But Peter and John made light of this interdict, or terrors, and told them plainly they were commanded by God to preach, and that in all reaſon God muſt be obeyed before them, or the greateſt magiſtrate on earth, and that they themſelves could not but confeſs ſo much.

21. And ſo not knowing what elſe to ſay to them, being not able to deny the force of their argument, they added more threatnings, if poſſibly that might terrifie them, and ſo diſmiſs'd them, having nothing to lay to their charge, but the curing of the lame man in the name of Jeſus, and for this all the people look'd on them with admiration, and counted it an act of God's immediate infinite mercy, for which they, that were inſtruments of it, ought to be bleſſed, not puniſhed by them, and therefore they durſt not puniſh or cenſure them for this.

V. 6. Kindred of the high prieſt.] What is meant by ὅσοι ἦσαν ἐκ γένους ἀρχιερατικοῦ, as many as were of the kindred of the high prieſt, will be reſolved by the Context, where an aſſembling or meeting of the Sanhedrim is deſcribed, v. 5. which conſiſting of three ſorts of men Prieſts, Elders and Doctors of the Law (ſee note on Mark 5. c.) is oft-times expreſs'd by the enumeration of thoſe parts, Ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ γραμματεῖς καὶ πρεσβύτεροι, High prieſts, Scribes and Elders, Mat. 26. 3. and very often in the Goſpels. In this place there is another way of enumeration then is uſual, The Rulers and Elders and Scribes, and Annas the chief prieſt and Caiaphas, and John and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high prieſt. Where yet ἄρχοντες, Rulers, ſeems to be a general word, denoting, as elſewhere, men in authority. Then Annas was the Naſi, or chief perſon among them, (ſee Luke 3. note b.) and Caiaphas the perſon, that by the Procurator was put into the Pontificate inſtead of the Aaronical line. And ſo there remains only the Elders and Scribes, and ὅσοι ἦσαν, not Indefinitely, as many as were, but, in a more limited notion of ὅσοι, thoſe that were in the Sanhedrim of this ſort, of the kindred of the high prieſt, (and of that number John and Alexander by name) which therefore appear to be the ſame with ἀρχιερεῖς, high prieſts joined with the Elders and Scribes in other places, that is, that third ſort of the Sanhedrim, conſiſting of Prieſts. Now the reaſon of this title's being applied to them is evident. For as of Aaron's poſterity the lineal deſcendent only ſucceeded him in the high prieſts office, ſo of his two ſons, Eleazar and Ithamar, ſprang 24 families, (betwixt whom the Prieſts office was divided by David, 1 Chron. 24.) which ſhould by weekly turns perform the ſervice of the Sanctuary (ſee Luke 1. 5.) fixteen of the ſons of Eleazar, and eight of Ithamar. Of every one of theſe families and courſes there was a chief, the head of the family, and theſe are conſequently called ἀρχιερεῖς, chief prieſts, and ἐκ γένους ἀρχιερατικοῦ, of the kindred of the High prieſt, viz. as ſpringing from Aaron, and ſtill allied to the one high prieſt's family, as inferior branches of it; And many, if not all theſe, were members of the Sanhedrim (for here they ſet in Judicature with Annas and Caiaphas, as with Moſes and Aaron, and the Elders and the Scribes, ver. 7.) and being four and twenty in number, would make up a third part of the whole number of 72, leaving the other two portions to be divided between the Elders and the Scribes, if there were, as it is not certain there was, this equal diviſion.

V. 28. Thy hand and thy counſel.] What is meant by the latter part of this ſpeech, whatſoever thy counſel hath determined before to be done, hath little difficulty in it. The truth is clear, that God decreed that thoſe things ſhould γενέσθαι, de done, although he decreed not that the Jews ſhould do them, but only permitted them to do, what he foreſaw they would do, if they were thus permitted. The only difficulty is, what is meant by ἡ χείρ σου, thy hand, and that will beſt be explained by looking on the Law of Moſes, Levit. 16. 8. where Aaron caſts lots on the goats, One lot, on which was written לשם for the Lord, another on which לעזאזל for the Azazel, or ſcape-goat; For the manner was thus, The two goats were ſet one at his right hand, t'other at his left, and two lots were caſt into the Kalphi or veſſel (that is the word uſed by the Rabbines from the Greek κάλπις, urna, or pitcher, of which, ſaith Lucian, in Hermot. κάλπις ἀργυρᾶ, ὡς ταύτῃ ἐκβάλλον) κλῆρος μικροὶ, ὅσον δὲ κυαμιαῖοι τὸ μέγεθος ἐπεγεγραμμένοι, little lots are thrown into the ſilver pitcher about the bigneſs of a bean, with inſcriptions on them) and the Prieſt draws out one in one hand and the other in the other; Then by the command of the סגן (that is, vicarius ſacerdos, the firſt of the ordinary prieſts, that miniſtred to the High-prieſt) he lifts up the hand in which was the lot for the Lord, and if it were the right hand, he puts it upon the head of the goat at his right hand (if the left, on that at the left) and that goat was holy to the Lord, and was preſently ſlain before him (the other being ἀποπομπαῖος, ſent into the wilderneſs) ſee Cod. Joma c. 4. § 1. And certainly this diſtribution of the lots was from the Lord, according to that of Solomon, Prov. 16. 23. Now by this ceremony of the goat, is Chriſt's paſſion typified, and ſo that phraſe here, ἡ χείρ σου, thy hand, refers to that elevation of the hand, wherein was the lot for the Lord, and ſo notes this whole action thus to have been diſpoſed of by God, who decreed that Chriſt ſhould ſuffer, and that juſt as the goat did under the Law, which was offered up to God for the ſins of the people.

V. 33. Gave the Apoſtles witneſs.] Ἀποδίδων is by Theophylact obſerved to have ſome energy in it, καθάπερ ἐγχειρισθείσας αὐτὸς τι δείκνυσι, καὶ ὡς περὶ ὀφλήματος λέγει, he ſignifies, ſomewhat to be intruſted with them, as a depoſitum, which they were to reſtore, and ſo ſpeaks as of a debt. Accordingly the Vulgar Latin duly reads reddebant teſtimonium, they rendred teſtimony. C. Ἀποδίδων.

Paraphraſe.

1. And one of thoſe that came in to the faith of Chriſt, named Ananias, and Sappira his wife, with joynt conſent devoted their eſtate, all that they had, to the uſe of the Church, and to that purpoſe made ſale of it;

1. BUT a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, ſold a poſſeſſion,]

2. And when they had done ſo, conſented alſo, or combined together to keep ſome part of the money, for which 'twas ſold, for themſelves: and accordingly they did, and came with the other part only, and preſented it to the Apoſtles.

2. And kept back part of the price, his wife alſo being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it at the Apoſtles feet.]

a. b. 3. How hath Satan emboldened thee, that thou ſhouldſt dare thus to deceive, and rob the holy Ghoſt, as thou haſt clearly done, in keeping back and purloining part, when thou hadſt conſecrated all to God's ſervice, for the uſe of the Church?

3. But Peter ſaid, Ananias, [why hath Satan a filled thine heart * b to lie to the holy Ghoſt, and to keep back part of the price of the land?]

c. 4. Before it was ſold, was it not wholly thine, no other man having right to any part of it? (ſo the Syriack reads it) and when it was ſold, didſt not thou receive the whole ſum or price for which 'twas ſold? was it not all in thine hand and power, ſo as thou mighteſt have fully performed thy vow? what motive hadſt thou to do ſuch a thing as this? The falſity which was committed in telling us that thou hadſt ſold thy poſſeſſions, and brought the whole price of it for the uſe of the Church, (when thou didſt keep a part of it for thy ſelf) was an injury not only to the Church, nor ſo much to us the Apoſtles, as to God himſelf, to the holy Ghoſt, who came lately down to plant this Church, and hath ſuch a peculiar relation to it, that what was done to that, is by interpretation done to the holy Ghoſt, who had the privity of the vow, and knew that 'twas the conſecrating of all, and not of this part only which thou haſt brought to us.

4. † c Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and when it was ſold, was it not in thine own power? why haſt thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou haſt not lyed unto men, but unto God.]

5. And Ananias hearing theſe words, fell down, and gave up the ghoſt, and great fear came on all them that heard theſe things.]

6. And the men of inferior rank, the officers, to whom it belonged to bury the dead, (ſee note on Phil. 1. c.) took him, and ſtript and ſwath'd him, as they uſed to do the dead (ſee note on John 19. g.) and taking him up

9. To provoke and dare God, (ſee note on Mat. 4. c.) to try whether he will puniſh your fraud or no. Behold (that thou mayeſt ſee what a provocation this hath been to God) the men are coming in which have buried thy dead husband, and now they ſhall do as much for thee.

9. Then Peter ſaid unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together [to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? Behold, the feet of them which have buried thy Husband are at the door, and ſhall carry thee out.]

10. Then fell ſhe down ſtraightway at his feet, and yielded up the Ghoſt, and the young men came in, and found her dead, and carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

11. And all the believers were ſtricken with a great reverence, and ſo were all others to whom it was related.

11. And great fear came upon all the Church, and upon as many as heard theſe things.]

12. (And they ſolemnly met together to preach and do miracles in the entrance to the Temple, called Solomon's porch.

12. And by the hands of the Apoſtles were many ſigns and wonders wrought among the people. [(And they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.]

13. And no other of the believers, or Chriſtians (called the Church, v. 11.) durſt conſort with the twelve Apoſtles, through the reverence, v. 11. which theſe late acts had wrought in them; but the people that ſaw and heard what was done, magnified them.

13. And of the reſt durſt no man joyn himſelf to them, but the people magnified them.]

14. And theſe miracles that wrought ſuch a reverence in the believers, were a means alſo to work faith in all the common ſort of the People.)

14. And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women.)]

15. And the people, v. 12. had ſuch confidence in their power of working miraculous cures, that they believed that the very ſhadow of Peter, walking by a diſeaſed man, would work a cure on him, and thereupon they brought forth their ſick and impotent friends, thoſe that were not able to go or ſtand, and laid them upon beds, &c. in the paſſage, that as Peter came by, his ſhadow might come over ſome of them.

15. Inſomuch that they brought forth the ſick into the ſtreets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the leaſt the ſhadow of Peter paſſing by might over-ſhadow ſome of them.]

16. And the fame of their miracles ſpread into the country, and region, and other cities about Jeruſalem, and from thence they brought.

17. Then the high prieſt roſe up, and all they that were with him (* which is the ſect of the ſadduces) and were filled with † indignation,]

18. And laid their hands on the Apoſtles, and put them in the common priſon.]

18. And apprehended the Apoſtles, and impriſoned them in the common goal.

19. But the Angel of the Lord by night opened the priſon doors, and brought them forth, and ſaid,

20. Go, ſtand, and ſpeak in the Temple to the people [all the words of this life.]

20. All the doctrine of Chriſtianity. d.

21. And when they heard that, they entred into the Temple early in the morning, and taught: but the high prieſt came, and they that were with him, and called the council together, and all the ſenate of the children of Iſrael, and ſent to the priſon to have them brought]

21. And in obedience to that direction, they betook themſelves early in the morning to the Temple, and there expounded the ſcripture and taught the doctrine of Chriſt out of it. But they of the Sanhedrim thinking they had ſtill been in hold, went into the court, and ſent ſerjeants to the priſon to have them brought before them.

22. But when the officers came, and found them not in the priſon, they returned, and told,

23. Saying, The priſon truly found we ſhut with all ſafety, [and the keepers ſtanding without before the doors: but when we had opened, we found no man within.]

23. And a guard of ſoldiers without, watching the doors of the priſon; but when we entred, none of theſe priſoners were within.

24. Now when the high prieſt, and the captain of the Temple, and the chief prieſts heard theſe things, they doubted * of them, whereunto this would grow.]

24. And when the Sanhedrim of the Jews, as alſo the captain of that band of ſoldiers, who had ſet the guard upon the priſon, v. 23. (ſee ch. 4. 1. and Luke 22. f.) had this word brought to them, they were much perplext, and wondred, how it could come to paſs, that the priſon being ſhut, and the watch at the doors, yet none of the priſoners ſhould be within, and conceived that this did abode ſome ſtrange matter.

* Concerning them, what this was, or, would be, περὶ αὐτῶν, τί ἂν γένοιτο τοῦτο.

25. Then came one, and told them, ſaying, Behold the men whom ye put in priſon [are ſtanding in the Temple, and teaching the people.]

25. Are in the Temple, inſtructing all that come thither.

26. Then went the captain with the Officers and brought them] without violence: (For they feared the people, leſt they ſhould have been ſtoned.)

26. And the captain rhat guarded the Temple (ſee note on Luke 22. f.) together with his ſoldiers went to the Temple, and apprehended them.

27. And when they had brought them, they [ſet them before the council: and the high Prieſt asked them,]

27. Brought them before the court, and the high prieſt examined them.

28. Saying, Did we not ſtraightly command you, [that you ſhould not teach in his name? And behold, ye have filled Jeruſalem with your doctrine, and † intend to bring that man's blood upon us.]

28. Not to publiſh this doctrine of Chriſt, and ye contrariwiſe have publiſhed it in the Temple to all the city, and done your beſt, by laying his blood to our charge, to raiſe up to the people againſt us, as againſt murtherers.

† You would bring, βούλεσθε ἐπαγαγεῖν.

29. Then Peter and the other Apoſtles anſwered and ſaid, We ought to obey God, rather than men.]

29. And the Apoſtles anſwered, as before they had done, ch. 4. 19. We were commanded by God to publiſh it, and then your interdict was not to have any force. Though magiſtrates are to be obey'd in all their lawful commands, and their puniſhments to be endured without reſiſtance (as they were by us, v. 18, and 26.) yet when God fetches us out of priſon, and commands us to go into the Temple and preach the faith of Chriſt (as he did by his Angel, v. 20.) we are to render obedience to him, and not to your contrary interdicts.

when ye crucified him as a malefactor, raiſed him from death, took him into heaven, and inſtated him in his regal power, (that he might be a ſpiritual prince, reigning in mens hearts) at his Father's right hand, from thence to ſend the Spirit of his Father (who was not to deſcend, till he was aſcended) and by that means to give you Jews place of repentance, that if ye yet come in and repent, and believe on him, ye may have pardon of ſin.

32. And we are his witneſſes of theſe things, and ſo is alſo the holy Ghoſt, whom God hath given to them that obey him.]

32. The truth of this we teſtifie, and ſo doth the holy Ghoſt, that came down upon us, and upon the reſt that have come in, and conſorted with us, ch. 4. 31. and by us is communicated to all that come in, and believe, and yield obedience to him.

38. Diſmiſs theſe men, and make not ſuch haſte to proceed againſt them; (for the doctrine which they preach is either from God, or no, If it be not from God, then our experience tells us, that falſe Prophets, though they thrive a while, yet without our oppoſition they generally come to nought.

39. But

i. 39. But if it be from God, then you may be ſure you ſhall not prevail againſt it) leſt ye be found to be a kind of Babel-builders (like thoſe giants there, that went about to fortifie themſelves againſt heaven) and to fight againſt God himſelf; and ye will never proſper in that enterprize.

39. But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it, i leſt haply ye be found even to fight againſt God.]

40. And they took his advice, and ſending for the Apoſtles in again into the court they appointed them to be ſcourg'd (a puniſhment of a reproachful contumelious nature, v. 41.) and giving them charge not to preach the faith of Chriſt any more, they releaſed them.

40. And to him they agreed: And when they had called the Apoſtles and beaten them, they commanded them that they ſhould not ſpeak in the name of Jeſus, and let them go.]

41. And this was matter of comfort and rejoicing to the Apoſtles, (according to that of Mat 5. 12.) that they were advanced to that degree of honour and bleſſedneſs, as to be ſcourged for preaching of Chriſt.

41. And they departed from the preſence of the council, rejoicing that they were † counted worthy to ſuffer k ſhame for his name.]

42. And daily in the Temple, and * in every houſe, they ceaſed not to teach, and preach Jeſus Chriſt.]

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Πληρῶν καρδίαν.

V. 3. Filled thine heart.] The phraſe πληρῶν καρδίαν, to fill the heart, is uſed by the Hebrews in the Old Teſtament for to make one bold, ſo Heſt. 7. 5. Who hath filled his heart to do this? the Greek, τίς ἔτος ὃς ἐτόλμησε; who is it that hath dared, &c. So Eccl. 8. 11. The heart of the ſons of men is filled to do evil, that is, is emboldened, where the Greek read, ἐπληροφορήθη, is filled.

b. Ψεύδομαι.

Ib. To ly.] The Verb ψεύδομαι hath among authors theſe three diſtinct uſes, and agreeably three notions and interpretations proportioned to them. 1. 'Tis uſed with a Genitive caſe, and then it ſignifies paſſively, to be deceived, fruſtrated, cheated of any thing, ψεύδεσθαι ἐλπίδος, to be fruſtrated, defeated of his hope, and in Plato Apol. τύτε οὐκ ἐψεύδομαι, In this I was not deceived or miſtaken. But this clearly belongs not to this place. 2ly. 'Tis uſed with a Dative caſe of the perſon, or (which is all one) with a prepoſition εἰς or κατὰ joined to the perſon, and then 'tis abſolutely to lie. So 'tis here, v. 4. οὐκ ἐψεύσω ἀνθρώποις, ἀλλὰ τῷ Θεῷ, Thou haſt not lied to men, but to God, the lie which thou haſt told, was not told to men only, or was not injurious to men only, but to God alſo. So Jam. 3. 14. ψεύδεσθε κατὰ τῆς ἀληθείας, ye lie againſt the truth, your lying is contrary to the Goſpel-doctrine and temper, and deſtructive to it. So Col. 3. 9. μὴ ψεύδεσθε εἰς ἀλλήλους, lie not againſt one another. 3ly. 'Tis uſed with an Accuſative caſe of the perſon again, and then it ſignifies actively, to deceive, rob, deprive; τὺς στρατιώτας ψευσάμενοι καὶ ἀπατήσας, in Herodian. l. 2. having deceived and cheated the ſoldiers, and in Ariſtoph. νεφέλ. Μὰ τὸν Δί' οὐ ψεύσῃ γε μὲ, certainly thou ſhalt not deceive, or cheat me: and that is the very notion of it here in this place, ψεύσασθαι τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα, to deceive the holy Ghoſt, Deum in pollicitatione fallere, to deceive God in that which was promiſed to him, ſaith S. Auguſtine; and again, detrahere de pecunia quam Deo voverat, to keep back ſome of the money which he had devoted to God; and accordingly by Aſterius, Ananias and his wife are called τῶν οἰκείων ἀναθημάτων ἱερόσυλοι, guilty of ſacriledge in their own offerings. And although if the matter ſpoken of extend no farther than ſpeaking a falſe thing (without any real purloining, or ſtealing, or with-holding what was conſecrated to the Church or to God) it would then proportionably ſignifie no more than to deceive, or to tell a lie to the holy Ghoſt; yet when the matter extends it thus much farther, not to bare words, but to the ἐνοσφίσατο ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς, v. 2. purloyning part of that price, which was all given to the Church, and by their own act put out of their own power, v. 5. (according to that rule of the Law, data, eo ipſo quòd dantur, fiunt accipientis, whatſoever is given, by that very act becomes the proper goods of the receiver) this ψεύσασθαι ἅγιον πνεῦμα, deceiving the holy Ghoſt, muſt needs refer to the not-keeping, not-obſerving, not-doing what was by them vowed, or to thoſe contrary actions, the purloining or with-holding part of that price, which was wholly given to the Church, and being not actually brought in and beſtowed on it, is ſaid to be the deceiving of the Holy Ghoſt, that is, robbing, depriving him of that which was beſtowed on him. This very ſame being expreſt alſo by νοσφίσασθαι ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς, that follows, that is, purloyning, as 'tis rendred, Tit. 2. 20. and as the word is uſed of Sacriledge by the Septuagint, Joſh. 7. 1. ἐνοσφίσατο ἀπὸ τῶν ἀναθημάτων, he purloined of the accurſed thing, or that [which was conſecrated, c. 6. 19. So 2 Mac. 4. v. 32. Menelaus χρυσώματά τινα νοσφισάμενος, ſtole, purloined ſome golden veſſels of the Temple. And ſo both phraſes join to make up the very thing which is called ἱεροσυλία, or ſacriledge ordinarily in ſacred or heathen writers; which therefore by this place appears to be a ſin againſt God, not againſt men, v. 4. (and ſo Mal. 3. 8.) and particularly the robbing of the Holy Ghoſt, which came down on purpoſe to perfect what Chriſt had begun, to formalize the ſociety of believers, into that which we now call a Church, and ſo to fit it for continuance and perpetuity. And by what we ſee done in theſe firſt chapters of the Acts, immediately after the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt, we have great reaſon to believe theſe two things: 1. that it was an effect of his inclining the hearts of the believers, that wealth was ſo liberally brought in unto the Apoſtles, and laid at their feet: and 2. that what was thus given, was really accepted of by the Holy Ghoſt, as given to him, and not to men only. For as among the Jews, what was given to God, was brought unto the Temple, and preſented to the Prieſt (κελεύει τὰς ἀπαρχὰς εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν κομίζεσθαι πρότερον, εἶτ' ἐνδίδωσι τοῖς ἱερεῦσι λαμβάνειν, he commanded that the firſt fruits ſhould be carried to the Temple, and received there by the Prieſts, ſaith Philo, de Sacerdot. honorib.) ſo here 'tis brought to the Apoſtles as Chriſt's receivers, for the uſe of all the poor Chriſtians, that ſhould want, to be by the direction of the Apoſtles diſpenſed to them; and that what is thus by the liberality of Chriſtians (κοινωνία ἁγίων in the Creed) inſtated on the Church, cannot afterwards by the very doners (much leſs by any elſe) be purloined or taken back again, without the guilt of that great ſin of deceiving and robbing God himſelf.

Ψεύδεσθε καὶ τῆς ἀληθείας.

Νοσφίσασθαι ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς.

V. 4. Whiles it remained.] There is ſome difficulty in this verſe: and the beſt way of clearing it, is, by ſetting the firſt word right, τὸ μένον, (which is commonly rendred, whilſt it remained) That ſure ſignifies a poſſeſſion immovable, an eſtate in land, which is called a demean in this very notion of μένειν, remaining, becauſe when the fruit is taken off, the land remains and ſo is applied here to κτῆμα, a poſſeſſion, v. 1. Upon the ſame account again 'tis called an eſtate, as being a ſtanding, remaining, continuing poſſeſſion. Proportionable to this, τὸ πεδὸν is wealth in money, or land ſold or put into money. And then the meaning of the whole is clear, Οὐχὶ μένον σοὶ ἔμενε; was not the land, eſtate, demeans, thy own land, eſtate, demeans? καὶ πεδὸν ἐν τῇ σῇ ἐξουσίᾳ ὑπῆρχε; and was not the price, for which it was ſold, wholly in thy power? that is, in thy hand, as יד in the hand, ſignifies in the power, not as of an owner, but as a receiver, as Gen 24. 10. 'tis ſaid of Abraham's ſervant, that all the goods of his maſter were

were in his hand, as in the ſtewards hand to receive and look to. So that in both reſpects, the poſſeſſion being wholly thine, and the money coming wholly to thy hands, paid wholly to thee, (the contrary of either of which would have allowed him ſome pretence and excuſe) there was no excuſe for thy not bringing, according to thy vow, the whole value of it.

d. Ζωῆς ταύτης ῥήματα

V. 20. This life.] What Ῥήματα ζωῆς ταύτης the words of this life, here ſignifies will ſoon be diſcerned by the uſe of ζωὴ, life, in the Goſpel, for that doctrine which is the ſetting down of the way, which will bring him that walks in it to eternal life. Thus John 12. 50. I know (ſaith Chriſt of the Meſſage which he brought from his Father) that his Commandment is eternal life, where eternal life muſt ſignifie that way which leads to it; ſo John 17. 3. This is eternal life, that they may know thee the only true God, that is, their knowing (and performing faithful, ſincere obedience to) the only true God, is the ſure way to eternal life. And accordingly the words of this life are the ſum of this Chriſtian doctrine, which being obeyed will bring any man to life eternal, and ſo 'tis all one with S. Peter's expreſſion to Chriſt, Lord to whom ſhall we go? thou haſt the words of eternal life, the word [ταύτης this] being here Emphatical, and denoting that more valuable, ſpiritual, and eternal life.

Ταύτης.

e. Ἀρχηγὸς Σωτῆρ.

V. 31. A Prince and a Saviour.] Theſe two words, ἀρχηγὸς, captain, and σωτὴρ, Saviour, in the ſtyle of the Old Teſtament ſignifie ſuch an one as Joſhua and the Judges were (ſee Note on Rom. 13. c.) expreſs'd here c. 7. 27. by ἄρχων καὶ δικαστὴς, a Ruler and a Judge, by δοῦναι σωτηρίαν, v. 25. giving deliverance, bringing them out of their ſlavery in Ægypt; and therefore ver. 35. (in ſetting down the Iſraelites miſtake, when they asked Moſes, who appointed him ἄρχοντα καὶ δικαστὴν, a Ruler and a Judge?) S. Stephen tells them, God had by the hand of an Angel ſent Moſes ἄρχοντα καὶ λυτρωτὴν, a captain and deliverer, by λυτρωτὴν, deliverer, meaning the ſame that by σωτηρίαν, deliverance, v. 25. and by σωτὴρ, Saviour here, one that leads and rules them, manages their military affairs to the avenging them of their enemies, and preſerving them ſafe and quiet. Such an one was Chriſt to be unto the people of God, and was ſent to be ſuch particularly to the Jews; but this not in that manner that they expected, but (as his kingdom was not of this world) in a ſpiritual manner, to go in and out before them againſt their ſpiritual enemies, Satan and ſin: To which end it was, that after his exaltation and inſtalment to his Regal office, the firſt thing was his ſending of his Spirit, thereby giving them (as here it follows) place of repentance, if upon the preaching of the Apoſtles, they will come in, and believe on him. In this ſenſe is it that Heb. 2. 10. Chriſt is called ἀρχηγὸς σωτηρίας, the captain of ſalvation or deliverance, that is, a captain deſigned on purpoſe to ſave and deliver them, to lead them, as 'tis there, through ſufferings to bliſs, through the wilderneſs, and the land of the Anakims, to Canaan, as Moſes and Joſhua, the captains and ſaviours of the Jews did; ἀρχηγὸς and σωτὴρ, captain and ſaviour, being an ἐνδιάδυοιν, two words together to expreſs one thing, and ſo directly the ſame with this other expreſſion of ἀρχηγὸς σωτηρίας, captain of Salvation.

Ἀρχηγὸς Σωτηρίας.

f. Διεπρίοντο

V. 33. Cut to the heart.] What διεπρίοντο here ſignifies will be beſt reſolved from Heſychius's rendring of the word. The ordinary Copy hath it, Διαπρίεσθαι, διαχρεμίζει, μαίνεσθαι. But that is a miſtake. It ſhould certainly be read, ἀγριαίνει, or διαγριάζει, grows wild, or angry, for that is all one with μαίνεσθαι, is mad, which follows; but διαχρεμίζει is quite another matter, and would rather belong to διαπρίεσθαι (which might be the cauſe of this miſtake by the nearneſs of the words) as πριάμενος and ἀγορασας are all one. By this then the word appears to ſignifie rage or vehement diſpleaſure (as ἀγριαίνει is ὀργίζεσθαι) ſuch as is in Bears and other wild beaſts, when it makes them tear in pieces thoſe that are next to them, or againſt whom it is conceived; As here it follows, they conſulted to put them to death.

g. Θεύδας.

V. 36. Theudas.] A ſtory there is of one Theudas which Joſephus mentions, Ant. l. 20. c. 5. and Euſebius Hiſt. l. 2. c. 12. who undertook to be a Prophet, and promiſed that he would divide Jordan, &c. But that was in Claudius's time, in the time of Fadus's præfecture, who deſtroyed him and his followers. And ſo that cannot be the perſon here mention'd, for this here was before Judas Galilæus, v. 37. and he was in the time of Cyrenius's being Governor of Syria (ſee Note h.) This Theudas here then muſt needs be ſome other perſon, whom they had recorded in their writings, and from thence Gamaliel here recites the ſtory, though we have no other record of it.

h. Ἰούδας Γαλιλαῖος.

V. 37. Judas of Galilee.] Of this Judas of Galilee, and of his enrolling, Joſephus's teſtimony is moſt clear, Antiq. l. 18. c. 1. Cyrenius, ſaith he, came to Cyria, ſent from Cæſar, (or under him) δικαιοδότης τῶν ἐθνες, καὶ τιμητὴς τῶν ἀσιῶν γνωσόμενος, as judge of the nation, and to take the valuation of their eſtates. Upon this, Judas Gaulonita ἐπείσθη ὀπὶ ἀποστάσει, rebell'd, or made defection, and Saddochus with him τὴν ἀποτίμησιν ἀδὴν ἄλλο ἢ ἀνδραποδισμὸν ἐλευθερίας ὀνειδίζοντες, ſaying that this valuation of their eſtates (the enrolling here) brought in direct ſervitude upon them, καὶ τὸ ἐλευθερίας ἐπ' ἀντιλήψει παρακαλοῦντες τὸ ἔθνος, and therefore called the whole nation to follow them, and vindicate their liberties. So again de Bell. Jud. l. 2. c. 12. Τὶς ἀνὴρ Γαλιλαῖος Ἰούδας εἰς ἀποστασίαν ἐπῆγε τοὺς ἐπιχωρίους, κακίζων, εἰ φόρον τε Ῥωμαίοις τελεῖν ὑπομένουσι, καὶ μετὰ τὸν Θεὸν ὄντας θνητοὺς δεσπότας, Judas led them to make a defection reproaching them, or making it a great crime in them, if they ſhould endure to pay tribute to the Romans, and acknowledge mortal Rulers, after God had been their King. This doctrine of the unlawfulneſs to pay tribute to men, upon pretence that they muſt acknowledge no other power but that of God over them, was it for which this Judas is by Joſephus ſet down as a leader or head of a fourth Hereſie among the Jews (Τῇ δὲ τετάρτῃ ὁ Γαλιλαῖος Ἰούδας ἡγεμὼν κατέστη). And the Texts of Scripture on which he grounded it may be thought by the words of Joſephus even now cited, φόρον τελεῖν, to pay tribute, and μετὰ τὸν Θεὸν θνητοὺς δεσπότας, mortal Lords after God, to be that of Deut. 23. 18. in the Septuagints reading of it, οὐκ ἔσται τελεσφόρος ἀπὸ θυγατέρων Ἰσραὴλ (which * Tertullian renders, non erit vectigal pendens ex filiis Iſrael, none of the children of Iſrael ſhall pay tribute,) καὶ οὐκ ἔσται τελεσκόμβρος ἐκ υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ, and that of Deut. 6. 13. thou ſhalt fear the Lord thy God and ſerve him, (by way of excluſion of all others.) The falſeneſs of which concluſion from theſe premiſes will appear not only from the Hebrew text, Deut. 23. (where the matter is very diſtant from that of paying tribute, There ſhall be no whore of the Daughters of Iſrael, nor a Sodomite of the ſons of Iſrael) but the right underſtanding of the Greek it ſelf, where, ſay the * Fathers, the words τελεσφόρος and τελεσκόμβρος refer to the myſteries of the Heathens, the unclean rites in their diabolical worſhips; and the firſt ſignifies ὁ μυσταγωγήσας, him that thus initiates, or enters, any in thoſe debaucheries, the latter ὁ μυσταγωγούμενον, him that is thus initiated.

* de pudic. c. 9.

* Theodor. qu. 12. in Deut.

i. Μήποτε.

V. 39. Leſt haply ye] Theſe words μήποτε, &c. leſt ye be found fighters againſt God, are in the ſenſe to be connected with ἐάσατε αὐτοὺς, Let them alone, v. 37. So that all that is betwixt, muſt be read as in parentheſis.

k. Ἀτιμάζεται.

V. 41. Suffer ſhame.] Ἀτιμάζεται ὁ ὑβριζόμενος ἔν τινι πεάγματι, ſaith Ammonius: it ſignifies reproachful, contumelious uſage; ſuch was this of ſcourging, that was a ſervile, and diſhonourable, infamous puniſhment.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND in thoſe days [when the number of diſciples was multiplied, there aroſe a murmuring of * the [a] Grecians againſt the Hebrews, becauſe their widows were neglected in the daily miniſtration.

* the Helleniſts.

1. The number of Chriſtians increaſing, the Jews that underſtood Greek, and uſed

2. And the twelve Apoſtles calling the Church together, ſaid unto them, We have reſolved or decreed (ſee note on John 8. c.) that it is no way fit or reaſonable, that we ſhould neglect the preaching of the Goſpel, and undertake the care of looking to the poor.

b. 2. Then the twelve called b the multitude of the diſciples unto them, and ſaid, It is not † reaſon that we ſhould leave the word of God, and ſerve tables.]

† thought fit, ἀρεστὸν

3. Therefore do you nominate to us ſeven men, who have approved themſelves to be faithful truſty perſons, the moſt eminent of the believers among you, that we may conſecrate or ordain them to this office of Deacons in the Church, and intruſt them with the task of diſtributing to them that want, out of the ſtock of the Church: And in the choice of them let it alſo be obſerved, that they be perſons of eminent gifts, and knowledge in divine matters, ſee v. 10. (who conſequently may be fit to be employed by us in preaching the word, and receiving proſelytes to the faith by baptiſm, ch. 8. 5, 12.)

c. 3. Wherefore, brethren, Look you out * among you ſeven men of honeſt report, c full of the holy Ghoſt and wiſdom, whom we may appoint † over this buſineſs.]

* ſeven men of you, that are approved, ἀνδρας ἐξ ὑμῶν μαρτυρουμένους ἑπτὰ.

† for this uſe, ὃν τῆς χρείας ταύτης, ſee Tit. 3. note t.

4. And by that means we ſhall be leſs diſturbed or interrupted in our daily employment of praying and preaching the Goſpel.

4. But we will * give our ſelves continually to prayer, and to the miniſtry of the word.]

* continue in προσκαρτερήσομεν τῇ.

5. And the thing was thus agreed on by thoſe other that aſſociated with the Apoſtles. And they pitched upon Stephen firſt, a very worthy perſon, that was richly inſtructed in the doctrine of Chriſt, and was by the holy Ghoſt's coming upon him fitted with elocution and all other abilities to preach the Goſpel.

5. And the ſaying pleaſed the whole multitude: and they choſe Stephen, a man full of faith, and of the holy Ghoſt,] and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicholas a proſelyte of Antioch.

6. Theſe ſeven the whole number of diſciples that aſſociated with them preſented to the twelve Apoſtles, and they, that is, the Apoſtles, by prayer and impoſition of hands (ſee note on 1 Tim. 5. f.) conſecrated or ordained them to this office of Deacons.

6. Whom they ſet before the Apoſtles: and ‖ when they had prayed they laid their hands on them.]

‖ they prayed, and laid προσευξάμενοι ἐπέθ.

7. And the faith of Chriſt was propagated, and a very great number of men in Jeruſalem aſſociated with the Apoſtles, every day more and more; and many of the Jewiſh prieſts received the Goſpel thus preached by the Apoſtles.

7. And the word of God increaſed, and the number of the Diſciples multiplied in Jeruſalem greatly, and a great company of the Prieſts were obedient to the faith.]

8. And Stephen the deacon, being endued with great abundance of Chriſtian knowledge, and alſo with the power of working miracles.

8. And Stephen full of faith and power] did great wonders and miracles among the people.

9. And as he preached the faith of Chriſt, ſome men of that ſynagogue which was called by the name (becauſe perhaps built at the charges) of the Libertines (that is, thoſe which were the ſons of them which being Jews had been made free deniſons by the Romans, or were born of Jewiſh parents in cities which had thoſe priviledges under the Romans, ſuch as Tarſus, (ſee note on c. 22. e.) where Paul was born, who was an active perſon in this buſineſs, ch. 7. 58. ſome, I ſay, of thoſe Jews) and of thoſe that dwelt in Cyrene, and Alexandria, and in Cilicia, and Aſia, oppoſed Stephen and contradicted him.

9. Then there aroſe certain of the ſynagogue, which is called the Synagogue of the Libertines, and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia, and of Aſia diſputing with Stephen.]

10. And he ſpake with ſo much knowledge and conviction of argument, and with ſo great excellence of elocution, that they were no way able to deal with him.

10. And they were not able to reſiſt the wiſdom, and the ſpirit by which he ſpake.]

11. And being overcome by his reaſons and power of ſpeaking, they betook themſelves to other viler arts, and hired ſome men to accuſe him falſly, and to make complaint to the Sanhedrim, that they had heard him ſpeak diſhonourably of the Jewiſh religion.

11. Then they ſuborned men, which ſaid, we have heard him ſpeak blaſphemous words againſt Moſes, and againſt God.]

12. And having incenſed the Sanhedrim againſt him, and alſo the people at Jeruſalem, they apprehended and carried him before the Sanhedrim.

12. And they ſtirred up the people, and the Elders, and the Scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council,]

13. And brought thoſe witneſſes which they had hired or ſuborned, v. 11. to give in their teſtimony, which was thus, This Stephen is continually a foretelling deſtruction to the Temple, and threatning the change of all the Moſaical rites.

13. And ſet up falſe witneſſes, which ſaid, This Man ceaſeth not to ſpeak blaſphemous words againſt this holy place and the Law.]

14. Rites, Ceremonies.

14. For we have heard him ſay, that this Jeſus of Nazareth ſhall deſtroy this place, and ſhall change the [cuſtoms] which Moſes delivered us.

15. And all that ſat in the council looking ſtedfaſtly on him, ſaw his face, as it had been the face of an Angel.]

15. And all the Judges that were preſent in the Sanhedrim, as they looked on him, ſaw a great ſplendor about him, juſt as it is when an Angel appeareth.

Annotations on Chap. VI.

a. Ἑλληνιστὰι

V. 1. Græcians.] The word Ἑλληνιστὰι is by the Syriack rendred Jews that underſtand Greek; and by S. Chryſoſtome, τὰς Ἑλληνιστὰ φθεγγομένους, thoſe that ſpeak Greek, in oppoſition to the βαθεῖς Ἑβραῖοι, the profound, or deep Hebrews: ſo ſaith Phavorinus, Ἑλλωϊζω, Ἑλλωι, κῶς φθεγγομαι, καὶ τὰ Ἑλλήνων φρονῶ, to Hellenize is to ſpeak Greek, and to have skill in the Greek learning. So ſaith Scaliger, Ἑλλωίζειν non eſt habitare in Græciâ, ſed linguâ Græcâ uti, It is not to dwell in Greece, but to uſe the Greek language. And ſo thoſe here that uſed the Septuagints tranſlation of the Bible, are called Ἑλλωιστὰι, Helleniſts. And ſo are differenced here from the Ἑβραῖοι, Hebrews, which uſed the Jeruſalem-paraphraſe. Thus are Ἑλλωιστὰι, Acts 11. 20. differenced from the Jews in general, v. 19. not that thoſe Helleniſts were not Jews (for there v. 20. 'tis ſaid that they preached to them, whereas v. 19. 'tis clear that they preached to none but Jews) but that theſe Jews underſtood Greek, and uſed the Greek Bible, and therefore are called Helleniſts. And thus ch. 9. 28. when the other Jews, thoſe of the profounder ſort, had ſuch an averſion to S. Paul the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, that they would not ſee him, ſaith S. Chryſoſtom, he was yet admitted to ſpeak and diſcourſe with the Helleniſts. See note on John 7. d.

b. Πλῆθος μαθητῶν Πάντες Πλείονες.

V. 2. The multitude of the diſciples.] Τὸ πλῆθος τῶν μαθητῶν, multitude of diſciples here are the community or ſociety of Chriſtians, called ſometimes πάντες the All, 1 Tim. 5. 20. πλείονες, the many, 2 Cor. 2. 6. anſwerable to the multitude here, and ſometimes χριστιανοι, Chriſtians, or followers of Chriſt, in reſpect of whom as their Doctor, or Maſter, they are here called μαθηταὶ, diſciples; and both ordinarily united together in the word, ἐκκλησία, Church, and ἀδελφοὶ, the brethren: ſee c. 15. 3, and 4, and 23. and Mat. 18. 17. Now what power the Church, or brethren, conſidered in this notion, the ſociety of Chriſtians do here appear to have, may be conſiderable. The choice of the perſons of the Deacons is here committed to them: But that firſt by the appointment of the Apoſtles declared to them. The twelve called to them the multitude, and ſaid, Look out, &c. v. 2, 3. Secondly, They had by the Apoſtles theſe bounds ſet them, 1. to take ſeven, the number ſpecified by the Apoſtles, not left arbitrary to them;

them, ſecondly, to pitch on ἄνδρας μαρτυρουμένους, men generally known and well reputed of; thirdly, with theſe qualifications, 1. faith, ſuppoſed in the ἐξ ὑμῶν, ſome of you, that is, believers, Chriſtians. 2. Fulneſs of the holy Ghoſt, extraordinary gifts. 3. Fulneſs of wiſdom, fitted by all theſe for this employment. And when by the Apoſtles appointment, together with the obſervation of theſe preſcribed rules, the multitude have ſought out the perſons, then ſtill the Apoſtles reſerve the καταστήσομεν, the Ordination, or Conſtitution of them to themſelves, *v.*3. In the nomination of Biſhops and Deacons in other Churches, the like may be concluded from the Epiſtles to Timothy and Titus, viz. that ſomewhat was referred to the Church, particularly their teſtimony concerning the qualifications of the Perſons. For the Biſhop that was to ordain, is by St. Paul's direction firſt to enquire, as it were upon Articles (εἴ τις ἐστὶν ἀνέγκλητος, if, or whether, he be blameleſs, &c.) which concerning a Biſhop are fifteen, *Tit.*1.6. ſeventeen, 1 *Tim.*3.1. fewer concerning a Deacon: and all of them being matters of fact and manners, Timothy, which was newly entred upon his province, and Titus lately left in Crete, could not poſſibly be inſtructed ſufficiently from their own experience, and therefore muſt be ſuppoſed to have it by enquiry of the Church. So in the Cenſures of the Church, the offender muſt be rebuked before the many, 2 *Cor.*2.6. ἐπιτιμία ὑπὸ τῶν πλειόνων, before the Church, Mat. 18. 17. ἐνώπιον πάντων, before all, 1 Tim. 5. 20. Where yet it is, Timothy the Biſhop, that muſt ἐλέγχειν, rebuke the offenders, only in the preſence, & with the notice of the Church, to make the rebuke more conſiderable, to produce ſhame and reformation. Laſtly, in the Councel at Jeruſalem, with the Apoſtles and Elders, or Biſhops of Judea, is joined ὅλη ἐκκλησία the whole Church, ch. 15. 22. in the chooſing and ſending meſſengers to Antioch; but that with a moſt diſcernible diſtinction, the Apoſtles and Elders, as they, whoſe decree or appointment it was ἔδοξε τοῖς Ἀποστόλοις καὶ πρεσβυτέροις, it pleaſed, or ſeemed good to the Apoſtles and Elders to ſend choſen men, the choice and miſſion belonging to them, and the perſons ſent ἄνδρες ἐξ αὐτῶν, men of them, Biſhops of the Council, but this with the knowledge and approbation of the whole Church (σὺν ὅλῃ τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ) joined with them, as of thoſe that were acceſſaries, not principals in the ſending. So in the Inſcription of the Epiſtle of the Councel, *v.*23. The Apoſtles and Elders and brethren ſend greeting: Not that any but the Apoſtles and Elders, that is, Biſhops of Judea, were members of the Councel, or had voices in it, (for that is cleared, v. 6. at the firſt mention of their convening, The Apoſtles and Elders came together to conſider of this matter, the debate of the queſtion, and the deciſion, belonging only to them) but that the whole Church joined with the Apoſtles and Biſhops, ſhewing their conſent and approbation, and ſubmiſſion to the decree of the Council. And thus in following times have Lay-men ſubſcribed the Acts of Councels in this form, Conſentiens ſubſcripſi, I have ſubſcribed conſenting, or teſtified my conſent under my hand. As for the decree of the Council, tho' that be in the ſtyle of ἡμῖν, us, *v.*28. which may be conceived to refer to all thoſe that are named in the front, and ſo to the ἀδελφοὶ, brethren, yet 'tis apparent by v. 25. ἔδοξεν ἡμῖν γενομένοις ὁμοθυμαδὸν, it ſeemed good to us being aſſembled together, that that belongs only to thoſe that were aſſembled or ſat in the Council, that is, the Apoſtles and Elders, *v.*6. and ſo it is expreſly ſet, *c.*16. 4. δόγματα τὰ κεκριμένα ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀποστόλων καὶ πρεσβυτέρων, the decrees ordained by the apoſtles and elders.

V.3. Full of the holy Ghoſt] What is meant by πλήρεις πνεύματος ἁγίου full of the holy Ghoſt in this place, may perhaps be beſt collected by a farther conſideration of the words of Chriſt, Mark 16. 17, 18. But ſigns ſhall attend them which believe theſe things, (ſo Σημεῖα δὲ τοῖς πιστεύσασι ταῦτα παρακολουθήσει may be rendred) or theſe ſigns ſhall attend, or follow them that believe. Theſe words ſeem to contain a promiſe of extraordinary gifts (of caſting out devils, ſpeaking ſtrange languages, healing, &c. v. 17, 18.) to others (beſide the Apoſtles) under the name of believers. For the believers there πιστεύσαντες are all one with the he that believeth, ὁ πιστεύσας, and is baptized, *v.*16. and that is thoſe that upon the Apoſtles preaching ſhall believe, and enter into the Church, or be added to it. But this not ſo unlimitedly on one ſide, as that all that did believe ſhould have thoſe gifts beſtow'd upon them, (ſee note on ch. 2. d.) for then here would have been no choice; all being full of the holy Ghoſt, they could not look out men that were full; nor yet with ſuch reſtrictions on the other ſide, as that none had theſe gifts, but thoſe that were ordained to ſacred functions, for then theſe, who were not yet ſo ordained, could not thus be full. But I ſuppoſe the truth is in the middle. At the Apoſtles preaching and mens receiving the Goſpel, many of them that believed had extraordinary gifts, miraculous powers beſtowed upon them, for the teſtifying to themſelves and others the truth of the Goſpel in thoſe firſt times, and to qualify them for the ſervice of the Church, when they ſhould be called to it. And agreeably thoſe that were thus endowed, were generally choſen to ſuch employments (before others who had them not) as there was need of them; and ſuch I ſuppoſe are here meant under the phraſe of full of the holy Ghoſt, and that phraſe mention'd by the Apoſtles, as a qualification required in thoſe whom they would appoint Deacons here, and, beſide the care of the poor, communicate the power of preaching and baptizing to them, which 'tis evident Philip had. This may moſt probably be it, which is affirmed of Cornelius's family, Acts 10.44. The holy Ghoſt fell on all them which heard the word, and the gift of the holy Ghoſt was poured upon them, 45. for they ſpeak with tongues, &c. 46. So again, *c.*19.6. the Epheſian diſciples being newly baptized in the name of Jeſus, v. 5. by the Apoſtles benediction, and impoſition of hands, the H. Ghoſt came upon them, and they ſpake with tongues and propheſied. And ſo ch. 2. 38. when Peter tells them, that upon their Repentance and Baptiſm, they ſhould receive δωρεὰν, the gift of the holy Ghoſt, (the very phraſe which is uſed of Cornelius's family) it follows accordingly, ch. 4. 31. the place was ſhaken, and they were filled with the holy Ghoſt, and ſo, beſide the inward gifts and graces of the Spirit, they were, many of them, endowed with thoſe extraordinary gifts, which *c.*2.1. had fallen upon the Apoſtles, and were uſeful for the confirming them in the faith, and to teſtify to them and others the truth of what was preached to them. And of them that were at that time converted, they are now to chooſe ſome here, for the office of Deacons, men full of the Spirit, &c.

3. And ſaid unto him, Get thee out of thy country and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I ſhall ſhew thee.]

3. And when he appeared he commanded him, ſaying,

The country where thou art is over-run with all villany, and therefore that thou mayeſt keep thy ſelf free from their idolatries, and other vices accompanying them, I command thee to forſake that place, and thy fathers houſe, Gen.12.1. and remove into another land which I ſhall appoint and direct thee to, viz. the Land of Canaan, which though now poſſeſs'd by others, yet I will give unto thee, and to thy ſeed intirely, Gen.13.14. and by thy readineſs to take this journey on this command I ſhall diſcern thy obedience to me.

4. Then came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Cherran: and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land wherein ye now dwell.]

4. Then in obedience to that command, he went out of that country of his (and his father Terah with him, as far as Haran, Gen. 11.31.) and after he had dwelt in Haran ſome years, according to Gods command, he removed into Canaan, Gen. 12.5.

5. And he gave him none inheritance in it no not ſo much as to ſet his foot on: yet he promiſed that he would give it to him for a poſſeſſion, and to his ſeed after him, when as yet he had no child,]

5. And there he pitched his tent, and built an altar, v.7, 8. (but was ſoon fain to remove into Egypt, v.10. and there to ſojourn) having received a promiſe of God, that he would give him this whole land of Canaan, ch.12.7. for him and his ſeed to poſſeſs, when as yet he had no child, nor likelihood to have any, nor any kind of eſtate in the land, but was a ſtranger, or ſojourner there, Gen.17.18. & 20.1. & 21. 34. & 23.4.

6. And God ſpake on this wiſe, that his ſeed ſhould ſojourn in a ſtrange land, and that they ſhould bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil a four hundred years.]

6. And Gen.15.13. God ſpake to him again concerning this matter, that before

a. this promiſe ſhould be performed to him, his poſterity ſhould firſt ſojourn in Canaan, and then go down to ſojourn in Egypt, and there ſhould ſuffer, and be for ſome time oppreſſed, like ſlaves, till the end of 400 years from the time of the birth of Iſaac (not from the time of the going into Egypt) until the time that the iniquity of the ſeven nations, all concluded there (as Amos 2. 9, 10.) under the general name of the Amorites, which inhabited this promiſed Land, ſhould be filled up, and ſo they fit for God in juſtice to deſtroy them, and give away their land from them, Gen.15.16.

7. And the nation to whom they ſhall be in bondage will I judge, ſaid God: and after that ſhall they come forth, and ſerve me in this place.]

7. And then in the fourth generation (Gen. 15. 16.) after Jacob (Moſes and Aaron, which brought them out, being the ſons of Amram, the ſon of Cohath, the ſon of Levi, one of Jacobs ſons that went down with him into Egypt) when the time comes of bringing them out of their Egyptian ſlavery, and giving them this land, I will, ſaith God, Gen.15.14. lay heavy puniſhments on the Egyptians, and by that means make them releaſe thy poſterity, and ſo they ſhall come and poſſeſs this land, and ſerve me in it.

8. And he gave him the covenant of circumciſion: and ſo Abraham begat Iſaac, and circumciſed him the eighth day; and Iſaac begat Jacob, and Jacob begat the twelve Patriarchs.]

8. And God made a covenant with him, & appointed circumciſion as a ſeal of it; and accordingly Abraham, when Iſaac was born, circumciſed him the eighth day; and Iſaac begat and circumciſed Jacob, and Jacob his twelve ſons, the heads of the twelve tribes, of which this people conſiſted.

9. And the Patriarchs * moved with envy, ſold Joſeph into Egypt: but God was with him,]

9. And thoſe ſons of Jacob were much diſpleaſed with one of their brethren, viz. Joſeph, and ſold him into Egypt; but when he was there, God protected, and provided for, and advanced him miraculouſly.

* being enraged, ζηλώσαντες

10. And delivered him out of all his † affliction, and gave him favour, and wiſdom in the ſight of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and he made him governour over Egypt, and all his houſe.

10. And when he was caſt into priſon there, God brought him out, and at the ſame time brought him into favour and eſtimation for deep wiſdom with Pharaoh the king of Egypt: and he entruſted the affairs of his whole houſhold, yea and the whole kingdom to his managery.

† afflictions θλίψεων

11. Now there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Canaan, and great affliction, and our fathers found no ſuſtenance.]

11. At this time of Joſephs power with Pharaoh there came a terrible famine upon Egypt and Canaan for ſeven years ſpace, and our father Jacob and his children being then in Canaan, were like to have periſhed for want of food.

12. But when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he ſent out our fathers firſt.

13. And at the ſecond time Joſeph was made known to his brethren, and Joſeph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.]

12, 13. And Jacob underſtanding, that, tho' the famin was as great at preſent in Egypt as in Canaan, yet there was a magazin of corn reſerved from the former years plenty, and ſo there was now ſufficient for themſelves, and to ſell to others, ſent his ſons twice into Egypt to buy corn: and tho' the firſt time Joſeph dealt a little harſhly with them, yet the ſecond time he made himſelf known to be their brother, and made it known alſo to Pharaoh.

14. Then ſent Joſeph and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, b threeſcore and fifteen ſouls.]

b. 14. And by Pharaohs appointment, Joſeph ſent for his father and brethren, and their wives and children, which, reckoning in ſome of their children born in Egypt, together with Joſeph and his ſons, and ſons ſons, made up ſeventy five perſons.

15. So Jacob went down into Egypt, and died, he and our fathers,]

15. And accordingly Jacob went down to him with his whole family; and he and all his ſons died there.

16. And were c carried over into Sichem, and laid in the ſepulchre that Abraham bought for a ſum of money of the ſons of Emmor the father of Sichem.]

c. 16. And Joſeph and ſome (ſay the ancients) of his brethren, being firſt buried in Egypt, were after, at the Iſraelites going out, removed to Sichem, Joſ. 24. 32. and buried in the field bought by Jacob of the children of Hamor; and Jacob himſelf never buried in Egypt, but by his ſons carried, and buried, Gen.50. 13. in the field of Machpelah, bought by Abraham of Ephron ſon of Zoar, Gen. 23.8. or of the ſons of Heth, Gen. 49. 32. And ſo ſaith Joſephus, ſome of his ſons alſo.

17. But when the time of the promiſe drew nigh, which God had ſworn to Abraham, the people grew and multiplied in Egypt,

18. Till another King aroſe, which knew not Joſeph.]

17, 18. And when the four hundred years began to be expired, after which the performance of the promiſe to Abrahams ſeed, of giving them the land of Canaan, was to commence, the people growing into a great number, and another king coming to reign in Egypt, that forgat the merits of Joſeph.

20. In which time Moſes was born, and was e exceeding fair; and nouriſhed up in his fathers houſe three months.

21. And when he was caſt out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up and † nouriſhed him for her own ſon.]

e. 20,21. At this point of time Moſes was born, and being a very beautiful child, he was firſt kept cloſe in his fathers houſe three months, Exod.2. But when that could no longer be done, he was put in a cradle of bulruſhes by a rivers brink; and being there left and expoſed, the providence of God preſerved him. For it happened that Pharaoh's daughter found him there, and took him, and put him to nurſe to his own mother, Exod.2.9. and ſo afterwards educated and brought him up as her own ſon.

† brought him up for her ſelf as, or for a ſon, ἀνεθρέψατο αὐτὸν ἑαυτῇ εἰς υἱὸν

22. And

22. And Moſes was learned in all the wiſdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds.]

22. By which means he was inſtructed in all the learning of the Egyptians, in Mathematicks, and Phyſicks, &c (ſee note on 2 Tim. 3. a.) and was thereby a perſon of great abilities above other men, both for ſpeaking (viz. in reſpect of Eloquence and power of ſpeech, tho' for the manner of utterance he had ſome ſtammering in his ſpeech) and alſo for managery of buſineſs. Very able both to give counſel, and to act any great affairs.

23. And when he was full forty years old, it came into his heart to viſit his brethren the children of Iſrael.]

23. And when he was forty years old, God having ſome way revealed unto him (ſee note on 2 Tim. 3. a.) his purpoſe of delivering the Iſraelites out of their ſlavery by his hands, and making him their leader, and inſtrument of his vengeance on their oppreſſors the Egyptians (ſee v. 25.) thereupon he reſolved to viſit them, and ſee how it was with them.

24. And ſeeing one of them ſuffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppreſſed, and ſmote the Egyptian.]

24. And ſeeing an Egyptian do injury to an Iſraelite, he took the Iſraelites part againſt him, and in defence of the Iſraelite, kill'd the Egyptian.

* But, or, And he thought that his brethren did underſtand, Ενόμιζε συνιέναι τοὺς ἀδ.

25. * For he ſuppoſed his brethren would have underſtood how that God by his hand would deliver them; but they underſtood not.]

25. This he did as an act of that office, to which God had deſigned him, that of a Saviour or Deliverer of his country-men: and although he had not yet received his commiſſion to that office, but only ſome notice of Gods deſignation, yet thinking that the Iſraelites did alſo know that he was thus deſigned, he thought fit to do this (which lawfully he might, in the defence of an innocent perſons life againſt an unjuſt aſſault or violence, which could not be averted but by this means) viz. in defence of the one to kill the other, as a firſt aſſay, or exerciſe of that office. But in this he was miſtaken, for the Iſraelites knew nothing of this purpoſe of God to employ him, and from this act of his had not that ſagacity to diſcern it.

† perſwaded them to peace, Συνήλασεν αὐτοὺς εἰς εἰρήνην

26. And the next day he ſhewed himſelf unto them as they ſtrove, and † would have ſet them at one again,] ſaying, Sirs, ye are brethren, why do ye wrong one to another?

26. The next day he interpoſed himſelf again as a pacifier or compoſer of controverſies among them, to ſee how that would be accepted by them, whether they would be likely to receive him as a judge, to go in and out before them, which was another part of the office to which he was deſign'd.

27. But he that did his neighbour wrong thruſt him away, ſaying, Who made thee a ruler, and a judge over us?

28. Wilt thou kill me, as thou didſt the Egyptian yeſterday?

29. Then fled Moſes at this ſaying, and was a ſtranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two ſons.]

29. And Moſes ſeeing himſelf thus repulſed, and on the other ſide fearing that what he had done already, might, by being known, bring hazard on him (as it did Exod. 2. 15. when Pharaoh heard of it, he ſought to kill him) he fled from thence to Midian, and there ſojourned with Revel, Exod. 2. 18. or, which is all one, with Jethro, ch. 3. 1. the prieſt or prince of Midian, Exod. 2. 16. and he kept his ſheep, and married his daughter Zipporah, by whom he had two children. Gerſhom, ſo named for his being a ſtranger or ſojourner there, and Eliezer, from God's helping him or delivering him from the hand of Pharaoh, that ſought his life, Exod. 18. 2, 3, 4.

30. And when forty years were expired, there appeared unto him in the wilderneſs of mount Sinai an Angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in a buſh.]

30. And at the end of a ſecond part of three of his life, i.e. of a ſecond forty years, which was alſo the period of the 400 years prefix'd, v. 6. as Moſes was feeding his ſheep about Horeb or Sinai, that mount, after ſo famous for Gods delivering the Law out of it, and therefore called the flaming mountain of God, Exod. 3. 2. he ſaw a flame of fire in a buſh, but the buſh was not hurt or conſumed by it, which was the appearing of an Angel, according as 'twas uſual for Angels to appear, (ſee note on Mat. 3. k.)

31. When Moſes ſaw it, he wondered at the ſight: and as he drew near to behold it, the voice of the Lord came unto him,

32. Saying, I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob. [Then Moſes trembled and durſt not behold.]

32. And this voice of God by an Angel ſpeaking (and perhaps, as it was uſual, thunder joined with it) was ſo terrible to him, and the flame that appeared in the buſh ſo glorious and illuſtrious, that he durſt not look upon it, but hid his face, Exod. 3. 6.

33. Then ſaid the Lord to him [Put off thy ſhoes from thy feet: for the place where thou ſtandeſt is holy ground.]

33. This appearance of an Angel is an argument & evidence of my peculiar preſence, from which any place is called holy, and therefore, in reverence due to ſuch a preſence, put off thy ſhoes, &c.

34. I have ſeen, I have ſeen the * afflictions of my people which is in Egypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come down to deliver them. And now come, I will ſend thee into Egypt.]

34. Now is the time come wherein I will certainly viſit and relieve that people of mine, the children of Abraham, which, according to what I foretold him (ſee v. 6.) have been uſed like ſlaves in Egypt a long time; and to this purpoſe now I have ſent down my Angel, the only way of my peculiar preſence in any one place, that I may commune with thee, and ſend thee on this meſſage, as my Commiſſioner to bring them out thence.

35. This Moſes whom they refuſed, ſaying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge? the ſame did God ſend to be a ruler and deliverer, by the hands of the Angel, which appeared to him in the buſh.]

35. And ſo that Moſes that they would not receive to avenge their injuries, or compoſe their quarrels, v. 27, 28. was now ſent by God to lead them and bring them out of Egypt, and to this end an Angel ſent to talk with him, and give him his commiſſion, which was done in a glorious manner by a flame in (but not conſuming) the buſh.

36. He brought them out, after that he had ſhewed wonders and ſigns in the land of Egypt, and in the Red-ſea, and in the wilderneſs forty years.]

36. And at laſt, after the working of many terrible prodigies firſt in Egypt, then at their departure in the Red Sea; he reſcued them out of Pharaoh's hands, and after forty years ſpent in the wilderneſs, to puniſh their murmuring, and to ſhew forth more of God's power and miracles in ſuſtaining them there, they were at laſt brought by Joſhua into Canaan.

37. This is that Moſes which ſaid unto the children of Iſrael, A Prophet ſhall the Lord your God raiſe up unto you of your brethren like unto me; him ſhall ye hear.]

37. Now what was this Moſes all this while, but a prophet foretelling the purpoſe of God to ſend another great prophet to you in theſe later days, the Meſſias, which (though he were God from heaven, yet) ſhould here be born in an ordinary condition of a daughter of Abraham, and warning you to be ſure to receive and entertain him, when he ſhould come, aſſuring you that if you hear not (receive not) him, you ſhall (which was the point in hand, which Stephen was all this while a demonſtrating, in anſwer to what was laid to his charge, ch. 6. 14.) be utterly deſtroyed? 39, 40. And after all theſe prodigies and miracles uſed by God to give him authority among them, the Iſraelites murmured and rebelled againſt him ſtill; and had more mind to be in Egypt again, then under his government, and to that purpoſe made them pictures of the Egyptians

42. This provoked God to forſake them, to leave them to themſelves, to permit them to follow their own hearts deſires into all the madneſs they led them to, and ſo by not reſtraining, to deliver them up to worſhip the ſtars of heaven, inſtead of God, upon which it is that God expoſtulates with them, Am. 5.25. were the ſacrifices which you offered up in the wilderneſs all thoſe forty years, offered to me, O ye houſe of Iſrael?

Annotations

Annotations on Chap. VII.

a. Τετρακόσια ἔτη

V. 6. Four hundred years] That the four hundred years here mention'd, as alſo Gen. 15. 13. or the four hundred and thirty, *Ex.*12.40. are not to be interpreted of the ſpace wherein the Iſraelites continued in Egypt, ſo as to begin at Jacob's and his ſons coming thither, and to end at Moſes's carrying them out, is ſufficiently manifeſt by all ſtory of thoſe times. The Chaldee paraphraſt, and the generality of the Jews determining that ſpace to be but two hundred and ten, only Joſephus defining it two hundred and fifteen years. Firſt then it muſt be obſerved, that the words here, and in thoſe other places, being not ſtrictly reſtrained to their dwelling in Egypt, but ſo as to contain alſo their ſojourning in Canaan, the γῇ ἀλλοτρία, ſtrange land, here may fitly comprehend both of them, and the πάροικον ἔσται, ſhall ſojourn, may do ſo too; for Abraham ſojourned in Canaan, before his poſterity were ſojourners in Egypt, yea and himſelf firſt ſojourned in Egypt, *Gen.*12.10. And ſo the words in *Gen.*15.13. are in the ſame latitude, thy ſeed ſhallbe a ſtranger in a land which is not theirs, and ſhall ſerve them; Where the land which is not theirs, diſtinctly the γῇ ἀλλοτρία, a ſtrange land here, is common to both thoſe lands, where they ſojourned, and where they were ſervants. And in the place *Ex.*12.40. the words in our Engliſh the ſojourning of the children of Iſrael who dwelt in Egypt, are reconcileable with this alſo, their ſojourning being defined to be ſo many years, part of which they dwelt in Egypt, but not their ſojourning in Egypt ſo many years. And therefore when the Septuagint read it Ἡ δὲ παροίκησις τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ, ὧν παῴκησαν ἐν γῇ Αἰγύπτῳ, the ſojourning of the children of Iſrael which they ſojourned in Egypt, they add by way of neceſſary paraphraſe, καὶ ἐν γῇ Χαναὰν, and in the land of Canaan, and ſo the Samaritan-Pentateuch read; and Solomon Jarchi, & in terris aliis, and in other lands, inſtead of it. Secondly, it muſt be obſerved what latitude belongs in that place of Exodus 12. 40. to that phraſe children of Iſrael, not ſo as to denote the poſterity of Jacob only, but incluſively them and their fathers, Jacob and Iſaac, the poſterity of Abraham: This is done by a figure Synecdoche, ordinary in all languages; and therefore the Septuagint, to expreſs it more plainly, thought fit to enlarge their paraphraſe, and having added Canaan to Egypt, they add alſo to the children of Iſrael, αὐτοὶ, καὶ οἱ πατέρες αὐτῶν, both they and their fathers, and ſo read that whole verſe thus, Ἡ δὲ παροίκησις τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ ὧν παῴκησαν ἐν γῇ Αἰγύπτῳ καὶ ἐν γῇ Χαναὰν, αὐτοὶ καὶ οἱ πατέρες αὐτῶν, ἔτη τετρακόσια τριάκοντα, The ſojourning of the children of Iſrael, which they and their fathers ſojourned in the land of Egypt and Canaan was four hundred and thirty years. And tho' ſome copies of the Septuagint have not that latter addition of, they and their fathers, yet St. Auguſtin in Exod. qu. 47. acknowledgeth both additions. Mean while the words both here, and Gen. 15. 13. have no need of ſuch a paraphraſe, aſſigning it to Abraham's not to Jacobs ſeed. And ſo ſaith Joſephus Antiq. l. 2. ὁ δὲ Ἀβραὰμος μετὰ Χαλδαίων πέμπτῃ καὶ δεκάτῃ κατὰ σελήνην, κατὰ τὸν τριακοστὸν καὶ τετρακόσιοστὸν ἢ μικρῷ πρόσθεν ἡμῶν Ἀφεσμουθὶς ἢ Κανάαλιν ἐλθεῖν, they left Egypt in the month Xanthicus, on the fifteenth day, four hundred and thirty years after our father Abraham came into Canaan. So that now the only difficulty behind is to accord the four hundred years here, and in Geneſis, with the four hundred and thirty in Exodus: And that muſt be by diſtinguiſhing of the beginning of the account, which may be either from Abrahams leaving of Chaldea, and receiving the firſt promiſe of Canaan, or elſe from the birth of Iſaac, Abrahams ſeed. If the account be begun from the leaving Chaldea, Abrahams own country, when his ſojourning did begin, then it falls right to be four hundred and thirty years, as it is in Exodus; for Abraham being born in the year of the World 2007, and the warning of God to him to go out of his country, being in the ſeventieth year of his age, that is, in the 2077th of the world, four hundred and thirty years added to that number make up 2507. and in the next year after that, is the departure out of Egypt placed by the beſt Chronologers. But if the account begin from Abrahams ſeed, that is, from the birth of Iſaac, which we know was in the hundredth year of Abrahams age, and ſo thirty years after his departure from Chaldea, then it muſt conſequently be thirty years leſs from thence to the departure out of Egypt; and ſo that will accord exactly with the four hundred years here, and in Geneſis, which are aſſigned to his ſeeds ſojourning in a ſtrange land. Thus the Jews in Seder Olam collect from that place in Geneſis, thy ſeed ſhall be a ſtranger four hundred years, that is, Iſaac from his birth, and his poſterity, till the delivery out of Egypt by Moſes. Of which ſpace, the ſervitude and oppreſſion of the Iſraelites in Egypt came not, ſay they, to much above an hundred and thirty years, but their ſtay after Jacob's deſcent, to two hundred and ten; to which adding one hundred and ninety years from Iſaac's birth, to Jacob's going down into Egypt, (which is accordingly placed by Chronologers, An. Mun. 2298.) the whole four hundred years are made up exactly.

b. Ἑβδομήκοντα πέντε

V. 14. Threeſcore and fifteen] The difference of the number of thoſe which are ſaid to have gone down into Egypt, from that computation which we find Gen. 46.27. & Deut. 10. 22. where they are but threeſcore and ten, hath made ſome writers think fit to change the reading. Th. Beza, from Cor. Bertram is willing to believe πέντε, five, miſtaken for πάντες, all. Others rather phanſy πάντως, all together, but without any pretence of ancient or later copy for either: nay, on the contrary, the Syriack, and Arabick, and Latin Tranſlations are all for that which we now have, and ſo make thoſe conjectures unſeaſonable. The matter ſure is to be imputed to another original. S. Luke, we know was one of thoſe which made uſe of the Greek tranſlation of the Old Teſtament, and accordingly citeth his teſtimony conſtantly out of the Septuagints reading. Now in the Septuagint, Gen. 46. where this account is made, it is clear, that the ſum ſet down, *v.*27. is not ſeventy, as we now read out of the Hebrew, but ſeventy five: and that that is no miſtake of the tranſcriber by confounding of numeral letters, as ſome are willing to ſuppoſe, appears by the view of the retail, their being five names more ſet down in their tranſlation, then we find now in the Hebrew, viz. the ſons of Manaſſes Machir, and Machir begat Galaad: and the ſons of Ephraim, Sutalaam, and Taam; and the ſons of Sutalaam, Edem. Againſt this it is of no force that is objected, that theſe five came not down with Jacob into Egypt, for by that reaſon the number of ſeventy could not be made up; for of them Joſeph and Manaſſeh, and Ephraim are three; and 'tis certain, Joſeph came not into Egypt with Jacob, and Manaſſeh, and Ephraim were born in Egypt, and never were out of it. Nay among them we find the ſons of Pharez, Hezram and Hamul, v. 12. and ten ſons of Benjamin, v. 21. who certainly were not born at the time of Jacobs going into Egypt. The number whether of ſeventy or ſeventy five, belongs not preciſely to thoſe that came into Egypt, but to the progeny of Jacob there, of which becauſe a greater part came down with him thither, therefore the greater part giving the denomination to the whole, it is ſaid that ſo many went down with him, though ſome of that number were born there, who conſequently were then in the loins of their parents (according to the ſacred ſtyle, and by a figure frequent there) as Levi is ſaid by the Author to the Hebrews, to have paid tiths to Melchiſedeck, though he were not born till many years after that Abraham did ſo; or as in the enumeration of Leah's progeny in this very chapter of Gen. v. 15.

where having reckoned both her children and childrens children to three generations, of which only ſix ſons and a daughter were born in Padan-Aram, or Meſopotamia, and all the reſt in Canaan, he yet adds, Theſe be the ſons of Leah, which ſhe bare unto Jacob in Padan-Aram, with his Daughter Dinah, all the ſouls of his ſons and his daughters were thirty and three.

c. Μετετέθησαν εἰς Συχέμ

V. 16. Carried over into Sichem] Some difficulty there is in reconciling this paſſage of the burying place of the Patriarchs, with that which is ſaid in Geneſis. There 'tis clear there were two burying places, one bought by Abraham of Ephron the Hittite, Gen. 23. in Matchpelah, before Mamre, that is, in Hebron, which is in the Land of Canaan, v. 19. and this coſt four hundred ſhekels of ſilver, v. 15. the other bought by Jacob of the children of Emor in Salem, a city of Shechem, in Canaan alſo, Gen. 33.19. and that coſt an hundred lambs, or pieces of money with that ſignature. If we refer to that which Abraham bought, then that was not bought of the children of Emor or Hamor; if to that which was bought of the children of Hamor, then the name of Abraham cannot be retained. Hence it is, that Andr. Maſius (a learned man) on Joſhua 24. 32. hath thought neceſſary to put in into the text here the name of Jacob inſtead of that of Abraham. And another expedient there is, that the word Abraham may be retained, but muſt ſignify Jacob, as ſometimes the children are expreſſed by the name of their father: ſo David is ſet to ſignify the Meſſias that ſhould come from him, Ezek. 34. 23. Jer. 3. 9. and Joſeph for his ſons, Gen. 48. 15. and David for Reboboam his grandchild, 1 Kings 12. 16. and elſewhere Rehoboam for his ſon Abia. But if we look into the ſtory, Gen. 49. 30. we ſhall find that the burying place here referred to (as far as concerns the αὐτὸς he, that is, Jacob, v. 15.) was that in Machpelah bought of Ephron by Abraham, and therefore this way of reconciling will not be ſo commodious. The emendation poſſibly will be more proper, by ſetting the name of Heth inſtead of Emmor (for the τῷ Συχέμ which is added, is wanting in the Syriack and Arabick interpreter, and the Kings MS. reads τῷ ἐν Συχέμ, not, the ſon of Sichem, but, that dwelt in Sichem) or elſe for τῶν υἱῶν Ἐμμορ, the ſons of Emmor, ℣ υἱῦ Ζοὰρ the ſon of Zoar, (for ſo is Ephron, Gen. 23. 8.) If this may be accepted, then the ſenſe of the whole verſe may be this, The Patriarchs, Jacob and our fathers, v. 15. were buried, viz. Joſeph, Joſh. 24. 32. in Sichem in the field bought of the children of Hamor by Jacob (and ſo ſome others of his brethren too, ſaith S. Jerom in Paula's Epitaph) the former in Machpelah (bought by Abraham of Ephron ſon of Zoar, Gen. 23. 8. or of the children of Heth, Gen. 49. 32. compared with ch. 23. 20.) viz. Jacob, Gen. 50. 13. and ſo (ſaith Joſephus, Ant. l. 2. c. 4.) ſome others of Joſeph's brethren alſo. And ſo both places of burial may be here referred to in this verſe, and that after the uſual Scripture-manner by way of ἀπάνοδος or regreſs, thus, Jacob died and our fathers, v. 15. (then v. 16. beginning with the latter firſt) καὶ μετετέθησαν εἰς Συχέμ, and they, that is, our fathers, Joſeph, &c. were removed to Sichem) (removed, becauſe they had been before buried in Egypt, Joſh. 24. 32.) καὶ ἐτέθησαν, and they were put, that is, Jacob (and after him ſome others) was buried (without removing) in the tomb that Abraham bought of the ſons of Heth, Gen. 49. 32. or of Ephron, ſon of Zohar, Gen. 23. 8. which word Ζοὰρ might eaſily be turned into Ἐμμορ. As for the ἀργυρίου τιμὴ, price of money, that here the field is ſaid to be bought for, when the Chaldee, the Septuagint, and vulgar Latin, in Geneſis read lambs, inſtead of it, this falls out by the double ſignification of the word קסיטה, which ſignifies both ἀμνὸν a lamb (which in Engliſh we call coſit, and Caſtellio, Job 22. 11. renders Quæſitam, from the Hebrew word) and a piece of money that had that ſignature upon it, as the ſhekel had the Ark and the Rod of Aaron; and ſo ſaith * Buxtorf out of Rabbi Aquila, that in Africk money was called Cheſitah. And to this double acception of this word, S. Peter ſeems to refer, 1 Pet. 1. 18. Ye are redeemed not ἀργυρίῳ with ſilver, but τιμίῳ αἵματι ὡς ἀμνῷ, with the precious blood of a lamb.

Τιμίῳ αἵματι ὡς ἀμνῷ

V. 19. They caſt out] What ποιεῖν ἔκθετα ſignifies, there can be ſmall doubt. 'Tis after the Hebrew idiom no more than ἐκτιθέναι to expoſe, or caſt out helpleſs, to certain ruin, in the ſame manner as ποιῆσαι ἔλεος to do mercy, Luke 1. 72. is ἐλεεῖν to pity, or commiſerate. All that is here to be taken care of is, that τῷ ποιεῖν be ſo rendred, as that it may with truth belong to Pharaoh the agent in this verſe, and not to κακώσας ἡμῶν the Iſraelites, who were ſo ill handled by him. As it lies in our ordinary Engliſh, and the Vulgar Latin, it ſeems to refer to the Iſraelites expoſing their own children, Pharaoh dealt ſubtilly with our fathers, ſo that they caſt out, that muſt be, our fathers caſt out, and ſo the Latin, ut exponerant infantes ſuos, which perhaps was thought to have truth in Moſes's mother, Exod. 2. 3. But it muſt be remembred, that what ſhe did, was by her deſigned (as the hiding, v. 2.) to the preſerving of the child, whereas here the expoſing the children, is ſaid to be εἰς τὸ μὴ ζωογονεῖσθαι, to the end they might not be preſerved, or kept alive. It muſt therefore be reſolved that τῷ ποιεῖν belongs to Pharaoh; he that evil intreated the Iſraelites did it in, or by, expoſing, or caſting out their children; for ſo the infinitive mood with, or without the Article, but eſpecially with it, is to be rendred, after the manner of a Gerund, faciendo, in, or by expoſing: without the article 'tis Acts 15. 10. Why tempt ye God, ἐπιθεῖναι, in, or by, impoſing a yoke; with it, ſo Ruth 1. 6. where the Hebrew read, the Lord had viſited his people, לתת להם לחם (which we rightly render) in, or by giving them bread; the Greek hath ἐπίσκεπται δοῦναι, and in Aſulanus's copy, τῷ δοῦναι, as here τῷ ποιεῖν. And Pſ. 78. 18. they tempted God in their hearts, לשאל (we rightly render) by asking meat for their luſts; the Greek in all copies hath, ἐπείρασαν τῷ αἰτῆσαι, they tempted God by, or in asking. Now what Pharaoh did by his bloody officers, or by his people, that is, the Egyptians to whom the charge is given, Exod. 1. 22. himſelf is fitly ſaid to do.

d. Ποιεῖν ἔκθετα

e. Ἀστεῖος τῷ Θεῷ

V. 20. Exceeding fair] Ἀστεῖος τῷ Θεῷ fair to God, may be an Hebrew phraſe for exceeding fair; for ſo the word God may ſometime import an αὔξησις or increaſe. But it is poſſible that the τῷ θεῷ here may be a miſtake of the Scribe for τῇ θέᾳ, to ſee, or look on, for ſo Exod. 2. 2. where this is related, it is ſaid, when ſhe ſaw him, that he was a goodly child, and Heb. 11. 23. εἶδον ἀστεῖον, they ſaw him a fair, or comely child.

f. Μολὸχ

V. 43. Tabernacle of Moloch] That the word Μολὸχ, Moloch, is originally the Hebrew מלך a King, there is no doubt. And ſo here it notes ſome deified King of the Egyptians, that is, an Idol, falſe God, worſhip'd and placed among the ſtars; and accordingly, an old Egyptian Alphabet, that ſets down the names of the Planets, hath for Mars, μολὸχ. See Kercher. Prodrom. Copt. c. 5. Now for the Σκηνὴ here, the tabernacle of Moloch, that is, ſure ſome little cabinet, wherein the image of this falſe God was kept, ſuch as the ναοὶ ἀργυροῖ τῆς Ἀρτέμιδος, the ſilver chappels of Diana, (ſee note on ch. 19. e.) This is in Amos, ch. 5. 26. סכות ומלככם the tabernacle, or Soccoth, of your King, or Moloch, that is, the chapplet, where that image of your falſe God, called here τύπος, a figure, made to be worſhipped, was enſhrined, or dwelt; (ſo σκηνῆν ſignifies) and the like ſeems to be underſtood by Succoth Benoth, the tabernacle of Venus, ſome little chappel or ſhrine, where her image was kept and worſhipped.

g. Ρεμφὰν

Ib Remphan] Diodorus Siculus, l. 1. mentions Remphis ſon of Cephna, as King of Egypt, about the time that Jacob went down thither, and ſaith of him, that he gathered an infinite maſs of wealth, and left behind him at his death 4000000 talents; which makes it probable that he was that prince, which in the famin, by Joſeph's advice, got all the wealth of Egypt, and the neighbour-countries. This perſon was afterwards worſhipped as a God for having preſerved Egypt, and accor-accordingly placed among the ſtars, and ſo the image of one of the planets, here called ἄστρον, a ſtar, ſet to ſignify him. This ſtar, it ſeems, was Saturn, for ſo that Egyptian Alphabet (mentioned note f.) which ſets down the names of the planets, for Saturn hath PHφaN ῥηφάν. Of this perſon that Tradition in Suidas is very intelligible, where, of Apis the Egyptian God it is ſaid, that he was ἔνπορός τις, a certain rich man, to whom at his death they erected a Temple, ἐν ᾧ βοῦς ἐτρέφετο, in which an Ox was fed, as being the Hieroglyphick of an Husbandman. By which alſo it appears that this was that calf or bullock worſhipped by the Iſraelites: Saturn being among the Gentiles preſident of husbandry, and therefore ſometimes worſhipped in the ſhape of that beaſt (under the name of Apis) as being the chief inſtrument in ploughing of the ground; but withal faſtned among the ſtars in heaven, and the image of him here call'd ἄστρον a ſtar, or as it ſeems to be beſt rendred, Am. 5. 26. the ſtar-images of your God, &c. referring to both in the Images precedent, (to which alſo the τύποι figures in the plural, that follow, do belong.) For that Chiun, which is there in Amos, put inſtead of Remphis, or Cevan, or Caivan, was among the Perſians and Arabians another name of their Saturn, hath been obſerved by others. So in Plautus's ſecond Punick ſcene, Molechianna is by learned enquiries diſcovered to be no more then מון לביון the image of Chiun, all one with temunah ſel ucoth, in the former ſence, that is, תמונה שאל יוחוק an image which is El God, and ſculpture, that is, God engraven; the word אל God among the Phœnicians ſignifying peculiarly Κρόνος, Saturn. And this is the reaſon why Bacchus Periclonius is ſaid to be placed in the eighth ſphere, becauſe that ſphere encompaſſeth the Planet Saturn. So in the Arabick Lexicon, (called Camus) Caiwano Zohalo mamnuon, Caiwano is Zohalo (or Saturn) which is nomen invariabile. Which Lud. de Dieu miſtaking for Raialon mamnuon, he renders it vir rigidus, &c. See Mr Pocock on Abul Faraii, p. 394. Now that they are here ſaid for this ſin to be carried into Babylon is agreeable with that notion which the Jews generally had, who were wont to ſay, that in every plague and captivity that fell upon them, there was an ounce of the calf, God continuing to puniſh this ſin in all their poſterities, that continued to provoke him with the like.

h. Σκηνὴ μαρτυρίου

V. 44. Tabernacle of witneſs] That which is rendred by the Septuagint σκηνὴ μαρτυρίου, the tabernacle of the teſtimony (and ſo made uſe of here by S. Luke) is generally in the Hebrew אהל מועד Exod. 27. 2. c. 30. 26. c. 31. 7. & 38. 21. the tabernacle of meeting, viz. of meeting with God, whither every one that ſought the Lord was to go, Exod. 33. 7. This we render, the tabernacle of the Congregation, (as if it referred to our meeting with one another) but certainly it muſt be taken in that other ſenſe of meeting with God, as appears, Exod. 29. 42. at the door of the tabernacle, מועד of meeting before the Lord, where I will meet you to ſpeak there unto you. So c. 30. 36. the tabernacle of meeting, where I will meet with thee, and ſo Numb. 17. 4. Now this place of Gods meeting with men is ſo called in two reſpects; 1. Becauſe there he communicates his will, makes known his pleaſure to them. 2*ly*, Becauſe there by his appointment his Name being recorded or commemorated by men, his acts of mercy praiſed and magnified, there he evidences his preſence, to accept thoſe offerings, to bleſs thoſe perſons, Exod. 20. 24. In all places where I record my name, (or in every place where the memorial that I ſhall appoint of my name, ſhall be) I will come unto thee, and I will bleſs thee. In the former reſpect, the Tabernacle is called the tabernacle of teſtimony, becauſe of the Ark containing the two tables, wherein Gods covenant or commands concerning men were made known and teſtified by God, and that is oft called κιβωτὸς μαρτυρίου, the ark of the teſtimony. In the ſecond reſpect the Tabernacle is called the tabernacle of the teſtimony, in reſpect of our acknowledging, and teſtifying, and recording of God, and Gods owning, and recording and bleſſing of us, evidencing and teſtifying his accepting of us.

i. Σκληροτράχηλοι

V. 51. Stiff-necked] Σκληροτράχηλοι proverbially ſignifies undiſciplinable, fooliſh people; according to a rule in Phyſiognomy, that thoſe that have necks that do not eaſily bend, are ſuch: ſo ſaith Adamantius Phyſiog. l. 2. c. 26. σκληροτράχηλοι, ἀμαθεῖς, hard neck'd perſons are indocile and ignorant; and again τισὶ διὰ μωρίαν γίνονται ἀκλινεῖς τράχηλοι, ſome men have necks that will not bend, and this is an argument of folly. But I ſuppoſe the meaning of S. Stephen is not to be fetched from this notation of the word, but from the Metaphor of beaſts, oxen, &c. that till they be diſciplined and accuſtomed to the yoke, are not willing or patient to bend down to it. And ſo hard, or ſtiff necked ſignifies no more then refractary, diſobedient, undiſciplinable, and ſo 'tis here ſet to denote them that do always reſiſt the holy Ghoſt, in all Gods methods toward them, walk contrary to him.

k. Στήσης

V. 60. Lay not this] Μὴ στήσῃς may here be rendred by referring to the uſe of that word, (among theſe writers) of lones or ſales, which were done by weighing out the money, and receiving it back again by weight. This is called στήσας, Iſa. 32. 9. ἔστησα αὐτῷ ἑπτὰ σίκλους, I weighed him, or, I told him out, ſeven ſhekels; whence Heſychius στάσιμον τὸ δεδανισμένον, that that is weighed, is that that is lent, for, ſaith he, παλαὶ ἐδάνειζον, anciently they lent by weight. Thus the Hebrew שקל which is anſwerable to it, is oft rendred τίειν and ἀποτίειν, as to weigh out, is to pay, that is, to puniſh. So that the importance of Stephens prayer is, that God would not require back this debt, that is puniſh them for this ſin. And that this prayer was heard for them that had an hand in Stephens blood, appears by Gods ſpecial mercy to Saul, who was a principal perſon in it, and is miraculouſly converted in the ninth chapter, according to that ſaying of the Father, Si Stephanus non oraſſet, Eccleſia Paulum non habuiſſet, If Stephen had not prayed, the Church had not had St. Paul.

CHAP. VIII. Paraphraſe.

1. AND Saul was * conſenting unto his death: and at that time there was a great perſecution againſt the Church which was at Jeruſalem: and they were all ſcattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the Apoſtles.

*well pleaſed with the killing of him, συνευδοκῶν τῇ ἀναιρέσει αὐτοῦ

1. And Saul which was after, ch. 9. ſo ſtrangely converted, & became ſo renowned an Apoſtle, was then one of thoſe that liked well the ſtoning of Stephen and joined in it, ch. 7. 58. And at the ſame time that they dealt thus with Stephen, they vehemently oppoſed the profeſſing of the faith at Jeruſalem, and perſecuted all that did ſo. And all ſuch, but the Apoſtles, particularly the reſt of the ſeven Deacons, and divers others, c. 11. 19. went out of Jeruſalem, and were diſperſed into ſeveral places through Judea and Samaria, and as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, ch. 11. 19. and in all thoſe places thoſe that were thus diſperſed (being filled with the holy Ghoſt, ch. 4. 31.) preached to the Jews, and only the Apoſtles continued at Hieruſalem, being not yet (all) gone out from thence.

2. And devout men * a carried Stephen to his burial, and made great lamentation for him.]

*prepared Stephen for

2. And ſome proſelytes that were there (ſee note on c. 10. a.) made a ſolemn funeral for Stephen, and mourned at it. a.

3. As for Saul, he made havock of the Church, entring into every houſe, and hailing men and women committed them to priſon.

4. Therefore

b. 4. And thereupon they that were driven from Jeruſalem into Judea and Samaria, v. 1. reſted not there, but went farther off, and all the way they went, publiſhed the glad tidings of the Goſpel, told every where what they knew of it.

4. Therefore they that were ſcattered abroad, † went every where b preaching the word.]

† paſſed along publiſhing, διῆλθον εὐαγγελίζ.

5. Then Philip the deacon, not the Apoſtle, (and therefore Peter and John, v. 15. are ſent to impoſe hands) went from Judea to Samaria, and though the Jews converſed not with them, and tho' in the firſt going out of the Apoſtles, Mat. 10. 5. they were appointed not to go to any city of the Samaritans, yet now in this diſperſion, and perſecution from the Jews at Jeruſalem, v. 1. it was thought fit to preach the Goſpel unto them, and Philip accordingly preached it in Sebaſte, an eminent city in Samaria.

5. Then Philip went down to * the city of Samaria, and preached Chriſt unto them.]

* a city, πόλιν

6. And all that city were perſwaded by Philip to receive the faith of Chriſt, being convinced by the miracles wrought by him.

6. And the people with one accord gave heed unto thoſe things which Philip ſpake, hearing and ſeeing the miracles which he did.]

7. For out of many that were poſſeſt, they caſt out devils, which at their coming out made loud acknowledgment of the irreſiſtableneſs of the power by which they acted.

7. For unclean ſpirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were poſſeſſed with them:] and many taken with palſies, and that were lame, were healed.]

8. And there was great joy in that city.

9. But before this preaching and miracles of Philip, there had been in the city one Simon, which was a magician, which had done ſome ſtrange things, which pozed and amazed the ignorant people, by which means he took upon him to be a divine perſon.

9. But † there was a certain man, called Simon, which before time uſed ſorcery in the ſame city, and bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himſelf was ſome great one.]

† before this there was or had been in the city a certain man Simon by name, which uſed ſorcery, and aſtoniſhed, &c. Ἀνὴρ δέ τις ὀνόματι Σίμων προϋπῆρχεν ἐν τῇ πόλει μαγεύων, καὶ ἐξιστῶν

10. The divine power, which in every nation is acknowledged ſometimes under one, ſometimes under another name, Jehovah, Jupiter, and the like.

10. To whom they all gave heed from * the leaſt to the greateſt, ſaying, This man is [† the great power of God.]

* ſmall to great, μικρό τε μεγάλε

† the power of God called the Great So the Kings MS. and the ancient Gr. & Lat. MS. read it, δύναμις Θεοῦ ἡ καλουμένη μεγάλη. See 2 Theſſ. 2. 4. note e. f.

11. He had by ſorcery or the help of the devil done ſuch ſtrange things, that they were amazed at them, (ſee v. 13.) and knew not what to think of him.

11. And to him they had regard, becauſe that of long time [he had bewitched them with ſorceries]

12. But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jeſus Chriſt, they were baptized both men and women.]

12. But Philip (one of the ſeven, v. 5. and ch. 6. called Evangeliſt, c. 21. 8. becauſe of his preaching the Goſpel here, ſee note on John 20. b.) by preaching the Chriſtian faith, and doing far greater miracles had converted them to Chriſtianity, they all came in as proſelytes to the Goſpel, and received baptiſm of him, all of all ſorts.

13. Was himſelf amazed at the miracles Philip did, as the people had been at his, v. 9. 11.

13. Then Simon himſelf believed alſo: And when he was baptized he continued with Philip, and [wondered, beholding the miracles and ſigns which were done.]

14. And when the Apoſtles that remained at Jeruſalem, v. 1. heard, that by Philips preaching the whole country of Samaria was converted and baptized, and knowing that Philip had no farther power, they ſent two of their own company, Peter and John.

14. Now when the Apoſtles which were at Jeruſalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they ſent unto them Peter and John:]

15. To confirm them, and to ordain them Elders or Biſhops (in every city one) by prayer and impoſition of hands.

15. Who when they were come prayed for them, that they might receive the holy Ghoſt.]

16. (For Philip had not done either of theſe, nor conſequently provided for the neceſſaries to the continuance of a Church; only he had preached the faith, and baptized them with that baptiſm which Chriſt commanded to be uſed, Mat. 28. 19. that in the name of the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt.)

16. (For as yet he was fallen upon none of them; only they were baptized in the Name of the Lord Jeſus.)]

c. 17. Then Peter and John confirm'd & ordain'd them Elders or Biſhops in all their cities, to rule or govern them in the faith, and in doing it, they uſed that ceremony of impoſition of hands (known among the Jews, Deut. 34. 9.) and thereby was beſtowed on them the gift of the holy Ghoſt, working of mircles, ſpeaking with tongues, &c.

17. Then c laid their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghoſt.]

18. And Simon the ſorcerer ſeeing thoſe miraculous effects conſequent to the Apoſtles impoſition of hands, offered to give them Money for this power.

18. And when Simon ſaw that through laying on of the Apoſtles hands the holy Ghoſt was given, he offered them money.

19. He may receive thoſe gifts and graces of working miracles, &c.

19. Saying, Give me alſo this power, that on whomſoever I lay my hands [he may receive the holy Ghoſt.]

20. I will not receive thy money, and thy offering it ſhall bring miſchief upon thy ſelf, for thinking ſo meanly of this Apoſtolical priviledge, beſtowed on us by Chriſt, which ſure is not to be bought like earthly commodities with the price of money.

20. But Peter ſaid unto him, [Thy money † periſh with thee, becauſe thou haſt thought that the gift of God may be purchaſed with money.]

† be with thee to deſtruction, σὺν σοὶ εἴη εἰς ἀπώλειαν

21. Thou ſhalt never have any part of this priviledge, nor right of diſpenſing or adminiſtring of theſe holy things; for thy deſign in deſiring this is not the enlarging Chriſts kingdom, but the getting an opinion of power to thy ſelf.

21. Thou haſt neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the ſight of God.

22. Repent therefore and humble thy ſelf before God for this wicked project of thine (and humbly beſeech his pardon; and 'tis not impoſſible but that it may yet be obtained by thee.)

22. Repent therefore of this thy wickedneſs, and pray God if perhaps the thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee.]

d. e. 23. For I perceive thou art in a condition poyſonous to thy ſelf, and bitter to God, very dangerous to thee, and diſpleaſing to him, and makeſt this propoſal out of a villanous treacherous deſign, not to advance Chriſts kingdom, but to deſtroy it, and accordingly thou art to expect to be dealt with by God.

23. For I perceive that thou art in the d gall of bitterneſs, and in * the e bond of iniquity.]

* a wicked conſpiracy.

24. And Simon beſought them that they would pray for him, that God would pardon this wickedneſs of his, and not inflict on him ſuch puniſhment, as they ſeemed to foretel would fall upon him.

24. Then anſwered Simon, and ſaid, Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of theſe things which ye have ſpoken come upon me.]

25. And when they had confirm'd thoſe in the faith (bearing witneſs to the truth which Philip had taught) who were baptized by him, they returned to Jeruſalem, and as they went, preached the Goſpel to all the villages of Samaria, where Philip had not preacht it, and had good ſucceſs in it.

25. And they, when they had teſtified and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jeruſalem, and preached the Goſpel in many villages of the Samaritans.]

Annotations on Chap. VIII.

a. Συγκομίζειν.

V. 2. Carried Stephen.] Συγκομίζειν is to dreſs, and fit the dead body for the funeral, and differs both from ἀνακομίζειν, and ἐκκομίζειν; ſo ſaith the ſcholiaſt on Æſchylus, Συγκομιδὴ ſignifies ἡ περὶ τὸ τάφῳ πᾶσ᾽ ἐπιμέλειαν, all the care that is uſed before the burial, ἐκκομιδὴ, ἡ πρὸς τὸ τάφον ἀπαγωγὴ, the carrying out to the grave or ſepulchre, ἀνακομιδὴ ἡ ἐκ τάφου εἰς τάφον μετάθεσιν, the removing from one ſepulchre to another. The ſame is expreſs'd ch. 5. 6. by Ζωσάντες, winding the dead body in a ſheet.

b. Εὐαγγελίζεσθαι τὸν λόγον. Κηρύσσειν.

V. 4. Preaching the word.] Some difference may perhaps be here obſerved between εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸν λόγον, v. 4. and ἐκήρυσσε ὁ Χριστὸν, ver. 5. but this not in reſpect of the matter of their preaching, but of the manner of it, and of the qualifications of the perſons that did it. The latter of theſe, κηρύσσειν, to preach Chriſt, doth generally ſignifie a publick, ſolemn proclaiming of him, as when a κῆρυξ, herald or cryer, doth pro officio, by way of office, proclaim any thing; but εὐαγγελίζεσθαι imports no more than the telling it, making it known, as good news is publiſhed without the voice of an herald, or cryer, by all that have heard, to all they meet with: and although in one reſpect, (that of proclaiming anew what was not known before) this κηρύσσειν, to preach, and εὐαγγελίζεσθαι, to tell the glad tidings, do agree, (ſee Note on Mat. 9. 1.) yet in this other reſpect they differ ſometimes: Not that εὐαγγελίζεσθαι is never uſed of that publick, authoritative proclaiming; for it is ſometimes uſed of the Apoſtles, Acts 5. 42. and c. 15. 35. and the word εὐαγγελιστὴς, Evangeliſt, is the name of an office in the Apoſtles times, and then, whenſoever it was done by way of office, either Apoſtolical, or by miſſion from them, it is evident that Εὐαγγελίζεσθαι and κηρύσσειν are in all reſpects the ſame; but I ſay that ſometimes, and particularly in this place, εὐαγγελίζεσθαι may belong to whatſoever publiſhing of the Goſpel of Chriſt, and by whomſoever, that is, by thoſe that have no calling to it. For when the doctrine of Chriſt was firſt preacht by the Apoſtles, and the miraculous gifts exerciſed in their preſence, and a multitude of men, Jews and Proſelites, received the faith, and for doing ſo profeſſedly, were preſently perſecuted, and driven out of Jeruſalem, v. 1. it is not to be imagined but that all, whereſoever they came, both men and women, publiſhed what they knew, both of the doctrine, and the miracles whereby it was confirmed, and of their own ſufferings for it; though that all theſe, even women (who by S. Paul's decree, are not permitted to ſpeak in the Church) ſhould by the Apoſtles be intruſted with the preaching of the word, by way of office, it cannot be imagined. And therefore, when of Philip, which was a Deacon, ordained by the Apoſtles, it is related in this chapter, that he preached Chriſt to them, it follows that he baptized them alſo, ver 12. But of theſe other diſciples, there is no more ſaid, but that they paſſed along beyond Judæa and Samaria (the terror that drove them from Jeruſalem purſuing them farther) εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸν λόγον, publiſhing this good news, the Goſpel, which they had received, but no mention of gathering diſciples, or baptizing. And accordingly, c. 11. 19. when there is mention in the proceſs of the ſtory, of theſe very men, that being ſcattered by the perſecution, which was about Stephen, they paſſed as far as Phœnice, Cyprus and Antioch, and that they ſpake the word, or publiſhed the Goſpel, to none but the Jews, the phraſe Λαλοῦντες uſed there is obſervable to this matter, λαλοῦντες τὸν λόγον. τὸν λόγον, ſpeaking the word, the word λαλεῖν being known to belong to any way of reporting, or relating, by talk or diſcourſe. And ſo ver. 20. ἐλάλων πρὸς τοὺς Ἕλληνιστάς, they ſpake, talked, to the Helleniſts, εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸν Κύριον Ἰησοῦν, telling them that good news, the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt: and upon the ſucceſs of this, through God's proſpering hand, and many receiving the faith, it follows, that when the Church of Jeruſalem heard of it, they ſent Barnabas to viſit and confirm them. Thus of the believers in common, chap. 4. 31. it is ſaid indefinitely, that they ſpake (ἐλάλων) the word of God with boldneſs, according as they had prayed they might, v. 29. noting thereby a valiant profeſſion, and publiſhing of the Goſpel, notwithſtanding the terrors of men. And though it be there ſaid of them, that they were all filled with the holy Ghoſt, and ſo that may be taken for a commiſſion and authority given to all them, and ſo theſe here being contained in that number, the ſame will be competible to theſe; yet 1. it cannot be imagined that all ſimply, that is, every believer there, women as well as men, had any ſuch authority then given them, but that there are other meanings of the phraſe, filled with the holy Ghoſt, beſides that one of being ſent into the miniſtry; and the very courage of profeſſing and publiſhing the Goſpel, was one ſuch gift or effect of the holy Ghoſt. And 2dly, it is clear in the proceſs of this ſtory, that ſome others, which were not ſo qualified as theſe, that is, that had not received the holy Ghoſt, or aſcended any farther than the Baptiſm of John, did thus publiſh the Goſpel, as theſe here are ſaid to do. Thus Apollos chap. 18. 25. ἐλάλει, καὶ ἐδίδασκεν ἀκριβῶς τὰ περὶ τοῦ Κυρίου, ſpake and taught exactly the things concerning the Lord, knowing only the baptiſm of John (and Aquila, and Priſcilla expounded to him more exactly the way of God) and ſo I ſuppoſe did the Epheſian diſciples, ch. 19. who had not received the holy Ghoſt, ver. 2. nor gone any farther than John's Baptiſm, at the time of Paul's coming to them.

c. Χεῖρας ἐπιτιθέναι. V. 17. Laid they their hands on.] The ſeveral uſes of impoſition of hands are at large ſet down, Note on 1 Tim. 4. f. Three in the Old Teſtament; 1. as a ceremony in prayer, 2. in paternal benediction, 3. in creating officers. And proportionably to theſe, many more in the New. 1. For curing diſeaſes, 2. for Abſolution of penitents, 3. for bleſſing of infants, or thoſe that are to be baptized, to prepare them to it, 4. in Confirmation, 5. in Ordination of Officers for the Church. Of the three former of theſe there is none which can pretend to be here meant; and ſo all the difficulty is, whether of the two latter it was. That it was confirmation may appear probable, becauſe it ſo ſoon attended their Converſion and baptiſm: when the Apoſtles which were at Jeruſalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they ſent unto them Peter and John, v. 14. which agrees well with that of Confirmation, which is an act reſerved to the Rulers of the Church, and not communicated, or allow'd to inferior Officers, ſuch as Philip, the Deacon, here. And accordingly the Biſhops are called διδάσκαλοι, Doctors, as that ſignifies the farther inſtructing them, to whom the Goſpel hath formerly been preach'd, and as εὐαγγελίζεσθαι differs from διδάσκειν, preaching from teaching. And in Confirmation it was, that in thoſe firſt times the extraordinary Gifts of the holy Goſt uſed to be conferr'd on them, (ſee Note on c. 2. d. and Acts 19. 6.) But it is probable alſo that the faith being here planted by Philip, and the Apoſtles coming down to confirm them, and thoſe not ſtaying there, but returning to Jeruſalem v. 27. they did at their being there ordain Elders or Biſhops in the ſeveral cities, as we know Paul and Barnabas did c. 14. 23. and Titus in Crete, Tit. 1. 5. This, ſaith * Clemens Romanus, the Apoſtles did in their journeyings, when they went out preaching the Goſpel, Κατὰ χώρας οὖν καὶ πόλεις κηρύσσοντες, καθίσανον τὰς ἀπαρχὰς αὐτῶν εἰς ἐπισκόπους καὶ διακόνους τῶν μελλόντων πιστεύειν, preaching through regions and cities, they conſtituted their firſt fruits, (thoſe that firſt believed) Biſhops and Deacons of thoſe which ſhould afterwards believe. And thus before this time, they had at Jeruſalem conſtituted James the brother of the Lord Biſhop there, in the firſt year after Chriſt's Aſcenſion, and ſeven Deacons to attend him, ch. 6. And therefore it is not reaſonable to believe that the Apoſtles, Peter and John, ſhould thus come down to Samaria, where the Goſpel had been ſo univerſally received, v. 6. and having taken care to confirm them, ſhould not alſo ordain ſome Governours over them before they returned again. That therefore which is moſt reaſonable, is ſo to interpret this laying on of hands, and their receiving the holy Ghoſt here, as to comprehend Confirmation and Ordination both, the holy Ghoſt by their miniſtry coming on all the ſincere believers, and endowing them with inward, and ſome of them with extraordinary external gifts, of healing, prophecy, &c. (ſee Note on ch. 2. d.) and the Apoſtles by laying on their hands on ſome ſpecial perſons among them, ordaining them Biſhops and Deacons in ſeveral cities: A power which belonged only to the Apoſtles to exerciſe, and ſo was not competible to Philip, who yet had power to preach and to baptize.

* Ep. 1. ad Cor.

d. Κολὴ πικρίας. V. 33. Gall of bitterneſs.] What is the importance of χολὴ πικρίας (or πικρία χολῆς, as the ancient Gr. and Lat. MS. read it) will be beſt diſcerned (ſee Note on Mat. 27. f.) by Deut. 29. 18. where apoſtaſie or falling from God is deſcribed to be a root bearing gall and bitterneſs, ſay the Vulgar, gall and wormwood ſay our Engliſh, and the Septuagint, φύουσα ἐν χολῇ καὶ φύουσα ἐν πικρίᾳ, ſpringing up in gall and bitterneſs: but the Hebrew ראש, which we render gall, ſignifies alſo a poyſonous herb, and ſo muſt ſignifie there, where 'tis joined with a root bearing or bringing forth; and ſo the wormwood following will beſt agree with it, and both together will expreſs that ſin to be a root, whoſe effects are poyſonous and bitter, very hurtful and infectious to men, and moſt diſpleaſing to God. Anſwerable and equivalent to this is the χολὴ πικρίας here, which therefore ſignifies this apoſtatical condition of Simon, ſo lately baptized, to be dangerous to him, and odious in God's ſight, he being that firſt-born of Satan, as he is ſtyled, and an Apoſtate from the Chriſtian faith. And accordingly his followers the Gnoſticks, and the poyſon of their hereſy (together with him, the root from whence all thoſe peſts of the primitive Apoſtolick Church did ſpring) are expreſs'd Heb. 12. 15. by ῥίζα πικρίας ἄνω φύουσα, Leſt, ſaith the Apoſtle, there be any root of bitterneſs ſpringing up, (not ἐνοχλῇ, as we read it, but as by the Greek now cited from Deut. 29. 18. and by the agreeing of the participle φύουσα with the like ὑστερῶν precedent, ſeems the moſt probable reading) ἐν χολῇ, in poyſon, a root of wormwood bringing forth, or fructifying, in poyſon, that is, bringing on the perſon that which is ruinous to himſelf, or on others that which is poyſonous or infectious to them. And ſuch moſt eminently was the hereſie of the Gnoſticks at that time.

Κολὴ πικρίας.

e. Σύνδεσμος ἀδικίας. Ib. Bond of iniquity.] The word σύνδεσμος ſignifies, in the Septuagint of the old Teſtament, Treaſon, 2 Kin. 11. 15. and 12. 20. and Jer. 11. 9. a conſpiracy, league, or covenant, and by it the Hebrew קשר is rendred Jer. 11. 9. where Symmachus reads συνωμοσία, conſpiracy. The Hebrew חרצבות which Iſai. 58. 6. is rendred σύνδεσμος, is, ſaith David de Pomis, equivalent to קשרים, and ſo ſignifies a binding together of minds; and both there and here, with ἀδικίας, unrighteouſneſs added to it, it denotes, by an hypallage, a moſt unrighteous, impious treaſon or treachery, a villanous piece of hypocriſie, (as μαμωνᾶ ἀδικίας, the Mammon of unrighteouſneſs, is all one with the falſe or deceitful mammon) Simon's deſign in this propoſal being not to advance Chriſt's kingdom, by his having that power of giving the holy Ghoſt, but to ſet up for himſelf, as he after did, in oppoſition to Chriſt, and to have this addition of miracles ſuperadded to thoſe which by his ſorcery he was able to do.

f. Πνεῦμα. V. 29. The Spirit ſaid.] It may here be queſtion'd, what is meant by τὸ πνεῦμα, the Spirit's ſaying unto Philip.

Philip. Some kind of extraordinary revelation it certainly was, but whether in a viſion by appearance of an Angel, or 2ly, by a voice from heaven, or 3ly, by afflation of the Spirit of God, after the manner that Prophets received Revelations, it is uncertain. Of the firſt ſort there are examples in this book, ch. 10. 3. Cornelius in a viſion ſaw an Angel of the Lord coming, and ſaying to him; and ſo here, v. 26. the Angel of the Lord ſpake unto Philip: Of the ſecond, at the Baptiſm of Chriſt, and at the converſion of S. Paul: And of the third, chap. 10. 19. where after his viſion of the ſheet, as he thought thereupon, the Spirit ſaid unto him; and the ſame is repeated again, ch. 11. 11. and ſo ch. 13. 2. as they were miniſtring, that is, praying and faſting, the holy Spirit ſaid, ſeparate to me Barnabas and Saul: Which as it was not in any dream or viſion, ſo that it was by voice from heaven, doth not appear probable by any argument diſcernible in the ſtory; but on the other ſide the frequent teſtimonies of the Spirits revealing by way of Prophetick afflation, who ſhould be ſet apart for the offices of the Church, are evidences that it was ſo here. Thus * Clemens tells of thoſe times, that they ordained Biſhops, πνεύματι δοκιμάσαντες, diſcerning by the Spirit who ſhould be ordained, and again that they did it, προγνωσιν εἰληφότες τελείαν, having received perfect foreknowledge who ſhould be conſtituted Biſhops, as Moſes, ſaith he, foreknew by revelation from God, that Aaron ſhould have the Prieſthood, and accordingly that without direction of the Spirit they advanced none to this dignity. So ſaith S. Paul of Timothy that the χάρισμα, or Epiſcopal Office, διὰ προφητείας ἐδόθη, was given him by Prophecie, 1 Tim. 4. 14. and ch. 1. 18. that is, by Revelation, as Propheſying is of things preſently to be done, as well as predictions of the future, and ſignifies no more, 1 Cor. 14. 24, 31. then having ſome-what revealed to him, v. 30. So ſaith S. * Chryſoſtom, Τὸ γὰρ διδασκαλίας καὶ ἱερωσύνης ἀξίωμα μέγα ὂν καὶ τῆς Θεοῦ δεόμενον ψήφου, &c. The Epiſcopal dignity being great, wanted God's ſuffrage, to direct on whom it ſhould be beſtow'd (ſee note on 1 Tim. 1. e.) Thus Acts 20. 28. it is ſaid of the Biſhops of Aſia, that the holy Ghoſt had ſet them over the flock. And in this ſenſe it may fitly be affirmed of Philip, that being full of the holy Ghoſt, ch. 6. 3. he had the afflations of the Spirit of God, ſuch as Prophets, and by ſuch an afflation the Spirit here bad him, &c. Thus Agabus ſignified by the Spirit, that is, by prophetick revelation, that there ſhould be a famine, ch. 11. 28. Thus the holy Ghoſt witneſs'd in every city, that is, prophets foretold, c. 20. 23. and 21. 11. that bonds and afflictions did abide Paul. One only objection I foreſee againſt this expoſition in this place, that ver. 39. it is ſaid that the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, which probably is to be underſtood of an Angel carrying him away out of his ſight, and then why ſhould not the Spirit here, as well as the Spirit of the Lord there, ſignifie an Angel alſo? eſpecially when there is mention of an Angel ſpeaking to him, ver. 26. But to this the anſwer will be very ſufficient, if the reading of the King's MS. be accepted in that verſe, (and that is atteſted by many other copies own'd by Eraſmus and Beza, and ſo cited by S. Jerome, Dial. Orthod. & Luciferian.) the holy Spirit fell upon the Eunuch, &c. but the Angel of the Lord caught away Philip, (ſee Note i.) For then as the Angel bad him go to the Eunuch, ſo he carried him away again, which no way hinders but that the ſpirit here may be taken in that other ſenſe.

* Epiſt. 1. ad Cor.

V. 31. The place of Scripture.] περικοπὴ is the Hebrew פרק, the name of a ſection or leſſer diviſion of Scripture, of which there be two in the firſt chapter of Matthew, and ſo forward. The Greeks call them τμήματα, partitions or ſections. g. περικοπὴ.

V. 33. In his humiliation.] This verſe is acknowledged to be a citation of Iſa. 53. 8. not out of the Hebrew, but the Septuagint's tranſlation, which therefore muſt be interpreted by looking back on the Original there. And that will be beſt rendred thus, ממעצר by an aſſembly (ſo the word is uſed Jer. 9. 2. and rendred σύνοδοι, ſynods) that is, by the Sanhedrim of the Jews, who had determined to have him put to death, and made the people cry out againſt him, Αἶρε, ἆρε, away with him, away with him (whereas the Greek ſeem to have read ממעצב, ἐν ταπεινώσει) וממשפט and by judgment; or the ſentence of the Roman Procurator Pilate, לקח, he was taken away, diſtinctly ſignifying the manner of his being put to death, which being ſo foul, and irrational, and ſtrange, that he that came to ſave, ſhould not only not be believed, but be alſo put to death by them, be entertained ſo coldly, and uſed ſo barbarouſly, the Jews and Romans both conſpiring in it, the exclamation that follows ואת דורו מי ישוחח, who ſhall deſcribe his generation? will moſt probably ſignifie, what an accurſed wicked generation was that, wherein he was born? for ſo the word דורו his generation, ſignifies, as Gen. 6. 9. perfect, ἐν γενεᾷ αὐτοῦ, in his generation. So where 'tis called a wicked generation, Deut. 32. 5. this word is uſed. This, though it be not the ſound of the word in Greek, muſt be reſolved to be the meaning of the Prophet, whoſe words here S. Luke having occaſion to name or ſet down only (as the paſſage the Eunuch was reading) not to make any uſe of them was in all reaſon to repeat in the Septuagint's tranſlation of them, which the Eunuch was a reading, and which they uſed, for whom he wrote this ſtory, but not to affix any new ſenſe to the original prophecy. Yet becauſe the words, as they lie in the Greek, may have a commodious ſenſe alſo, though that differing from the Hebrew, I have in the paraphraſe ſet down that alſo, upon this ground, that Job 34. 5. taking away his judgment ſignifies dealing unjuſtly with him. h. ἐν τῇ ταπεινώσει. Κρίσις αὐτοῦ ἤρθη. Γενεὰν αὐτοῦ τίς διηγήσεται.

V. 39. The Spirit.] In this verſe the King's MS. reads thus, πνεῦμα ἅγιον ἐπέπεσεν ὅτε τὸν Εὐνοῦχον, Ἄγγελος Πνεῦμα ἥρπασε τὸν Φίλιππον, The holy Ghoſt fell upon the Eunuch, and the Angel of the Lord caught, or ſnatch'd away Philip. i. ἐπέπεσεν. ἥρπασε.

CHAP. IX.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND Saul yet breathing out threatnings and ſlaughter againſt the diſciples of the Lord, went unto the high prieſt, the Sanhedrim at Jeruſalem, and deſired the high prieſt to give him letters of commiſſion to the Conſiſtories of other cities of Syria, (as being under Jeruſalem, the grand Metropolis of Syria, as well as Judæa) and his commiſſion was to impower him v. 14. to ſeize upon any Chriſtians whatever, and ſecure them, and bring them up to Jeruſalem to be judged by the Sanhedrim there.

3. And as he journeyed he came near Damaſcus, and ſuddenly [their ſhined round about him a light from heaven.]

3. A bright ſhining cloud (ſuch as Mat. 17. 5.) encompaſſed him.

4. And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice ſaying unto him,] Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me?

4. And it ſtruck him with great terror, as at the preſence of God, which he knew was wont thus to exhibit himſelf. This made him fall proſtrate on his face, and as he did ſo, there came to his ears a clap of thunder, and out of that this ſpeech directed to him,

5. And he ſaid, who art thou Lord? And the Lord ſaid, I am Jeſus, whom thou perſecuteſt: [It is hard for thee a to kick againſt the * pricks.]

* Goads, κέντρα.

5. It is thy beſt way to be obedient to the commands that ſhall now be given thee, and not to be refractory.

6. I am moſt ready to do whatever thou commandeſt me, if thou wilt pleaſe to give me knowledge of thy will.

6. And he trembling and aſtoniſhed, ſaid, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?] And the Lord ſaid unto him, Ariſe and go into the city, and it ſhall be told thee what thou muſt do.

b. 7. Were ſo frighted with the thunderclap which they heard, (though they neither ſaw any man, nor heard what was ſaid unto him) that they were not able to ſpeak.

7. And the men which journied with them [ſtood ſpeechleſs, b † hearing a voice, but ſeeing no man.]

† hearing indeed the voice of thunder.

8. Was not able to ſee, ver. 9. but was fain to be led to Damaſcus.

8. And Saul aroſe from the earth, and when his eyes were opened, he [ſaw no man: but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damaſcus.]

9. And he was not in three days recovered out of that fit, but continued blind and able to eat nothing, in a kind of trance or extaſie, ver. 12.

9. And he was three days without ſight, and neither did eat nor drink.]

10. And there was a certain diſciple at Damaſcus, named Ananias, and to him ſaid the Lord in a viſion, Ananias. And he ſaid, Behold I am here, Lord.

11, 12. Who having earneſtly pray'd that he may recover his ſight, in his prayer he hath been in an extaſie, and therein had it revealed to him, that one Ananias ſhould come in, and by bare laying hands on him, recover his ſight.

11. And the Lord ſaid unto him, Ariſe and go into the ſtreet which is called Straight, and enquire in the houſe of Judas for one called Saul, of Tarſus; [for behold, he prayeth,

12. And hath ſeen in a viſion a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his ſight.]

13. Then Ananias anſwered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to thy ſaints at Jeruſalem.

14. And now he is come with Commiſſion from the Sanhedrim (ſee v. 2.) to ſecure all that publickly avow the worſhip of Chriſt, Acts 22. 16.

14. And here he hath authority from the chief prieſts to bind all that call on thy name.]

15. A prime ſpecial perſon, whom as a moſt honourable inſtrument, or piece of houſhold-ſtuff in my family, (the Church, which I am now to erect) I have ſet apart for my peculiar ſervice, (ſee ch. 26. 17.) viz. to preach the Goſpel, not only to the Jews, but the Gentiles alſo, the greateſt and ſupreme among them.

15. But the Lord ſaid unto him, Go thy way; for he is [a choſen veſſel unto me, to bear my name before * the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Iſrael.]

* nations, ἐθνῶν.

16. And as fierce as he now appears againſt the Chriſtian faith, he ſhall ſuffer very heavy preſſures, run many hazards ſuddenly, v. 23. and 29. and labour moſt abundantly, and at laſt ſuffer death it ſelf in propugning of it, and this ſhall now be foretold him by thee.

16. For I will ſhew him how great things he muſt ſuffer for my names ſake.]

17. And Ananias went to him, and laying his hands on him, told him that Jeſus (that appeared to him as he came to Damaſcus) had ſent him to him, not only to reſtore his ſight to him, but to endow him with many extraordinary gifts and graces, thereby to fit him for God's ſervice in the Church, to which he had deſigned him, and to which he is conſecrated, ch. 13. 2.

17. And Ananias went his way, and entred into the houſe, and putting his hands on him, ſaid, Brother Saul, the Lord (even Jeſus that appeared unto thee in the way, as thou cameſt) hath ſent me that thou mighteſt receive thy ſight, and be filled with the holy Ghoſt.]

18. And he recovered his ſight immediately, and was baptized.

18. And immediately there fell from his Eyes as it had been ſkales, [and he received ſight forthwith, and aroſe and was baptized.]

19, 20. And taking food after his long faſting, he ſoon recovered ſtrength perfectly. Soon after this he went from Damaſcus into Arabia, Gal. 1. 17. (of which journey Luke, being not with him, makes no mention) and from thence returned again to Damaſcus, and having ſpent ſome time with thoſe Jewiſh Chriſtians which were driven from Jeruſalem ch. 8. 1. to Damaſcus, by virtue of his call from heaven, and of Chriſt's meſſage by Ananias to him, ver. 15, 16. and being filled with the holy Ghoſt, ver. 17. he ſet preſently about the preaching of the Goſpel, and that publickly in the Jewiſh ſynagogues, and proclaimed that Chriſt was indeed the Meſſias, the eternal Son of God.

19. And when he had received ſome meat he was ſtrengthned. Then was Saul certain days with the diſciples which were at Damaſcus.

20. And ſtraightway he preached Chriſt in the ſynagogues, that he is the Son of God.]

21. And all that heard it were amazed at this ſudden change, remembring that he had ſo lately been a ſpecial perſon in the ſtoning of Stephen, and very vehement againſt all Chriſtians, and was come to Damaſcus with commiſſion for this very purpoſe.

21. But all that heard him were amazed, and ſaid, Is not this he that deſtroyed them that called on this name in Jeruſalem, and came hither for that intent,] that he might bring them bound unto the chief prieſts?

c. 22. But Saul grew every day in ſpiritual ſtrength, and was ſoon able to repell all the Jews arguments to the contrary, and preſſed them with ſuch evidence that they were not able to avoid, collecting from the characters and prophecies of the Meſſias (and thereby demonſtrating) that this Jeſus is the Meſſias,

22. But Saul increaſed the more in ſtrength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damaſcus, † c proving that this is very Chriſt.]

23. Had a deſign, and entred into a conſpiracy, and laid wait to aſſault and kill him.

23. And after that many days were fulfilled, the Jews [took counſel to kill him.]

24. But their laying wait was known of Saul: and they watched the gates day and night to kill him.

26. Chriſtians there, but they durſt not venture to aſſociate with him, not believing that he was a Chriſtian.

26. And when Saul was come to Jeruſalem, he aſſayed to join himſelf to the [diſciples; but they were all afraid of him, and believed not that he was a diſciple.]

27. Openly, or in the aſſembly, v. 20. preached to the people (ſee note on Joh. 7. a.) the Goſpel of Chriſt.

27. But Barnabas took him, and brought him to the Apoſtles, and declared unto them how he had ſeen the Lord in the way, and that he had ſpoken to him, and how he had [preached boldly at Damaſcus in the Name of Jeſus.]

28. Employed in the works of this ſacred calling of his.

28. And he was with them [coming and going out] at Jeruſalem.

29. And he proclaimed the faith of Chriſt publickly, and argued, and diſcourſed with the Jews that underſtood Greek (ch. 6. a.)

d. 31. Now all the Chriſtian aſſemblies through Judæa, Galilee, and Samaria, were permitted a quiet uſe of their religion.

32. And it came to paſs, as Peter paſſed throughout all quarters, he came down alſo to the ſaints which dwelt at Lydda.]

35. And hereupon the inhabitants of Lydda and Saron generally received the faith, ſeeing this man on whom this miracle was wrought.

† a Roe, Δορκας.

36. Now there was at Joppa a certain diſciple, named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called † Dorcas: This woman was full of good works and almſdeeds which ſhe did.]

36. And at Joppa there was a Woman that had received the faith, her name was Tabitha, which ſignifies a Roe, ſhe was a very laborious woman, one that wrought much, (ſee note on Luke 1. k. and Tit. 3. a.) and by that means was very liberal and charitable.

37. And it came to paſs in thoſe days, that ſhe was ſick and died; [whom when they had waſhed,] they laid her in an upper chamber.

37. And having, by way of preparation for her interring, waſhed her, according to their cuſtom of burying.

39. Then Peter aroſe, and went with them: when he was come, they brought him into an upper chamber: and all the [widows ſtood by him weeping, and ſhewing the coats and garments which Dorcas made, while ſhe was with them.]

39. Poor widows, which had been cloathed by her liberality, came weeping to him, and ſhewed him the evidences and monuments of her charity, the inner and upper garments, (ſee Mat. 5. Note 1.) which either ſhe made, or cauſed to be made them, while ſhe lived, v. 36.

40. But Peter put them all forth, and kneeled down, and prayed, and turning him to the body, ſaid, Tabitha, ariſe. And ſhe opened her eyes: and when ſhe ſaw Peter, ſhe ſat up.

41. And he gave her his hand, and lift her up; and when he had called [the ſaints and widows] preſented her alive.

a. ωσὸς τὸ Κέντρα λακτιζειν.

V. 5. To kick againſt the pricks.] It was a proverbial Speech to kick againſt the goad, ſignifying to be refractory to puniſhment and diſcipline, when it comes to teach us our duty; for then the refractorineſs doth but involve us in more guilt and puniſhment. So in Æſchylus Prometh.

Οὐκουν ἐμοίγε χρώμενος διδασκάλῳ Πρὸς κέντρα κῶλον ἐκλενεῖς ——— and in his Alex.

Πρὸς κέντρα μὴ λάκτιζε, μὴ πήσας μογῆς,

If thou wilt take my counſel, thou ſhalt never kick againſt the Goad, for thou wilt bring more ſufferings upon thy ſelf by that means. Parallel to this is Ἀδάμαντα πλήσσειν, ſtriking the adamant, Πῦρ πατεῖν, treading on the fire, in * Chryſoſtome; So * again, Ὁ δὲ τὸν ἀδάμαντα τύπτων αὐτὸς ἔστιν ὁ πληττόμενος, καὶ ὁ κέντρα λακτίζων αὐτὸς ἔστιν ὁ κεντούμενος, He that ſtrikes the Adamant is himſelf ſtricken, and he that kicks the goads is himſelf goaded: ſtimulos pugnis cædere, in Plautus, to beat the goads with his fiſts, Truc. 4. 2. For this of goads was uſed not to beaſts only, but ſervants, which he calls ſtimuleum ſupplicium, Mil. 2. 6. And the ſervant thus handled ſeverely is by him called Carnificinum cribrum, his back was a kind of ſieve full of holes.

* Hom. 24. in Matt. p. 174.

b. φωνὴ.

V. 7. Hearing a voice.] What is here ſaid of thoſe that were with Paul, that they heard the voice, ſeems directly contrary to what is affirmed, ch. 22. 9. τὴν φωνὴν οὐκ ἤκουσαν, they heard not the voice. As for the way of reconciling it, by ſaying that the former belongs to Paul's voice, the latter to the voice of him that ſpake to him, there is little ground in the text for that nicety; but on the contrary the μηδένα θεωροῦντες, ſeeing no man, which follows in this place, belongs ſurely not to their not ſeeing of Paul, but of him that ſpake to him. The only way of reconciling the difficulty is by obſerving the notion of the word קול in Hebrew, which ſignifies φωνὴ and βροντὴ, a voice, and thunder, and thoſe promiſcuouſly taken the one for the other. So Heb. 12. 26. whoſe voice ſhook the earth, that is, whoſe thunder and lightnings and voice of a trumpet exceeding loud, Exod. 19. 16. and ſo Luke 9. 35. the voice of a cloud, ſaying, was the thunder with a voice in it, a revelation from Heaven given in thunder. So Mat. 3. 17. a voice from heaven ſaying, that is, a thunder from heaven, ſending forth this voice, which therefore was wont to be called בת קול the daughter of voice, or a voice coming out of it, or as the voice from heaven, Joh. 12. 28. is expreſs'd by the by-ſtanders, by βροντὴν γεγονέναι, that it thundred, and an Angel ſpake to him, which is explained diſtinctly by S. John, Rev. 4. 5. where βρονταὶ, βροντὰς and φωναὶ both are named, and ch. 10. 3. Ἐλάλησαν ἑπτὰ βρονταὶ τὰς ἑαυτῶν φωνὰς, the ſeven thunders delivered their voices. By this the difficulty will be cleared: For here, c. 9. ἡ φωνὴ the voice ought to be rendred (according to the notion of קול for βροντὴ) thunder, which was here joined with lightning, which ſhone or flaſh'd about him, v. 3. περιήστραψεν φῶς. As for the φωνὴν λαλούσης μοι, the voice of him that ſpake to me, c. 22. 9. that was the voice of the Angel ſpeaking out of heaven, or out of the cloud. Both which put together ſignifie no more than this, that S. Paul's companions at that time ſaw the light or the lightning, and heard the noiſe of the thunder (which is the importance of the place here) but heard not the articulate voice that came out of the thunder, that is, the Saul, Saul, &c. the voice of the Angel ſpeaking to him.

d. Οἰκοδομὴν

V. 31. Edified.] Οἰκοδομὴν ſignifies properly to build, or ſuperſtruct, upon a foundation, and add all the perfection perfection of the building deſigned or belonging to it. And ſo, being accommodated to ſpiritual matters, it ſignifies to teach the whole Chriſtian doctrine of ſtrict and pious life, of which Chriſt's being the Meſſias ſent from God, is the foundation or corner-ſtone, and the receiving and practiſing all that he commands, is that which is naturally and neceſſarily built upon it: and therefore to their being edified here, is added in the next words, walking in the fear of the Lord. The word is elſewhere very often uſed in theſe books, eſpecially in S. Paul's Epiſtles; and therefore it will here be fit to premiſe that which may give light to it in all thoſe places. 'Tis generally uſed in this Metaphorical ſenſe, with application to the Church of God, and the ſpiritual building thereof, partly in reſpect of knowledge, but principally in reſpect of Chriſtian practice. The Church is the Houſe of God, οἶκος πνευματικός, 1 Pet. 2. 5. a ſpiritual houſe, and every Chriſtian one of the λίθοι ζῶντες, living ſtones, which οἰκοδομοῦνται, are edified or built, and of which this houſe is made up. And the building it ſelf, that is, edification, is the compacting or orderly joining together of theſe living ſtones, in belief of the truth, and charitable living together, from both which proceeds the ſtrength and comelineſs of the ſtructure, and the fitneſs for the uſe and honour of him whoſe it is, that is, Chriſt. So that whatſoever tends in any eminent manner, either to the converting of Infidels, bringing them into the Church, to the advancing of Chriſtian knowledge, or eſpecially of piety, in any one or more particular men, or to the planting of unity, peace, and charity, in any particular National, or in the Univerſal Church of God, that is ſaid to edifie, or build up: and which of theſe ſenſes peculiarly belongs to the word in any place, muſt be judged by the Context, and circumſtances of the place where it is found, and may not be here ſet down more particularly.

CHAP. X.

Paraphraſe.

1. There was in Cæſarea, a ſtately city upon the Paleſtine coaſt, ſome 70 miles from Jeruſalem, a guard of ſoldiers, kept by the Romans to awe the conquered Jewes, and to defend the Roman preſident there, and part of that was called the Italian band, and one Cornelius a Roman was captain thereof.

1. THere was a certain man in Cæſarea, called Cornelius, a centurion of the band called the Italian band.]

2. And this Cornelius was a Proſelite of the Jews, and ſo one that worſhipped the true God, he and all his family, though he were not circumciſed, and he was a very charitable and devout perſon, and prayed daily at the ſet times very conſtantly.

2. [a A devout man, and one that feared God with all his houſe, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God alway.]

3. About three of Clock in the afternoon, one of the times of his devotions, had a viſion, and in it he ſaw an Angel (ſee note on c. 8. f.)

3. He [ſaw in a viſion evidently about the ninth hour of the day an Angel] of God coming in to him, and ſaying unto him, Cornelius.

4. And he diſcerned it to be a meſſage from God, and with an earneſt intent look, and great dread, he ſaid, What is thy pleaſure, Lord? And he ſaid, Thy Prayer ſo conſtantly obſerved at thy ſet times, and thy many works of charity on all occaſions, have been accepted by God as a ſpecial ſacrifice, and brought down a ſpecial bleſſing upon thee.

4. And when he looked on him, he was afraid, and ſaid, What is it, Lord? And he ſaid unto him, Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a [b] memorial before God.]

5. And now ſend men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, whoſe ſurname is Peter.

6. Give thee knowledge of the mercy deſigned thee, and directions for thy whole future life.

6. He lodgeth with one Simon a tanner, whoſe houſe is by the ſea ſide; he ſhall [tell thee what thou oughteſt to do.]

7. A ſoldier which was alſo a Proſelyte, and lived continually with him.

7. And when the Angel which ſpake unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his houſhold-ſervants, and a [devout ſoldier of them that waited on him continually.]

8. And telling them the whole matter of the viſion, he ſent them accordingly.

8. And when he had declared all theſe things unto them, he ſent them] to Joppa.

9. Went up to the roof of the Houſe, (as a place commodious for devotion) about twelve of the clock, or midday, which was another time of prayer, uſed by pious men.

9. On the morrow as they went on their journey and drew nigh unto the city, Peter [went [c] up upon the * houſe to pray about the ſixth hour.]

10. He fell into a trance, ſuch as in which men are wont to receive viſions from heaven.

10. And he † became very hungry, and would have eaten: but while they made ready, [he fell into [d] a trance,]

11. And in a viſion he ſeemed to ſee

11. And ſaw] heaven opened, and a certain * veſſel deſcending unto him, as it had been a great ſheet, knit at the four corners, and let down to the earth.

12. In which were all ſorts of Creatures, clean and unclean, thoſe that by the Jewiſh law a Jew might touch, and thoſe that he might not, noting the Gentiles and Jews together, (ſee note on Mat. 23. d.)

12. Wherein was all manner of four-footed beaſts of the earth, and wild beaſts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.]

13. And the voice bid him eat freely and indifferently of them all, that is, converſe and preach freely to the Gentiles, as well as the Jews.

13. And there came a voice to him, Riſe, Peter, kill and eat.]

14. But Peter refuſed, as having thought himſelf bound to eat nothing that was forbidden by the law, concerning clean and unclean.

14. But Peter ſaid, Not ſo, Lord: for I have never eaten any thing that is † common or unclean.]

15. God hath taken away thoſe interdicts concerning ſome meats, and conſequently thoſe differences and ſeparations between Jews and Gentiles ſignified by them: And therefore where God makes no diſtinction, do not thou make any.

15. And the voice ſpake unto him again the ſecond time, [What God hath cleanſed, that call not thou common.]

16. This was done thrice, and the veſſel was received up again into heaven.

17. And were juſt then come to the gate, or door.

17. Now while Peter doubted in himſelf, what this viſion, which he had ſeen, ſhould mean, behold the men which were ſent from Cornelius had made enquiry for Simons houſe, [and ſtood before the gate]

18. And called and asked, Whether Simon, which was ſurnamed Peter, were lodged there?

19. It was revealed to him by divine afflation, (ſee note on ch. 8. c.) ſaying

19. While Peter thought on the viſion, [the Spirit ſaid unto him,] Behold three men ſeek thee.

20. Ariſe

† polluted, κοινὸν.

20. Ariſe therefore, and get thee down, and go with them, [doubting nothing; for I have ſent them.]

20. Making no queſtion upon thoſe Jewiſh ſcruples of the unlawfulneſs of converſing with Gentiles, for it is by my appointment that they are come to thee.

21. Then Peter went down to the men which were ſent unto him from Cornelius, and ſaid, Behold I am he whom ye ſeek: what is the cauſe wherefore ye are come?

22. And they ſaid, Cornelius the Centurion, a juſt man, and [one that feareth God, and of good report among all the nation of the Jews, was warned of God by an holy Angel to ſend for thee into his houſe, and to hear words of thee.]

22. A Proſelyte of the Jews, and generally well eſteemed by them, hath ſeen a viſion, and therein was by an Angel of God commanded to ſend for thee to come to him, and ſay ſomewhat of eminent concernment to him.

23. Then called he them in, and lodged them. And on the morrow Peter went away with them, and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

24. And the morrow after they entred into Cæſarea: and Cornelius waited for them, and had called together his kinſmen and near friends.

25. And as Peter was coming in, Cornelius met him, and [fell down at his feet and worſhipped him.]

25. Took him for an Angel, or one ſent immediately from heaven to him, and accordingly did behave himſelf toward him in great humility.

26. But Peter took him up, ſaying, Stand up, I my ſelf alſo am a man.]

26. And Peter would not receive that expreſſion from him, telling him that he was an ordinary man, though thus employed on God's errand to him.

27. And as he talked with him, he went in, and found many that were come together:

28. And he ſaid unto them, [Ye know that it is an unlawful thing for a Man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another Nation: but God hath ſhewed me that I ſhould not call any man common or unclean.]

28. Ye all know that the laws of the Jewiſh religion permit not a Jew to converſe familiarly with any Gentile: but God hath by viſion revealed to me, that I ſhould not make any difference between Jews and Gentiles.

29. Therefore came I unto you without gainſaying, as ſoon as I was ſent for: I ask therefore for what intent ye have ſent for me?

30. And Cornelius ſaid, Four days ago I was faſting until this hour, and at the ninth hour I prayed in my houſe, and behold [a man ſtood before me in bright clothing,]

30. An Angel appeared to me in the ſhape of a man in bright ſhining apparel.

31. And ſaid, Cornelius, thy prayer is [heard, and thine alms are had in remembrance in the ſight of God.]

31. Accepted ſo far as to bring down this mercy of God on thee, and thine acts of mercy are now likely to be rewarded by God abundantly.

32. Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whoſe ſurname is Peter: he is lodged in the houſe of one Simon a tanner, by the ſea ſide, who when he cometh, ſhall ſpeak unto thee.

33. Immediately therefore I ſent to thee, and [thou haſt well done, that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here preſent before * God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God.]

33. I thank thee (Phil. 4. 14.) for coming: And now we all here are ready to receive any meſſage from God, and to undertake any courſe that God by thee ſhall appoint us.

* the Syriack and old Latin read, thee.

34. Then Peter opened his mouth and ſaid, Of a truth I perceive that God [is no reſpecter of perſons.]

34. Looks not on any one man with favour above others, meerly becauſe he is a Jew, or for any ſuch perſonal external prerogatives, abſtracted from actions and qualifications.

35. But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteouſneſs, is accepted of him.]

35. But of what nation ſoever a man be, if he undertake the ſervice of the true God, and exerciſe works of mercy and devotion, v. 2. he ſhall be ſure to be accepted by God, and rewarded with higher revelations and graces from him.

36. The word which God ſent unto the children of Iſrael, preaching peace by Jeſus Chriſt, (he is Lord of all)

37. That word (I ſay) you know, which was publiſhed thoroughout all Judæa, and began from Galilee, after the baptiſm which John preached, 36, 37, 38. The doctrine which hath been preach'd thorough all Judæa by God's appointment, to wit, that of ſalvation by Jeſus, appointed by God to be our king, and which was firſt preached in Galilee preſently after John Baptiſt's preaching and baptizing, This doctrine you cannot but have heard of, viz. concerning Jeſus of Nazareth, how by the teſtimony of the holy Ghoſt deſcending on him, and by the power of working miracles, God authorized him, and accordingly he hath executed his office, an Office of mercy, inſtructing and calling to repentance, curing diſeaſes, and caſting out devils by the power of God, which was preſent with him.

38. How God e anointed Jeſus of Nazareth with the holy Ghoſt, and with power, who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppreſſed of the devil: for God was with him.]

39. And we are witneſſes, of all things which he did, both in the land of the Jews, and in Jeruſalem, whom they [ſlew, and hanged on a tree.]

39. Put to death and crucified.

40. Him God raiſed up the third day, † and [ſhewed him openly.]

40. Manifeſted him to be conqueror over death.

† and gave him to be made manifeſt, ἔδωκεν αὐτὸν ἐμφανῆ γενέσθαι.

41. Not to all the people, but unto witneſſes, * choſen before of God, even to us who did eat and drink with him, after he roſe from the dead.]

41. But this manifeſtation was not immediately made to all the multitude of the Jews, but only to his diſciples, perſons whom God had enclined to leave all, and follow Chriſt, and to receive the faith which he preach'd to them, and to repoſe their whole truſt in him: For being crucified by the Jews, and taken from them, and ſo they left deſtitute and hopeleſs for a while, God was pleaſed to revive him again; and as he had choſen them to be witneſſes of all that Chriſt did when he was alive, ſo he choſe them to be the witneſſes moſt diſtinctly of his reſurrection, giving them the honour to eat and drink with him, and to ſee him eat and drink, after he roſe from the dead.

* ordained before, προκεχειροτονημένοις, ſee c. 14. a.

42. And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and teſtifie that it is he which was ordained of God to be the judge of quick and dead.]

42. Whom therefore he appointed to preach the Goſpel of Chriſt to the world, and to proclaim to all that this crucified Chriſt is raiſed to God's right hand, to be judge of all men, that ſhall die before, and that ſhall be found alive at the day of doom.

43. To him give all the Prophets witneſs, that through his name whoſoever believeth in him ſhall receive remiſſion of ſins.]

43. This is he of whom all the Prophets foretel, that in him God would ſtrike a new covenant with mankind, of which this is the ſum, that although men were ſinners, yet upon receiving of him, embracing his doctrine, they ſhould by their prayers, offered to God in his name, obtain pardon and remiſſion.

44. While Peter yet ſpake theſe words, the holy ghoſt fell on all them which heard the word.]

44. Whilſt Peter was thus ſpeaking, the holy Spirit (either by ſome way of viſible appearance, ſuch as that was on the Apoſtles, Acts 15. 8. or elſe manifeſting himſelf in them by the effects, the ſame that had attended the viſible deſcent, Act. 2. the gift of tongues, &c. v. 46.) came down upon them, ſee ſee v. 47. and c. 11. 15. and gave unto thoſe that heard him (power of doing miracles; of ſpeaking ſtrange languages, v. 46. to ſome, to others) other gifts and graces, fitting them for ſeveral conditions in the Church, ſee ch. 19. 6.

45. And they of the circumciſion which believed were aſtoniſhed, as many as came with Peter, becauſe] that on the Gentiles alſo was poured out the gift of the holy Ghoſt.

45. And the Jews which had received the Goſpel, and came with Peter, wondred extremely.

46. For they heard them ſpeak with tongues, and [magnifie God.] Then anſwered Peter, 46. Bleſs God for his great mercies to them.

47. Can any man forbid water, that theſe ſhould not be baptized, which have received the holy Ghoſt † as well as we?]

47. Is there any doubt or queſtion to be made of the baptizing of theſe, and receiving them into freedom of the congregation, to whom, although they be Gentiles, God hath himſelf allowed that which is more than baptiſm, viz. the deſcent of the holy Ghoſt upon them, thereby fitting them for offices in his Church, in the ſame manner as by deſcent of the holy Ghoſt we received our commiſſion? Acts 2.

† in like manner even as we? καθὼς ἡμεῖς.

48. And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days.

Annotations on Chap. X.

a. V. 2. A devout man.] What is meant by Proſelytes and the two ſorts of them, hath been ſet down, Note on Mat. 23. d. and the manner of initiating them by waſhing, Note on Mat. 3. a. and their putting off their old relations, Mat. 19. 28. d. and their new birth, Note on Joh. 3. a. Now it will be worth obſerving what titles the New Teſtament hath made uſe of to expreſs the ſecond ſort of Proſelytes, thoſe, not of Juſtice, but of the gates, or the uncircumciſed Proſelytes (for ſuch was Cornelius in this place, and ſuch the Eunuch) and theſe are their titles: 1. Εὐλαβεῖς. Ἄνδρες εὐλαβεῖς, Acts 8. 2. pious men, ſometimes with the addition of ἀπὸ παντὸς ἔθνους τῶν ὑπὸ τὸν οὐρανὸν, of every nation under heaven, c. 2. 8. which is the very title the Rabbins give them, מחסדי אומות לעולם of the good men of the nations of the world. 2ly, Καθοικοῦντες Ἰερουσαλὴμ. οἱ κατοικοῦντες Ἰερουσαλὴμ, they that dwell as ſtrangers at Jeruſalem, Acts 2. 14. all one with προσήλυτοι proſelytes, v. 16. Then 3ly, Εὐσεβεῖς. εὐσεβεῖς, the pious men here of Cornelius, and v. 7. of ſome of his ſoldiers. And 4thly, Φοβούμενοι. φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεὸν, thoſe that fear God, here, of Cornelius again, and ſo Acts 13. 16. Ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, καὶ οἱ φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεὸν, men of Iſrael, and ye that fear God, and again, v. 26. οἱ ἐν ὑμῖν φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεὸν, they among you that fear God, Proſelytes of your gates: ſo ſaith Oecumenius expreſly, φοβουμένους τὸν Θεὸν προσηλύτους ἐκάλει, by thoſe that fear God he means the Proſelytes. And 5thly, and above all, Σεβόμενοι. σεβόμενοι, Acts 13. 43. and σεβόμενοι Ἕλληνες, Acts 17. 4. the worſhippers, and the Græcian worſhippers (and ſo the Eunuch went to Jeruſalem to worſhip, c. 8. 27.) of which Oecumenius again, Σεβομένους ἰδίως προσηλύτους καλεῖ by worſhippers he means peculiarly proſelytes: and agreeably to many of theſe was the name Τιμόθεος, Timotheus, which ſignifies in the Greek a worſhipper of God, the name of one whoſe father was a Greek, tho' his mother were a Jew, and being himſelf a Proſelyte as his father was, yet not circumciſed, till Paul cauſed him to be ſo afterward. Sixthly and laſtly, Τιμόθεος, προσερχόμενοι τῷ Θεῷ. προσερχόμενοι τῷ Θεῷ, they that come to God, Heb. 10. 6. which is the very word προσήλυτος lightly changed.

b. 4. Memorial] The notion of μνημόσυνον a memorial, in this and ſome other places, is here fit to be obſerved: it is a form of ſpeech ſignifying an oblation or ſacrifice. So Lev. 2. 9. The prieſt ſhall take from the meat offering a memorial thereof, and burn it upon the altar, it is an offering made by fire of a ſweet ſavour unto the Lord: where it is clearly affirmed of the אזכרתה μνημόσυνον αὐτῆς the memorial, that it is an offering, &c. So v. 9. 16. and c. 5. 12. c. 6. 15. and oft elſewhere. And ſo the aſcending, or coming up, before God inclines it here; for that is proper to ſacrifices and oblations, to go up and render a ſweet ſavour to God; and this is here fitly attributed to his prayers and alms, which are the Chriſtians ſacrifice, an odor of ſweet ſmell, ὀσμὴ εὐωδίας, a welcome ſacrifice to God, Phil. 4. 18. and Heb. 13. 6. Μνημόσυνον.

c. 9. Upon the houſe to pray.] That δῶμα ſignifies peculiarly not a houſe, but the roof, or top of the houſe, which being plain was fit for uſe, hath been ſaid, Mat. 24. Note h. Of this the Jews had a ſpecial uſe, in places out of Judæa or Jeruſalem, that they might more freely look that way in performing their devotions. For the Temple of Jeruſalem being the ſolemn place of worſhip, they that were at diſtance from that place, were to pray toward it. So 1 King. 8. 48. in the firſt inſtitution, they that were carried captive out of the land were to pray toward their land, and accordingly Dan. 6. 10. Daniel went into his houſe, and his windows being open in his chamber toward Jeruſalem he kneeled on his knees three times a day, and prayed. So when it is ſaid of Hezekiah, 2 Kings 20. 2. that he turned his face to the wall, and prayed, Jonathan's Targum reads towards the wall of the Sanctuary, that is, toward that wall of the room which pointed toward the Sanctuary, as now adays the Jews in the Weſt, in Italy, Germany, &c. are ſaid to have their walls inſcribed מזרח the Eaſt, becauſe Jeruſalem lies Eaſt from them. That S. Peter at this time obſerved this cuſtom, there is little doubt, when we remember, that as Daniel obſerved thoſe two circumſtances, of time and of poſture, ſo Peter retaining the one. (as appears here by the ſixth hour) may as reaſonably be deemed to have retained the other, that of the poſture toward Jeruſalem in offering up his devotions, and to that end to have gone up to the houſe top to pray, where he might moſt freely look that way. When he was at Jeruſalem he went up ſolemnly to the Temple to pray at the hours of prayer, Peter and John at the ninth hour of prayer, Acts 3. 1, &c. and ſo all the Apoſtles were διαπαντὸς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, continually (at the conſtant hours) in the Temple, Luke 24. 53. (ſee Note on Acts 1. c.) and then there will be little doubt, but they retained that other part of obſervance to that place, of praying toward the Temple, when they were farther from it; it being no part of Chriſt's reformation to forbid all the religious ceremonies which had been of uſe among the Jews, but rather to adapt and accommodate many of them to the Chriſtians uſe.

δῶμα τὸ δῶμα προσευξασθαι. προσερχόμενοι τῷ Θεῷ.

d. V. 10. A trance.] The word ἔκστασις is the Greek of תרדמה, which ſignifies either, 1. deep ſleep (and a trance of the nature of that) or 2ly, amazement, aſtoniſhment, and accordingly is by the Septuagint rendred ſometimes θάμβος, as Pſal. 68. 29. and δεινὸς φόβος 1 Sam. 26. 12. (ſee Note on Rom. 11. b.) and ſometimes ἔκστασις, as Gen. 2. 21. where it is (though we render it a deep ſleep) of the ſame kind with that here, a trance or extaſie, and therefore is rendred by the Targum שנא תקיפא a ſtrong ſleep, ſignifying or intimating it to be ſomething more than that ſleep which is ordinary among men. Proportionably to theſe acceptions of the Hebrew, the word ἔκστασις in the New Teſtament ſignifies ſometimes amazement and aſtoniſhment, from fear or wonder, Mar. 5. 42. and 16. 8. Luke 5. 26. Acts 3. 10. and ſometimes a trance or extaſie, when the outward ſenſes being bound up as 'twere with ſleep, God's will is inwardly revealed to the underſtanding, by way of intellectual viſion. Thus is it in all the other places of the New Teſtament, c. 11. 5. εἶδον ἐν ἐκστάσει ὅραμα, in an extaſie or trance, I ſaw a viſion, and c. 22. 17. γενέσθαι με ἐν ἐκστάσει, I was in a trance, and ſo here ſpeaking of the ſame matter. Where therefore it ſufficiently appears to denote not a natural ſleep, ſuch as men diſ-ſpirited with faſting may be thought thought apt to fall into (which the mention of Peter's faſting in the beginning of the verſe hath made ſome men apprehend of it) but a tranſportation or trance into which he was caſt by God (or a binding up his outward ſenſes, which is anſwerable to a deep ſleep, ſuch as Adam's was, Gen. 2. when the rib was taken out of him) to make him capable of the viſion, or revelations of Gods will, which here he was to receive. To which purpoſe 'twill be obſervable, that Gen. 17. 3. when the Hebrew text ſaith, Abraham fell on his face, and God talked with him, the Jeruſalem Talmud reads, Inclinavit ſe Abram ſuper faciem ejus, & obſtupuit, Abraham bowed himſelf upon his face, and was aſtoniſhed; where the & obſtupuit and was aſtoniſhed is clearly the ἔκστασις here (the Hebrew word ſignifying, as was ſaid, both aſtoniſhment and trance) wherein God talked with him, by way of viſion to his underſtanding, not to his ſenſes.

V. 38. Anointed] That the uſe of oyl among the Jews was for feſtivals, hath been ſaid, Note on Mat. 26. c. and conſequently the cuſtom of anointing notes a ſolemn entertainment of any one: water to waſh the feet, and bread to eat, was allowed to every of the gueſts; but not ſo the fatted calf, but when they would expreſs a great joy, and welcome, and making merry, as in the return of the prodigal. And ſo in like manner, the anointing, or powring oyl on the heads of the gueſts, is the higheſt expreſſion of acknowledging and teſtifying the greateſt joy (and ſo called the oyl of gladneſs, Pſal. 45. 8.) that is to be found among them. This anointing therefore from hence came to denote the preferring one before another (and the Targum generally renders it by a word which ſignifies preferring or advancing) and ſo became the ceremony of conſecrating to any ſpecial office, and ſo was ordinarily uſed in the inſtalling men to offices of any eminence. From hence (as in many other things) doth the word come to be uſed metaphorically, for any that is preferred before, or ſet over others. Abraham and the Patriarchs, that muſt not be touched in the Pſalmiſt, are called Gods anointed, that is, perſons by God preferred and advanced before others, taken into his ſpecial care, and ſo ſignally teſtifyed to be by God's dealings towards them. And ſo the anointed of the Lord are thoſe whom God hath ſet over other men. Agreeable to this is it that that eminent perſon propheſy'd of by Moſes, whom God ſhould ſend, and whom they were to hear, is generally known by the name of משיח the anointed, the Meſſias, or Chriſt, becauſe he was thus preferred by God (Pſal. 45. & Heb. 1. 9.) above his fellows, men and Angels themſelves. According to this notion it is, that when the H. Ghoſt came down on Chriſt, and thereby (by a voice from heaven, Thou art my beloved Son in whom I am well pleaſed) marked him out as the perſon whom God had ſent, (of whom John therefore ſaid, that he was greater then he, and preferred before him) it is expreſſed by the prophet in theſe words, The ſpirit of the Lord is upon me, becauſe the Lord hath anointed me to preach, &c. Iſa. 61. 1. and Luke 4. 18. that is, the Lord hath preferred me before others, and ſet me apart to this office, as he hath no other man: So again, Acts 4. 27. Thy ſon Jeſus whom thou haſt anointed, that is, marked out to be that beloved ſon of thine, which was done at the Spirits coming down upon him, which therefore muſt be reſolved to be the meaning of anointing him in that place. And ſo 'tis evidently in this place, How God hath anointed him with the Holy Spirit, and with power, that is, whom God by thoſe two means (the deſcent of the Spirit upon him, and the power of miracles, as by privileges and marks of prelation) preferred, and dignified beyond all others that ever were in the world, and demonſtrated him to be that promiſed Meſſias. This uſe of the phraſe being ſo remarkable of Chriſt, and ſo particularly applied to this reſpect of the Holy Ghoſt's teſtifying of him and ſetting him apart for his office (for the very teſtifying that he was God's beloved ſon, who was to be heard before all others, is the enſtalling or conſecrating him to his prophetick office, to teach the world) is farther enlarged to the Apoſtles of Chriſt (on whom the H. Ghoſt afterward deſcended in like manner) and even to all other faithful Chriſtians alſo, 2 Cor. 1. 21. where, with that phraſe of confirming them into Chriſt, that is, giving them aſſurance of the truth of Chriſt's being the Meſſias (as an oath is ſaid to be εἰς βεβαίωσιν, for confirmation) is joined alſo God's having anointed them, which ſignifies Gods having afforded them ſuch ſpecial favour, and giving them ſuch evidences and teſtimonies of the truth of that they were to believe, viz. the Holy Ghoſt's deſcending upon the Apoſtles (which was one aſſurance of Chriſt's being the true Meſſias, & the Miracle which they wrought was another) which being not ſo peculiar to the twelve Apoſtles, but that, like the oyl on Aaron's head, it deſcended to the beard, and to the skirts of his cloathing, it is communicated by Saint Paul to himſelf, and the believing Corinthians alſo, (ſee note on c. 2. d.) From this laſt place thus underſtood will appear alſo what is meant by the χρίσμα or unction, 1 John 2. 20. which the Chriſtians or believers to whom he writes are by him ſaid to have ἀπὸ τοῦ ἁγίου, from the Holy, that is, I conceive, from the Holy Ghoſt. The Holy Ghoſt by deſcending on the Apoſtles had taught them all things, that is, given them aſſurance that what Chriſt had preached was true, and conſequently, that he being the true Meſſias, all other contrary teachers were falſe teachers, and to be avoided. This teſtimony from heaven afforded the Apoſtles, (and attendant on that, the power alſo of doing miracles in Chriſt's name allowed to many others in the Church of the firſt times) was the foundation of belief to that and the whole ſucceeding Church, & therefore that privilege (as it was allowed them) being called χρίσμα or unction, is ſaid there to belong to theſe believers: They have it, that is, either the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit in the Church, or elſe the benefit of it, the evidence of thoſe truths (which the coming of the Holy Ghoſt confirmed) belongs unto them; and therefore as that deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt was ſaid to teach them all things, ſo here, they which have this χρίσμα, know all things, that is, have ſufficient evidence thereby of the truth, v. 21. that is, of the Goſpel, or that Jeſus is the Meſſias, v. 22. and that what they had received from the beginning, v. 24. that is, from the beginning of Chriſt's appearing among them (at his Baptiſm, when the Holy Ghoſt thus deſcended) was ſuch a truth, as they were never to part with. And ſo v. 27. the unction again (that is, that which God had afforded them, to demonſtrate that Jeſus was the Meſſias) teacheth you of all things, that is, gives you aſſurance of the truth of the Goſpel of Chriſt, and is truth, and not a lye, that is, infallibly true, and fit to be confronted unto, and to fortify you againſt all thoſe that come to deceive you, v. 26.

CHAP. XI.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND the Apoſtles and [brethren that were in Judea heard that the Gentiles had alſo received the word of God.]

1. Chriſtians in Judea heard that the people of other Nations which were not Jews, had embraced the doctrine of Chriſt.

2. And when Peter was come up to Jeruſalem, they that were of the circumciſion contended with him,

3. Saying, Thou wenteſt in unto men uncircumciſed, and didſt eat with them.]

2, 3. And at Peter's coming to Jeruſalem, the Jewiſh Chriſtians (who tho' they were converted to Chriſtianity, yet ſtill continu'd conſtant to the obſervation of the Moſaical law of circumciſion, of abſtaining from unclean things, and the converſation with men of any other nation, &c.) accuſed him, that he converſed freely with thoſe that were not circumciſed, Cornelius, &c. and eat with them, which the Jews count abſolutely unlawful.

4. And Peter thus made his Apology, giving an exact account of all that had befallen in this matter.

4. But Peter * reheatſed the matter from the beginning, and expounded it by order unto them, ſaying,]

* began & expound'd to them orderly, ἐξετίθετο αὐτοῖς καθεξῆς

5. See note on c. 10. d.

5. I was in the city of Joppa praying, and in a [trance] I ſaw a viſion, a certain veſſel deſcend, as it had been a great ſheet, let down from heaven by four corners, and it came even to me.

6. Beaſts and fowls and creepers of all ſorts, clean, and unclean.

6. Upon the which when I had faſtned mine eyes, I conſidered, and ſaw [four-footed beaſts of the earth, and wild beaſts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.]

7. Make no diſtinction of clean and unclean, but eat freely of any which thou ſeeſt.

7. And I heard a voice, ſaying unto me, Ariſe, Peter, [ſlay and eat.]

8. I have always obſerv'd this diſtinction, commanded by the law of Moſes, and muſt not now break that Law, whatſoever thou ſeemeſt to command me.

8. But I ſaid, Not ſo, Lord: for [nothing common or unclean hath at any time entred into my mouth.]

9. 'Twas God that made that diſtinction by his law to the Jews, and there is no natural turpitude in eating any kind of Meat, ſave only as it is prohibited by God; and therefore God that made that Law, abrogating it again, and making all meats clean, or free to be eaten, thou art not to think any interdict lies on any, but freely to eat of all.

9. But the voice anſwered me † again from heaven, [What God hath cleanſed, that call not thou common.]

† the ſecond time, ἐκ δευτέρου

10. And this was done three times: and all were drawn up again into heaven.

11. And as ſoon as I had ſeen this viſion, there was a thing fell out, which made me diſcern to what end this viſion was deſigned, not only to reveal to me the lawfulneſs of eating all ſorts of meats, but more principally of converſing with, and preaching the Goſpel to the Gentiles; for

11. And behold] immediately there were three men already come unto the houſe where I was, ſent from Ceſarea unto me.

12. And the Spirit of God by a ſecret afflation, or incitation (ſee note on c. 8. f.) commanded me to make no ſcruple (this was the interpretation of my viſion to me) but freely to go along with them, though they were not Jews, or circumciſed Proſelytes. And theſe ſix men, converted or Chriſtian Jews, went along with me: And we all went into the houſe of Cornelius, a Gentile, but Proſelyte of the Jews, though uncircumciſed.

12. And the Spirit bad me go with them nothing doubting. Moreover theſe ſix brethren accompanied me, and we entred into the man's houſe.]

13. And he told how in a viſion received from an Angel in this houſe of his (and might not we enter, where an Angel had been before us, ſent by God immediately, as we alſo were?) he was commanded to ſend to Joppa for Simon Peter to come to him.

13. And he ſhewed us, how he had ſeen an Angel in his houſe, which ſtood and ſaid unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whoſe ſurname is Peter,]

14. Who, ſaid the Angel, ſhall teach thee that doctrine, by believing and embracing of which thou and all thy family, if they believe alſo, ſhall be made heirs of everlaſting ſalvation.

14. Who ſhall * tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy houſe ſhall be ſaved.]

* ſpeak words to thee, λαλήσει ῥήματα πρὸς σε

15. And I had not long diſcourſed with them, and preached the Goſpel of Chriſt, but the holy Ghoſt came down (ſee c. 10. 44.) upon Cornelius and his company either in the ſame manner, or with the ſame effects as he did upon us Apoſtles, Acts 2. preſently after the aſcenſion of Chriſt, before we entred upon our office.

15. And as I began to ſpeak, the holy Ghoſt fell on them, as on us at the beginning.]

16. And I could not but apply to theſe alſo what Chriſt ſaid to us, viz. that John Baptiſt's manner and ceremony of receiving Proſelytes ſhould be much exceeded by another, which ſhould befal us and ſome others (ſee note on c. 1. a.) the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt upon us.

16. Then remembred I the word of the Lord how that he ſaid, John indeed baptized with water, but ye ſhall be baptized with the holy Ghoſt.]

17. And therefore when God hath allowed theſe Gentiles the ſame privilege which he beſtowed on us after our continuing ſtedfaſt to the faith of Chriſt ſo long, attending him as his conſtant diſciples, when that which we look on as the ſolemnity of our miſſion or Apoſtleſhip, the deſcent of the H. Ghoſt, hath been alſo allowed to them, it muſt have been a downright diſobedience to God, if I had made a ſcruple to receive them into the Church, or indifferently to preach unto, or converſe with them.

17. Foraſmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us * who believed on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, † what was I that I could withſtand God?]

* when we had believed, πιστεύσασιν † who was I, able to withſtand or hinder God? ἐγὼ τίς ἤμην δυνατὸς κωλῦσαι τὸν Θεόν;

18. With this account of Peters they were ſatisfied, & bleſſed God for that communicativeneſs of his Goodneſs, that he had afforded the ſame mercy to the Gentiles, as to the Jews, that if they will return, and amend, and receive Chriſt, they ſhall be ſaved, and that he had given them the Grace to do ſo.

18. When they heard theſe things, they held their peace, and glorified God, ſaying, then hath God alſo to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life.]

19. Now they which were ſcattered abroad upon the perſecution that aroſe about Stephen, travelled as far as Phœnice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, * preaching the word unto none but unto the Jews only.]

19. Then the diſciples that were driven from Jeruſalem ch. 8. 1. went about, publiſhing the Goſpel (ſee note on ch. 8. b.) to the Jews, but to none elſe.

*ſpeaking, λαλοῦντες

20. And ſome of theſe diſciples were men that had been born in Cyprus and Cyrene, and they, when they came to Antioch, preached the faith of Chriſt to thoſe Jews which ſpake and uſed the Greek language and Bibles.

20. And ſome of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, which when they were come to Antioch, ſpake unto the † Grecians, preaching the Lord Jeſus.]

† many copies, printed & MS. read, Ἕλληνιστὰς Helleniſts.

21. And God proſpered their preaching of Chriſt, and brought in many converts to them daily.

21. And the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord.]

22. And the Apoſtles that remained at Jeruſalem hearing of it, ſent Barnabas to confirm them from city to city as far as Antioch.

22. Then tidings of theſe things came unto the ears of the Church which was at Jeruſalem: and they ſent forth Barnabas, that he ſhould go as far as Antioch.]

23. Who coming and ſeeing with what good ſucceſs the Goſpel had been preached among them, (ſee note on Heb. 13. d. and Acts 18. c.) was glad, and adviſed them cordially and ſtedfaſtly to hold faſt to Chriſt.

23. Who when he came, and had ſeen the grace of God, was glad: and exhorted them all, that with purpoſe of heart they would cleave unto the Lord.]

24. For Barnabas was a very pious perſon, a believer that had many excellent gifts and graces, and by his means alſo the Goſpel was received by very many.

24. For he was a good man, and full of the holy Ghoſt, and of Faith: and much people was added unto the Lord.]

25. Then

25. Then departed Barnabus to Tarsus for to seek Saul.

26. And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to pass that [a whole year, they * assembled themselves with the Church, and taught much people: and the disciples were a called Christians first in Antioch.]

Annotations on Chap. XI.

a. Χρηματίζω

V. 26. Called Christians] The use of χρηματίζω, in the Active for to be called in a passive sense, is to be seen, Rom. 7. 3. μοιχαλὶς χρηματίσει, she shall be called an adulteress. So in * Oecumenius, Ἀστέρες δὲ πλανῆται χρηματίζουσι καὶ αὐτοὶ, they also are called wandring stars: but that in an eminent manner, as may be discerned by that acception of it in Epiphanius, Ἀστρονομία, saith he, παρὰ Φαρισαίοις λόγου ἐχρηματίζετο, Astronomy was much cried up, and was in great reputation among the Pharisees. So here χρηματίζειν Χριστιανὸς, is to be famously known under that name of Christians.

* on Jude.

b. Πρεσβύτεροι

V. 30. The Elders] The word Πρεσβύτεροι Elders is here first met with in the Christian Church, and therefore will deserve to be explained. And first it will not be amiss to see the use of it among the Greeks and Hebrews. Among the Greeks, it is the saying of a learned Grammarian, Dionysius Halicarnasseus, l. 2. Πρεσβύτερους καὶ τοὺς ἀρίστους καὶ τοὺς γέροντας εἰώθασιν οἱ παλαιοὶ λέγειν, The ancients used the word Elders both for Rulers and old men, & accordingly it is now in use among all nations, Italians, French, Spaniards, English, to call their Rulers, Seniors, Maiors, Aldermen, &c. which are literally the rendring of Πρεσβύτεροι. Among the Hebrews the same is acknowledged, that זקנים old men, (which with them that want degrees of comparison is all one with Elders, and generally rendred πρεσβύτεροι,) denoteth Dignity and Prefecture in the Old Testament. So the steward of Abraham's house, Eliezer, who was placed over all his servants and goods, Gen. 24. 2. is called πρεσβύτερος τοῦ οἴκου αὐτοῦ, the Elder of his house, and ἄρχων πάντων τῶν αὐτοῦ, Ruler of all he had; not so as זקן should be joined with עבדו and rendred his Elder servant, but with a comma, that servant, which was Elder of his house, שליט בביתא saith the Targum of Jerusalem, ruler, administrator, steward, and so he is called, Gen. 15. 2. So the זקני or Elders of Pharaoh's house, and of all Egypt, Gen. 50. 7. are the Prefects and Administrators of the King's house, and of all Egypt. So the Elders of the Moabites, Num. 22. 7. are שרי Princes of Moab, v. 8. So when all Dominion was founded in the privileges that belonged to the first-born, Gen. 4. 7. (and therefore is Reuben, as first-born, Gen. 49. 3. called the excellency of principality, and the excellency of power, that is, the excellent Principality, or Supreme power, the Magistrate, so called Rom. 13. 1.) the Princes of the families, or kindreds, are called indifferently πατριάρχαι, and πρεσβύτεροι, Patriarchs and Elders. Such were the Elders of Israel, Exod. 3. 16, 18. & 4. 29. the heads, or rulers of the Families, or kindreds, ch. 6. 14. Rulers of the congregation, ch. 16. 22. who are again called the Elders of Israel, ch. 17. 5, 6. and 18. 12. and Elders of the Tribes, Deut. 31. 28. And when Moses appointed Judges for lighter causes, Exod. 18. 22. who should have power over thousands, and hundreds, and fifties, and tens, that is, first, over so many families, after, over greater or lesser cities, (for so the thousand signifies a city, Judg. 6. 15. Mic. 5. 2. and the Ruler thereof is ἡγεμὼν, Mat. 2. 6.) these were by them called πρεσβύτεροι, Elders, and Ἄρχοντες, Rulers and Judges, and ἀρχισυνάγωγοι, Rulers of the Synagogues, and the like. And thereupon in the Theodosian Codex, where the second law de Judæis uses the word Presbyteros, Elders, another Law hath Synagogarum patres, fathers, or Rulers of the Consistories. And so when the seventy Elders were taken in to assist Moses, Num. 11. 16. (to whom the Great Sanhedrim at Jerusalem succeeded) it is evident, that these were so called, because they were Princes or Prefects, or Rulers of the People, before they were thus chosen by Moses. (Gather unto me, saith God, seventy men of the Elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the Elders of the people, and officers over them, and bring them to the tabernacle of the Congregation, that they may stand there with thee.) And so the word Elder was not a denotation of one of the Sanhedrim, any otherwise, then as some of those that were in the Sanhedrim had formerly been Elders or Rulers, of the people; and accordingly of three sorts of men, of which the Sanhedrim consisted, but one is called Elders, the other Scribes, and chief Priests (see Mat. 16. 20. and Note on Mar. 5. c.) By all which it appears how fitly this word Πρεσβύτεροι, Elders, being made use of by the Apostles, and writers of the New Testament, is affix'd to the Governours of the Christian Church, the several Bishops of several cities, answerable to the ἡγεμόνες, Rulers of thousands, or Patriarchs, which being first used among the Jews, are in the Christian Church the ordinary title of Bishops. And although this title of Πρεσβύτεροι Elders, have been also extended to a second order in the Church, and is now only in use for them, under the name of Presbyters, yet in the Scripture-times it belonged principally, if not alone, to Bishops, there being no evidence that any of that second order were then instituted, though soon after, before the writing of Ignatius Epistles, there were such instituted in all Churches. Of those first Apostolical times the testimony of Clemens Romanus, in Epist. 1. ad Cor. is observable, Ἐξεπέμφθη ὁ Χριστὸς ἀπὸ Θεοῦ, καὶ οἱ Ἀπόστολοι ἀπὸ Χριστοῦ, εἰ οὖν ἐξεπέμφθησαν εὐαγγελιζόμενοι — Κατὰ χώρας οὖν καὶ πόλεις κηρύσσοντες, κατίστανον τὰς ἀπαρχὰς αὐτῶν δοκιμάσαντες τῷ πνεύματι, εἰς ἐπισκόπους καὶ διακόνους τῶν μελλόντων πιστεύειν, Christ was sent from God, and the Apostles from Christ and they went out preaching the Gospel — And then, They therefore preaching through

Regions and Cities Conſtituted (or Ordained) their firſt-fruits, (firſt-converts) into Biſhops and Deacons of thoſe that ſhould afterward believe. Where it appears that when the Goſpel was firſt preached by the Apoſtles, and but few converted, they ordained in every City and Region no more but a Biſhop, and one or more Deacons to attend him, there being at the preſent ſo ſmall ſtore out of which to take more, and ſo ſmall need of ordaining more, that this Biſhop is conſtituted more for the ſake of thoſe which ſhould after believe, then of thoſe which did already. Agreeable is that of Epiphanius, ἐκ βαθυτάτων ἱστοριῶν, ſaith he, fetch'd out of the profoundeſt or ancienteſt hiſtories, l. 3. c. 1. Νέων ὄντων τῶν κηρύγματων, &c. At the beginning of the Apoſtles preaching, when there was none fit or worthy to be Biſhop, the place remained void without any, but when need required, and there were thoſe that were fit for it, Biſhops were conſtituted; but while there was no multitude of Chriſtians, there were found none among them to be conſtituted Presbyters (in our modern uſe of that word) and they contented themſelves with a Biſhop alone in every place: But without a Deacon 'twas impoſſible for a Biſhop to be, and therefore the Apoſtle took care that the Biſhop ſhould have his Deacons to miniſter to him. And accordingly when St. Paul gives directions to Biſhop Timothy for the ordaining of Officers in the Church, he names Biſhops and Deacons, but no ſecond order between them, 1 *Tim.*3.. 2, 8. and ſo to Titus, *Tit.*1.7. & *c.*2.1. (ſee Note on *Phil.*1. c.) And ſo in the Church of Jeruſalem it is clear by ſtory, that James the brother of the Lord, being ſoon after Chriſt's Aſcenſion conſtituted their Biſhop (ſee Note on Gal. 2. d.) the Deacons are the firſt that are added to him, Acts 6. and no mention as yet of any middle order. From whence it will be ſufficiently cleared, who are the πρεσβύτεροι Elders here, viz. the Biſhops of ſeveral cities or of the brethren that dwelt in Judea, v. 29. to whom this alms was deſigned, for the famine being in all Judea, and not only at Jeruſalem, and there being brethren, that is, Chriſtians, inhabiting thro' ſeveral parts of Judea, there can be no reaſon to imagin that Jeruſalem only ſhould have the benefit of this Collection, or conſequently that the Elders to whom it was delivered, ſhould belong only to that city. And thus it is known in the Primitive Church, that alms and collections (called χάρις and λογία) whether in the ſame Church brought by the communicants in the offertory, or by officers ſent from one Church to another, were ſolemnly entruſted to the Biſhop, as the Steward of the houſe of God, as the oblations were brought to the High Prieſt under the Law, and the liberality of the faithful to the Apoſtles feet, Acts 4.34. So in the 41th Canon Apoſtolical, it is appointed, Præcipimus ut in poteſtate ſua Epiſcopus Eccleſiæ res habeat: Si enim animæ hominum pretioſæ illi ſunt concreditæ, multò magis oportet eum curam pecuniarum genere, ita ut poteſtate ejus indigentibus omnia diſpenſentur per Presbyteros & Diaconos, We command that the Biſhop ſhall have the goods of the Church in his own power: For if the Souls of men, ſo much more precious are entruſted to him, he ought much more to have the care of the monies, ſo as by his power all be diſpenſed to them that want, by the Presbyters and Deacons. And ſo ſaith * Juſtin Martyr of the προεστὼς Preſident or Biſhop, πᾶσιν ἐν χρείᾳ ὅσοι κακουμένοις γίνεται, he is the Guardian of all that are in want. From this explication of πρεσβύτεροι here, muſt be taken the notion of it, Acts 15. 2. where the Elders at Jeruſalem, with the Apoſtles, are not the Elders of Jeruſalem, that one city, but the Biſhops of all Judea now met in Councel at Jeruſalem, v. 4,6,22,23. which joyned in making that decree, ch. 16.4. and ſo ch. 21.18. when Paul again went up to Jeruſalem, and addreſſed himſelf to James the Biſhop there, it is added, as in Council, πάντες τε παρεγένοντο οἱ πρεσβύτεροι, and all the Elders were there. An image or repreſentation of which Council we have, *Rev.*4.4. & 11. 16. One ſitting upon the Throne: The Biſhop of Jeruſalem, as Metropolitan, ſitting in the midſt, and four and twenty Elders κυκλόθεν, round about, in faſhion of a crown or cemicircle, ſitting on thrones on each ſide of him, in white garments, and golden crowns or mitres, the characters of Epiſcopal Dignity, and ſeven lamps of fire, the Emblems of ſeven Deacons, *v.*5. waiting on them. And as the Biſhops of Judea, being at Jeruſalem, are thus fitly ſtiled πρεσβύτεροι, Elders, (not of the Church of Jeruſalem, but) either ſimply Elders, or εἰς or ἐν, at or in Jeruſalem, noting only the place where they met in Council, not of which they were Elders, or Governours: So Acts 14.23. it is ſaid of Paul and Barnabas paſſing thro' Lyſtra, Iconium, and Antioch, that having confirmed the Churches, they ordained them πρεσβυτέρους κατ' ἐκκλησίαν Elders Church by Church, that is, a Biſhop in every Church, one Governour in Lyſtra, another in Iconium, another in Antioch. And ſo c. 20. 17. the πρεσβύτεροι ἐκκλησίας, Elders of the Church of Aſia, are the ſame that are called ἐπίσκοποι ποιμνίου, Biſhops of the flock, v. 28. ſet over them by the holy Ghoſt, to wit, the Biſhops of all Aſia, who, ſaith Ireneus, were called together ab Epheſo & reliquis proximis civitatibus, from Epheſus and the reſt of the cities near, l.3. c. 14. To all which places in that Book of the Acts belongs that ſaying of Oecumenius, πρεσβυτέρους γὰρ τοὺς ἐπισκόπους ἡ τῶν Πράξεων βίβλος οἶδε λεγομένους, the book of the Acts uſes to call Biſhops Elders. So *Tit.*1.5. when Titus is ſaid to be left in Crete, to ordain πρεσβυτέρους κατὰ πόλιν Elders city by city, there is little doubt, but as Titus was Metropolitan of that Iſland, (in which there were ſaid to be an hundred cities, and Gortyna the Metropolis) ſo the Elders in thoſe ſeveral cities were a Biſhop in each; and ſo they are diſtinctly called, v. 7. and the ſame directions given for the ordaining of them, and the πρεσβύται, that to Timothy are given for the Biſhops and Deacons, 1 Tim. 3. And the Greek Scholiaſts ſay diſtinctly on that place, πρεσβυτέρους τοὺς Ἐπισκόπους καλῶν, he calls the Biſhops Elders, and Ἀπόστολος Τίτον ὅτε τὸ καθ' ἑαυτὸν ἐπισκόπους κατέλιπεν, Ἐπίσκοπον πρότερον ποιήσας, the Apoſtle left Titus to conſtitute Biſhops, having firſt made him Biſhop: and * Theodoret, ἐπιτέτραπτο τοὺς ὑπ' αὐτὸν ἐπισκόπους χειροτονῆσαι, He had Commiſſion to ordain Biſhops under him: and Theophylact, τοσούτων ἐπισκόπων κρίσιν καὶ χειροτονίαν ἐπιτέτραπται, He was intruſted with the judging and ordaining of ſo many (that is, an hundred) Biſhops. So 1 Tim. 4. 14. the πρεσβυτέριον or Elderſhip that laid hands on Timothy, and made him Biſhop, may well be reſolved to be the Biſhops or Apoſtolical men, οἱ τῆς Ἀποστολικῆς χάριτος ἠξιωμένοι, thoſe that were vouchſafed the favour to be Apoſtles, ſaith Theodoret, who with St. Paul (2 Tim. 1. 6.) conſecrated him. Thus St. Peter calls himſelf, πρεσβύτερος Πέτρος, Peter the Elder, 1 Pet. 5. 1. and St. John πρεσβύτερος Ἰωάννης, the Elder John, 2 John 1. and 3 John 1. And accordingly ſaith * St. Chryſoſtom on that place, ὃ περὶ πρεσβυτέρων φησὶν ἐν ταύτῃ, ἀλλὰ περὶ Ἐπισκόπων, ὃ γὰρ νῦν πρεσβύτερος τότε Ἐπίσκοπον ἐχειροτόνουν, By Elderſhip he means not (thoſe that were in his days called) Presbyters, but Biſhops, for Presbyters did not ordain Biſhops: and ſo Theophylact and Oecumenius πρεσβυτέριον, τοῦτέστιν Ἐπισκόπων, Presbytery, that is, Biſhops: and ſo * Ignatius calls the Apoſtles πρεσβυτέριον Ἐκκλησίας, the Presbytery of the Church. And Theodoret renders the reaſon of the appellation, for ſo, ſaith he, the holy ſcripture, τοὺς ἐντίμους τῷ Ἰσραὴλ προσηγόρευσε πρεσβυτέρους, called the chief men of Iſrael, the Senate or Elderſhip. So 1 *Pet.*5.1. and 5. πρεσβύτεροι οἱ ἐν ὑμῖν, the Elders among you, are no doubt the Biſhops in all the diſperſions of the Converted Jews; of whom it is there ſaid that they ſhould ποιμαίνειν and ἐπισκοπεῖν, *v.*2. do the part of the Paſtor and Biſhop. Some other places there are, where the word πρεσβύτερος may poſſibly ſignify a lower order, if any ſuch there were in thoſe times, but yet it is not certain that they do ſo. Such is that 1 Tim. 5.1. πρεσβυτέρῳ μὴ ἐπιπλήξῃς, Rebuke not an Elder, and v. 19. Κατὰ πρεσβυτέρου μὴ παραδέχου κατηγορίαν ἄνευ, Receive not an accuſation againſt an Elder; where 'tis the Opinion of Epiphanius, that Biſhop Timothy's Power over the Presbyters is is ſpoken of. But when it is remembred that Timothy was only a Biſhop, but of a Metropolitical See, the chief of all Aſia, and ſo a Metropolitan, and he appointed by Paul to ordain Biſhops there (whoſe qualifications are there ſet down, and thoſe of Deacons, but no mention of a middle order) there is no doubt but thoſe Biſhops of inferior Sees ordained by him, were alſo accuſable and rebukable before him, in the ſame manner as Theophylact ſaid of Titus, that the κρίσις judgment, as well as χειροτονία ordination of ſo many Biſhops were committed to him. And therefore though St. Chryſoſtom explaining thoſe places interpret them περὶ παντὸς γεγηρακότος, of all old men, (and ſome circumſtances in the context incline to that ſenſe) yet having made this queſtion, what ſhould be done in caſe the faults were confeſſed but had no witneſſes, but only an evil ſuſpicion? he anſwers, and ſo alſo Theophylact and Oecumenius in the ſame words, Εἶπον ἄνω, φησὶ, δεῖ ἢ αὐτὸν καὶ μαρτυρίαν καλὴν ἔχειν ἀπὸ τῶν ἔξωθεν, the Apoſtle had anſwered above, He ought to have a good teſtimony from them that are without, which plainly referring to the qualifications of Biſhops, 1 Tim. 3. 7. muſt ſuppoſe the Elders to denote Biſhops in that place alſo: and ſo again ſaith * Chryſoſtom on that other place, Δῆλον ὅτι ἐκκλησίας λοιπὸν ὢν ἐπιτετραμμένος ἦν Τιμόθεος, ἢ καὶ ἔθνους ὁλόκληρον τὸ τῆς Ἀσίας, διὸ καὶ περὶ πρεσβυτέρων αὐτῷ διαλέγεται, It is manifeſt that he was intruſted with Churches, or indeed with a whole nation, that of Aſia, wherefore St. Paul diſcourſes to him of Elders. Where the mention of Churches in the plural, and of all Aſia, over which Timothy was placed, muſt interpret Elders of Biſhops there. A third place there is in that Epiſtle, 1 Tim. 5. 17. Let the Elders that have ruled well be thought worthy of double honour; which may alſo very commodiouſly be interpreted of the Biſhops, the προεστῶτες or Preſects of Churches (ſo ſtyled by Juſtin Martyr, and others) and thoſe diſcharging their office duly, and (beſides the farther inſtructing, or teaching their Churches already conſtituted) labouring and travelling in the preaching the Goſpel to them that have not before heard it, to whom therefore the פי שנים the double portion of alimony, the labourers reward, v. 18. is aſſigned by the Apoſtle. A fourth place is that of St. James, Jam. 5. 14. Is any man ſick? let him call for the Elders of the Church, &c. Where, as the office of viſiting the ſick, of praying, anointing, abſolving, and reſtoring health to the ſick, may well agree to the Biſhop, ſo the ſetting it in the plural number is nothing to the contrary, for that only ſignifies the Elders, or Biſhops of the Chriſtian Church to be the men, whom all are to ſend in to this caſe: not that there are more Elders then one in one particular Church or city, any more then that more then one are to be ſent for by the ſame ſick perſon. To this purpoſe belongs that place of Polycarp the primitive Biſhop of Smyrna, and Martyr, Καὶ οἱ Πρεσβύτεροι εὔσπλαγχνοι εἰς πάντας——ἐπισκεπτόμενοι πάντας ἀσθενεῖς, Let the Elders be merciful to all —— viſiting all that are weak, or ſick, where many other particulars are mentioned, κρίσει judicature, ἀποτομία ſeverity, or exciſion, προσωπολημψία, accepting of perſons, τὸ ταχέως πιστεύειν κατά τινος, believing haſtily againſt any, as alſo ἀποστρέφειν τὰ ἀποπλανήματα, reducing hereticks, which belong properly to the office of the Biſhop, and not to any ſecond order in the Church; and accordingly in all that Epiſtle there is no mention of any but of Elders and Deacons. As in Papias alſo his contemporary, and after him in Ireneus, and Juſtin Martyr, tho' πρεσβύτεροι ſometimes ſignify that ſecond order, yet 'tis alſo uſed to ſignify the Biſhop, and Polycarp himſelf ſtyled Ἀποστολικὸς πρεσβύτερος, an Apoſtolick Elder, or Biſhop, Iren. in Ep. ad Plotinum, and ſo Seniores in Tertullian.

CHAP. XII.

Paraphraſe.

1. NOW about that time Herod the King * a ſtretched forth his hands to vex certain of the Church.]

1. About this time An. Ch. 43. Agrippa, grandchild to Herod the Great, having obtained a great part of his Grandathers Dominions, and ſo calling himſelf by his Name Herod, went about, that is, reſolved to perſecute the Chriſtians, eſpecially the Apoſtles at Jeruſalem, thereby to gratify the Jews.

2. And he killed James the brother of John with the ſword.]

2. And in that perſecution he put James the Apoſtle, the ſon of Zebedee, to the ſword, beheaded him.

3. And becauſe he ſaw it pleaſed the Jews, he proceeded farther to † take Peter alſo. (Then were the days of unleavened bread.)]

3 And perceiving that the Jews gave their votes and conſent to his death, and expreſs'd their good liking of it (ſee note on John 8. c.) he proceeded and apprehended Peter alſo And it was about the time of the Paſſover of the Jews, when he apprehended him.

4. And when he had apprehended him, he put him in priſon, and delivered him to four quaternions of ſoldiers to keep him, intending after Eaſter to bring him forth to the people.]

4. And having impriſoned him, he ſet ſixteen ſouldiers to guard him, four at a time, two to be always by him, and chained to him (ſee note on ch. 28. c.) and two to guard the door, v.6. meaning after the feaſt of the Paſſover, to bring him forth to the Jews, and, if they thought fit, to put him to death alſo.

5. Peter therefore was kept in priſon, but * prayer was made b without ceaſing of the Church unto God for him.

b.

6. And when Herod † would have brought him forth, the ſame night] Peter was ſleeping between two ſoldiers, bound with two chains; and the * keepers without the door kept † the priſon.

6. And the night before Herod intended to bring him into the aſſembly, before the people, to have their ſuffrage to put him to death (ſee v.3. and v. 11.)

7. And behold, * the Angel of the Lord came unto him, and a light ſhined in the priſon, and he] ſmote Peter on the ſide, and raiſed him up, ſaying, Ariſe up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands.

7. And an Angel came to him, and the light with which he appear'd, ſhone in the priſon, and the Angel

8. And the Angel ſaid unto him, [Gird thy ſelf, and bind on thy ſandals. And ſo he did.] And he ſaith unto him, Caſt thy Garment about thee, and follow me.

8. Make thy ſelf ready to go out immediately, put on thy outer garment (ſee note on Mat. 5. 1.) and thy ſandals, and follow me. And Peter did as he was bid.

9. And he went out, and followed him, and wiſt not that it was true which was done by the Angel, but thought he ſaw a viſion.]

9. And he followed him out, but as yet knew not that this was really done, but thought he had been in a dream or trance.

10. When they were paſt the firſt and the ſecond wards, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city, which opened to them of his own accord: and they went out and paſſed on through one ſtreet, and forthwith the Angel departed from him.]

10. And the priſon being in the ſuburbs, after they were out of the priſon, they paſt thro' two watches or wards which ſtood every night without the Gates, and at laſt came to the Gate which enters into the City, an iron Gate, which opening to them of its own accord, they paſſed through it: and when they had paſſed together through one ſtreet, the Angel left Peter by himſelf.

11. And Peter being perfectly awake out of the trance, and knowing that he was ſo, (as he did not v. 9.) he ſaid to himſelf, that now 'twas clear God had ſent his Angel to deliver him from the hands of Herod, and from the malice of the Jews, who verily expected to have had him brought out to them that day, v. 6.

e. 15. And they being moved with her earneſt affirming of it, and yet being confident that Peter was in priſon, thought ſhe had affirmed it not from knowing Peter's voice, but from hearing mention of Peter's name, and thereupon concluded, that though Peter himſelf could not be there, yet there was ſome meſſenger ſent from him, which mentioned his name.

17. Let this be known to the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and all the Chriſtians there, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 15. a. and Gal. 2. e.) And immediately he parted from them to a place of more ſafety.

18. Now as ſoon as it was day, there was no ſmall ſtir among the ſoldiers, what was become of Peter.

Annotations on Chap. XII.

a. Ἐπιβάλλειν χεῖρας

V. 1. Stretched forth his hand] Ἐπιβάλλειν χεῖρας, to lay hand, taken abſolutely, or with an infinitive mood after it, as here, ſignifies to attempt, or reſolve to do any thing; ſo Gen 3. 22. leſt he put forth his hand to take of the tree, &c.

b. ἐκτενὴς

V. 5. Without ceaſing] The word ἐκτενὴς applied to prayer ſignifies importunate, enforcing the ſame requeſt. Ἐκτένεια, Συνεχῶς τὸ αὐτὸ, ſaith Heſychius, 'tis continually to do the ſame thing: and again, Ἐκτενὲς, διαπαντὸς, ſignifies that which is held out, or extended to a length. Thus the Letany, or ſupplications of the Church, frequently, for ſome ſpace, to ſeveral matters applying the ſame words, We beſeech thee to hear us, and the like, is in the ancient Liturgies called ἐκτενὴς, the vehement, fervent, importunate form of ſupplication.

c. Συνιδὼν

V. 12. Conſidered] the word Συνιδὼν is ſo near in likeneſs (tho' far enough off in the nature and ſignification of it) to σπεύδων, that it is very poſſible one of theſe may here by the tranſcriber be put for the other. And indeed the ſignification of the latter σπεύδων, making haſte ſeems that which is fitter for the turn in this place, where being left alone in the ſtreet by the Angel, he was in reaſon to make haſte to ſome place of ſafety and privacy, and ſuch was that which he here choſe. If this conjecture (which I mention only as ſuch, having no authority for it) be not too remote, then may it alſo probably belong to another place, c. 14. 6. Συνιδόντες κατέφυγον, perhaps for σπεύδοντες, they made haſte and fled, as out of a great danger.

d. Ὑπακοῦσαι

V. 13. Hearken] Ὑπακοῦσαι, Cant. 5. 7. is proportionable to the καλῶν precedent, anſwering a call. So Iſa. 50. 2. and 56. 11. So in Plutarch, he that goes to anſwer him that knocks at the door, is ſaid ὑπακοῦσαι, to hearken, and anſwer.

e. Ἄγγελός αὐτοῦ

V. 15. His Angel] That the word Ἄγγελος, which by way of excellency is ſet to denote the immortal Spirits attendant on God and miniſtring to him, doth primarily, and originally, and in vulgar uſe ſignify a meſſenger, and from thence only comes to denote thoſe Spirits, becauſe they are meſſengers of God, employed by him, there is little doubt or queſtion: And conſequently 'tis as certain, that it may ſignifie here no more then a meſſenger from St. Peter; ſo doth Ἄγγελός μου, Mat. 11. 10. Mar. 1. 2. Luke 7. 27. my meſſenger, being ſpoken of John Baptiſt; ſo Luke 7. 24. Ἄγγελοι Ἰωάννου the meſſengers of John, and Luke 9. 32. ἀπέστειλεν ἀγγέλους, he ſent meſſengers; and ſo ſure the ἄγγελοι ἐκκλησιῶν, the Angels of the Churches were not thoſe immortal Spirits, Rev. 1. 19. but as the Apoſtles ſent meſſengers to ſeveral Churches, who were to do according to their appointment, (ſee Note on John 20. b.) and ſome in their ſtead to rule and govern there, ſo were theſe the rulers of the Churches, appointed by the Apoſtles. So the Hebrew מלאך ſignifies nifies indifferently any who hath any command or meſſage from a maſter, and is rendred πᾶις, 1 Sam. 25 42. a ſervant, πρεσβὺς, a meſſenger, or Embaſſador, Num. 21. 21. and מניד is rendred ἄγγελος, 2 Sam. 15. 13. from נגיד nuntiavit, yea and עבד ſervus, miniſter, is rendred ἄγγελος, Iſa. 37. 24. from an old Hebrew אלך or לאך retained ſtill in the Arabick dialect, for a meſſenger, or legate. The only queſtion therefore will be, of theſe two poſſible notions of the word which is the fitter and more probable for this place: and for the rendring it meſſenger and not Angel, I ſhall only ſay, that the ſtory will thereby be very clear and intelligible, thus, That Peter knocked at the door, and Rhode asking who was there, he anſwered, Peter, thereupon ſhe knew his voice, and aſſured them within, that Peter was there: they having not heard the voice, but only hearing her affirm confidently that he was there, thought that ſome meſſenger had come from Peter, and made uſe of his name, and that ſhe had by miſtake believed it to be Peter himſelf; and ſo they thought they muſt reconcile the difficulty betwixt the conceived impoſſibility of Peter's being there, on the one ſide, and the maids affirming confidently that he was there, on the other ſide, viz. by this medium betwixt both, that a meſſenger ſent from Peter was at the door, who made uſe of his name to obtain admiſſion. Whatſoever can be ſaid for the other rendring, will, I conceive, have more difficulty in it. And it is not impoſſible or improbable, that the ἄγγελος, John 5. 4. that went at a certain ſeaſon to move the water of Bethesda, may be ſo rendred alſo, not for an Angel of God in a viſible ſhape, but for an officer, ſervant, meſſenger, that was wont to be ſent at certain ſeaſons of the year, probably at the feaſts, to move the water, upon which it became medicinable; ſee Note on John 5. a.

CHAP. XIII. Paraphraſe.

*1. NOW there were in the Church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers,] as Barnabas and Simeon that was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, † which had been brought up with Herod the Tetrarch, and Saul.

1. And there were at that time in Antioch, ſome eminent perſons or Biſhops of the Churches of Syria of that age, ſee note on 1 Cor. 12.0. and of them ſome having the gift of prophecy, (ſee note on ch. 15. c.)

2. As they miniſtred to the Lord and faſted, the holy Ghoſt ſaid, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them.]

2. And as they were upon a day of faſt performing their office of prayer to God (ſee note on Luke 1. i.) the holy Spirit of God by ſome aſſlation or revelation (ſee ch. 8. note f.) commanded them to ordain or conſecrate Barnabas and Saul to the Apoſtleſhip to which God had already deſigned them.

3. And when they had faſted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they ſent them away.]

3. And accordingly they obſerved a ſolemn day of faſting and prayer, and ſo by impoſition of hands (ſee note on 1 Tim. 5. f.) ordained them, and ſent them away about the work deſigned them by God.

4. So they being ſent forth by the holy Ghoſt, departed unto Selencia,] and from thence they ſailed to Cyprus.

4. And having thus received their commiſſion from the holy Ghoſt, or by the appointment of God himſelf (ſee v. 2.) they went immediately to Seleucia.

5. And when they were at Salamis [they preached the word of God in the ſynagogues of the Jews, and they had alſo John to their miniſter.]

5. They proclaimed the Goſpel in the ſynagogues of the Jews, and they had with them John ſurnamed Mark, ch. 12. 25. who was with them as an attendant, to do any thing wherein they had uſe of him, and by them to be ſent on any part of their Charge, (ſee Note on John 20. 21.) whither they could not go.

11. And now behold the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou ſhalt be blind, not ſeeing the ſun for a ſeaſon. And immediately there fell on him a miſt and a darkneſs, and he went about ſeeking ſome to lead him by the hand.]

11. It is moſt juſt that thou that holdeſt out perverſly againſt the light of the Goſpel ſhouldſt loſe thy ſight, which therefore by the immediate power of God ſhall be taken from thee for ſome time. And immediately he was ſtruck blind, and was not able to go without leading.

† much ſtricken, ἐκπλησσόμενος

12. Then the Deputy, when he ſaw what was done, believed, being † aſtoniſhed at the doctrine of the Lord.]

12. And this act of miraculous blindneſs upon the ſorcerer convinced the Proconſul, and converted him to the faith.

13. Now when Paul and his company looſed from Paphos, they came to Perga in Pamphylia, and John departing from them, returned to Jeruſalem.]

13. And Paul and all that were in his company, except John, who returned to Jeruſalem, went by ſea from Paphos to Perga, a place famous for the Temple of Diana.

14. But when they departed from Perga, they came to Antioch in Piſidia, and went into the ſynagogue on the ſabbath day, and ſate down.

15. And after the reading of the Law and the Prophets, the e Rulers of the ſynagogue ſent unto them, ſaying, Ye men and brethren, if ye have any word of exhortation for the people, ſay on.]

15. And after the reading of the leſſons, one out of the Law, the other out of the Prophets, it being the cuſtom for the Jewiſh Doctors to expound, and apply ſome part of Scripture to the inſtruction of the people, the chief perſons of the aſſembly which were preſent ſent to Paul and his aſſociates, to know whether they were prepared to do ſo.

26. And now brethren, both Jews and Proſelytes, this Goſpel, which Chriſt thus brought into the world, is ſent to be proclaimed and made known to you.

26. Men and brethren, children of the ſtock of Abraham, and whoſoever among you feareth God, to you is the word of this ſalvation ſent.]

27. For the Sanhedrim, and people of Jeruſalem, that then was, did not underſtand him to be the Meſſias, which they might have done, if they had conſidered the predictions of the Prophets contained in thoſe leſſons and portions of Scripture (eſpecially prophetick) which every Sabbath day are read in their Synagogues, but adjudged him to death, and in ſo doing fulfilled thoſe very prophecies which they underſtood not, yet pretended to underſtand and value ſo much, for they ſaid it ſhould be ſo.

29. And when by thus doing they had not more acted their own malice, then fulfilled the prophecies concerning the Meſſias (according to what he himſelf ſaid, It is finiſhed, and then gave up the Ghoſt) then the Officers took him down from the croſs, and put him into a Tomb, ſealed it up, and watched it, ſecured him by all ways imaginable.

31. And he was ſeen many days of them which came up with him from Galilee to Jeruſalem, who are his witneſſes unto the people.]

32, 33. And the ſubject of this Goſpel, which we thus proclaim unto you, is the promiſe made to Abraham (that in his ſeed, &c.) to Moſes, (that God would raiſe up a Prophet, &c.) which promiſe God hath now fulfilled in raiſing Jeſus from the dead. Of which alſo that in the ſecond Pſalm was a prophecy, when to David after his great Perſecutions it was ſaid, that God had now begotten him, thereupon calling him his ſon; that is, ſet him upon his throne, and given him that title of greateſt Dignity, and which is in Scripture the title of Kings, as on whom is enſtated that power over men which belongs originally to none but God, and derivatively to none but thoſe on whom God beſtows it, who conſequently are called both children of the moſt High, and Gods, Pſal. 82. 1. 6. (as thoſe that are made like unto another, are, to expreſs that ſimilitude, called his ſons, and ſometimes have his name communicated to them.)

h. 32. And we * declare unto you glad tidings, how that the promiſe which was made unto the fathers,

33. † God hath fulfilled the ſame unto us their children, in that he hath h raiſed up Jeſus again, as it is alſo written in the ſecond Pſalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.] * preach unto you the promiſe, &c. ἐυαγγελιζόμεθα τὴν ἐπαγγ. † that God hath performed it, ὅτι ταύτην ὁ θεὸς ἐκπεπλήρωκε.

34. To the ſame purpoſe alſo, that God ſhould not only raiſe him from the dead, but alſo ſecure him never to dye any more (for Lazarus and others that were once raiſed, dyed again) are thoſe two other known prophecies, one Iſa. 55. 3. I will give you the ſure mercies, &c. the expreſſion of an ever-laſting Covenant, ſpoken literally to the people of Iſrael, that God would perpetuate to them the mercy promiſed to David, that of giving one of his ſeed to ſit on his throne, (which had been for ſome time interrupted, but ſhould now be perpetuated to them upon their obedience) but here accommodated to Chriſt, that though he were crucified, yet he ſhould riſe again, and after that never dye any more, that is, that Chriſt, under the title of the ſon of David, ſhould be given to the Jews not only in a mortal condition, as David was, but in a firm immutable ſtate; which could not be true of him, if he had not been raiſed from the dead, and aſſumed to heaven, never to dye any more.

i. 34. And as concerning that he raiſed him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he ſaid on this wiſe, I will give you the i ſure mercies of David.]

35. Wherefore

35. Wherefore he ſaith alſo in another Pſalm, [Thou ſhalt not ſuffer thine Holy one to ſee corruption.]

35. And to that moſt clearly belongs that other place, Pſal. 16. 11.

36. * For David after he had ſerved his own generation by the will of God, fell on ſleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and ſaw corruption.]

* for David indeed in his own generation, having ſerved the counſel of God, Δαυὶδ μὲν γὰρ ἰδίᾳ γενεᾷ ὑπηρετήσας τῇ τοῦ Θεοῦ βουλῇ

36. For if thoſe words ſhould be apply'd to David perſonally, they could have no truth in them, for he having lived his term or ſpace of natural life, and therein ruled the people over whom God was pleaſed to ſet him, dyed a natural death, and never roſe again, but his body was putrified in the earth.

37. But he whom God raiſed again ſaw no corruption.]

37. But he in whom that prophecy is compleatly fulfilled, that is Chriſt, being ſent by God into the world, and crucified, and by the power of God raiſed from the dead the third day (before the time came wherein bodies naturally putrifie, viz. 72 hours after death, wherein the revolution of humours is accompliſhed) never came to dye, or putrifie at all.

38. Be it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you forgiveneſs of ſins.]

38. This therefore is the meſſage we bring, the Goſpel we preach unto you, that this Chriſt is the Meſſias, who by his death hath reconciled God to all penitent believers, and by his life and doctrine taught us a way, wherein we may obtain pardon of ſin, ſuch an one as was not to be found in the Moſaical Law.

39. And by him all that believe are juſtified from all things which ye could not be juſtified by the Law of Moſes.

39. And whoſoever receives and obeys him ſhall certainly be freed and purged from the wrath of God, and the puniſhments attending ſin in another world, from which the Law of Moſes could not in all its ceremonies, waſhings and ſacrifices purge or cleanſe any.

40. Beware therefore leſt that come upon you which is ſpoken of in the Prophets,

40,41. You are therefore nearly concern'd to take heed & beware that by your obſtinate reſiſting & rejecting this way of Salvation now preached, and confirmed from heaven by God's raiſing Jeſus from the dead, when he had oppoſed and crucified him, you do not bring a remarkable aſtoniſhing deſtruction upon your ſelves, in the ſame manner, (and a heavier degree) as it fell upon the Jews from the Chaldeans, Hab. 1. 5. as a juſt puniſhment of their deſpiſing the rich mercies of God afforded them, and going on impenitently in their ſins againſt all the meſſages ſent them by the Prophets, and by ſo doing cauſe the Goſpel to be removed to the Gentiles, v. 46. A thing which will come to paſs ſuddenly, in both parts, (the Goſpels being taken from you, and preached to the Gentiles, and the Romans coming in and deſtroying you) tho' ſo incredible to you that you will not believe it, when the news of it ſhall come unto you by them that ſee it done, (ſee note on Mat. 28. b.)

46. But this no way diſcouraged Paul and Barnabas, but they put off all fear, and ſaid couragiouſly, (ſee note on John 7. a.) that now they had performed their charge from Chriſt, of preaching the Goſpel firſt to the Jews, before they applied themſelves to the Gentile world. But ſeeing ye Jews, ſaid they, behave your ſelves ſo obſtinately and perverſely, that you become utterly unworthy and uncapable of receiving benefit by the Goſpel, we are now by appointment to leave you, and preach to the Gentiles, and ſo we will.

47. For ſo hath the Lord commanded us, ſaying, I have ſet thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou ſhouldſt be for ſalvation unto the ends of the earth.]

47. For this was the direction of God, that Chriſt being firſt preached to the Jews, and being rejected by them, ſhould be preached to all other people of the world: and this is the ſum of that old prophecy, Iſa. 49. 6.

48. And when the Gentiles heard this good news, that this pardon of ſins and ſalvation by Chriſt was allowed them, they rejoyced, and bleſſed the name of God for this glorious mercy of his revealed in the Goſpel; and all they of the Gentiles, that had any care, or purſuit of the life to come, the Gentile Proſelytes, or that were fitly diſpoſed and qualified for the Goſpel to take root in, received the doctrine of Chriſt thus preached to them.

49. And the word of the Lord was publiſhed throughout all the region.]

49. And the Goſpel was preached, and embraced over the whole country.

51. But they, uſing that fatal ceremony, appointed by Chriſt in this caſe, thereby fore-telling and aboding the deſtruction which ſhould over-take them for ſo doing, left them, and went from thence to Iconium.

52. And the diſciples were filled with joy, and with the holy Ghoſt.]

52. And all the Chriſtians were filled with ſpiritual joy at what they ſaw thus performed, and went on zealouſly in their courſe.

Annotations on Chap. XIII.

a. Ἀνθυπατος

V. 7. The Deputy] That Sergius Paulus ſhould here be called ἀνθύπατος Proconſul in Cyprus, v. 4. hath ſome difficulty in it, it being reſolved by Strabo, l. 14. p. 470. that after the Romans taking this Iſland, it became a Pretorian Province, Ῥωμαίων κρίσαντων τὸν νῆσον, καὶ γέγονε στρατηγικὴ ἐπαρχία καθ' αὑτόν. And again, p. 471. mentioning the ſubduing of it, and poſſeſſing it by Cato, ἐξ ἐκείνου, ſaith he, ἐγένετο ἐπαρχία ἡ νῆσος, καθάπερ καὶ νῦν ἐστι, στρατηγική, from that time the Iſland became, as now it is, a Pretorian Province; which concludes it under a Pretor, not a Proconſul. And ſo Zonaras on the 8*th* Canon of Epheſus, παρὰ τῆς Δυνάμεως Ἀντιοχείας ἐστάλλετο ἐκεῖ στρατηγὸς, from the Duke of Antioch a Commander was ſent to Cyprus on; which pretence it was, that the Biſhop of Antioch did at the time of that Council, pretend right of ordaining the Biſhops of Cyprus. This difficulty Baronius endeavours to remove, A.C. 46. n. 11. by conceiving that the Proconſul of Cilicia had the adminiſtration of this Prætorian Province alſo, and conſequently that this Sergius Paulus was now this Proconſul of Cilicia. This he collects from Sigonius de Antiq. Jure Provinc. l. 1. c. 14. who affirms it of P. Lentulus, and ſome others, that being Proconſuls of Cilicia, they adminiſtred Cyprus alſo, which, ſaith Baronius, non illi tantùm ſed & ſucceſſoribus eſſe æquè conceſſum, par eſt credere, It is reaſonable to believe not of him only, but of his ſucceſſors as well as of him. But the words in Sigonius do ſufficiently refute this concluſion; for he having indeed affirmed that this honor of holding Cyprus together with Cilicia was granted by the Senate not only to P. Lentulus, but alſo to Ap. Claudius, and M. Cicero, as ſpecial honors deſigned to thoſe three Proconſuls, adds, Poſt Ciceronis autem proconſulatum, ut à Ciliciæ Præſide tres Aſiaticæ Diœceſes, ſic etiam Cypri adminiſtratio ablata eſt, ac proprius, ut ex lege debuit, Prætor cum ſuo Quæſtore in eam miſſus eſt, After Cicero's Proconſulſhip, as the three Aſiatick Dioceſes were taken away from the Preſident of Cilicia, ſo was the adminiſtration of Cyprus alſo, and a peculiar Prætor with his Queſtor ſet thither, according as by the Law it ought to be. And therefore ſo it muſt be ſuppoſed to be at this time of Claudius's Reign, long after Cicero's time. It remains therefore that the moſt obvious way of removing this difficulty be reſolved on, as the moſt true, viz. that the στρατηγὸς or Commander of this Prætorian Province is here improperly called ἀνθύπατος, Proconſul, not in a ſtrict acception of that word, but as that is more looſely taken for any Governour ſent thither by the Roman power. Accordingly the Vulgar Latin calls him only Præſidem, Preſident or Governour; a title uſed in the place newly cited from Sigonius, for the Proconſul of Cilicia, which notes the promiſcuous acception of ſuch words. To which may be added, that the title of Proconſul, belonging duly to the Governours of Cyprus for ſome time, viz. whilſt Lentulus, Claudius, and Cicero, Proconſuls of Cilicia held Cyprus, it might now abuſively and vulgarly continue to the Prætor of Cyprus, though properly it did not; eſpecially conſidering the flattering nature of the Greeks, which would ſtill beſtow the moſt magnificent Titles upon their Governours.

V. 8. Elymas] The word עאלם alem, or עלים alim in Arabick ſignifies knowing or skilful, and is applyed to thoſe that know things divine and humane, from עלם alam, ſcivit: and ſo μάγος, perhaps מגוש from וש, which in Syriack and Arabick ſignifies ſcrutari, or explorare, to ſearch, will ſignify the ſame alſo. From this concurrence of the words ἐλύμας and μάγος in the ſame notion, 'tis clear that neither of them here was a proper name (that having before been ſet down to be Barjeſus, v. 6.) but both, in ſeveral languages, the title of their wiſe men, skill'd in the ſecret learning, whom we ordinarily call magicians, and μάγος being in ſo common uſe among the Grecians, tho' perhaps of an Eaſtern origination too, is here ſet as an interpretation of the other.

V. 9. Alſo called Saul] Several accounts are given of Saul's two names. S. Ambroſe, Serm. 31. ſaith that he was at his Baptiſm named Paul by Ananias. St. Auſtin Tract. 72. in Pſal. will have it an effect of his Converſion, and ſo of his own impoſing, and that his humility would not own that name of a proud tall King of Iſrael, but preferred the contrary of Paulus, a little one. Agreeable to which it is that he calls himſelf ἐλαχιστότερος πάντων ἁγίων (a word made by himſelf on purpoſe) leſs then the leaſt of Saints. St. Jerome on the Epiſt. to Philemon, will have it a token of this his firſt victory over the heatheniſm of Sergius Paulus here (in this Chap. where he is firſt called by this name) whoſe name he was therefore to bear by way of triumph, as Scipio of Africanus, and the like. But Origen in Preſ. on the Epiſt. to the Romans, ſaith that he being a Jew born in the city of Rome, had at his circumciſion two names, Saul a Jewiſh, and Paulus a Roman name. And this is moſt agreeable to the form of ſpeech here, Σαῦλος ὁ (ἢ ὁ Παῦλος) But Saul, who is alſo Paul, noting him to have had two names at once, not to have changed one for the other.

V. 10. Miſchief, ῥᾳδιουργία] ſignifies forgery, cheating, falſeneſs, deceit: ſo in Plutarch, making a falſe Will is ῥᾳδιούργημα· ſo Acts 18. 14. If it were ἀδίκημά τι ἢ ῥᾳδιούργημα πονηρόν, any injury, (any piece of injuſtice) or any rogury forgery, or cheat; ſo Phavorinus ῥᾳδιουργεῖν, μετὰ πανουργίας τι διαπράττεσθαι, to do any thing with cunning, and ῥᾳδιουργία, πονηρία, πλασοκαφία (it ſhould be πλασογεκφία, for ſo Heſychius, ῥᾳδιουργὸς πλασογράφος) δολιότης, knavery, forgery, deceit; and ſo likewiſe Heſychius, ῥᾳδιουργεῖ, (it ſhould be ῥᾳδιουργεῖ) κακοποιεῖ, δυσποιεῖ, doing wicked or cunning things, and ῥᾳδιουργὸς (beſide πλασογράφος, a forger) πονηρὸς μηχανουργὸς πολυμήχανος, a wicked, (I ſuppoſe without a comma) contriver, or cunning, ſubtle perſon.

V. 15. Rulers of the Synagogue] The Synagogues in the regions of Judea, not always ſignifying their Conſiſtories or Judicatures, but alſo their places for religious duties, hearing the Law and Prophets read, was anſwerable to the cœtus Eccleſiaſtici, the religious aſſemblies (ſaith Bertram de Rep. Jud. p. 154.) of the Levites and Prophets inſtituted at firſt by Joſhua and Samuel by preſcript of Law. The Archiſynagogi therefore are parallel to, and ſupply the place of thoſe Levites and Prophets, thoſe that officiated there, of which conſequently there were more then one in the ſame Synagogue; and ſo c. 11. 8. and 17. Criſpus and Soſthenes are Archiſynagogi of the Synagogue at Corinth. And the ancient Gr. & Lat. MS. ch. 14. 2. inſtead of οἱ δὲ ἀπειθήσαντες Ἰουδαῖοι, reads οἱ δὲ ἀρχισυνάγωγοι τῶν Ἰουδαίων, καὶ οἱ ἄρχοντες τῆς συναγωγῆς, making expreſs difference between the rulers, or chief of the ſynagogue, that officiated there, and the Rulers of the Conſiſtory or judicature.

V. 18. Suffered he in their manners] That ἐτροφοφόρησεν, carried as a nurſe, is the right reading, there is little doubt, this being the very word twice uſed by the Septuagint, Deut. 1. 31. ἐτροφοφόρησέ σε ὁ κύριός σου ὁ θεός σου, ὡς εἴ τις τροφοφορήσαι ἄνθρωπος τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ. So the Roman and Baſil Editions have it, for that which is in the Hebrew, hath born thee, as a parent, or nurſe, doth a child, not only bearing in arms, but feeding and ſuſtaining, (as ſure God did thoſe Iſraelites, when he ſent them Quails and Manna, ἄρτον ἕτοιμον ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ, bread ready dreſt, and ſent down from heaven for them) and farther undertaking all the trouble of his education, and therefore the Syriack interpreter uſes here a word which ſignifies feeding or nouriſhing. And ſo Heſychius, Ἐτροφοφόρησεν, ἔτρεφεν, (it ſhould be ἔθρεψεν) bearing as a nurſe, that is, feeding; and ſo Phavorinus alſo. Thus in Macarius, ſpeaking of a mother and her little child, ἀναλαμβάνει, ſaith he, καὶ περιδάλλει, καὶ τροφοφορεῖ ἐν πολλῇ σοργῇ, ſhe takes up, ſtrokes, and nurſes with great affection. And 2 Mac. 7. 27. when the mother entreats the ſon to pity her, τροφοφορήσασαν, that bare, and did for him as a nurſe doth, (anſwerable to the Hebrew נשׂא aſah, βαστάζω, to take up or carry.) This did God miraculouſly even to thoſe murmurers: But ſuffering his vengeances to fall upon them, and ſweeping them all away that came out of Ægypt, but Caleb and Joſhua, he cannot ſo fitly be ſaid to have born his manners, or to have born with them.

V. 27. Fulfilled] That there is in this verſe a trajection, or σύγχυσις, there can be no queſtion; the κρίναντες, κρίναντες in the latter part belongs to the κρῖναι in the former, and the ἐπλήρωσαν to the πᾶς φωνὰς, they adjudged or ſentenced him, and they fulfilled or accompliſhed them. And ſuch trajections are ordinary among writers, and go for elegancies, where they are uſed.

The

The only difficulty will be, to what ſenſe the καὶ before τὰς ſhall be rendred. For either that may couple the ἀγνοήσαντες and κρίναντες, and then the conſtruction will lye thus, For they that dwelt at Jeruſalem, not knowing, and (conſequently) condemning him, fulfilled the ſayings, or voices, or words, of the Prophets; or it may poſſibly not be a copulative, but (as oft it doth) Emphatically affect the words to which it is joined, τὰς φωνὰς τῶν προφητῶν τὰς κατὰ πᾶν Σάββατον ἀναγινωσκομένας, and then the rendring will be, not knowing him, they fulfilled the words of the prophets, even thoſe words that are every Sabbath read in their ears (and therefore ſhould in reaſon be taken notice of by them) in, or by this condemning him. But the former of theſe is the moſt probable.

h. Ἀναστήσας

V. 32. Raiſed up] The word ἀναστήσας, raiſing up, ſignifies to raiſe up from the dead, and ſo doth ἐγείρειν too; but not ſo only, nor ſo primarily, nor neceſſarily ſo, but when either the addition of ἐκ νεκρῶν, from the dead, or ſome other phraſe of that nature, or circumſtance of the Context requires that ſenſe. For beſides that notion, there is another very ordinary, and proper to it, as when God is ſaid to raiſe up a prophet, that is, to ſend him, and give him commiſſion to perform the office of a prophet: this is an uſual notion of the word. So Acts 3. 22. & 7. 37. Προφήτην ὑμῖν ἀναστήσει, he ſhall raiſe you up a prophet; and ſo Acts 2. 30. ſpeaking of God's promiſe to David, from the fruit of his loyns according to the fleſh, ἀναστήσειν Χριστὸν, that he would raiſe up Chriſt, bring the Meſſias into the world. And the mention of the Reſurrection in the next verſe will not be able to aſſign any other ſenſe to that place, becauſe that may come in from the force of the ſitting on his throne, which is added to it, it being clear, that as that was promiſed of the Meſſias, ſo it was not performed till his Reſurrection. So when of Theudas, Acts 5. 36. of Judas of Galilee, v. 37. it is ſaid, ἀνέστη, he roſe up, a falſe prophet ariſing of himſelf, or raiſing himſelf, not raiſed by God (according as among the Hebrews the word נבא for prophecying, doth in hithpael, the reciprocal conjugation, generally ſignify a falſe prophecy, ſuch as one receives from himſelf, and not from God) ſo Heb. 7. 11. What need is there ἕτερον ἀνίστασθαι ἱερέα, that there ſhould ariſe, or be raiſed, another prieſt? and again, v. 15. and thus ſome may conceive that it ſhould ſignify in this place. But 1. the Context here, and 2. the importance of the ſecond Pſalm incline it the other way. For here the reſurrection of Chriſt, v. 30. is the point inſiſted on; and tho' his crucifixion be firſt mention'd in order to that, v. 27. yet there is no mention of his coming into the world, or either his eternal, or temporal generation. And ſo in the following words, v. 34. they again belong to God's raiſing him from the dead. And for the parallel betwixt begetting and reſurrection, it might be made clear in many particulars. As for the ſecond Pſalm, that clearly belongs to the ſetting up David King after the death of Saul, and conqueſt over his enemies; and that is aptly expreſs'd by God's begetting him, and his being God's ſon: for as ſimilitude denominates children, the children of God are they that are like him, and reſemble him in any thing, and the children of Abraham are they that do the works of Abraham; and as the making man after God's image, ſignified his likeneſs unto God in power, having dominion, &c. Gen. 1. 28. ſo being the ſons of God, and having the title of Gods, Pſal. 82. 6. belongs to Governours, and conſequently ſignifies ſo in that ſecond Pſalm, and is but another phraſe to ſignify what is plainly ſaid, v. 6. yet have I ſet my king upon my holy hill of Sion. And thus alſo in the application, Chriſt the ſon of David, being raiſed from the dead, as David reſcued from the great dangers that encompaſs'd him, is now ſet upon his throne by his exaltation; and that is God's begetting him his ſon here, and is the thing to which the Jews referred when they called the Meſſias ſometime the King of Iſrael, ſometime, which is all one, the ſon of God. And ſo, Heb. 1. 5. this ſaying of God to him, Thou art my ſon, &c. and, I will be to him a father, and he ſhall be to me a ſon, is brought as a proof of his being ſuperior to the Angels, v. 4. which was done by his Reſurrection and Exaltation, Epheſ. 1. 20, 21.

Προφήτην ἀναστήσει

i. Ὁσια τὰ πιστὰ

V. 34. Sure mercies] The Hebrew in Iſa. 55. 3. from whence this is taken hath חסדי דוד הנאמנים, where the word חסדי in the plural, noting beneficia, or beneficentiam, mercies, or mercifulneſs, is by the Greek rendred ὅσια (from the ſenſe of the ſingular חסוד which ſignifies both beneficus and pius, charitable and godly) as if it were only pia, godly, from the ſingular pius, whereas the Adjective plural is taken Subſtantively (as many Neutrals in Latine are) for acts of kindneſs, mercies, &c. and ſo הנאמים Adjectively joined with it, ſignifies the faithful, durable, laſting mercies of David, that is, of Chriſt the ſon of David, and ſo this place out of the Prophet is brought as a proof of Chriſt's reſurrection. For as the mercies promiſed the Jews in having David for their King, had with the end of his life determined alſo, unleſs his ſon Solomon, and after him others, had ſat upon the throne; and as, when they were carried into Captivity, the perpetuating theſe benefits of David to them, that is, being govern'd by their own Kings, ſignifies their return from their Captivity: ſo Chriſt, being called David, or meant in a ſecond myſtical ſenſe when David is named, and being (crucified, and ſo) dead, as David was, unleſs he had withal riſen again, that Covenant, thoſe mercies promiſed by and in him to the world, could not have been πιστὰ, firm, ſure, faithful, ratified for duration or continuance, but had ended with his life; whereas now by his Reſurrection and Aſcenſion to heaven they ſtill continue, and are made good unto us. Thus, ſaith Athanaſius of Chriſt's ſacrifice, τετελείωκε τὸ πᾶν, καὶ πιστὴ γέγονε μένουσα διὰ παντὸς, it perfected all, and became faithful: wherein? why, in that it remaineth for ever. And again ſaith he, Ἡ κατὰ νόμον ἱερωσύνη χρόνῳ καὶ θανάτῳ παρήμειπε τὰς προθέσεις, ὁ δὲ Κύριος ἀπαράβατον καὶ ἀδιάδεκτον ἔχων τὴν ἀρχιερωσύνην, πιστὸς γέγονεν ἀρχιερεὺς, παραμένων ἀεὶ, The legal prieſthood by time and death paſſeth from one to another, but Chriſt having an high prieſthood which paſſeth not from him to any ſucceſſor, did therein become a faithful high prieſt (Heb. 2. 17.) enduring, or continuing for ever: where the word πιστὸς in that Epiſtle to the Hebrews is interpreted by that father to ſignify durable, continuing for ever.

k. Ἴδετε οἱ καταφρονηταὶ

41. Behold ye deſpiſers] The words ἴδετε οἱ καταφρονηταὶ, Behold ye deſpiſers, which from the Septuagint's reading the Apoſtle here embraceth, are very different from what not only the Vulgar Latin, and our Engliſh, but alſo the Chaldee, and Interlineary retain in the place of Habakuk, c. 1. 5. from whence it is clearly cited, the Hebrew בגוים being by them read as if it were ב and גוים, ingentibus among the heathen, which the Chaldee read בעממי Gentes. Hereupon learned men have made conjectures, that the Greek interpreters had ſome other reading: Beza and Capellus, and from him Grotius's Poſthumous Annotations have mentioned בוגדים, and Capellus hath thought בווים poſſible. But Mr. Pocock by his acquaintance with the Arabick writers, hath ſuperſeded theſe conjectures, and given aſſurance that בגוים was the word, which as the Greek rendred καταφρονηταὶ deſpiſers, ſo the Syriack in Habakuk expreſs by מרהא arrogantes, tranſgreſſors, and the Arabick by negligentes, taking the word for the plural of בגוא from בגא, which though it be not met with in the Bible, yet may be reſolved to have been anciently in uſe among the Hebrews, both by the notions which the Greek, and Syriack, and Arabick interpreters had of it, and by the frequent uſe of the word in the Arabick, for injuſtus fuit, ſe ſuper aliquem extulit, à vero declinavit, receſſit, inſolenter ſe geſſit, mentitus eſt, faſtuosè inceſſit, bring unrighteous, proud, tranſgreſſor, inſolent, lyer, faſtuous, as he there cites out of the Arabick Grammarians, ſhewing that the Syriack מרחא maroche, is by Bar Ali in his Syro-Arabick Lexicon, expounded by the ſame word by which Aljauharius renders Albagyo. As for the latter words of this verſe, tho' ſome have been willing to make ſome alteration, yet there will be little need of it: for והתמהו clearly ſignifies καὶ θαυμάζηϑε, and wonder, and then ותמהו that follows, will be as fitly ἀφανίσϑε, not ſo, as that ſignifies a diſſolution or deſtruction, but as in the Arabick 'tis uſed for any change to the worſe, as when meat hath loſt its ſmell or taſte, and is applied to ſuch a change as is in one aſtoniſh'd or confounded. So R. Tanchum, the former word ſignifies admiration, the latter amazement or confuſion. Where tho' the literal notation of the words do not predict the ruine or deſtruction of the Jews, yet the rational importance doth, to all that are not thus moved by admiration, and ſhame, to embrace the Goſpel now preached unto them; for as thoſe that did ſo were the σωζόμενοι reſcued from the approaching deſtruction, ſo all that ſtill ſtood out ſhould certainly be deſtroyed.

l. Ἐχομένῳ

V. 44. Next Sabbath] inſtead of ἐρχομένῳ Σαββάτῳ, the coming, or approaching Sabbath, the King's MS. and ſome others read ἐχομένῳ, the next, or adjoining ſabbath, as πόλεις ἐχόμεναι, have been ſhewed to ſignify the adjoining cities, note on Mark 1. b.

m. Τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν

48. Ordained to eternal life] That this phraſe τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον is here a notation of the Proſelytes among the Jews, which were allowed by them to have partem in ſeculo futuro, a portion in the age to come (whether that ſignify heaven, or the kingdom of the Meſſias) without ſubmitting to their whole Law, but only to the ſeven precepts of the ſons of Noah, hath been not unhappily conjectured by M. Mede, and the context is ſomewhat favourable to it: The company conſiſted of Jews and Proſelytes v. 43. many of thoſe Proſelytes (as well as Jews) followed Paul and Barnabas after the diſſolving the aſſembly; and their doing ſo, and the form of the Apoſtles exhortation to them, ἐπιμένειν, to abide, or perſevere, ſignifies, that they were already believers. Then v. 45. The Jews contradicted, and ſpake againſt this doctrine, and therefore, ſay Paul and Barnabas, ſeeing ye judge your ſelves unworthy of everlaſting life, that is, ſeeing you behave your ſelves as thoſe that look not after, care not for your eternal weale, Behold, we turn to the Gentiles, v. 46. which when the Gentiles heard, that is, the people of other Nations that were there among the Jews, they rejoyced, and glorified the word of God, v. 48. And upon that it is immediately added, that as many as were τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, diſpoſed, or in readineſs for, or to, eternal life, believed. In this conjecture there is a fair appearance of truth for the whole of it. And for one part of it it is undoubted, that thoſe who are here ſaid to believe were moſt of them, if not all ſuch Proſelytes of the Gentiles; and thoſe again not the Proſelytes of juſtice which had undertaken the whole Moſaical law (for they were as deeply engaged in oppoſing Chriſtianity, as the moſt refractory Jews, and accordingly v. 50. the Proſelyte women, which were zealous for the Law, were exaſperated by the Jews; ſee note on Matth. 23. d.) but eſpecially thoſe of the gates, which received the precepts of the ſons of Noah, but were not poſſeſs'd with the Jewiſh prejudices againſt Chriſtianity. But then 1. it no way appears, that all the Proſelytes of this ſort did now receive the faith at this one time, and conſequently it cannot be affirmed, in the latitude of [ὅσοι, as many] which ſeems to include all of the ſort (whatever it is) that is noted by the phraſe. Or if that word may be ſo qualified, as not to extend to all, yet there is no propriety of the phraſe τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν, to confine it to that ſort of Proſelytes, any more then there is to confine the like phraſe

a. Εὐθέτος εἰς βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ εὐθετος εἰς βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, fit for the kingdom of God, Luke 2. 62. to this ſort of Proſelytes, which there appears not at all to belong to them. Of that phraſe ſee Note d. on John 6. where it appears to ſignify one that by God's prevenient graces hath that qualification wrought in him, which is the peculiar temper wherein the Goſpel takes root, and proſpers, the honeſt heart, or ſincere deſire of reforming, and living piouſly. For theſe, when the Goſpel is preached to all, are peculiarly the men that lay hold on it, and bring forth the fruits of it: And theſe are very fitly deſcribed by this phraſe here, and accordingly it is ſaid, that as many as were ſuch, believed, or turned Chriſtians. Now for the main difficulty, how this phraſe [τεταγμένοι, &c.] ſhould come to ſignify theſe, I ſhall enlarge a while, by viewing the nature of the word τάττειν, to order, or ordain, among writers, ſacred and prophane. In ſcripture it often ſignifies to appoint, as that is to command or conſtitute. So Acts 22. 10. πάντων ὧν τέτακταί σοι ποιεῖν, all things which are appointed thee to do, is all one with τί σε δεῖ ποιεῖν, what thou oughteſt, what is thy duty to do, in the parallel place, ch. 9. 6. So Acts 15. 2. ἔταξαν, they commanded, or gave order, or appointed, and Mat. 28. 16. the mountain, ὃ ἐτάξατο αὐτοῖς Ἰησοῦς, which Jeſus had appointed, or commanded. But more frequently 'tis uſed in the military ſenſe, in the notion wherein the Books of diſpoſing or marſhalling armies are called Tacticks, and in which διαταγαὶ ἀγγέλων, diſpoſitions of Angels, Acts 7. 53. ſignifies troops, or hoſts of Angels. So of the Centurion, Luke 7. 8. ὑπὸ ἐξουσίαν τασσόμενος, he that hath ſuch a place in the Army, as (though he be a commander) to be himſelf under others; in which ſenſe Rom. 13. 1. the powers that are, are τεταγμέναι ὑπὸ Θεοῦ, conſtituted by God, and placed under him. And by an Analogie from hence 'tis applied to other things, as 1 Cor. 16. 15. ἔταξαν ἑαυτὸὺς εἰς διακονίαν τοῖς ἁγίοις, they diſpoſed, or devoted themſelves to that function, that part as it were, of the Eccleſiaſtical militia, which conſiſted in miniſtring to the Saints. In the Tranſlators of the Old Teſtament, and writers of the Apocrypha, 'tis generally in the military ſenſe anſwerable to the Hebrew ערך; ſo Ezek. 44. 14. τάξουσιν αὐτὸὺς φυλάσσειν φύλακας, they ſhall appoint, or diſpoſe, or marſhal them to keep watches, which is ſpoken of the Temple, but as that repreſents an hoſt, and is uſually ſo called, (and thence Luke 1. 8. τάξις ἐφημερίας, the order of his daily courſe, is in that ſenſe alſo) ſo 2 Mac. 15. 20. τῆς ἵππου κατὰ πτέρυγας τεταγμένης, the horſe being ſo diſpoſed, or placed (as in Heſychius the word πρωτοστάτης is explained by ὁ πρῶτος παρὰ τὸ κέρας (not κέρας as 'tis corruptly read) τῆς παρατάξεως τεταγμένος, he that is placed firſt near the horn of the Battalia) and 1 Mac. 5. 27. ἵνα αὔριον παρεμβαλεῖν, they are diſpoſed, or marſhalled, ſo that to morrow they may encamp. So 2 Kings 15. 19. ἐκτάσσειν τὸν λαὸν, is to muſter the people. Among profane writers 'tis ſometimes to diſpoſe, or put in order; ſo the ſhepherd doth τάττειν ἀγέλας, order his flock, in Philoſtr. de vit. Apoll. l. 3. c. 3. And in * Apſyrtus, (in the * c. 1. περὶ ἱππικῆς.) after στρατευόμενος ἐν τάγμασι, having fought in ranks (in the military ſenſe) follows within a line διαταξάμενος ὧν ταῦτα, having diſpoſed theſe things in order (that is of writing) προσφωνῶ σοι, I addreſs my ſelf to thee, &c. In the military ſenſe nothing is more ordinary, ἐτάσσοντο ὡς εἰς μάχην, they were marſhalled as for a fight, in Thucyd. l. 3. (and διατεταγμένοι in Julian and others, is ſimply for enemies (ſo Ἕλληνες τεταγμένοι προσήεσαν, the Grecians being marſhalled, &c. l. 2. as in Ælian, τεταγμένοι are ſoldiers in their ranks, in ſervices (as ἄτακτοι on the contrary are thoſe that are disbanded) and τάγμα a band or troop of ſuch. And in this ſenſe they that are truly pious, ſincerely and honeſtly diſpoſed to do whatſoever God requires of them towards eternal life (whether that ſignify Chriſtianity, the preſent part of that life which ſhall end in eternity, or whether the life of glory in another world) may fitly be ſaid to be τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, enrolled in the number of thoſe that look after eternal life, marſhalled, ſtanding ready, in order, in rank, centuriati, to eternal life: and ſo as they that 1 Cor. 15. 16. ἑαυτὸὺς ἔταξαν εἰς διακονίαν, devoted themſelves to the miniſtration, might be expreſſed by τεταγμένοι εἰς διακονίαν, devoted and ready for that; ſo here τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν, devoted and ready for life, will be all one one with ὅσοι ἑαυτοὺς ἔταξαν εἰς ζωὴν, they that devoted, addicted themselves to eternal life, according to that ordinary custom among sacred writers, wherein the reciprocal Conjugation Hithpael is expressed by the Greek passive, which is observable of compounds of this very word very frequently, as in ὑποτάσσεσθαι, to obey, Rom. 10. 3. and 13. 1, 5. Heb. 12. 9. James 4. 7. In all which the passive signifies either to subject himself, or Neutrally to obey, submit, and so the contrary ἀπειθέω, Rom. 13. 2. Jam. 4. 6. and 5. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 5. to be disobedient. The short is, that they that having renounced the heathen Idols of their Countries, embraced the worship of the one only true God, and the hope of eternal life, and so were ἔυθετοι εἰς βασιλείαν Θεοῦ, well placed, or disposed, in a good posture toward the kingdom of God, are here thus express'd. This is that which is expressed, Heb. 11. 6. by προσερχόμενοι εἰς τὸν Θεὸν, they that come to God, which is the paraphrase of the word προσήλυτοι, Proselites, so called from coming to, or indeed the same word participially set, and of all such it is required to believe, what is there said, that there is a God, and that he is a rewarder of all that diligently seek him, that is, that Gentiles (other Nations besides Jews) if they seek God may come to eternal Life, and consequently as many as put forward to the exercise of piety, which is one part of eternal life in Scripture (this is life eternal to know thee, that is, live according to thy Commandments) and to the expectation of a reward, which is the other part, are distinctly capable of this title here, and there of that. This was acknowledged by Chrysostom, when he explained this phrase by ἀφωρισμένοι τῷ Θεῷ, separated to God, those that had betaken themselves to his only service; or, as * Procopius expresses it, speaking of the Gentiles, οἱ δὲ ἀρετῆς καὶ θεοσεβείας καλλαινόμενοι εἰς τέκνα Θεοῦ, they that by vertue and piety were in procinctu for sons of God, ready to be such. I shall add but one place more, and that out of Philo, where speaking of the προσκείμενοι Θεῷ, they that were added to God, godly men, that gave up their names to the worship of God, he adds, οἱ τῷ παρὰ τῷ ὄντι Θεῷ τεταγμένοι τάξιν, ἀθάνατον βίον ζῶσιν, they being marshalled in the rank next to the true God, live an immortal life: Where the τεταγμένοι, &c. is all one with the προσκείμενοι Θεῷ, they that were added to God, that is, with the προσερχόμενοι Θεῷ, they that come to God, that give themselves up to his service. And Baptism among us being the form of our initiation to Christ, the ancient form of those that were to be baptized was, ἀπλάσσομαί σοι, Σάταν, καὶ συντάσσομαί σοι, Χριστέ (in this military sense, from whence 'tis called a Sacrament) I renounce thy service, O Satan, and I put my self, list my self, with thee, O Christ. That this phrase can not reasonably be interpreted to any sense of divine predestination, may appear, 1. by the no reasons that are producible to encline it that way. Those must be produced, if they are any, either from the Context, or the propriety of the phrase. From the Context no reason is pretended; but on the other side, the comparison here lying betwixt the Jews on one side, and the Gentiles on the other, of the Jews it is said, that they contradicted, and blasphemed, and so judged themselves not worthy of everlasting life, v. 46. which sure refers not to any decree from eternity past against their persons, absolutely considered, but only as contumacious unbelievers, uncapable of that salvation which was preached to them. And then in reason, and by laws of opposition, they that did believe of the Gentiles, must be those that were otherwise qualified then those Jews were, and so that qualification of pliable temper, will be the interpretation of the τεταγμένοι, &c. Not that all the Gentiles received the Gospel (which yet if it were true, de facto, would be no argument against what is now said) but that as many of them as were thus qualified, received it. As for the phrase, that hath no propriety to incline that way: for 1. there is no intimation, or mention of God in the phrase, which would be necessary to restrain it to that sense of God's Predestination; 2*ly*, for the word τάσσειν, which is rendred ordaining, and seems somewhat favourable that way, and is the only part of the phrase that doth so, there is no example of this being any where used for God's eternal decree, but ὁρίζειν or προορίζειν, to determine, or predetermine; 3*ly*, there is no preposition answerable to præ, before, in any part of the phrase, nor any thing else to supply that place, as πρὸ χρόνων αἰωνίων, or πρὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου, before the foundation of the world, Ephes. 1. 4. Secondly, this may be resolved on by the reasons which stand in force against it. For 1. the word ὅσοι, as many, being an inclusive universal particle, it is not imaginable yet that all of that assembly that were predestin'd, and so all that could ever believe, or come to life, did believe that day. The believers of a city do not all come in thus, every one at the same time, but καθ' ἡμέραν, daily, some one day, some another, Acts 2. 47. and some that were now negligent, or refractory, might after repent, and become more pliable, and God's decree certainly would not shut them out, when they did so. 2*ly*, It is as unreasonable to determine, that all that did then believe, and receive the Gospel, were predestined to eternal salvation: those that believed at other times were not all predestinated; thus Judas, we know, was not, Hymeneus was not: and believing here noting no more then receiving the faith, without any consideration of their persevering or not persevering, it is evident of the stony ground, and of a multitude of Christians denoted thereby, that in time of temptation they fall away, and so are not (unless they return, and recover) predestin'd to salvation. 3*ly*, It is not to be thought that Luke, which wrote this, knew of that whole assembly of Gentiles, how many were predestined to salvation, nor consequently could he affirm it of them in that sense, or that none should ever believe, which this day did not; whereas on the other side, he might by the effect conclude, that all that were rightly qualified at that time, did at that time receive and believe the Gospel preached to them, and all that did then truly believe, were so qualified, the obstinate and contumacious Jews and Proselytes opposing and persecuting it. Mean while it must be remembred, that these qualifications are not pretended to have been originally from themselves, but from the preventing Graces of God, to which it is to be acknowledged due, that they ever are pliable or willing to follow Christ, though not to his absolute decree of destining them, whatsoever they do, unto salvation.

CHAP. XIV.

Paraphrase.

1. AND it came to pass in Iconium, that they went both together into the Synagogue of the Jews, and [so spake that a great multitude both of the Jews, Greeks, Proselytes of the Jews, and also of the Greeks believed.]

1. Convinced them so powerfully, that great store both of the Jews and the received the Faith.

2. But

2. But the unbelieving Jews * ſtirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evil affected againſt the brethren.]

2. But the refractory Jews incenſed the Gentiles against the Apoſtles, v. 4. and all others which received the faith of Chriſt from them.

* ſtirred up the minds of the Gentiles, and made them evil affected, ἐπήγειραν καὶ ἐκάκωσαν τὰς ψυχὰς

3. Long time therefore abode they [ſpeaking † boldly in the Lord, which gave teſtimony unto the word of his grace, and granted ſigns and wonders to be done by their hands.]

3. Preaching the Goſpel in their publick aſſemblies (ſee note on John 7. a.) and God added his teſtimony to their preaching (ſee note on Heb. 13. d.) by enabling them to work miracles.

† publickly through the Lord, which παῤῥησιαζόμενοι ἐπὶ τῷ κυρίῳ τῷ

4. But the multitude of the city was divided, and part held with the Jews, and part with the Apoſtles.

5. * And when there was an aſſault made both of the Gentiles and alſo of the Jews with the rulers, to uſe them deſpightfully and to ſtone them,

* And as the Gentiles and Jews were bent, ὡς δὲ ἐγένετο ὁρμὴ τῶν ἐθνῶν τε καὶ Ἰουδ.

6. They were ware of it, and fled unto Lyſtra, and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia, and unto the region that lyeth round about.

7. And there they preached the Goſpel.

8. And there ſate a certain man at Lyſtra, impotent in his feet, being a creeple from his mothers womb, who never had walked.

9. The ſame heard Paul ſpeak, [who ſtedfaſtly beholding him, and perceiving that he had faith to be healed,]

9. And Paul looking earneſtly upon him, and either by his words, or by the diſcerning ſpirit which Paul had, perceiving that he believed that they were able to heal him.

10. Said with a loud voice, Stand up right on thy feet. [And he leaped and walked.]

10. And by the bare ſpeaking of the word he was made ſo ſtrong, that he leaped and walked.

11. And when the people ſaw what Paul had done, they lift up their voices, ſaying in the ſpeech of Lycaonia, [The Gods are came down to us in the likeneſs of men.]

11. The Gods which all the nations worſhip, have put on the ſhape of men, and come down among us.

12. And they called Barnabas Jupiter, and Paul Mercurius, becauſe he was the chief ſpeaker.]

12. And Barnabas they looked on as Jupiter the ſupreme God, (ſee c. 8. 10.) and Paul as Mercury, the interpreter of the will of the Gods, becauſe Paul did ſpeak more then Barnabas did.

13. Then the prieſt of Jupiter, which was before the city, brought oxen and garlands unto the gates, and would have done ſacrifice with the people.]

13. And the prieſt of Jupiter, whoſe ſtatue was worſhipped before the city, as the preſident of it, came preſently to the gates of the houſe where Paul and Barnabas Lodged, and brought Oxen to Sacrifice, and garlands to put upon their horns, when they were to be killed, verily purpoſing to offer Sacrifice to them.

14. Which when the Apoſtles Barnabas and Paul heard of, [they rent their cloths,] and ran in among the people, crying out,

14. They looked upon it as an abhorred blaſphemous thing, and rent their garments to expreſs their ſenſe and deteſtation of it.

15. And ſaying, Sirs, why do ye theſe things? we alſo are men of like paſſions with you, and preach unto you, that ye ſhould turn from theſe [vanities] unto the living God, which made heaven and earth, and the ſea, and all things that are therein,

15. Idol-falſe-gods, (ſo vain things ſignifie, Zach. 11. 17. ſee Acts 8. note d.)

16. Who in times paſt [ſuffered all nations to walk in their own ways.]

16. Left the Gentiles to their own blind worſhips.

17. Nevertheleſs he left not himſelf without witneſs, in that he did good, and gave us a rain from heaven, and fruitful ſeaſons, filling our hearts with food and gladneſs.]

17. And yet, while he did ſo, left he not off to evidence himſelf ſufficiently to them, by that great goodneſs of his in temporal things, the rain and the like, which are acts of his particular power and bounty, by thoſe means inviting and drawing them off from their impieties.

18. And with theſe ſayings ſcarce reſtrained they] the people, that they had not done ſacrifice unto them.

18. All which diſcourſe of Paul and Barnabas could hardly reſtrain.

19. And there came thither certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium, who [perſwaded the people, and having ſtoned Paul, drew him out of the city, ſuppoſing he had been dead.]

19. Gained by fair words the multitude to be on their ſide, and to joyn with them againſt the Apoſtles: and ſo in a furious, tumultuary manner, they threw ſtones at Paul, and verily believed they had killed him. In which poſture they took him, as a dead man, and dragg'd him out of the gates of the city.

20. Howbeit, as the Diſciples ſtood round about him, he roſe up and came into the city, and the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe.]

20. But as the Chriſtians there came piouſly, and ſolemnly to inter him, Paul being not dead all this while, v. 19. made uſe of that opportunity, when there were none but Believers preſent, and he roſe up, and went thence with them into the City: and the next day Barnabas and he went together to Derbe.

21. And when they had preached the Goſpel to that city, and had * taught many,] they returned again to Lyſtra, and to Iconium, and Antioch.

21. And having preach'd at Derbe, and converted many to the faith.

* made a good many diſciples, μαθητεύσαντες ἱκανοὺς

22. Confirming the ſouls of the Diſciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we muſt through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God.]

22. And in all thoſe cities gave confirmation to thoſe whom before they had baptized, and exhorted them to perſevere, and hold out againſt all terrors, counting and reſolving with themſelves that Chriſtianity bringeth many tribulations neceſſary along with it.

23. And when they had [b] ordained them Elders in every Church, and had prayed with faſting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they believed.]

b. 23. And having conſecrated Biſhops for them (ſee note on ch. 11. b.) one in every city, by faſting, and prayer, and impoſition of hands, they then took their leave of them, referring them to the good providence of Chriſt, whoſe faith they had received, to defend them, and to encreaſe all good things in them.

24. And after they had paſſed throughout Piſidia, they came to Pamphilia.

25. And when they had preached the word in Perga, they went down into Attalia:

26. And thence ſailed to Antioch, from whence they had been recommended to the grace of God, for the work which they fulfilled.]

26. And they came back to Antioch, from whence it was that they were ſent forth (ch. 13. 3.) on this voyage, and that with ſolemn prayer and faſting, for the preaching of the Goſpel (ſee v. 3. and note on Heb. 13. d.) to theſe ſo many cities, of which they had now made an end, and ſo returned.

27. And

27. And when they were come, and had gathered the Church together, they rehearſed all that God had done with them, [and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles.]

27. And that it had pleaſed God, that by their preaching to the Jews in the Gentile Cities, many of the Gentiles had received Chriſtianity.

28. And there they abode long time with the Diſciples.

Annotations on Chap. XIV.

a. Τετὲς ὑ. φανόθεν.

V. 17. Rain from heaven] The reaſon of St. Paul's naming of rain from heaven, as a peculiar teſtimony of God's power and goodneſs, ſeems to be taken from that notion which the Jews had of it, expreſs'd by this ancient ſaying in Sanhedr. and in Chelek Taani, c. 8. ſect. 2. in Ein Iſrael, that there be three keys not given to any Legate or proxy (kept peculiarly in Gods own hand של חיה ושל גשמים ושל תחיית המתים of life, of rain, of the reſurrection of the dead; making rain as immediate and incommunicable a gift of God, as either giving, or reſtoring of Life. Hence it is frequently ſtyled by them, גבורת גשמים the power of rain, becauſe, ſay they, it deſcends not, but by power, and 'tis one of the things in which the power of God ſhews it ſelf. The difference of it from other the like acts of power, they ſay, is this, that it belongs to the juſt and unjuſt (whereas, ſay they, the Reſurrection belongs to the juſt only) and ſo ſaith our Saviour of it, Mat. 5. 45.

b. Χειροτονεῖν πρεσβυτέρους

V. 23. Ordained them Elders] The word πρεσβύτερος here, is not (as ſome think) the deſcription or notation of the ſtate of the men before they were ordained, or of the qualifications which made them fit to be inſtalled Governours, viz. their being ſuch who were counted Elders of the people for wiſdom, and knowledge of Chriſtianity; but χειροτονεῖν πρεσβυτέρους is to conſecrate, or ordain, Governours by impoſition of hands, to make them ſuch that were not ſo before, to inveſt and endow them with authority in the Church. The word χειροτονεῖν literally ſignifies to ſtretch out the hand, or hold it up, and ſignified among the ancient Greeks, chooſing, or giving of ſentence, or ſuffrages, which in popular elections, or judicatures, was done after this manner. But this being the original of the word, it is (as is ordinary with other words) ſomewhat enlarged, and changed in the ordinary uſage of other writers, Jewiſh and Chriſtian, and ſignifies indifferently Conſtituting, or Ordaining, without any intimation of ſuffrages, or plurality of perſons, or voices, by whom this ordination is made. This may beſt appear by ſome teſtimonies of thoſe writers which wrote neareſt the times and the ſtyle of the New Teſtament. Thus ſaith Philo Judæus of Joſeph, Βασιλέως ὅλης χώρας ἐχειροτονῆτο, He was (not by any votes or ſuffrages of many, but by the act of Pharaoh the King) conſtituted Governour of all Egypt under the king. So of Moſes ἡγεμὼν ἐχειροτονεῖτο, he was (by God certainly without any ſuffrages of others) conſtituted the ruler of the Iſraelites. So of Aaron's ſons, ἱερεῖς ἐχειροτόνησε, God (without any concurrence or choice of others) choſe them prieſts. So Lucian of Alexander's kindneſs to Hepheſtion, Θεὸν χειροτονῆσαι ἦν τελευτηκότα, he made him a God when he was dead; which ſure was a ſingle act of Alexanders, was not done by voices or ſuffrages. And ſo Maximus Tyrius of Darius's horſe, which by neighing made his maſter king of the Perſians, ſaith, Δαρεῖον δὲ πρότερον προσεκύνησαν οἱ Πέρσαι πρὶν αὐτὸν ἐχειροτόνησεν ὁ ἵππος, The Perſians did not adore, or ſalute Darius, till his wanton horſe had created him king. In all theſe places the Ordination being an act of ſome one perſon, Pharaoh, God, Alexander, &c. the word is capable of no other notion. In like manner, when the word is uſed of the Roman affairs, as in Appian and Dio, we know it is, it muſt needs be taken in this ſenſe, becauſe that ceremony of lifting up, or ſtretching out hands in elections, was not in uſe among them. And thus it is uſed in this place, not of any multitude or number of men to whom ſuffrages might belong, but of Paul and Barnabas, who did it by joint conſent, and there is no other poſſible way for two to vote any thing. As for the ſuffrages of any others, if ſuch could be imagined to have interpoſed here, it would not then be Paul and Barnabas, but thoſe others who did χειροτονεῖν, ſtretch out their hands, or give the ſuffrages. And for Paul and Barnabas to do it by the ſuffrages of others, this is far from the original uſe of the word from whence it pretends to be concluded; for where χειροτονία in the primitive ſenſe is uſed of chooſing by ſuffrages, as in popular elections, &c.) it is certain that their own, not others ſuffrages are meant by it. And therefore χειροτονεῖν is by Heſychius rendred καθιστᾶν to conſtitute, (as well as ψηφίζειν to elect) and ſo it is here all one directly χειροτονεῖν πρεσβυτέρους, to ordain Elders, as Tit. 1. 5. καταστῆσαι πρεσβυτέρους, to conſtitute elders. And thus the word is clearly uſed, Acts 10. 41. where προχειροτονεῖσθαι being ſpoken of the Apoſtles being whether fore-ordained, or fore-choſen of God, to be witneſſes of Chriſt's reſurrection, muſt needs be without votes or ſuffrages; and accordingly Theophylact on 2 Tim. 1. 6. inſtead of St. Paul's διὰ ἐπιθέσεως τῶν χειρῶν μου, by impoſition of my hands, hath ὅτε σε ἐχειροτόνησα ἐπίσκοπον, when I ordained thee Biſhop. And ſo St. Chryſoſtom on thoſe words, Acts 6. 6. having prayed they laid hands on them, ſaith, ἐχειροτονήθησαν διὰ προσευχῆς, τοῦτο γὰρ ἡ χειροτονία, they were ordained by prayer, for this is ordination, making χειροτονία and χειροθεσία, ſtretching out the hands, and laying on the hands, to be all one. And though 2 Cor. 8. 19. it be uſed of the Churches conſtituting one to travel with St. Paul, yet is this no variation from the preſent notion of it, the word ſignifying to ordain, or elect, or conſtitute indifferently, whether it be done by God, or one or more men, or by the whole Church. So * Chryſoſtom ſpeaking of Chriſt, Αὐτὸς αὐτὸς εὐθέως χειροτονεῖ, he preſently conſtitutes them. And * Socrates of Conſtantine, in the twentieth year of his Reign, Κωνσάντιον καλέσασα Καίσαρα, but in the thirtieth, Κώνσταν ἐχειροτόνησεν, where it is all one with καλέσασα, both noting the conſtituting or creating of Ceſar, a work of the Emperor only. So Theodoret περὶ προνοί. in the perſon of Joſeph, Ἀπάντων μοι τῶν κατὰ τὴν οἰκίαν κηδεμόνα ἐχειροτόνησεν ὁ δεσπότης, my maſter hath conſtituted me over all his houſe. So * Zacharias Biſhop of Mitylene, ſpeaking of Gods creating of man, as a King, and gueſt, for whom a palace and a feaſt were before prepared, he expreſſeth it by ἡ ὅτι γῆς χειροτονηθῆναι, καὶ προβληθῆναι βασιλέα, καὶ δαιτυμόνα τῶν ἀγαθῶν ὧν ὁ μέγας πρύτανις ἑστάτωσε, he was choſen (ſure not by the ſuffrages of many, but by God the one Creator) and ſet forth to be both the King, and the gueſt of the good things which the great Maſter of the feaſt had ſet before him. Of this acception of the word χειροτονεῖν, a controverſy there is between the two great Scholiaſts on the Canons, Zonaras and Balſamon. Zonaras on the firſt Apoſtolical Canon, Ἐπίσκοπος χειροτονείσθω ὑπὸ ἐπισκόπων δύο ἢ τριῶν, Let a Biſhop be ordained by two or three Biſhops, makes this Scholion, Νῦν μὲν χειροτονία καλεῖ)— Now adays the office of prayers, and invocation of the holy Spirit at the conſecration of any, is called χειροτονία, from the Biſhops ſtretching out his hand, and bleſſing the perſon ordained, πάλαι δὲ αὐτὴ ἡ ψῆφος χειροτονία ὠνόμαζο, but anciently the election it ſelf was ſo called; for when the multitude of the cities had power to chooſe their Biſhops, they aſſembled, and ſome choſe one, ſome another, and that the greater part of ſuffrages might carry it, it is ſaid that they that made the choice ſtretcht out their hands, and ſo the ſuffrages were numbred, and he that was choſen by moſt was advanced to the dignity, and thence the word χειροτονία was taken. And accordingly, ſaith he, the Fathers

χειροτονηθεὶς συνέδριμον

Fathers of the Councils are found to uſe the word, calling election χειροτονία. Thus the Council of Laodicea, Can. 5. ſaith that χειροτονία muſt not be in the preſence of the Catechumeni, meaning elections by that word. How unfitly this Scholion is applied to the firſt Apoſtolical Canon will be eaſily judged, when it is remembred that χειροτονεῖσθαι uſed in that Canon (and ſure that was πάλαι anciently, and long enough before Zonaras's writing) is certainly uſed for Ordination or Conſecration, καθιέρωσις or χειροθεσία, the initiation to the Apoſtolical office by impoſition of hands, and not any popular or whatever kind of election. And therefore Balſamon coming to give account of this Canon, and ſeeing this Scholion of Zonaras before him, gives it (without naming him) the due refutation thus, Ὁ ἀποστολικὸς κανὼν ἐστι —— This Apoſtolical Canon ſpeaks of that Ordination which is done by the Biſhops in the Church —— ὁ περὶ ψήφου, καθώς τινες ἔφασαν, not of the election, as ſome ſaid (following ſome unwritten reports) in reſpect of the ſtretching out the hands uſed in the elections of Biſhops by the multitude of the cities: for though in the tenth (it ſhould be the fifth) Canon of Laodicea, the Fathers command that χειροτονίαι ſhould not be in the preſence of the Catechumeni, and from thence ſome ſuppoſed that this Canon ſpeaks of election; yet I believe they ſay not well, becauſe the ordination which is performed in the Church, διὰ μυστικῶν εὐχῶν, by the prayers belonging to initiation, is done, though there be never ſo many there (which concludes that this Apoſtolick Canon belongs to Conſecration, tho' the Laodicean do not.) And again the fourth Canon of the firſt Nicene Counſil reſolving that the election of a Biſhop ſhall be performed by all the Biſhops of the Province, ἢ τὶνες τριῶν, at leaſt by three, the reſt ſignifying their conſents by writing, I cannot think how ſome could underſtand this Canon of the election of a Biſhop, which appoints that it ſhall be done by two or three (and ſo poſſibly by two, not neceſſarily by three) Biſhops. By this it is evident, that Zonaras, if as his premiſes prepared for it, ſo he concluded according to them, that in the Apoſtolical Canon, χειροτονεῖν, was to be underſtood of election, and not of ordination, was fouly miſtaken. But the truth is, the concluſion of his Scholion ſeems to look another way, citing that Canon of Nice, which being of Elections, appoints them to be by three at leaſt, whereas this of χειροτονία contents it ſelf with two or three; and in his Scholion on that Nicene Canon 4. his concluſion is expreſs, that the Apoſtolical Canon χειροτονίαν τὴν καθιέρωσιν ἢ χειροθεσίαν ὀνομάζει, calls conſecration and impoſition of hands by that title, and ſo not election. (So * Harmenopulus on his Epitome Can The Apoſtolical Canon is of conſecration and impoſition of hands, the Nicene of Election.) And ſo all his premiſes of χειροτονία being taken for ψῆφος election, are utterly alien from the Canon which he had before him; and his obſervation is far from truth, that it was in latter times only that χειροτονία came to ſignify Ordination. His own words conclude rather the direct contrary, that at the time of the writing the firſt Apoſtolical Canon, (which by all is acknowledged genuine, and ſo written not long after the Apoſtles days) χειροτονία was taken in the ſenſe of Ordination, and that long after that in the Council of Laodicea, 'twas uſed for election. And it may be worth obſerving, that he that had taken ſuch unſeaſonable pains, to prove it was taken for election, had no proof for it in all antiquity, but onely that one Canon of Laodicea, where indeed it is evidently uſed in that ſenſe: but whether of any other election, ſave by the Biſhop, (to whom it evidently belongs in the fourth Nicene Canon) in the preſence of the people (excluding the audientes) from them to receive teſtimony of the lives of thoſe who were to be choſen, appears not by that Canon. In the Nicene Canon 4. the difference is clear between καθίσαι conſtituting by way of ψῆφος election, in the beginning of the Canon, and then, (after that regularly performed) χειροτονία ordination, in the end of it. And by that we may underſtand Theodorets meaning, Eccl. Hiſt. l. 5. c. 23. when he ſaith the Canons forbid δίχα τριῶν ἐπισκόπων ἐπισκόπῳ χειροτονίαν γίνεσθαι, That a Biſhop have ordination without three Biſhops: not that there muſt needs be three Biſhops to impoſe hands, for that is contrary to the Apoſtolical Canon which is content with two (and yet is by Zonaras himſelf reconciled with the Nicene that requires three at leaſt) but that there muſt be three at leaſt perſonally preſent at his election, (and that * with concurrence alſo of all the Province that are abſent) before he can be ordained lawfully, and when he is ſo elected, then he may be ordained by two. So when Sineſius, Ep. 67. ſaith of Siderius Biſhop of Palebiſca, that he was ordained ἐνδέσμως irregularly, εἰ μήτε ἐν Ἀλεξανδρείᾳ κληθείη μήτε παρὰ τριῶν ἐπιθοῖτο, if he was not conſtituted at Alexandria, or not by three Biſhops, there meaning the whole affair, as it was made up of Election, and Ordination too, to the former of which the preſence of three Biſhops was neceſſary, (tho' not to the latter.) And ſo Theodoret again, l. 5. c. 9. affirming from the Nicene Canon, that the cuſtom was for the Biſhops in every Province, and the neighbouring Biſhops, if they pleaſed, περὶ τὸ συμφέρον ποιεῖσθαι χειροτονίας, to make the ordinations to the beſt advantage, muſt be thus underſtood, not that all ſhould join in the ordination or impoſition of hands, but (all of the whole Province, either perſonally, or by their letters joining in the election) two or three ſhould impoſe hands on him. But this ex abundanti, more than was neceſſary for the notion of χειροτονία, when 'twas uſed of the Apoſtles. Now for the κατ' ἐκκλησίαν, it is beſt rendred Church by Church, that is, in every Church one Elder or Biſhop, and ſo χειροτονῆσαι πρεσβυτέρους κατ' ἐκκλησίαν, to ordain Elders in every Church, is all one with καθίσαι πρεσβυτέρους κατὰ πόλιν, to conſtitute Elders in every city, Tit. 1. 5. every city having a Biſhop in it, and ſo called a Church, to which the Believers in all the parts about it belonged, and that Biſhop having power to make as many inferior officers in that Church as he thought good. Of the notion of πρεσβύτερος, ſee Note on ch. 11. b.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XV.

1. And ſome converted or Chriſtian Jews, which tho' they believed in Chriſt, yet thought themſelves ſtill bound to the obſervation of the whole Moſaical Law, told thoſe of the Gentile Proſelytes, v. 19. that were converted to the faith of Chriſt alſo (of whom ſome, that is, the Proſelytes of the gates, were not wont to be circumciſed, but only ſubſcribed to the ſeven precepts of the ſons of Noah) that they muſt be complete Proſelytes of the Jews, ſubmit to their whole Law, and ſo be circumciſed, &c. or elſe they could not be ſaved.

1 AND certain men which came down from Judea taught the brethren, and ſaid, Except ye be circumciſed after the manner of Moſes, ye cannot be ſaved.]

2. And Paul and Barnabas oppoſed theſe, and the matter being turned into a queſtion, and that undecidable among themſelves, neither yielding to the other, it was neceſſary to appeal to Jeruſalem, under which, as the prime Metropolis, the Jews of all Syria, and ſo Antioch were: and accordingly the Church-Governours of Antioch determined to ſend up Paul and Barnabas, and ſome others with them, to the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and the Apoſtles that were there, and the other Biſhops of Judea (ſee note on ch. 11. b.) belonging to that Metropolis, to adviſe whether the Gentiles that received the faith, and lived among the Jewiſh Believers, ſhould be bound to be circumciſed, or no.

2. When therefore Paul and Barnabas had no ſmall diſſention and diſputation with them, they determined that Paul and Barnabas, and certain other of them, ſhould go up to Jeruſalem unto the Apoſtles and Elders about this queſtion.]

3. And

* ſet forth, προπεμφθεντες

3. And being * brought on their way by the Church, they paſſed through Phenice, and Samaria, declaring the converſion of the Gentiles: and they cauſed great joy unto all the brethren.]

3. And the Church bore the charges of their journey, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 16. a.) and as they went through Phenice and Samaria, they told them the great news that occaſioned this their journey, the coming in of the Gentiles to the faith: and all the Chriſtians were very much joyed at it.

4. And when they were come to Jeruſalem, they were received of the Church, and of the Apoſtles and Elders, and they declared all things that God had done with them.

5. But there roſe up certain of the ſect of the Phariſees, which believed, ſaying, that it was needful to circumciſe them, and to command them to keep the Law of Moſes.]

4, 5. And when they came to Jeruſalem, they were kindly receiv'd by the Chriſtians there; and particularly by James the brother of the Lord then Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and thence called an Apoſtle (ſee note on the title of the Epiſtle of James, b. and note on 1 Cor. 15. a.) by Peter, v. 7. and by John Gal. 2. 9. remaining there at that time, and by all the Biſhops of Judea (ſee ch. 11. note b.) and began their meſſage by telling them alſo what ſucceſs God had given to their preaching among the Gentiles, and how that when the Gentiles, Proſelytes, or others, uncircumciſed, came in to the Faith, ſome Judaizing Chriſtians, of the ſect of the Phariſees, ſaid, that ſuch of the Gentiles as came in to the faith of Chriſt, were to be obliged to receive circumciſion, and to obſerve not only the ſeven Precepts of the ſons of Noah, but alſo all the ceremonies of the whole Judaical Law.

6. And the Apoſtles and Elders came together for to conſider of this matter]

6. Hereupon James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and Peter, and John, the Apoſtles (ſee note on 1 Cor. 15. a. Rev. 4. g. Gal. 2. c.) and the Biſhops of Judea met in council, to deliberate, and debate about this difficulty.

7. And when there had been much diſputing, Peter roſe up and ſaid unto them, Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago, God made choice among us, that [the Gentiles by my mouth ſhould hear the word of the Goſpel, and believe.]

7. Some uncircumciſed Proſelytes, Cornelius and his Family, Acts 10. ſhould have the Goſpel preached to them, and accordingly had, and received the faith, and never were circumciſed.

8. And God which knoweth the hearts, bare them witneſs, giving them the holy Ghoſt even as he did unto us;]

8. And God, that knew the ſincerity of their hearts, teſtified that they were believers, ſuch as were acceptable to him (though they were not circumciſed) and fit to be baptized, giving them that great witneſs from heaven, ſending down the holy Ghoſt upon them in like manner as he was before ſent down upon the Apoſtles, Acts 10. 44.

9. And put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith.]

9. And dealt with them juſt as with us, making no difference between us and them, and by the Chriſtian doctrine by them received and entertained, did the ſame thing on them (far more effectually) for which all the Jewiſh rites (particularly circumciſion) were firſt ordained, that is, took them off from all their heathen ſins.

10. Now therefore, why tempt ye God, * to put a yoke upon the neck of the diſciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?]

10. This one evidence is ſufficient to conclude this whole debate; for is not the thing already determined by that one act of God's giving the holy Ghoſt to the Gentiles? That ſure makes it evident that there is no difference betwixt us Jews and them. Why then do ye preſs that which is ſo contrary to the Will of God? why do ye refuſe to believe that which is ſo teſtified to be his will, and ſo in effect require more arguments of this, as of a matter ſtill uncertain, and thereby tempt God, (ſee note on Mat. 4. c.) and think to impoſe upon Chriſtians of the nations the performance of the whole Moſaical Law, which belonged not to them, and which we Jews were never able to perform, ſo as to be juſtified thereby?

11. But we believe that through the Grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt we ſhall be ſaved, even as they.]

11. 'Tis by the Goſpel (ſee ch. 11. 23.) that we expect juſtification and ſalvation, through faith and obedience to Chriſt, and not by Moſaical performances: and ſo they, if they believe, have the ſame way to ſalvation as we.

12. Then all the multitude kept ſilence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them.]

12. After this, the next thing was, that Paul and Barnabas declared in like manner what miracles God had enabled them alſo to do in the converting of the Gentiles, which was another argument and teſtimony from heaven, that no difference was to be put between Jews and Gentiles.

13. And after they had held their peace, James anſwered, ſaying,] Men and brethren, hearken unto me.

13. And next after them, James the Juſt, the brother of the Lord, the then Biſhop of Jeruſalem, began to ſpeak, ſaying.

* looked down to take out of the Gentiles, or, was pleſed to take

14. Simeon hath declared how God at the firſt * did [a] viſit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name.]

14. Peter hath ſufficiently demonſtrated that it was the will of God (in that caſe of Cornelius) that the Gentiles ſhould without any ſcruple have the Goſpel preached to them, and be baptized, and received into the Church.

15. And to this agree the words of the prophets, as it is written,]

15. And this is agreeable to what had been foretold by the old Prophets, for ſo Am. 9. 11. they are the words of God.

16. After this I will return, and will build up the tabernacle of David which is fallen down, and I will build again the ruines thereof, and I will ſet it up,

17. That the reſidue of men might ſeek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, ſaith the Lord, who doth all theſe things.]

16, 17. In the latter days (the age of the Meſſias, wherein now we are) I will rebuild me a Church among the Jews, thoſe few of them who ſhall believe in Chriſt, (ſee note on Heb. 8. a. who together with the believing Gentiles ſhall become my people, ſaith the Lord Jehovah, whoſe wonderful work this is, to make the Jews and Gentiles one people, and who doth very well like that Jews and Gentiles ſhould be thus united, tho' formerly he had made ſome difference between them.

† or, is his work, for the K's MS. and the ancient Gr. & Lat. read γνωστὸν τῷ Κυρίῳ τὸ ἔργον αὐτοῦ

18. Known unto God † are all his works from the beginning of the world.]

18. This, though it were not brought to paſs actually till theſe latter days, was yet foreſeen and predetermined by God long ago, and accordingly thus foretold through revelation from God by that Prophet.

* or, & whatſoever they would not have done to themſelves, do not to others; for the ancient Gr. & Latin MS. & many other copies here add, ἡ ὅσα μὴ θέλουσιν ἑαυτοῖς γενέσθαι, ἑτέροις μὴ ποιεῖτε, and ſo v. 29.

19. Wherefore my ſentence is, that we trouble not them which from among the Gentiles are turned to God;

20. But that we write unto them, that they abſtain from pollutions of Idols, and from fornication, and from things ſtrangled, and from blood *.]

19, 20. Therefore my concluſion and determination is, that we ſhould not require, or force them to be circumciſed, who from Gentiles turn Chriſtians, but content our ſelves that they receive the precepts of the ſons of Noah only, as Proſelytes of the gates are wont to do.

21. For Moſes of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the ſynagogues every ſabbath day.]

21. Nor need we Jews to fear that this will bring a contempt upon Moſes or the Law of the Jews; for the contrary appears by the Chriſtian practice, even where theſe Proſelytes of the Gentiles are; there the books of Moſes, as hath been cuſtomary from of old, are ſtill continued among them, to be read aloud in the ſynagogue every Saturday, (to which the Council of Laodicea did after add the reading of a chapter in the New Teſtament) to ſignify their reſpect to the Moſaical Law, and their not offering it contempt among the Proſelytes, though they did not require them to be circumciſed.

22. Then pleaſed it the Apoſtles and Elders, with the whole Church, * to ſend choſen men of their own company to Antioch, with Paul and Barnabas, namely Judas ſurnamed Barſabas, and Silas, † chief men among the brethren:]

22. The buſineſs being thus decided by the acquieſcing of all in this ſentence of the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, the next thing was, that James, and Peter, and John, and the Biſhops of Judea, with the general conſent and approbation of the whole Church of Jeruſalem (ſee note on ch. 6. b.) thought fit to chooſe ſome Biſhops of Judea, that were preſent at the Council, to go along with Paul and Barnabas to Antioch: and the perſons pitcht on were Judas and Silas, Biſhops of ſeveral Churches (ſee note e.)

23. And wrote letters by them after this manner, The Apoſtles, and Elders, and brethren ſend greeting to the brethren which are of the Gentiles in Antioch, and Syria, and Cilicia.

23. And they put their decree into form of an epiſtle, in theſe words, The Apoſtles &c. that is, the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and Peter and John the Apoſtles, and the Biſhops of Judea, and the whole ſociety of Chriſtians (ſee note on ch. 6. b.) ſalute the Church of the Gentiles (ſee note on Rev. 11. 6.) which is in Antioch the Metropolis, and in Syria, and Cilicia, which retain immediately to it, and ultimately to Jeruſalem, ſee v. 2.

24. When we receiv'd advertiſement, that ſome of the Judaizing Chriſtians which went from hence, v. 1. endeavoured to ſubvert you, and to carry you away to a groundleſs new doctrine, of the neceſſity of all Chriſtians being circumciſed, they having no manner of commiſſions, or inſtructions from us to do ſo.

25. It ſeemed good unto us, being aſſembled with one accord, to ſend choſen men unto you, with our beloved Barnabas and Paul.]

25. We decreed in council, and reſolved to ſend a couple of our own Biſhops to accompany thoſe two which came from you, Barnabas and Paul.

c. 27. We have ſent therefore Judas and Silas, who c ſhall alſo tell you the ſame things by mouth.]

27. We have ſent, I ſay, with them Judas and Silas, on purpoſe, that they might tell you by word of mouth more at large what here we write more briefly.

28. For it ſeemed good to the holy Ghoſt and to us, * to lay upon you no greater burden then theſe neceſſary things:]

That we, the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, to which, as the prime Metropolis all Syria and Antioch doth belong, together with Peter and John the Apoſtles here abiding, and the Biſhops of Judea, all together in council, having prayed to God to ſend his holy Spirit to abide among us, and to lead us into all truth, have upon mature deliberation determined that the Gentile Chriſtians ſhall not be obliged to Circumciſion, or other Judaical obſervances (ordinarily required of all that will be Jewiſh Proſelytes, or enter into the Moſaical Covenant) or to any more then thoſe few things that have among the Jews been required of all Proſelytes of the gates (that is, of all the Gentiles that were in any wiſe permitted to come into their Temple to worſhip God.)

30. So when they were diſmiſſed they came to Antioch: and [when they had gathered the multitude together, they delivered the Epiſtle.]

32. And theſe two Biſhops of Judea were indued with a prophetick Spirit, able to expound and interpret Scripture, and uſually employed in confirming and building up believers in the faith, and accordingly thus they did here.

38. But becauſe this John had left them when he went from Pamphylia, c. 13. 13. and had not accompanied them conſtantly in the preaching of the Goſpel and following their buſineſs, Paul reſolved he ſhould not be taken with them.

39. And the contention was ſo ſharp between them, that they departed aſunder one from the other: and ſo Barnabas took Mark, and ſailed unto Cyprus.

Annotations on Chap. XV.

a. Ἐπεσκέψατο λαὸν

V. 14. Viſit the Gentiles] Ἐπεσκέψατο in the Septuagint, joined with an Infinitive Verb, not an Accuſative Noun after it, ſignifies to be pleaſed, to delight, Jer. 32. 41. ἐπισκέψομαι ἐυφρᾶναι, where the Hebrew hath, וְשָׂשְׂתִי, and I will rejoyce, or delight. It is true the word ſignifies to viſit, Luke 1. 68. and that may be thought alſo to have at ſome diſtance an Infinitive, ποιῆσαι ἔλεος, to ſhew mercy, after it, v. 72. But ἐπεσκέψατο λαβεῖν λαὸν here, is another kind of phraſe, ἐπεσκέψατο hath no Noun after it, but only and immediately an Infinitive mood, and ſo is parallel only to that before mentioned in the Septuagint, and ſo in reaſon muſt be interpreted.

b. Ανασκευάζειν ψυχὰς

V. 24. Subverting your Souls] Ἀνασκευάζειν ψυχὰς is to remove or transfer, (as Gal. 1. 6.) mens minds, to carry them from one object to another: ſo Heſychius, Ἀνασκευάζειν, μεταθεῖναι, it ſignifies to tranſpoſe; and Budæus, that it is properly of thoſe who gather up their goods, and go ſomewhither elſe; and again Heſychius, Ἀνασκευαζόμενοι, μετοικιζόμενοι, removing to ſome other place; and ſo here to infuſe ſome new falſe doctrine into them.

d. Απέχεσθαι εἰδωλοθύτων, &c.

V. 29. That ye abſtain] To what hath been ſaid of the Proſelytes among the Jews in many places (all referred to Note on ch. 10. a.) more muſt now be added for the explication of this Canon of the Council at Jeruſalem. For the queſtion being, whether the Gentiles that turned Chriſtians ſhould be bound to all thoſe things which were required of the Proſelytes of juſtice, or only thoſe things which were required of the Proſelytes of the gates, and the Apoſtles Anſwer being in theſe words, that they ſhould be bound to no more but theſe neceſſary things, to abſtain, &c. the queſtion will be, what thoſe particulars that are there named belong to. To which the anſwer muſt be, by ſetting down what was required of each of thoſe ſorts of Proſelytes. Of the former ſort 'tis ſufficiently known that it was required, that they ſhould ſubmit to the whole Moſaical Law, to be circumciſed, &c. as appears by the ground of this quarrel or diſpute here, at the beginning of the Chapter. And to this purpoſe 'tis obſervable, that the Epiſtle which is extant, and affirmed to be written by this Barnabas here mentioned, doth principally inſiſt upon the no-neceſſity of circumciſion in Chriſtians, (ſee ſect. 7. & ſect. 2:) hath theſe words, In hoc providens eſt & miſericors Deus, quia in ſimplicitate crediturus erat populus, quem comparavit dilecto ſuo, atque oſtendit omnibus nobis, ut non incurramus tanquam Proſelyti ad illorum legem. 'Tis Gods mercy that the people which he purchaſed for his ſon ſhould believe in ſimplicity, and not as Proſelytes (of the Jews, of this firſt kind) run to their Law. Of the ſecond ſort of Proſelytes 'tis as much acknowledged, that there was no more required then the obſervation of ſix precepts given to the ſons of Adam, and the ſeventh ſuperadded to the ſons of Noah, all together ſtyled the ſeven precepts of the ſons of Noah, which were theſe; the firſt על עבודה זרה, of ſtrange worſhip, or of renouncing the Idolatry of the heathens, the not worſhipping other Gods. The ſecond על ברכות השם of the benediction (that is, the worſhip) of the name, that is, the true God. The third על הדינים, of judgements, or adminiſtration of Juſtice. The fourth על גלוי עריות, of diſcloſing nakedneſs, that is, of abſtaining from all uncleanneſs, and interdicted marriages, within thoſe degrees which are ſet down, Lev. 18. The fifth על שפיכות דמים of ſhedding blood, or againſt homicide. The ſixth על הגזל, of theft, or rapine, and doing as they would be done to by others. The ſeventh אבר מן החי a member of any live creature, or that they ſhould not eat the fleſh of any creature with the blood in it, a ceremony choſen by God as a means to keep them in deteſtation and abhorrence of the ſin, of homicide, occaſion'd probably by the bloodineſs that was among the men of the old world, and accordingly given to Noah, after the flood, Gen. 9. 4. and conſequently to all the Proſelytes among the Jews, Lev. 17. 10. Now that the obſervation of the whole Law, particularly Circumciſion (the matter of the queſtion, and the character of the firſt kind of Proſelytes) was not required here by the Apoſtles, 'tis clear. It follows therefore that it muſt be only the ſecond ſort, the obſervation of the precepts of the ſons of Adam and Noah. Of which 'tis clear that ſome are here named, and it were ſufficient to ſay that thoſe ſome might be ſet down to ſignify all the reſt, tho' they were not expreſly mentioned. As in Phocylides, 'tis not unreaſonable to ſay that that verſe of his,

Αἷμα δ' μὴ φαγέειν, εἰδωλοθύτων δ' ἀπέχεσθαι, not to eat blood, and to abſtain from the Idol ſacrifices, denotes the whole number of theſe ſeven precepts. But it is poſſible we may go farther in this matter, and find all the whole number of the ſeven here ſet down, thus; The command to abſtain from things offered to Idols contains the two firſt precepts, that of rejecting Idols, and worſhipping the true God. The worſhipping the true God, is the affirmative part of the precept, and muſt be ſuppoſed, cannot be left out when all the Idol-worſhips are prohibited, and therefore are they prohibited that the true God may not have a rival in his worſhip, which therefore muſt comprehend the precept of worſhipping him. And for the Negative part of the precept, the rejecting of Idols, or the not worſhipping them, that is contained in the abſtaining from things offered to them: for the feaſts being a part of the Gentile ſacrifices, or a table for the worſhippers being always furniſhed with the remainders of the Sacrifices, the abſtaining from thoſe feaſts was the abſtaining from that worſhip; and therefore 1 Cor. 10. 14. when the Apoſtle ſaith, fly from Idolatry, it is clear by the conſequents, v. 19, 20. that this abſtinence from the Idol-feaſts, together with the conſequents thereof, is the thing forbidden by him. Then the command to abſtain from blood, is the fifth of thoſe precepts, the ſolemn prohibition of Murder, or of the effuſion of mans blood, Gen. 9. 6. given before to the ſons of Adam, and there renewed to Noah. So S. Cyprian underſtood it * ad Quirin. Abſtinere à ſanguinis effuſione, to abſtain from effuſion of blood, which he cannot mean of the blood of beaſts, for that they were commanded (not forbidden) to pour out upon the ground, Lev. 17. 13. And ſo others whom S. Auſtin mentions, Cont. Fauſt. Manich. Intelligunt à ſanguine abſtinendum nequis homicidio ſe contaminet, they underſtood the precept of abſtaining from blood, that none ſhould pollute himſelf with homicide. And for thoſe that underſtand it of the blood of beaſts, many of them leave out the mention of things ſtrangled, as being all one with this notion of it. So doth Irenæus, l. 3. c. 12. Tertullian de pudicit. c. 12. and S. Auſtin in that place againſt Fauſtus, giving this interpretation of it, nè quicquam ederent carnis cujus ſanguis non eſſet effuſus, not to eat any fleſh, whoſe blood hath not been poured out, though ſome others (by miſtake I ſuppoſe) underſtand it of the blood of beaſt, and yet retain the mention of things ſtrangled alſo. 3*ly*, That of things ſtrangled is the ſeventh of thoſe; Gen. 9. 4. Fleſh with the life thereof, which is the blood ye ſhall not eat. A ceremony ſuperadded to that former precept of not ſhedding mans blood, to hedge it in, and ſecure it now, having, as 'tis probable, been ſo fouly broken by the Giants before the flood, Gen. 6. 4. So again in this Judaical Law, Thou ſhalt not eat the fleſh in the blood, but pour out the blood of every beaſt upon the ground, Lev. 17. 13. Fourthly, that of fornication is the fourth of thoſe; containing the interdict of all unnatural pollutions, eſpecially ſuch as the Gentiles were ſo generally immers'd in, all which are, here and in many other places, meant by πορνεία, fornication, according as Thomas Magiſter makes πόρνος a proper word to render ἀνδροκοίτης by. As alſo the marriages within forbidden degrees, which is called the diſcloſing of nakedneſs, Lev. 18. and appear to have been been interdicted before the Levitical Law, by the puniſhment that fell upon the nations for the breach of them, v. 27. and are expreſly ſtyled fornication, 1 Cor. 5. 1. To which if we add thoſe words which ſome editions add after theſe (the Complutenſis out of three or four very ancient Manuſcripts, and particularly Beza's venerable Greek and Latin one, as we have noted) and which Irenæus, l. 3. c. 12. and the Æthiopick and other interpreters retain, viz. ᾧ ὅσα μὴ θέλουσιν ἑαυτοῖς γίνεσθαι ἑτέρῳ μὴ ποιεῖν, what you would not have done to your ſelves, do not ye to another, that will be verbatim that other precept of theft or rapin, for which other Jewiſh writers read, doing as they would be done to. And ſo we know, that thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf, Mat. 19. 19. is ſet inſtead of μὴ ἀποστερήσῃς, thou ſhalt not defraud or deprive, in the parallel, Mark 10. 19. As for that de judiciis, that might reaſonably be left out, now that the Jews were every where under the Roman power, and they that came from Gentiliſm to Chriſtianity, were not to change their obedience to Magiſtrates. However, all that could be their Duty to do in this reſpect, was to live juſtly with one another (not to ſubject themſelves to the Judicial laws of the Jews, which they were never concerned in) and that was the ſum of the former precept of doing as they would be done to, and therefore may very well be reduced to it. And ſo all the ſeven precepts will be here contained. By this it appears, what was the direct importance of this Jeruſalem Canon, viz. that the Gentile Chriſtians ſhould not be obliged to the laws of the firſt ſort of Proſelytiſm, to Circumciſion and the like Judaical obſervances, concerning which was the only queſtion, v. 1. And this one thing they are pleaſed thus to expreſs, that the obſervations that belonged to the ſecond ſort of Proſelytiſm, were all that were propoſed to the Gentile Chriſtians, and nothing beſides, the whole weight of the Canon (as of the queſtion brought before the Council) lying on theſe words in the beginning of it, Ἔδοξε μηδὲν πλέον ἐπιτίθεσθαι ὑμῖν βάρος, We have defined that no more weight be laid on you, that is, that circumciſion, &c. be not impoſed. Now if it be demanded, whether by vertue of this decree thus explained, all theſe particulars (the whole ſeven precepts of the ſons of Adam and Noah) be not here given to all Chriſtians, and conſequently whether all ſuch are not here commanded ſtrictly to abſtain from things ſtrangled, to pour out the blood of beaſts upon the ground, and not to eat it in any manner of preparation; to this I anſwer, by remembring, 1. That εἰδωλόθυτα, things offered to Idols, are here joined with theſe under the ſame interdict, and thoſe in St. James's firſt draught of the Canon callep ἀλισγήματα τῶν εἰδώλων, pollutions or abominations of Idols, which yet St. Paul expreſly defines, after this time not to be unlawful for Chriſtians to eat of, unleſs in one peculiar caſe. Secondly, Then it muſt be conſidered, that theſe Precepts of the ſons of Noah, were not all of one kind in reſpect of the matter: ſome of them were branches of the Law of nature, written in mens hearts, before they were given to the ſons either of Adam or Noah; ſome of them were not ſo, but only of God's poſitive Law given firſt to them, and after to the Jews. Thoſe which were of the former ſort, did no doubt remain in force to all mankind, and ſo obliged the Gentiles, which then received the faith, and ſo all other Chriſtians to the worlds end. As for thoſe of the ſecond ſort, they are again to be diſtinguiſhed, ſome of them being given to Adam, in the firſt creation, of which Aſterius ſaith, Hom. de Repudio, p. 590. E. ταῦτα τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ γένει φύσις ἐγένετο, they became the nature of the whole poſterity; others not to Adam, but to the ſons of Noah: ſome again confirmed and continued by Chriſt, others not. That of fornication, or diſcloſing of nakedneſs, as a branch of the matrimonial, and ſo poſitive Law, given at the firſt creation of male and female, and containing under it the prohibition of inceſtuous marriages, or ſuch as were within the degrees limited, Lev. 18. is ſure obligatory to all, ſpecially being under the ſame interdict by Chriſt, as in the Goſpel is expreſly ſet down by him in point of Divorce and Polygamie (wherein he refers them to the original Law, given to the ſons of Adam, but for the hardneſs of hearts diſpenſed with among the Jews) and by the Apoſtle is taken for granted in that other branch of prohibited degrees, 1 Cor. 5. 1. and therefore of this there is as little doubt, but that it ſtill remains in force among Chriſtians. But for thoſe other two, of meats, of abſtaining from things offered to Idols, and blood, or things ſtrangled, as neither of them were of the Law of Nature, which leaves all meats indifferent, and free to all men in all times, but ſtand only by poſitive Law, given to the ſons of Noah, the latter expreſly as a ceremony to ſecure men from murther, by giving them a great awe and reverence to blood, and the former to keep them at the greateſt diſtance from Idolatry; ſo are they not confirmed or continued by Chriſt, who on the other ſide reſtores the natural liberty in this kind, takes away all difference among meats, ſo that after this, nothing that goes into the mouth ſhall pollute the man, no ſort of meat ſhould be deemed common or unclean. In the Old Teſtament, Deut. 14. 21. a mark we have to diſcern, that all mankind was not then under this obligation, for the morticinum, which is of this nature, as having the blood in it, the Jews might give or ſell to an alien, though they might not eat it themſelves; and for the whole New Teſtament there is not in that any the leaſt appearance, or colour, of interdict of any ſort of meats, ſave only in this one Canon, but rather every where liberty proclaimed, and that expreſly in one of thoſe that are here named, after the time of making this Canon, 1 Cor. 10. 27. and more generally in all ſorts of meats, Rom. 14. 3. Col. 11. 16. only with this exception, that it be not to the ſcandal or detriment of weak Chriſtians: who theſe weak Chriſtians were, is ſet down, Rom. 14. 2. the Jewiſh believers, who yet took themſelves to be obliged to obſerve the Moſaical Law, and upon that ſcore λάχανα ἐσθίειν, eat herbs, abſtain from many ſorts of meats, which others freely uſed. And in meer compliance with theſe it was, that theſe words of the Canon were inſerted. This I ſhall beſt ſet down in the words of * St. Auguſtine, * Si hoc tunc Apoſtoli præciperunt, ut ab animalium ſanguine abſtinerent Chriſtiani, nec præfocatis carnibus veſcerentur, elegiſſe mihi videntur pro tempore rem facilem, & nequaquam obſervantibus oneroſam, in qua cum Iſraelitis etiam Gentes aliquid communiter obſervarent, When the Apoſtles made the decree that Chriſtians ſhould abſtain from the blood of living Creatures, and not eat fleſh that was ſtrangled, they choſe for the time an eaſy thing, no way burthenous to the obſervers, wherein the Gentiles might obſerve ſomewhat common with the Jews. This then being the only ground of the Decree and Obſervance, viz. compliance with, and unwillingneſs to ſcandalize the Judaiſing Chriſtians, and except in that one caſe of ſcandal, all meats being pronounced free, and indifferent to all Chriſtians, and ſo both things ſtrangled (and blood) and the μερίδες or portions of ſacrifices ſold in the ſhambles, It follows regularly, that as ſoon as this one reaſon of the Decree ceaſed, that is, as ſoon as the Jews and Gentiles were formed into one Communion, as ſoon as the fear of this ſcandal was removed, all force or obligation of this Decree ceaſed alſo. This is alſo diſtinctly St. Auguſtine's ſenſe, *Tranſacto illo tempore, quo illi duo parietes, unus ex circumciſione, alter ex præputio venientes, quamvis in angulari lapide concordarent, tamen ſuis quibuſdam proprietatibus diſtinctius eminebant, & ubi Eccleſia Gentium talis effecta eſt, ut in ea nullus Iſraelita carnalis appareat, quis jam hoc Chriſtianus obſervat, ut turdos vel minutiores aviculas non attingat, niſi quarum ſanguis effuſus eſt; aut leporem non edat, ſi manu à cervice percuſſus nullo cruento vulnere occiſus eſt? the circumciſed and uncircumciſed were differenced one from the other, and when the Church of the Gentiles was ſo framed, that no Iſraelite according to the fleſh appeared in it, what Chriſtian doth now obſerve this, not to touch any little bird whoſe blood hath not been poured out, not to eat of a Hare ſtruck on the neck with the hand, and ſo killed without any effuſion of blood? And this, it ſeems, ſo univerſally the ſenſe of the Church in that Fathers time, that he concludes, Et qui fortè pauci adhuc tangere iſta formidant, à cæteris irridentur, Thoſe few which perhaps ſtill make ſcruple of touching, that is, eating, thoſe, are laughed at by the reſt. Adding, Ita omnium animos in hac re tenuit illa ſententia veritatis, Non quod intrat in os veſtrum, &c. That ſentence of Chriſts hath poſſeſſed all mens minds in this matter, Not that which enters into the mouth (that is, nulla cibi natura, no ſort of meat) defiles the man, is unlawful under the Goſpel. Thirdly, for this Canon it ſelf, at that very time when it was given, it cannot fitly be deemed a Precept, there being then no need of ſuch. For it muſt be remembred, that they who were concerned in this queſtion, and to whom the Decree was ſent, did already obſerve theſe ſeven Precepts of the ſons of Noah, and therefore needed not be commanded by the Council to obſerve them. This appears, in that the Apoſtle, when he preached in any city, did it as yet in the Synagogues of the Jews, whither the Gentiles could not come, unleſs they were Proſelytes of the Gates, and ſo had received theſe ſeven precepts; ſee c. 13. 5. 14. 16. 26. 42, 43. and c. 14. 1. And accordingly it is ſet in the words of the decree, v. 29. ἐξ ὧν διατηροῦντες ἑαυτὺς, εὖ πράξετε, from which keeping your ſelves, ye ſhall do well, noting them to keep them (in the preſent tenſe) already, as all ſuch Proſelytes did. Fourthly, as there was no need of making any command to them who did it already, ſo the words are not delivered in form of precept, but only ſo, as to pronounce them free from any further Obligation; doing this, which you do already, ye ſhall do well, that is, no more ſhall be impoſed upon you. Here, I ſuppoſe, it will be objected, that the abſtaining from all theſe here named, and ſo from the πνικτὰ things ſtrangled, which is one of them, is called theſe neceſſary things, and therefore that theſe are looked on as neceſſary for Gentile Chriſtians. To which I anſwer, that the word ἐπαναγκὲς neceſſary, muſt here be interpreted by the Context, not neceſſary to all Chriſtians, but neceſſary to all Proſelytes of the Jews. And this will appear, by conſidering, that there were many more things neceſſary to Chriſtians in the latitude than thoſe which are here named, whereas the Text ſaith, that only theſe neceſſary things are by the Apoſtles and the Synod required; which makes it needful to underſtand this neceſſity in reference only to thoſe Proſelytes of the Jews. And then the mention of that will ſignify more, but that the obſerving thoſe ſeven precepts was neceſſary to the loweſt ſort of Jewiſh Proſelytes, thoſe of the gates: not that it was here required of the Chriſtians, being, as was ſaid, already performed by them, and the deſign of the Canon being only to pronounce their liberty, or that Circumciſion was not required of them, and medling no farther, unleſs by way of counſel (as the ἐπιστεῖλαι, writing to them, v. 20. may import) not of command, thus far, at the preſent, to comply with the Jews, for unity and amity ſake, to do what the loweſt ſort of their Proſelytes did, that ſo they might not abhor them as prophane perſons, and refuſe to live among them. For this muſt be remembred again, who they were that were concern'd in this Canon, viz. the Gentiles at that time converted to Chriſt, who lived among the Jewiſh Chriſtians at Jeruſalem, and the Churches of Judæa, and particularly at Antioch, and in that whole province of Syria and Cilicia, (which was immediately under the Metropolis of Antioch, but belonged alſo to Jeruſalem) to whom this decree was ſent, v. 23. (and accordingly having been delivered at Antioch, was afterward communicated to the ſeveral Cities or Churches in that Province, ch. 16. 4.) Not all the Gentile Chriſtians every where, (for to the Corinthians he gave very different directions, viz. that they might freely eat any kind of Meat, even the μερίδες, portions of the Idol-Sacrifices, ſave only in caſe of ſcandal) but thoſe particularly about whom the queſtion was asked, the Gentile Church at Antioch, and the reſt under the prime Metropolis, Jeruſalem, which was far from being all the Gentile Chriſtians in the World; and theſe again, in reſpect of the Phariſaical Judaizing Chriſtians at that time, that came from Judea, who though they had received Chriſt, yet ſtood ſo far for their Moſaical Rites, that they would not permit any Gentile, though Chriſtian, to live among them, unleſs he obſerved thoſe Precepts: which compliance therefore was then neceſſary to the making up of a Church of Jews and Gentiles, which otherwiſe would not have aſſociated: which cauſe being e're long taken away (and the Jewiſh and Gentile Congregations at Antioch joyned under Ignatius) the prohibition of thoſe things here mentioned, which are not in their own nature unlawful (viz. that of things ſtrangled and offered to idols) will now evidently not belong to the Gentile Chriſtians of other places, all force of this Canon having by long diſuſage of the Weſtern Church, and by the nature of Chriſtian Religion (which takes away all differences of meats) and by the coaleſcence of Jewiſh and Gentile Chriſtians, been ſuperſeded even in thoſe very Churches where it had been obſerved. Nay the Canon it ſelf, and the intention of it, being rather the ſtating the queſtion againſt thoſe that required them to be circumciſed, and ſo to do more then the commanding that they ſhould do thus much: mean while it cannot be denied but that the practice of this abſtinence, from blood and things ſtrangled, had a long continuance in a great part of the Church, eſpecially among the Greeks. See Tertullian Apol. c. 9. and Minutius in Octav. Euſeb. l. 5. c. 1. Clemens Alex. Pædag. l. 3. c. 3. Nicephorus, l. 4. c. 17. in the ſtory of Biblys. Leo Novel, 58. περὶ τοῦ μηδένα τὸ αἷμα βρῶμα ποιεῖσθαι, that no man ſhould make blood food, and expreſly againſt puddings of blood. And Lucian in Peregr. mentions it, Ὥφθη τι ἐδίων τῶν ἀποῤῥήτων αὐτοῖς, He was ſeen eating ſomewhat which was abominable among them. It hath crept in alſo among the Apoſtolical Canons; not among the firſt fifty, which have had always a venerable authority in the Church, but thoſe other ſuppoſititious additions of the Greeks, where Can. 63. are together forbidden, κρέα ἐν αἵματι ψυχῆς αὐτῶν, καὶ θηριάλωτα, καὶ θνησιμαῖα, fleſh in the blood of its life, and that which is torn by beaſts, or dyeth of it ſelf. A touch of it there is in the Council of Gangra, Can. 11. in the year of Chriſt, 324. Εἴ τις ἐδιόυλα κρέα (χωρὶς αἵματος καὶ εἰδώλου, οὕτω καὶ πνικτῶν) καλαχείνοι, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω, If any condemn him that eats fleſh (except it be blood, or what hath been ſacrificed to Idols, or ſtrangled) let him be anathema. And in the ſixth Council in Trullo, the 67th Canon is agreeable, Ἡ θεία ἡμῖν γραφὴ ἐντέλλεται, &c. The holy Scripture hath commanded us to abſtain from blood and things ſtrangled and fornication: Thoſe therefore that for delicacy by any art dreſs the blood of any creature for food, and ſo eat it, we vehemently rebuke. If therefore any man ſhall from henceforth dare to eat the blood of a Beaſt after any manner, if he be a Clerk, let him be depoſed, if a Laick, excommunicated. Among the Latines we have the twentieth Canon of the ſecond Council of Orleans, in the year 536. Qui cibis Idolorum cultibus immolatis guſtu illicitæ præſumptionis utunter ab Eccleſiæ cœtibus arceantur; ſimiliter & hi qui beſtiarum morſibus extincto vel quolibet morbo aut caſu ſuffocato veſcuntur, They that eat meat offered to Idols, ſhall be excommunicate, and ſo likewiſe they that eat any thing that is kill'd by beaſts, or ſuffocated by diſeaſe, or caſually, (which particularly belongs to morticina, which are generally accounted unwholſome for food, and comes not quite home to the πνικτὰ things ſtrangled, in the latitude:) and other like inſtances will be met with. But though moſt of the Greeks continue this kind of abſtinence, very ſtrictly and ſcrupulouſly, yet of the Weſtern Church it is ſure, that this abſtinence is, and long hath been diſuſed by them. So ſaith Balſamon, on the * Canon Apoſtol. Σημείωσαι ὃν ὁ κανόνα διὰ τὺς Λατίνυς ἀδιαφόρως τὰ πνικτὰ ἐσθίοντας, This Canon is to be noted for the Latines, who eat things ſtrangled indifferently. And ſo again on the * Canon in Trullo, adding ἀλλὰ καὶ οἱ Ἀδριανουπολίται, &c. I hear alſo they of Hadrianople uſe beaſts blood with ſome meats. And ſo certainly they may, though others uſe not that liberty, it being doubtleſs left free by Chriſt, all meats clean and lawful being taken with thankſgiving, and as rites and ceremonies, ſo ſuch outward obſervances being variable in reſpect of time and place, and the Greek practice of no force to conclude other men. To this great controverſy among the Jewiſh Chriſtians, concerning the neceſſity or non-neceſſity of Circumciſion, 'twill not be amiſs to add a parallel ſtory between two eminent Jews, no Chriſtians, in Joſephus, Ant. l. 20. c. 2. concerning Izates, king of the Adiabeni. This perſon, with his mother Helen, was converted to the Jewiſh Religion, and thinking that he was not a perfect Jew, unleſs he were circumciſed, told Ananias, who had inſtructed him in the Jewiſh Religion, how willing he was to be circumciſed. This Ananias perſwaded him from ſo doing, becauſe it might aliene the minds of his people from him, and threatned that he would leave him, unleſs he gave over that purpoſe; told him that he might piouſly worſhip God, (that is, in the Scripture phraſe, be an εὐλαβὴς and σεβόμενος, a worſhipper, or Proſelyte of the Jews) without being circumciſed, that religion conſiſted more in this then in the circumciſion of the fleſh, that God would pardon the omiſſion of that ſeal, when neceſſity ſo required, and conſequently when ſuch a danger as the defection of his ſubjects was conſequent to it. And by this means he quieted his mind. But after this comes one Eleazar a Galilean out of Judea, one counted very skilful in the Law, and he finding the King reading Moſes's Books, preſently thus aſſaults him, Do you know, Sir, what injury you do to the Law, and ſo to God? 'tis not enough to know God's Commands unleſs you practiſe them: How long will you remain uncircumciſed? If you have never yet read the Law which commands circumciſion, read it now, that you may know what an impiety 'tis to omit it. This preſently perſwaded the King, who went accordingly into a chamber, and cauſed a Chirurgion to circumciſe him.

V. 32. Prophets] The word προφήτης, a prophet, in the Old Teſtament, ſignifies not only him that fore-telleth future Events, but all thoſe who make known the Will of God to thoſe that knew it not. A peculiar importance, it ſeems, it hath in the Church of Chriſt under the New Teſtament, differing from Apoſtles on the one ſide, and Evangeliſts on the other, as may appear 1 Cor. 12. 28. and Eph. 4. 11. The Apoſtles were thoſe peculiar Perſons, who were by Chriſt deſigned to that office, his miſſi, or meſſengers, with commiſſion immediately from him; ſuch were the Twelve, and (extraordinarily called) St. Paul alſo. The Evangeliſts were thoſe which were ſent by the Apoſtles whether they could not go themſelves, and the Dioceſe that belonged to theſe was the whole world, or thoſe ſpecial parts of it which the Apoſtles had allotted to one another. Beſide theſe, the Prophets were thoſe that in particular Churches ruled and taught as Biſhops, διδάσκαλοι or ποιμένες, (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 12. d.) and over and above, had that ſpecial χάρισμα of, expounding Moſes and the Prophets, and demonſtrating out of them the truth of Chriſtian Religion. This was the exhorting and confirming that here is ſpoken of, and which is attributed to them as Prophets (not excluding, but containing the gift of fore-telling things to come alſo, as of Agabus we read, ch. 11. 28.) Agreeably theſe that are here called Prophets, are alſo called ἡγούμενοι ἐν τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς, ver. 22. Governours of Churches, (ſee Note on Heb. 13. b.) and are accordingly to be reſolved perſons intruſted with the power of Biſhops in particular Churches of Judea, and ſo Members of the Council at Jeruſalem. And ſo when 'tis ſaid, that there were at Jeruſalem Apoſtles, and πρεσβύτεροι, Elders, πρεσβύτεροι ſignifies not the Presbyters of Jeruſalem, but Biſhops of Judea, and ἐξ αὐτῶν, of them, are theſe two which are here, Judas and Silas, and that Elder, or Biſhop of the Church of Jeruſalem, mention'd Rev. 7. 14. who is ſaid to interpret the viſion to John there.

1. His Father was a Greek, but his mother an Hebrew, named Eunice, and a Chriſtian, 2 Tim. 1. 5. He therefore a Gentile, as appears both by his name, which is Greek, and by his not being circumciſed the Eighth day.

1 THen came he to Derbe and Lyſtra, and behold a certain diſciple was there named Timotheus [the ſon of a certain woman which was a Jeweſs, and believed; but his father was a Greek;]

9. And

9. And a viſion appeared to Paul in the night. There ſtood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, ſaying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us.

10. And after he had ſeen the viſion, we endeavoured to go into Macedonia, [aſſuredly gathering] that the Lord had called us for to preach the Goſpel unto them.

11. Therefore looſing from Troas, we [came with a ſtreight courſe] to Samothracia, and the next day to Neapolis,

12. And from thence to Philippi, which * is [the chief city of that part of Macedonia, and a colonie:] and we were in that city abiding certain days.

13. And on the Sabbath he went out of the city, [by a river ſide, [a] where † prayer was wont to be made; and we ſate down and ſpake to the women which * reſorted thither.]

14. And a certain woman named Lydia, a ſeller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, [which worſhipped God, heard us: whoſe heart the Lord opened, that ſhe attended unto the things which were ſpoken of Paul.]

15. And when ſhe was baptized, and her houſhold, ſhe beſought us ſaying, [If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord,] come into my houſe, and abide there. And ſhe conſtrained us.

16. And it came to paſs, as he went [to prayer, a certain damoſel poſſeſſed with a [b] ſpirit of divination met us, which brought her maſters much gain by ſoothſaying.

17. The ſame followed Paul and us, and cried ſaying, Theſe men are the ſervants of the moſt high God, which ſhew unto us the way of ſalvation.

18. And this did he many days: but Paul being grieved, turned, and ſaid to [the ſpirit,] I command thee in the name of Jeſus Chriſt to come out of her. And he came out the ſame hour.

19. And when her maſters ſaw that the hope of their gains was gone, they † caught Paul and Silas, and drew them into [the * market-place] unto the rulers,

20. And brought them to the † magiſtrates, ſaying, Theſe men being Jews do exceedingly trouble our city,

22. And the multitude roſe up together againſt them: and the magiſtrates [c] rent off their cloaths, and commanded to * beat them.

23. And when they had laid many ſtripes upon them, they caſt them into priſon, charging the gaoler to keep them ſafely.

24. Who having received ſuch a charge, thruſt them into the inner priſon, and made their feet faſt in the ſtocks.

25. And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed and ſang praiſes unto God: and the priſoners heard them.

26. And ſuddenly there was a great earthquake, ſo that the foundations of the priſon were ſhaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every ones bands were looſed.

27. And the keeper of the priſon awaking out of his ſleep, and ſeeing the priſon doors open, he drew out his ſword, and would have killed himſelf, ſuppoſing that the priſoners had been fled.

28. But Paul cried with a loud voice, ſaying, Do thy ſelf no harm; for we are all here.

29. Then called he for a light, and ſprang in, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas,

30. And brought them out, and ſaid, Sirs, What muſt I do to be ſaved?]

33. And he took them the ſame hour of the night, and [† waſhed their ſtripes,] and was baptized, he and all his ſtraightway.

34. And when he had brought them into his houſe, he ſet meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his houſe.

35. And when it was day, the magiſtrates ſent the ſerjeants, ſaying, Let thoſe men go.

36. And the keeper of the priſon told this ſaying to Paul, The migiſtrates have ſent to let you go: now therefore depart, and go in peace.

Annotations on Chap. XVI.

a. Προσευχὴ

V. 13. Where prayer was] That προσδχὴ ſignifies a place ſet apart, or accuſtomed to the ſervice of God, there is little queſtion: ſo προσδχὰς καδιδρύσασδε, building Oratories, in the 3*d* book of Maccab. and ſo perhaps προσδχῇ τῆς Θεᾶ, ſignifies Luke 6. 12. And from the ordinarineſs of that uſe of the word for praying places, it is that Juvenal hath made uſe of it for a begging place, or a corner, or porch, where beggars meet, —— in qua te quæro proſeucha? Sat. 3. v. 296.

and Cleomedes, l. 1. c. 1. ſpeaking of ſome ſtrange words and forms of ſpeech uſed by Epicurus, ſaith they are ſuch as are fetch'd ἀπὸ μέσης τ προσδχῆς κ τῶν ἐν αὐτᾶις προσαιτόντων, Ιεδαϊκά τινα κ παρακεχαραγμένα, fetch'd from the middle of a proſeucha, from thoſe that uſe to beg there, certain Jewiſh obſolete words or phraſes, κ καταπολὺ τῶν ἑρπετῶν ταπεινότερα, much more humble than thoſe that creep on the ground. As for that of Oratories, which is the Scripture acception of the word, we find mention of them in Joſephus, in his life, p. 645. ἀπήγοντο πάντες εἰς προσδχὴν, they are all brought into an oratory, a great houſe, ſaith he, able to contain a great multitude; and ſo ſoon after again, and again. The cuſtom of building ſuch is ſaid to come from the fact of Iſaac, Gen. 24. 62, 63. where 'tis ſaid, that he went out into the field, to a well to pray, ſaith the Chaldee paraphraſe, and therefore they built theſe proſeuchæ in fields for the moſt part, near fountains or rivers, or brooks ſides, which the Idolaters imitated, Iſa. 57. 6. (and ſuch perhaps it was where they prayed, ch. 21. 5. a little way without the city, and upon a ſhore) or on mountains, as that Luke 6. which the Idolaters imitated alſo. Now that this here was ſuch an one, will appear not only by that which is here ſaid of Paul, that he ſate down, and ſpake to the women, making it a place not to pray, but to preach, but alſo by the expreſs words of Epiphanius, t. 2. l. 3. c. 80. There were, ſaith he, antiently ſome places of prayer without the city, both in Judea and among the Samaritans, and there is a place of prayer in Shechem (which is now called Neapolis) without the city, &c. Which is near this very place which is here ſpoken of, v. 11. Beſides, the Syriack is diſtinct and punctual in rendring it בית צלותא a houſe of prayer. All the difficulty will be, what is the meaning of ἐνομίζετο εἶναι, which is here added. The Syriack reads, becauſe there ſeemed to be an houſe of prayer: and ſo the ancient Greek and Latin MS. reads ἦν ὄχει, which may be interpreted either that there was an oratory there, (as ὀχεῖν and videri are oft but expletives; ſee Note on Mat. 3. e.) or elſe that in their paſſage to Philippi, as they came from Neapolis, there ſeemed to them to be ſuch a place, or they ſaw it by the way. The King's MS. that reads ἐνομίζομεν, we thought, agrees fully with this ſenſe, we thought being all one with it ſeemed to us. But if the ordinary reading be retain'd, then νομίζεδαι, ſaith Budeus, ſignifies in fama aut exiſtimatione eſſe, and then 'twill be beſt rendred, where an houſe of prayer was fam'd, or reputed, to be. There is alſo another notion of the word, for conſecrating, and ſo νομιζόμενοι δᾶλοι τῆς ἱερᾶς, are the conſecrated boughs of the Temple, 2 Mac. 14. 4. but that ſeems not ſo proper for this place.

Ενομίζετο ἦν

b. Πύθωνος πνεῦμα

V. 6. Spirit of divination] Python was a name of the city Delphos, where Oracles were delivered by the Devil, and they that prophefied there were called by that name πύθωνες, Pythons. From thence the word was accommodated to other ſorts of diviners, eſpecially to the ἐγγαςρίμυδοι thoſe out of whoſe bellies (as the oracles out of caves) the devil ſpake. Of theſe ſee Photii Epiſt. ρνά. p. 206. Τὸ ἐμφωλεῦον τῇ ἀνδρωπίνῃ γαςρὶ πονηρὸν, κ ἄξιον τ κοπρεδόχον οἰκεῖν, ἀκάδαρδον πνεῦμα, λίαν ἐμφερῶς προσωνομάκασιν Ἐγγαςρίμυδον, The wicked and unclean ſpirit, that inhabits a man's belly, as a ſerpent his hole in the earth, and being unclean, is fit to dwell in that place which is the receptacle of order, they appoſitely call Engaſtrimuthus. Thus, ſaith he, the Grecians commonly call Ἐνδεομαντιν, the diviner from the guts, others Ἐγγαςριμαντιν, the diviner in the belly. But Sophocles and Plato being aſhamed that their Dæmon ſhould have ſuch a dwelling, one of them ἀντὶ γαςρὸς ἀυτῷ τὰ σέρνα χαρισάμενος, Στερνόμαντιν μετωνόμαζεν, inſtead of the belly allow'd him the breaſt, and called him the diviner out of the breaſt; and the other called every ſuch by the name of Eurycles, a perſon who had been famous for this, and ſo tranſmitted the appellation to all other the like. And of this kind of devil, ſaith he, which loves to dwell in the ordure both of men and women, Λαύπλανον τᾶτο κ τῆς ἐχάτης ἀπωλείας τοῖς προσέχειν ἀυτῷ ἀναπεπεισμένοις αἴτιον, It is a great deceiver of people and author of deſtruction to all that give ear to it. That this is it which is here meant by πύθωνος πνεῦμα, the ſpirit of Python, appears by Heſychius, being read, as that place ought to be, Ἐγγαςρίμυδος —— (not as we now read without any ſenſe, τέτων ἡμεῖς πάντων ἰῶ καλῦμεν but) τᾶτον ἡμεῖς πύθωνα νῦν καλῦμεν, We now call this Python. Theſe the Hebrew calls אובים from אוב the belly; and the reaſon is rendred by Galen, becauſe they ſpeak without opening their mouth, and ſo ſeem to ſpeak out of the belly. Theſe are they that have familiar ſpirits, Lev. 19. 31.

V. 22. Rent off their cloaths] Among the Rites of ſcourging, this of rending the garments aſunder is mentioned for one, in Miſchna, c. 3. Both hands are tied to the pillar on both ſides, then the officer of the ſynagogue, the ὑπηρέτης, the miniſter, that is, lictor, takes hold of his garments, not caring whether he tear, or rip them, 'till his breaſt be quite uncovered. And the Roman faſhion was agreeable.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XVII.

1. Theſſalonica, another metropolis of Macedonia.

1 NOW when they had paſſed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to [Theſſalonica] where was a Synagogue of the Jews.

2. And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three ſabbath days reaſoned with them out of the Scriptures,

3. * Opening

3. * Opening and alledging, that [Chriſt] muſt needs have ſuffered, and riſen again from the dead; and that this Jeſus whom I preach unto you, is Chriſt.

3. The Meſſias promiſed to the Jews.

4. And ſome of them believed and conſorted with Paul and Silas, and of the † devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few.]

4. And ſome of the Jews received the faith, and aſſociated with Paul and Silas, and many alſo of the Grecians, which were Proſelytes, and many women of better quality.

5. But the Jews which believed not, * moved with envy, took unto them certain † leud fellows [of the baſer ſort, and gathered a company, and ſet all the city on an uproar, and aſſaulted the houſe of Jaſon, and ſought to bring them out to the people.]

5. Of thoſe which call the people together on occaſion, (ſee note on Mar. 7. b.) and raiſing the city, they ſet upon Jaſon's houſe, ſearching for Paul and Silas, meaning to bring them out to the People, as enemies of the publick peace.

6. And when they found them not, they drew Jaſon and certain [brethren unto the Rulers of the city,] crying, Theſe that have * a turned the world upſide down, are come hither alſo,

6. Believers, Chriſtians unto the Officers of the city. See note on c. 19. f. a.

7. Whom Jaſon hath received: [and theſe all do contrary to the decrees of Cæſar,] ſaying that there is another king, one Jeſus.

7. And their doctrine is quite contrary to Cæſar's authority over us,

8. And [they troubled the people and the rulers of the City,] when they heard theſe things.

8. The people and magiſtrates were troubled: ſee note on Luke 16. b.

9. And when they had taken ſecurity of Jaſon and of the other, they let them go.

10. And the brethren immediately ſent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berœa; who coming thither went into the ſynagogue of the Jews.

11. Theſe were [more † noble than thoſe in Theſſalonica, * in that they received the word with all readineſs of mind, and ſearched the Scriptures daily, whether thoſe things were ſo.]

11. Of a more ingenuous, mild, (ſee Chryſoſtom) pliable temper, more receptive of the Chriſtian doctrine then thoſe of Theſſalonica, and they readily embraced the Goſpel, and ſpent their time every day in ſearching the Scriptures, and obſerving whether what was thus taught by Paul were agreeable with that which the Scriptures ſay of the Meſſias.

12. Therefore many of them believed: alſo of honourable women, which were Greeks, and of men, not a few.]

12. Many therefore of thoſe Jews received the faith, and ſo likewiſe of the Gentiles many of the better ſort, both women and men.

13. But when the Jews of Theſſalonica] had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berœa, they came thither alſo, and ſtirred up the people.

13. And when thoſe Jews of Theſſalonica, which oppoſed Paul there,

14. And immediately the brethren ſent away Paul, to go as it were to the ſea;] but Silas and Timotheus abode there ſtill.

14. And ſuddenly the Chriſtians, to delude the perſecuters, ſent Paul toward the ſea-ſide as if he meant to take ſhip, whereas he meant to go afoot to Athens.

15. And they that conducted Paul brought him unto Athens: and receiving a commandment unto Silas and Timotheus for to come to him with all ſpeed, they departed.

16. Now while Paul waited for them at Athens, his ſpirit was † ſtirred in him * when he ſaw the city b wholly given to idolatry.

17. Therefore diſputed he in the ſynagogue with the Jews, and † with the devout perſons, and in the market daily with them that met with him.]

17. And thereupon he did not only preach in the ſynagogue of the Jews to the Jews and Proſelytes, but in other places of concourſe he took occaſion to make known the Chriſtian doctrine to all the heathens that he met with there.

18. Then certain Philoſophers of the Epicureans and of the Stoicks] encountred him, and ſome ſaid, What will * this c babler ſay? Other ſome, He ſeemeth to be a ſetter forth of ſtrange Gods: becauſe he preached unto them d Jeſus, and the reſurrection.

18. And ſome of the learned men of Athens of the two contrary ſects, one that denied all providence, the other that denied all freedom of will. c. d.

19. And they took him and brought him [unto e Areopagus, ſaying, May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou ſpeakeſt, is?]

19. To the place of judicature at Athens, and examined him what new religion 'twas that he taught. e.

20. For thou bringeſt certain ſtrange things to our ears: we would know therefore what theſe things mean.]

20. For all that yet we hear, is very new and ſtrange, and we deſire to have a full account of all.

21. (For all the Athenians, and ſtrangers which † were there, ſpent their time in nothing elſe, but either to tell or to hear ſome new thing.)

22. Then [Paul ſtood in the midſt of Mar's hill, and ſaid, Ye men of Athens, ‖ I perceive that in all things ye are too f ſuperſtitious.]

22. Paul being brought before the Judges in Areopagus, ſaid, Ye Athenians have a greater number of Gods which ye worſhip, than any other cities have. f.

23. For as I paſſed by, and beheld your * devotions, I found an altar with this inſcription, g TO THE UNKNOWN GOD: [whom therefore † ye ignorantly worſhip, him declare I unto you.

23, 24. This God therefore whom you acknowledge not to know, and yet profeſs to worſhip, is he that I preach, the inviſible God of heaven and earth, ruler, becauſe creator of all, which cannot be contained in any ſhrine of man's framing. g.

24. God that made the world, and all things therein, ſeeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands:]

25. Neither is worſhipped with mens hands, * as though he needed any thing, † ſeeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things;]

25. Nor can any image made by man be a proper inſtrument to worſhip or propitiate him, he being ſo far from wanting any help of ours, that he gives to all their very life, and all that they have.

26. And hath made of one blood all Nations of men, for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation;]

26. And from one Adam firſt, and then from one Noah hath framed a whole world of men, fixing times and places in great order, and wiſdom of diſpoſal.

27. That they ſhould ſeek the Lord, if haply they might * feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us.]

27. And the end of all that is, that they might look after him that created them, and worſhip him. And though they were left through their ſins, as in the dark, in groſs ignorance, yet was God ſo palpably to be diſcerned that by feeling, or groping, as blind men in that dark, they might, if they would but ſeek, find him, who is indeed very near every one of us, even as the ſoul that animates every one.

* Explaining and ſetting before them, that the Chriſt ought to ſuffer and riſe and that this is Jeſus Chriſt whom I declare unto you. Διανοίγων καὶ παρατιθέμενος ὅτι τὸν Χριστὸν ἔδει παθεῖν καὶ ἀναστῆναι ἐκ νεκρῶν, καὶ ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστὸς Ἰησοῦς ὃν ἐγὼ καταγγέλλω ὑμῖν

h. 28. For our life, motion and ſubſiſtence is wholly through him, according to that which Aratus an heathen Poet ſaid.

28. For h in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain alſo of your own poets have ſaid, For we are alſo his off-ſpring.

29. God therefore being our creator, can in no reaſon be ſuppoſed by us his workmanſhip to be the work of our hands, ſuch as a piece of gold, or ſilver, or ſtone, with a ſignature upon it.

29. For as much then as we are the off-ſpring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead is like to gold or ſilver, or ſtone graven by art and man's device.]

30. And 'tis certainly long enough, that men have gone on in ſuch prodigious conceits as this: Be it therefore now known unto you, that there is place of repentance, if you will make haſte to accept it: For God not looking, or faſtning his eyes upon the continued idolatry of the heathens for many years, (which might provoke him to deſert them for ever) now ſends us to you their progeny, to call you to repentance, enters a new covenant with you, as well as others, a covenant of free pardon upon reformation.

30. And the times of this ignorance God † winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent.]

† taking no notice of, doth now command, ὑπεριδὼν, παντῶν μετανοεῖν.

31. Having now determined the way by which the whole world ſhall be judged, viz. by their receiving or not receiving of Chriſt, whom, by raiſing him from the dead, he hath held out to all men to believe on, and woe to them that ſhall now refuſe him.

31. Becauſe he hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world with righteouſneſs, by that man whom he hath ordained; * whereof he hath given aſſurance unto all men, in that he hath raiſed him from the dead.]

* having offered faith unto all, πίστιν παρασχὼν πᾶσιν.

32. And when he mentioned that of riſing from the dead, ſome of thoſe learned men, the Epicureans eſpecially, which denied all future life, fell a ſcoffing.

32. And when they heard of the reſurrection of the dead, ſome mocked him;] and others ſaid, We will hear thee again of this matter.

33. So Paul departed from among them.

34. And ſome believed, and aſſociated with him, particularly Dionyſius one of the ſenators or Judges in Areopagus, (ſee note e.) and Damaris his wife, and ſome others.

34 Howbeit certain men clave unto him, and believed: amoung the which was Dionyſius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them.]

Annotations on Chap. XVII.

a. Ἀναστατώσαντες

V. 6. Turned the world upſide down.] What Ἀναστατώσαντες ſignifies, will beſt be diſcerned by the uſe of the word, Gal. 5. 12. there we render it troubling, and ſo it appears to ſignifie by comparing it with v. 10. ὁ δὲ ταράσσων, but he that troubleth you ſhall bear his own judgment, as before he ſaid, c. 1. 7. εἰ μὴ τινές εἰσιν οἱ ταράσσοντες, but that there are ſome that trouble you. So Acts 15. 24. the ſame is expreſs'd, τινὲς ἐτάραξαν ὑμᾶς λόγοις, ſome troubled you with words. And thus we may reſolve by the uſe of other Authors. Ἀναστατοῦν, ſaith * Euſtathius, is ἀνασάτους ποιεῖν, and that ἀβασιλεύτους ποιεῖν, to put in diſorder, or confuſion, ſuch as in ſtate of Anarchy: and * in the ſame place he interprets ἀνασήσειν by ταράξας ἐξεγερεῖ, to ſtir up by troubling, or diſturbing. Contrary to this is κατάστασις, a quiet tranquility, and ſo is uſed by the Stoicks and Epicureans for ἀταραξία, untroubledneſs. Thus Cicero renders καταστάσεις ſometimes conſtantias, ſometimes ſedationes, as the contrary perturbationes. And then ἀναστατοῦν contrary to καταστασις, muſt be to diſturb, diſquiet, ſtir up. And ſo it will moſt properly be here rendred alſo, in the ſame ſenſe that ἀκαταστασία is uſed, Jam. 3. 16. for diſturbance, confuſion, &c.

* In Iliad. 1. p. 60. l. 27. l. 29. * l. 25.

b. Καταείδωλος.

V. 16. Wholly given to idolatry.] Κατείδωλος πόλις is a city full of images, or idols, or altars erected to the Gods, and much given to the worſhip of them. That Athens was ſuch, appears by Pauſanias, the number of the Simulacra, or εἴδωλα there, being more than in all Greece beſides: ſo ſaith Philoſtratus in Apollonius's travail thither, φιλοδύτας τὺς Ἀθηναίους εἶδεν, de vit. Apollon. l. 4. c. 6. he ſaw the Athenians were lovers of devotion, of ſacrificing, &c. And therefore in his diſcourſe with Timaſion, he tells him, σωφρονέστερον περὶ πάντων θεῶν λέγειν ἔυ, καὶ ταῦτα Ἀθηνήσιν, It was the ſobereſt way to ſpeak well of all Gods, eſpecially at Athens, where there were alters of unknown Gods. See Suidas in Τιμασίων. So ſaith Pauſanias, that they did εὐσεβεῖν θεὺς ἄλλων πλέον, expreſs more piety to the Gods than any; and preſently add, as an evidence of their piety, that they had altars, αἰδοῦς, φήμης, καὶ ὁρμῆς of Baſhfulneſs, of Fame, and of Deſire, and again, Ἀθηναίοις περισσοτέρου τι ἢ τοῖς ἄλλοις εἰς τὰ θεῖα ὄζει σπουδῆς, they exceed all in their diligence about the Gods. So Strabo, Ἀθηναῖοι ὡσαύτως περὶ τὰ ἄλλα φιλοξενοῦντες διατελοῦσιν, οὕτω καὶ περὶ τὺς θεούς, πολλὰ γὰρ ξενικῶν ἱερῶν παρεδέξαντο, ὥσαύτως καὶ ἐκωμωδήθησαν, Their hoſpitality to ſtrangers extends to the Gods too, being very ready to receive in any ſtrange worſhips. So Himerius, in his Declamation againſt Epicurus, when, ſaith he, I named Athens, τὸ μέγιστον εἶπον ἅπαν εὐσεβείας κεφάλαιον, I named the greateſt ſum of piety. So Theophylact, ſetting down the full inſcription of the Altar, v. 23. Θεοῖς Ἀσίας, καὶ Εὐρώπης, καὶ Λιβύης, Θεῷ ἀγνώστῳ καὶ ξένῳ, ſuppoſes them to have received all the ſtrange Gods of the world, of Aſia, Europe, Africk, and moreover one ſtrange one which they knew not, who or whence he was. Whereas Dionyſius Halic. ſpeaking of the Romans, ſaith, they did rather μισοξενεῖν περὶ θεὺς, than φιλοξενεῖν, were very unkind and unhoſpitable to ſtrange Gods. And Maximus Tyrius, διαλ. λβ'. ὁ Ἀθηναίων δῆμος ἕτερα καινὰ δαιμόνια ἐπισφέρων, The common people of Athens brought in other new Gods. And Joſephus 2. cont. Appion. Ἀθηναίους τε Ἑλλήνων εὐσεβεστάτους πάντες λέγουσιν, All men ſay that the Athenians are the moſt pious of all the Græcians: And Sophocles Oedip. Col. Ὅθ' ἵππιος γῆ θεὺς ὁδίσας Τιμᾶις σεβάζει, ἵνα τῶδ' ἀφράσει, This city goes beyond all in worſhipping and honouring the Gods. This here is the meaning of δεισιδαιμονεστέρους ὑμᾶς θεωρῶ, v. 23. I ſee you more addicted to the worſhip of the Gods than others; as it farther appears by their σεβάσματα, which Paul in paſſage takes notice of, v. 23. (not their worſhips, or their altars, but their Idols, that is, their Deities themſelves, for ſo the word is uſed, Wiſd. 14. 20. ſee 2 Theſſ. 2. Note f.) among which, ſaith he, was an altar to an unknown God.

Σεβάσματα.

c. Σπερμολόγος.

V. 18. Babler.] The notion of the word σπερμολόγος (all one with σπερμονόμος) is clear by the concurrence of the Grammarians in their explication of the Attick word, as it is proverbially uſed among them, and by the Greek Fathers upon this place, both generally agreeing, that the word primarily ſignifies, εἶδος ὀρνέου, a ſort of bird, that was wont to be about the ſtreets, λαβώμενον τὰ σπέρματα, picking up the ſeeds. So Oecumenius and Phavorinus; from whence, ſay they, the Attick writers applied the word proverbially to thoſe that do περὶ ἐμπόρια καὶ ἀγορὰς διατρίβειν, ſpend their time in the ſtreets, at fairs and markets, that is very idly; and from hence, ſay they, it comes to ſignifie τὺς ἐυτελεῖς καὶ ἀδόκιμους λόγου ἀξίους, mean, vile perſons, that are worth nothing. And ſo Euſtathius on Homer, Ὀδυσσ. ε'. and Suidas alſo.

d. Ἰησοῦς καὶ ἀνάστασις.

Ib. Jeſus and the reſurrection.] That Jeſus and ἀνάστασις, the reſurrection, were by them taken to be (both of them) δαιμόνια ξένα, new, or ſtrange, Gods, is not only affirmed by ſome of the Fathers, but very reaſonable to believe, when we remember out of Pauſanias, that αἰδὼς, and φήμη, and ὁρμὴ, Modeſty, and Fame, and Vehement deſire, were Gods, and had Altars erected to them by theſe Athenians. See Note a.

e. Ἀρεόπαγος.

V. 19. Areopagus.] Their Areopagus was their Senate, or ſtanding court of judicature, in Athens, by whoſe laws and orders any new Gods were received among them; and therefore aſſoon as they conceived that Paul was καταγγελεὺς ξενῶν δαιμονίων, a promulger of new ſtrange deities, they bring him to the Areopagus, to have him examined, what Gods they were that he thus thus preach'd. Two judicatures they had in Athens; one every year changed, made up of five hundred choſen men, of whom the republick conſiſted; the other perpetual, which judged of Murthers, and the like capital offences, and this was in Areopago: of which and the cuſtoms thereof; ſee Budæus on the Pandects. This * Juvenal calls curiam Martis, and * Pauſanias tells us, that it was ſo called, becauſe when Mars had killed Neptune's ſon Alirrothios, he was the firſt that was there judged, Αρειος πάγος καλέμενος, ὅτι πρῶτος Αρης ἐνταῦθα ἐκείθη. But this, ſaith * S. Auſtine, Varro would not yield to, but produces another original of it, de obſcurarum notitia literarum, out of the knowledge of dark learning. The word πάγος in the compoſition ſignifies a rock, or riſe of an hill: ſo ſaith Suidas, it is called Αρειος πάγος, ὅτι ἐν τῷ πάγῳ ὅτι, καὶ ἐν ὕψει τὸ δικαστήριον, becauſe the judicature is on a pagus, and on an aſcent or high place; and Stephanus Byzantius out of Apollodorus, Αρειος πάγος ἀκρωτήριον Αθήνησιν, it is an eminent place, or hill, at Athens; and ſo * Iſidore Peluſ. πάγος ὁ ὑψηλὸς τόπος, it is an high place, ἐν ᾧ ὄχθῳ τινὶ ἦν τὸ δικαστήριον ἐκεῖνο, for that judicature was on an aſcent, or upper ground. Then for the other part in the compoſition [Αρειος] it denotes, as they both ſay, the ſort of the cauſes which were there judged, viz. Murthers, &c. So Stephanus, ἐν ᾧ τὰς φονικὰς κρίσεις ἐδίκαζον, διὰ τὰς ἀπὸ σιδήρου γινομένας μαιφονίας, in it they judged cauſes of murther, becauſe ſuch were done by the ſword: and Suidas, Αρειος δὲ ἐπὶ τὰ φονικὰ δικάζει, it is ſo called, becauſe it judgeth cauſes of murther, ὁ δὲ Αρης ὅτι τῶν φόνων, and Mars is uſed for murthers; yet having before ſaid, τὰ ἄλλα πολιτικὰ διώκει σωφρόνως, it adminiſters other affairs of the Commonwealth very wiſely. By this it appears, how fit it is to retain in Latin and other Languages the compound Greek, rather than to divide it, as the Engliſh have done into Mars's hill, as if it had its denomination from that heathen God of war, which is not acknowledged, nor intimated in the word. Now the Judges which ſat in this Court, (and not the inhabitants that dwelt in that part of the city) were called Αρειοπαγῖται. Areopagites, men famed for their gravity, and uprightneſs in judging, not admitting rhetorical Pleas, but ſimple Narrations, chooſing the dark, that they might not be moved to compaſſion by the ſight of the Malefactor, and giving their judgement without a word ſpeaking. And this judicature was by all look'd on with ſuch reverence, that an Areopagite ſignified proverbially an excellent perſon, and when the Romans had conquered Greece, and ſent their Proconſuls of Aſia to rule there, they frequently committed difficult cauſes to the judgment of theſe Areopagites. So did Dolabella in Gellius, l. 12. c. 7. Rem Athenas ad Areopagitas, ut ad judices graviores exercitatioreſque, rejecit, ſaith he, He referred the cauſe to them, as to Judges more grave and exerciſed (and ſo skilled) than ordinary. And becauſe to theſe belonged the affairs of Religion, and accordingly Anaxagoras for teaching that the Sun, which they deemed a God, was a fire-ſtone, and Diagoras as a derider of their Gods, had been condemned to death by them, and ſo Protagoras, and Socrates alſo, and Plutarch ſaith of Euripides, l. 1. c. 7. De plac. Phil. that having ſome doubts of the Gods, he durſt not openly profeſs it, fearing the judicature of the Areopagites; therefore is Paul here brought before them, as an aſſertor and preacher of ſuch a Deity as they had not admitted among them. And one of theſe Judges, Dionyſius, v. 34. therefore called the Areopagite, was converted by his diſcourſe there.

Αρειοπαγῖται.

f. Δεισιδαιμονία.

V. 22. Too ſuperſtitious.] What is the notion of δεισιδαιμονία, ſuperſtition, doth here deſerve to be conſidered. And by what hath been ſaid of κατείδωλος (Note a.) 'twill ſoon appear that in this place δεισιδαιμονέστεροι, more ſuperſtitious than ordinary, ſignifying the worſhip of more Gods than other cities worſhip'd, the poſitive δεισιδαίμων and the ſubſtantive δεισιδαιμονία muſt denote no more than the worſhip of God; and accordingly it follows, v. 23. ὃν οὖν εὐσεβεῖτε, whom ye worſhip, ἀγνοοῦντες, not knowing who it was. Thus ch. 25. 19. Feſtus, or S. Luke in his ſtory, ſaith, that the Jews had certain ζητήματα, queſtions, or accuſations againſt Paul, περὶ τῆς ἰδίας δεισιδαιμονίας, concerning his own religion, or ſuperſtition, or worſhip peculiar to him from them, and (as it follows to explain what he meant by the word) περὶ τινος Ἰησοῦ τεθνηκότος, of one Jeſus that was dead, putting him under the vulgar notion of a δαίμων, or dead Heros, and ſo meaning the worſhip of him by δεισιδαιμονία. Thus in the Greek and Latin Lexicon at the end of Cyril, Δεισιδαιμονία, ſuperſtitio, religio, rendring it indifferently by thoſe two: So in Athenæus, δεισιδαιμονία περιέχεσθαι, is religione teneri, to be held by religion, and ſo rendred by Budæus, as δεισιδαιμονία is rendred Religio by Cicero, and in an ancient Gloſſary, Δεισιδαίμων, θεοσεβὴς, it ſignifies a worſhipper of the Gods. And the word being compounded of δαίμων, and δείδω to fear, it is rendred by Heſychius φοβοθεία, fearing God, or religion, by others φόβος θεῶν καὶ δαιμόνων, the fear of Gods and Dæmons; but this Fear ſometimes in an ill ſenſe, for cowardiſe; and ſo ſaith the Etymologiſt, Δεισιδαίμων, ὑλαβὴς καὶ δειλὸς περὶ θεούς, both pious and cowardly toward the Gods, and Clemens ἡ γοῦν δεισιδαιμονία πάθος, Strom. p. 377. Superſtition is a paſſion, being a fear of the Dæmons; and Theophraſtus, Char. π. δεισιδ. δειλία πρὸς τὸ δαιμόνιόν ἐστι, 'tis a cowardly fear of, or toward the Dæmon: and accordingly Maximus Tyrius having compared a pious man to a friend, a ſuperſtitious to a flatterer, ὁ μὲν εὐσεβὴς φίλος θεῷ, ὁ δὲ δεισιδαίμων κόλαξ θεοῦ, he explains the meaning in the following words, the pious comes to God, ἀνὰ δέος, without fear, the ſuperſtitious, μετὰ πολλοῦ δέους, with much fear, δύσελπις καὶ δεδιὼς τοὺς θεοὺς ὥσπερ τοὺς τυράννους, dreading the Gods as ſo many tyrants. So ſaith Diodorus Siculus, of Bomilcar, l. 2. p. 779. δεισιδαίμονές εἰσιν οἱ μέλλοντες ἐγχειρεῖν τι παρανόμοις καὶ μεγάλαις πράξεσι, they that are about to undertake any unlawful and great actions are generally afraid of the Gods, or dæmons; whence is that of Plutarch in Alex. ὁ μὲν οἴεται ὁ ἄθεος θεοὺς εἶναι, ὁ δὲ δεισιδαίμων οὐ βούλεται, the Atheiſt thinks there are no Gods, the ſuperſtitious wiſhes there were none. And accordingly the Epicureans, and the Cyrenaici that were ſo much againſt ſuperſtition, expreſs themſelves to mean by it τὸν περὶ θανάτου φόβον, the fear of any thing after death, of the puniſhments of God after this life. And ſo thoſe that did not believe this, and withal thought it a very painful inconvenient error, for any man to believe it, generally ſpake of δεισιδαιμονία, ſuperſtition, and ſo of Religion too, as of an ill thing. And ſo it goes in Plutarch's tract. π. δεισιδαιμ. as another extreme, contrary to Atheiſm, an aſtoniſhment of ſoul, looking on the Gods as ſo many δείματα, ſpirits, or furies, cruel, bloody-minded, &c. which rather than he would believe, he profeſſes he would wiſh, μηδὲ εἶναι πλούταρχον, that he had never been; and this he looks on with moſt abhorrence in the Jews, δεισιδαιμονίᾳ ὡς σαγήνῃ ἁλισκόμενος, they are, ſaith he, tied and bound with their religion, or ſuperſtition, as with a net, that they could not move for it. This therefore being acknowledged, that among the Heathens the word hath ſometimes upon this ſcore been taken in an ill ſenſe, and Superſtition and Religion indifferently ſpoken againſt, as believing it an error that the Gods would puniſh men for what they did in this life; it remains that they of them that were not thus bent, do generally ſpeak of δεισιδαιμονία, ſuperſtition with a great reverence, generally in a good, not evil, ſenſe, the ſame that they allow to Religion it ſelf. Thus Polybius of the Romans, l. 16. p. 497. giving his opinion of their government that it excell'd others extremely ἐν τῇ περὶ θεῶν διαλήψει, in the apprehenſion they had of the Gods, he expreſſes what it was he ſo commends, λέγω δὴ δεισιδαιμονίαν, I mean, their Superſtition, which διὰ τοσοῦτον ἐκτεταγμένη καὶ παρεισῆκται, was ſo cried up, and taken into all their affairs, ὥστε μὴ δύνασθαι καθολικῶς, that it did not fall ſhort of Superlative; which though 'twere among other men made matter of reproach to them, παρὰ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀνθρώποις ὀνειδιζόμενον, yet he thinks fit extremely to extol it as that which ſeem'd to him μεγίστω διαφορὰν ἔχειν πρὸς τὸ βέλτιον, to be very much for the better, καὶ ζωύχειν τὰ Ῥωμαίων πράγματα, and to keep their affairs in good order. Thus Diod. Siculus, l. 5. p. 305. ſpeaking of the ancient Gauls, There lies, ſaith he, in their temples a great deal of gold conſecrated to their Gods, which yet none of the natives, ἅπτονται, touch, that is, ſteal away, διὰ δεισιδαιμονίαν, becauſe of their ſuperſtition, that is, reverence which they bear to their Gods, καίπερ ὄντων τῶν Κελτῶν φιλαργύρων καὶ ἁρπάζειν, though the men are extremely covetous. So the ſame Author ſpeaking of Imilco l. 14. p. 295. After an act of ſacrilege, ſaith he, he condemned himſelf, and died, πολλὰ τοῖς πολίταις ἀπολιπὼν δεισιδαιμονίαν, leaving to his citizens much ſuperſtition, which the Interpreter rightly renders, Dei reverentiam, reverence of God. So in Heraclitus, περὶ ἀπιστ. ſpeaking of Orpheus, κεφ. κγ'. εἰς δεισιδαιμονίαν ἀγαγὼν, καὶ ὅτι τὸ εὐσεβεῖν παρεκελεύσατο, leading to ſuperſtition, or the worſhip of the Gods, and exhorting them to be pious, making ſuperſtition and piety all one exactly. So in an Edict of the Emperor Tiberius ſet down by Joſephus, l. 19. c. 4. where immunities are by him allow'd the Jews on condition that they miſuſe not the Emperors kindneſs towards them, καὶ μὴ τὰς ἄλλων ἐθνῶν δεισιδαιμονίας ἐξουθενίζειν, and that they do not ſet at nought the ſuperſtitions, that is, Religions (ſome of which he that wrote the Edict, thought to be true, and therefore took that care of them) of other nations. And though being by the Heathens uſed for the worſhip not of the true God, but of their Dæmons, (dead men, and Angels deified by them) it be juſtly deteſted by us Chriſtians, yet ſtill this is not an Argument that that word is uſed in an ill ſenſe, any otherwiſe than Religion it ſelf is alſo, becauſe falſe, heatheniſh Religions are look'd on with the ſame averſation alſo by all that count them ſuch: to which agrees that of the Etymologiſt, ἰσέον ὅτι ΘΕΟΣΕΒΕΙΑ μὲν τοῖς Ἕλλησι ἐπὶ καλῷ λαμβάνεται, παρὰ δ' ἡμῖν τοῖς Χριστιανοῖς ἐπὶ τῆς ἀσεβείας λέγεται, the word among the heathens is taken for a good thing, but among us Chriſtians for impiety. Beſides theſe there is yet one farther acception of the word, for the uſe of magical ſpells, ligatures, characters, &c. execranda ſuperſtitio ligaturarum, quibus inaures, &c. non ad placendum hominibus, ſed ad ſerviendum dæmonibus adhibetur. Aug. Ep. 73. that execrable ſuperſtition of ligatures, among which are the ear-rings, &c. uſed not to pleaſe men, but to ſerve devils. Of theſe indeed there were ſtore among the worſhippers of falſe Gods, a catalogue of which Clemens Alex. Str. 3. p. 312. tells us was to be ſeen in Menander's comedy called Δεισιδαίμων, ſcoffing at thoſe which make every accident almoſt σημεῖόν τινος, a ſign of ſomething, divine by the flight of birds (Δεξιὸς ὄρνις, Αἰετὸς ὑψιπέτης in Homer) the feeding of chickens, by the Ῥαβδομαντεία, ſtriking a ſtaff againſt the ground (to which the Prophet is thought to refer, Hoſ. 4. 12. κλειδομαντεία, and the reſt of the ἐναίσιμα σήματα, auſpicious ſigns, (ἀσπὲτ πέλωρ ὀρνίξι, lightning on the right ſide, Hom. Il. 2.) which they that uſed are by Suidas ſaid δεισιδαιμονεῖν ὅτι τοῖς σημείοις, to be ſuperſtitious obſervers of ſigns. See Aug. de doctr. Chr. l. 2. The like may be ſaid of ominous and auſpicious days, the not obſerving of which Heſiod makes to be impiety, and deſigns his whole book of Ἡμέραι to that purpoſe,

——— Ὄλβιος ὃς τάδε πάντα

Ὀρνίθας κείνων, καὶ ὑπερβασίας ἀλεείνων. These being heatheniſh obſervations conſequent to their Religions, as they are juſtly branded by thoſe that diſlike their Religions, ſo among them that diſliked them not they were taken for branches of piety alſo, and ſo ſtill faſten no ill character upon this word abſolutely conſidered.

V. 23. To the unknown God.] Concerning this Altar at Athens inſcribed to the unknown God, there is a famous ſtory in Laertius in Epimenid. that in time of peſtilence at Athens, Epimenides being accounted by them θεοφιλέστατος, one moſt beloved of God, was conſulted by them, who appointed this luſtration for the city. Taking many ſheep black and white he brought them into Areopagus, and permitted them to go whither they would, appointing ſome to follow each, and where-ever they lay down, there to kill and ſacrifice them προσηκόντι Θεῷ, to a fit God, or to a God to whom ſacrifices were due, and ſo the plague ceaſed, ὅθεν ἔτι καὶ νῦν ὄντα εὑρεῖν κατὰ τὰς ἥμας τῶν Ἀθηναίων βωμοὺς ἀνωνύμους, whence, ſaith he, is it, that among the Athenians in publick places there are Altars that have no names on them. So Heſychius, Θεοὶ ξενικοὶ παρὰ Ἀθηναίοις τιμῶνται, ὡς καταλέγει Ἀπολλοφάνης ἐν Κρητίν, Strange Gods are worſhipped among the Athenians, which Apollophanes reckons up in his Cretians. So in Philoſtratus, l. 6. c. 7. of Apollonius mentioning Athens, ἔνθα καὶ ἀγνώστων δαιμόνων βωμοὶ ἵδρυνται, ſaith he, where are built Altars of unknown dæmons, or Spirits, or Gods. And ſo Lucian in his Philopater, Νὴ τὸν ἄγνωστον ἐν Ἀθήναις, By the unknown God at Athens. And Ἡμεῖς δὲ τὸν ἐν Ἀθήναις ἄγνωστον ἑυρόντες καὶ προσκυνήσαντες, χεῖρας εἰς οὐρανὸν ἐκτείναντες τούτῳ εὐχαριστήσομεν, We having found and worſhipt the unknown God at Athens, will ſtretch out our hands to heaven, and give thanks to him. And ſo ſaith Pauſanias, that there were at Athens Altars of unknown Gods. And the ſame Author mentions among the Lydians or Perſians ſome Sacrifices, that by invocation of an unknown God, and a form which he calls barbarous, becauſe not underſtood by the Græcians (the God of Abraham, &c.) brought fire down, and burnt the wood upon the Altar, Eliac. l. 1. which is a deſcription of the πυρφορία mentioned by Strabo, l. 15. which may well be thought an imitation of that fact of Elias in Ahab's time, who by invoking the name of God brought down fire upon the Altar. Of S. Paul's making uſe of this inſcription at Athens againſt the Heathens, ſee Photii Epiſt. ξβ'. p. 114.

1. AFter theſe things Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth,

2. (Claudius the Emperor of Rome having about this time, toward the latter end of his reign (ſee note on c. 26. a.) made an Edict to baniſh the Jews out of his dominions, eſpecially from Rome, and Italy, and thoſe parts.

3. And Paul being by trade a tent-maker as they were, aſſociated and wrought in his trade with them, 1 Cor. 4. 12. and 9. 6, 12.

3. And becauſe he was of the ſame craft, he abode with them, and wrought; (for by their occupation they were tent-makers.)]

4. And every Sabbath he preached the Goſpel in the Synagogues of the Jews, labouring to convince them all that were preſent, both Jews and Grecians, viz. thoſe that were Greeks by birth, but Proſelytes to the Jews Religion.

Annotations on Chap. XVIII.

a. Συνείχετο τῷ πνεύματι. V. 5. Preſſed in ſpirit.] That which is in the ordinary printed copies συνείχετο τῷ πνεύματι is συνείχετο τῷ λόγῳ in the two great MSS. that of the King's Library, that was ſent from Conſtantinople, and the Gr. and Lat. one at Cambridge, ſent them by Theo. Beza. And which of theſe is the moſt probable reading is not eaſily defined. Συνέχομαι ſignifies to be preſs'd or held faſt Mat. 4. 24. Luke 4. 37. Acts 28. 8. So συνέχεσθαι φόβῳ, to be preſs'd or held with fear, Job 3. 24. and Luke 8. 37. συνέχεσθαι οἴνῳ in Jeremy, to be held faſt by wine, to be overcome by it; συμπλέκεσθαι, ſaith Heſychius, and again, κατεῖσθαι, to be intangled, or held faſt, which as it really notes being in the power of another, ſo it may be applied to ſorrow, or any other paſſion, as well as to fear, and peculiarly to ſorrow. So συνοχὴ, Luke 21. 25. is uſed for anxiety, and 2 Cor. 2. 4. συνοχὴ καρδίας, anguiſh of heart: and ſo πῶς συνέχομαι; how am I ſtreightned, or pained? Luke 12. 50. And thus according to the nature of the word, it may be proper enough for the place, with which ſoever it be joined. If with πνεύματι, then it is either his own ſpirit, or the Spirit of God. If his own, then it may ſignifie him to have had ſome ſuch extraordinary ſorrow or grief upon him, to think of his obdurate impenitent countrymen, to whom he was then preaching with very little ſucceſs. And ſo of Apollos we read, v. 25. ζέων τῷ πνεύματι, that he burned in ſpirit, as when David ſaith, his heart was hot within him, and at laſt he ſpake with his tongue. And ſo if the Spirit of God, then 'tis that he was ſtirr'd up, carried or incited by God by revelation. But 'tis moſt ordinary for the word ἅγιον, holy, to be prefix'd to the word Spirit, when 'tis taken in this ſenſe, as c. 16. 6. and ſo this laſt is not ſo probably the meaning: ſo likewiſe if it be τῷ λόγῳ, in ſpeech, it will then ſignifie no more than that he ſpake very earneſtly, and that is the importance of διαμαρτύρεσθαι following, he teſtified and earneſtly inſiſted on it, and prov'd that Jeſus was indeed the Meſſias, which the Jews denied. That this may be the meaning, appears not improbably by another parallel expreſſion, ver. 28. for there as Apollos was doing the ſame thing that Paul here, earneſtly labouring to convince the Jews, that Chriſt was the Meſſias, ſo the expreſſion peculiarly belongs to λόγος, ſpeech, not πνεῦμα, ſpirit, ἐυτόνως γὰρ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις (or, as I ſuppoſe it ſhould be, τοὺς Ἰουδαίους) διακατελέγχετο δημοσίᾳ, he did publickly with intention, or earneſtneſs of ſpeech, convince the Jews, demonſtrating by the Scriptures that Jeſus is the Chriſt. Where the force and power of his ſpeech, and arguments contained in it, was that which was meant by ἐυτόνως. To what hath been ſaid may be added, that the ancient Greek and Latin MS. after Ἰησουν in the end of the verſe, hath annexed theſe words, πολλῇ γὰρ λόγῳ χρωμένῳ καὶ γραφῶν διερμηνευομένων, and having had much ſpeech and interpreted the ſcriptures; which as it makes it more fully parallel with that of v. 28. ſo it enclines to the reading of λόγῳ, not πνεύματι, ſpeech, not ſpirit.

h. Εὐχὴν εἶχε. V. 18. Had a Vow.] The εὐχὴν εἶχε had a vow here, is not to be referr'd to Paul, but to Aquila; for with his name is conjoined κειράμενος, &c. ſhaving his head, without ſo much as a comma between in ſome printed copies. And it is not improbable, that when it is ſaid v. 19 that Paul went to Epheſus, and left them there, the ἐκεῖ there ſhould not denote Epheſus, to which, but Cenchrea, from which he came, (for why ſhould his leaving them at Epheſus be immediately ſubjoined to his coming thither?) and this on this occaſion, to purifie himſelf, and to be ſhaved, to which ſome ſtay, at leaſt ſeven days, was neceſſary. This vow was without all queſtion the vow of the Nazarites among the Jews, Num. 6. 5. which was not always for life, but ſometimes for a determinate time, wherein they did κὸ μὴν τρέφειν, and not ſuffer the razor to come upon them; but when that time was paſt, then one part of the vow was, to be ſhaved, v. 18. and to offer up the hair (called the hair of his ſeparation) to put it in the fire, which is under the ſacrifice of the peace-offerings; and accordingly here is ſhaving himſelf, for he had a vow. But becauſe this is here done by him at Cenchrea, and not at Jeruſalem (where the accompliſhment of the vow was to be performed, as before at the door of the tabernacle, Num. 6. 13. and as we ſee it performed here, Acts 21. 23.) therefore it is moſt probable that this ſhaving here, was not on the accompliſhing of his vow, but upon ſome intervening legal pollution, in which caſe he was bound to offer for a cleanſing, and on the ſeventh day to ſhave his head, and ſo begin the days again, Num. 6. 11, 12. This probably might be done in any City, where a man happened to be ſo polluted: But that at the completion of the vow, when the days of his ſeparation were fulfilled, was to be at Jeruſalem. The practice of this cuſtom among the heathens, and the offering the hair (when 'twas cut) Ἀπόλλωνι κειροτρόφῳ, to Apollo that nouriſheth hair, may be ſeen at large in Euſtathius on Homer, Ιλιαδ. β'. ἐν καιρῷ ἀκμῆς, ſaith he, ἐκείροντο, καὶ πλόκαμον ἀνετίθουν Ἀπόλλωνι κειροδόκῳ, and accordingly the hair ſo conſecrated is by Æſchylus called θρεπτήριον, hair that had been nouriſhed ſome time. See c. 21. 24. Baſ. Ed. p. 124.

V. 22. Gone up.] That the Church here ſignifies not the Chriſtians of Cæſarea, but the Church of Jeruſalem, appears v. 21. where the reaſon of his departure from Epheſus is, that he may keep the feaſt at Jeruſalem, which cannot be, if he went from Cæſarea to Antioch; for that was his way of return to Epheſus again, which he promiſed to do, v. 21. but not till he had been at Jeruſalem. And it ſeems ſome Syriack copies have read it, gone up to Jeruſalem, and ſaluted the Church; for Tremellius ſuppoſeth that, when he ſaith, ſome copies have not nomen Uriſhelem, the name Jeruſalem. And ſo c. 21. 12. where Paul was again at this Cæſarea, the phraſe is at large, ἀναβαίνειν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, to go up to Jeruſalem: and ſo c. 25. 1. But without the addition of that (which, I ſuppoſe, the Syriack here added, not as a tranſlation, but a paraphraſe) the word ἀναβὰς, going up, following after his landing at Cæſarea, will enforce this ſenſe. And ſo c. 24. 1. the κατέβη deſcending of Ananias, &c. notes the going from Jeruſalem to Cæſarea, without naming of either. See ch. 25. 6, 7. For Cæſarea was the haven, where they landed moſt commodiouſly in going from Epheſus to Jeruſalem, and being landed there, what needed more to be ſaid, but that he went up? for that will imply his going up to that place in paſſage, and in order to which he there landed. Joppe was indeed one haven to Jeruſalem, but that a dangerous one, and thereupon it was that Herod was at ſo huge an expenſe to repair this old haven at Cæſarea, formerly called Στράτωνος πύργος Strato's tower. See Joſephus l. 1. de Bell. Jud. c. 16. Herod, ſaith he, ſeeing one of the haven-towns decayed with age, and capable of his munificence, repaired it with white ſtone, &c. for betwixt Dora and Joppa the whole ſhore was ſo ill provided with havens, that all that ſayl'd from Phœnicia to Ægypt were much endangered; but the King overcame nature by his liberality and expences, and built a ſtately haven at this tower of Strato, and in it many ſafe harbours for ſhips to abide in; and though the nature of the place gave him many difficulties, yet he conquer'd them all, and made it moſt firm and ſumptuous, as it is at large deſcribed by Joſephus in that place. And this, ſaith he, to the honour of Cæſar he call'd Cæſarea, with it retaining the addition of Stratonis, which before belonged to it, and by which it

e. χάριτος. Ib. Grace.] What χάρις here ſignifies may beſt be collected from c. 11. 23. and 13. 43. In many other places it ſignifies the Goſpel of Chriſt (ſee Note on Heb. 13. d.) as when 'tis oppoſed to νόμος, the Law, Joh. 1. 17. The Law was given by Moſes, but grace and truth came by Jeſus Chriſt. So the σωτήριος χάρις, the ſalvifick grace of God, Tit. 2. 11. But in thoſe and many the like places, Grace ſignifies the matter, or ſubject of the Goſpel, not the preaching of it, for that is expreſs'd by the coming or appearing of that grace. But in that place of ch. 11. 23. where 'tis ſaid, that ſeeing the grace of Chriſt he rejoiced, (that is, ſeeing that the Goſpel had been preached with ſo good ſucceſs among them) it ſignifies the preaching or promulgating of the Goſpel, (juſt as εὐαγγέλιον, Goſpel, doth, Rom. 1. 1. and 9. 16.) and ſo c. 13. 43. when they exhort them to continue in the grace of God, that was the work of confirmation, following that of preaching the Goſpel to them. And that notion of it ſeems to be the moſt adæquate, and proper for this place, ſo that πεπιστευκότες διὰ τῆς χάριτος, ſhall ſignifie thoſe that had been formerly converted to the faith by the preaching of the Goſpel by S. Paul; according to that of Paul planteth and Apollos watereth: for that watering, being the inſtructing them farther who already had received the faith, the edifying, or ſuperſtructing on the foundation, is all one with πολὺ συνεβάλετο, he conferred much, or contributed his aſſiſtance (or, as perhaps it ſhould be read, συνελάβετο, aſſiſted) helped to improve them that before believed. As for that of applying διὰ τῆς χάριτος, by grace, to συνεβάλετο, he conferred, that Apollos by grace, that is, his gift, and power in Scripture contributed much to the believers, there is no neceſſity of flying to that refuge, nor probability from the placing of thoſe words (which follow and go not before πεπιστευκόσι) to favour that rendring. In the ſame ſenſe we find ἐν χάριτι Χριστοῦ, in, or to, or through, the grace, that is, the Goſpel, of Chriſt, Gal. 1. 6. to, or by, which Paul is ſaid to have call'd them, and is there ſet oppoſite to ἄλλο εὐαγγέλιον, another Goſpel, a doctrine of ſome falſe teachers crept in among them.

CHAP. XIX.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND it came to paſs that while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having paſſed through the upper coaſts came to Epheſus; and finding certain [diſciples,]

1. Chriſtian profeſſors publiſhing the Goſpel there. See note on c. 8. b.

2. He ſaid unto them, [Have ye received the holy Ghoſt ſince ye believed? And they ſaid unto him, We have not ſo much as heard whether there be any holy Ghoſt.]

2. Hath the holy Ghoſt, ſince your receiving the faith, deſcended on you, and ſet you apart, given you authority or gifts for the work of the miniſtry? (ſee c. 10. 44.) And they ſaid, The doctrine which we received had nothing in it of the holy Ghoſt.

3. And he ſaid unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they ſaid, Unto John's baptiſm.]

3. And he ſaid, How can that be, when the Chriſtian baptiſm is in the name of the holy Ghoſt? To which they replied, that John's baptiſm was all they had received.

4. Then ſaid Paul, John verily baptized with the baptiſm of repentance, ſaying unto the people that they ſhould believe on him which ſhould come after him, that is, on Chriſt Jeſus.]

4. And Paul knowing that they by John his baptiſm had implicitely acknowledged Chriſt under the title of [he that comes after] and had promiſed to repent, and reform their lives, he explicitely taught them the whole doctrine of Chriſt, and of the holy Ghoſt alſo.

5. When they heard this they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jeſus.]

5. And they preſently received and believed it, and were received in as Chriſtian Proſelytes in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the holy Ghoſt.

6. And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the holy Ghoſt came on them; and they ſpake with tongues, and prophecied.]

6. After this Paul by impoſition of hands and benediction gave them confirmation, by which means the holy Ghoſt came on them, and therewith gifts of tongues, and ſome other extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt, the ſame which came as upon the Apoſtles at the deſcent of the holy Ghoſt, ch. 2. ſo on divers others after, ſee c. 10. 44.

7. And all the men were about twelve.

8. And he went into the ſynagogue and ſpake boldly for the ſpace of three months, diſputing and perſwading the things concerning the kingdom of God.]

8. And he went and preacht the Goſpel in the ſynagogues that were at Epheſus to the Jews, for the ſpace of three months, labouring to convince them.

9. But when divers were hardened and believed not, but ſpake evil of that way before the multitude, he departed from them, and ſeparated the diſciples, * diſputing daily in the a ſchool of one Tyrannus.]

* discoursing, διαλεγόμενος

9. But when inſtead of being convinced, he ſaw them (in an obdurate refractory manner) not only reject the Goſpel, but ſpeak of it contumeliouſly in publick before the people, he left them, and took thoſe that were converted by themſelves, and inſtructed them daily in a place which was uſed to entertain ſcholars privately.

10. And this continued by the ſpace of two years, ſo that all they which dwelt in Aſia heard the word of the Lord Jeſus, both Jews and Greeks.]

10. And doing thus for the ſpace of two years, all the inhabitants of the Proconſular Aſia, both Jews and Proſelytes, had in that ſpace the Goſpel preacht to them.

11. And God wrought ſpecial miracles by the hands of Paul.]

11. And many extraordinary miracles were wrought by Paul, through the power of God, among them.

12. So that from his body were brought unto the ſick † handkerchiefs, or b aprons; and the diſeaſes departed from them, and the evil ſpirits went out of them.]

† napkins, σουδάρια.

12. For he did not only cure them which came to him, but by his touching of linnen clothes, and ſending them to ſuch as were ſick, or poſſeſt with devils, they were cured immediately.

13. Then certain of the * vagabond Jews, exorciſts, took upon them to call over them which had evil ſpirits, the name of the Lord Jeſus,] ſaying, We adjure you by Jeſus, whom Paul preacheth.

* Jewish exorcists that came about attempted ἀπὸ περιερχομένων Ἰουδαίων ἐξορκιστῶν τινες.

13. And ſome of the Jews, that went about to cure diſeaſes, and caſt out devils (ſee note on Mat. 12. g.) tried to caſt them out by uſing the name of Jeſus Chriſt.

14. And there were ſeven ſons of one Sceva † a Jew, [and chief of the prieſts,] which did ſo.

† a Jewish chief priest, Ἰουδαίου ἀρχιερέως

14. One of the chief of the families of the Prieſts, (ſee note on ch. 4. a.)

15. And the evil ſpirit anſwered, and ſaid, Jeſus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?]

15. But the devil would not obey them, as not coming with any authority from Chriſt which had given it to Paul,

16. And the man in whom the evil Spirit was leaped on them, and overcame them and previled againſt them, ſo that they fled out of that houſe naked and wounded.]

16. But made the man that was poſſeſs'd fall violently upon them, which accordingly he did, and was too hard for them all, and tore off their clothes, and wounded them, and made them run away.

17. And

17. And this accident being made known to the Jews, and natives of Epheſus, wrought very much upon them, and brought many to the faith of Chriſt.

17. And this was known to all the Jews, and Greeks alſo dwelling at Epheſus; and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jeſus was magnified.]

18. And they that were thus wrought on, came, many of them, to the Apoſtles, and told them the actions or courſes of their former lives, to know how agreeable they were to the faith, that ſo they might forſake or continue in them.

18. And many that believed came, and confeſſed, and ſhewed their deeds.]

c. 19. And many that had ſtudied and practiſed Magick and Sorcery, brought out and publickly burnt their books, though they were of a very high value.

19. Many alſo of them which uſed c * curious arts, brought their books together, and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thouſand d † pieces of ſilver.]

* charms, or forcery, † ſhekels.

20. Of ſo great authority was the word of God, the Goſpel of Chriſt, as it was now preacht by Paul among the Epheſians, and thoſe of Aſia.

20. So mightily grew the word of God, and prevailed.]

21. After this, Paul reſolved or determined with himſelf in his paſſage.

21. After theſe things were ended, Paul purpoſed in the Spirit, when he had paſſed] through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jeruſalem, ſaying, After I have been there, I muſt alſo ſee Rome.

22. And ſending into Macedonia two of his aſſiſtants that went with him, and were ready to do whatſoever he appointed them, viz. Timothy and Eraſtus, (ſee note on Joh. 20. b.)

22. So he ſent into Macedonia two of them which miniſtred unto him, Timotheus and Eraſtus; but] he himſelf ſtayed in Aſia for a ſeaſon.

23. A great ſtir was raiſed among them of Aſia about the doctrine of the Goſpel.

23. And the ſame time [there aroſe no ſmall ſtir about that way.]

e. 24,25. For one Demetrius, a ſilver-ſmith, that dealt in making of little cabinets of ſilver with the image of Diana in them, had a great many of that trade that wrought under him, who were all maintained by that imployment. And many others of ſeveral occupations were employed about theſe pictures. And all theſe, whoſe livelyhoods were concerned in it, he called together, and ſaid unto them,

24. For a certain man, named Demetrius, a ſilver-ſmith, which made e ſilver * ſhrines for Diana, brought no ſmall † gain unto the crafts-men,

25. Whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and ſaid,] Sirs, ye know that by this * craft we have our wealth.

* chapels of Diana. Ἀρτέμιδος ⟨ʒ⟩. † work ἐργασίαν. * work, v. 24.

26. The Images which we make and worſhip, are not indeed true Gods.

26. Moreover ye ſee and hear, that not alone at Epheſus, but almoſt throughout all Aſia, this Paul hath perſwaded and turned away much people, ſaying, That [they be no gods which are made with hands.]

27. Trade, by which we get our living.

27. So that not only this [our † craft] is in danger to be ſet at nought; but alſo that the Temple of the great goddeſs Diana ſhould be deſpiſed, and her magnificence ſhould be deſtroyed, whom all Aſia and the world worſhippeth.

† portion, μέρος.

28. And hereupon they were enraged, and cried down the doctrine of Paul, by crying up Diana, the Goddeſs of the Epheſians, ſo long worſhipt by them.

28. And when they heard theſe ſayings, they were full of wrath, and cried out, ſaying, * Great is Diana of the Epheſians.]

* the great Diana, Μεγάλη ἡ Ἄρτεμις.

29. And in this hurry they ſeiz'd upon two of Paul's companions, and brought them out, probably with an intention (howſoever they were hindred) to throw them to combat with wild beaſts upon the ſtage (ſee note c.) as it was ordinary to do with malefactors.

29. And the whole city was filled with confuſion: [and having caught Gaius and Ariſtarchus, men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel, they ruſhed with one accord into the Theatre.]

30. And Paul was willing to have come among them, with an intention to give them an account of the faith of Chriſt contrary to theſe Idol-worſhips of theirs; but the Chriſtians that were there perſwaded him to the contrary.

30. And when Paul would have entred in unto the people, the diſciples ſuffered him not.]

f. 31. And ſome of the Prætects of the games or ſports there, which being conſecrated to their Gods, were intruſted to the charge of the prieſts, were ſo kind to him, that, knowing the purpoſe of the people to caſt him to the wild beaſts, they ſent to him to keep cloſe, and not to come out among the people, as he meant, v. 30. leſt if they took him, they ſhould cary him (as it ſeems they meant, ſee note on 1 Cor. 15. d.) and caſt him to wild beaſts on the the theatre.

31. And certain of † the f chief of Aſia, which were his friends, ſent unto him, * deſiring him that he would not adventure himſelf into the Theatre.]

† the Aſian Prieſts, being friendly to him. * adviſed him παρεκάλεσαν.

32. A great hubbub and confuſion there was,

32. Some therefore cried one thing, and ſome another: for [the aſſembly was confuſed,] and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.

* And ſome of the multitude brought forth Alexander, the Jews examining him. † was willing to make apology, ἤθελεν ἀπολογεῖσθαι

g. 33. And ſome of the popular officers brought out Alexander, a Jewiſh profeſſor of the faith, and the Jews examined and queſtioned him, believing (probably) that he would excuſe himſelf, and lay the fault upon Paul: And he made a ſign with his hand, that he would gladly make his own apology, and give them an account of the whole matter.

33. * And they drew Alexander out of the multitude, the Jews g putting him forward: and Alexander beckned with the hand, and † would have made his defence unto the people.]

34. But the heathens of Epheſus knowing that he was a Jew, and ſuppoſing that he was for Paul's way, and that derogatory to Diana (though the truth is he meant to clear himſelf, and lay the blame on Paul, for which he is ſaid to have done him much injury, 1 Tim. 1. 19. and 2 Tim. 4. 14.) they would not permit him to be heard, but cried for two hours ſpace, Diana, the great Diana, the Goddeſs of the Epheſians.

34. But when they knew that he was a Jew, all with one voice about the ſpace of two hours cried out, Great is Diana of the Epheſians.]

h. i. 35. And the Regiſter of their games compoſed and quieted the people with this oration, Every body knows that Epheſus among the cities of Greece hath the honour to be called the chief officer in the worſhip of Diana, to whom it belongs to preſerve and adorn her Temple, and the Temple that encloſes that image that fell down out of Heaven from Jupiter, (ſo much talkt of among the heathens.)

35. * And when the h Town-clerk had appeaſed the people, he ſaid, Ye men of Epheſus, what man is there that knoweth not, how that the city of the Epheſians † is a i worſhipper of the great Goddeſs Diana, and of the image which fell down from Jupiter?

* the Regiſter ſtilled the people, and ſaid, † is the ſecriſt.

36. And therefore this being granted by all, what need is there of this ſo much ado?

36. Seeing then that theſe things cannot be ſpoken againſt, ye ought to be quiet, and to do nothing * raſhly.]

* no heady thing, μηδὲν προπετές.

37. For this Paul, &c. hath neither robbed your Temples, nor ſpoken any thing againſt your Goddeſs Diana.

37. For ye have brought hither theſe men, which are neither robbers of Churches, nor yet blaſphemers of your Goddeſs.]

k. l. 38. As for Demetrius and the trades-men that depend on him, if any man hath done them any injury, let them form their indictment or accuſation, 'tis now a fit time for them to have juſtice done them, the court ſits, let them bring in their charge.

38. Wherefore if Demetrius and the crafts-men which are with him have k a matter againſt any man, *l the law is open, and there are deputies, let them implead one another.]

39. But if ye † enquire any thing concerning other matters, it ſhall be determined in a lawful aſſembly.]

40. For we are in danger to be * called in queſtion for this days uproar, there being no cauſe whereby we may give an account of this concourſe.

41. And when he had thus ſpoken, he diſmiſſed the aſſembly.

Annotations Cumaeus.

a. Σχολὴ Τυράννου — V.9. School of one Tyrannus] there were two kinds of schools among the Jews, wherein the Law was taught, private or publick, 1. Private, wherein any doctor entertain'd scholars, and such was this of Tyrannus here, contained under the title, בתי המדרש houses of learning, mention'd by Maimonides, as one kind of their holy places; their schools, & not only their synagogues, being accounted so Then 2. Publick, where Consistories sat to resolve differences of the Law.

b. Σιμικίνθιον — V.12. Aprons] Σιμικίνθιον is lightly chang'd from the Lat. semicinctum, that which is call'd by the Chaldee בטן or cingulum coriaceum, or succinctorium, which work-men put before 'em, that they may not foul their cloaths, an apron, or napkin supplying the aprons place. Σουδάρια The difference which Theoph. & Oecum. make between σουδάρια & these is, that sudaria are apply'd to the head, as a cap, or kerchief; the latter to the hands, as an handerchief. Τὰ σιμικίνθια saith Oecum. ἐν ταῖς χερσὶ καλύχνοι πρὸς τὸ ἀπομάττεσθαι τὰς ὑγρότητας τῆ προσώπου, οἷον ἱδρῶτα, πτυελὸν, δάκρυον, καὶ τὰ ὅμοια, they carry 'em in their hands, to wipe off moistures from the face, sweat, spittle, tears and the like.

c. Περίεργα — V.19. Curious arts] What is the meaning of the περίεργα or curious things, here used among the Ephesians, will be best guest 1. by Hesychius's gloss, & then by a passage in Iren. both misread in the ordinary copies. In Hesych. we have Περιερξία (that should be Περίερξα) καθάρσια; the word denotes their heathen rites of purgations. Of their lustrations or purgations, the heathen books are full; see Porph. περ. απ. Iamblichus, Hierocles, Marinus de vita Procli, Plot. &c. all which are nothing but magick & sorcery, μαγεῖαι and θεριεῖναι, and accordingly the Gr. fathers on this place say they were their μαγικαὶ βίβλοι, books of sorcery that here were burnt. Iren. l. 1. c. de Simon. hath these words, Amatoria quoque & agogima--- & quæcunque sunt alia parerga (it should certainly be perierga) apud eos studiosè exercentur, love-charms, & philtres, and all other such curious, that is, Magical tricks, are in great use a- l.2. ep.18. mong 'em. So in Aristen. τὶς εἶναι τῶν περιέργων ἐδόκει, he seem'd to be a magician, & ὑποκρινάμενος τῶν περιέργων τὸ σχῆμα acting l.10.c.42. the part of witches. So in S. August. Confes. Curiosæ visiones are magical apparitions. These are the φαρμακεῖαι medicaments, from which Sorcerers are generally call'd φαρμακεῖς medicamentarii, as the Lat. use venificæ witches, from venena, poysons; not that they always use medicaments, but many times only charms and words instead of 'em. And accordingly Menand. mentions them proverbially of Ephesus here, Ἐφέσια ἀλεξιφάρμακα, Ephesian charms or spells, which such an one τοῖς γαμοῦσι περιπατεῖ λέγων, walks and speaks to the bridegroom & his bride. These are the Ἐφέσια γράμματα, Ephesian words, or writings, so often spoken by writers, as charms or spells. Of them Hesych. gives an account, Ἐφέσια γράμματα ὧν μέλα πάλαι, ὕστερον ὑπεσέθησάν τινες ἀπατεῶνες καὶ ἄλλα. φασὶ δὲ τῶν πρώτων τὰ ὀνόματα τάδε, ἄσκι, κατάσκι, αἴξ, τέτραξ, δαμναμενεύς, αἴσιον. ὅλοι δὲ ὁ μελὰ ἄσκι, σκότος· τὸ δὲ κατασκι, φῶς· τὸ δὲ αἴξ, αὐτὸς· δαμναμενεὺς δὲ, ἥλιος. αἴσιον δὲ, ἀληθές. These words are much deform'd, but by the help of a passage in Clem. Al. Str. l.1. c.18. may easily thus be mended. Ἐφέσια γράμματα ὧν μέλα πάλαι ς. ὕστερον δὲ ὑπεσέθησάν τινες ἀπατεῶνες καὶ ἄλλα. φασὶ δὲ τῶν πρώτων τὰ ὀνόματα τάδε ἄσκιον, κατάσκιον, λίξ, τετρὰς, δαμναμενεὺς, αἴσιον. ὅλοι δὲ τὸ μελὰ ἄσκιον τὸ σκότος, κατάσκιον φῶς, τὸ δὲ λίξ γῆ, καὶ τέτρας ὁ ἐνιαυτὸς δαμναμενεὺς δὲ ἥλιος, αἴσιοι δὲ ἀληθές. The Ephesian words were anciently 6, but afterwards deceivers added others also: the names of the former were, &c. & the signification of 'em, darkness, light, the earth, the year, the Sun, and truth (see Cant. Var. lect. l.1. c.18.) of which he concludes, ταῦτα ἦν ἱερά ὅτι καὶ ἅγια these are sacred and holy, that is, part of the heathen Idolatry. See Plut. Sympos. c.7. Clem. Al. Str. l.5. Eustath. ad Homer. Od.21. Suidas, & the books of the Gr. Proverbs. And so the περίεργα πράξαντες are the sorcerers or magicians among 'em, who brought the books of their black art, which tho' they were of great value, & would have been sold for much, yet they neither kept, nor sold, but as a testimony of renouncing their former course, they burnt 'em publickly.

d. Ἀργύριον — Ib. Pieces of silver] The Hebrew כסף that is literally rendred ἀργύριον, silver, signifies peculiarly siclum argenteum, a silver shekel, among the Hebrews, see n. on Mat. 26.d.

e. Ναοὶ Ἀρτέμιδος — V.24. Silver shrines for Diana] In the Idolatry of the Heathens, it is sufficiently known, that they were wont to carry the images of their false gods about in pomp, that is, procession, from one city to another. This they did in a Chariot, that was solemnly consecrated for that imployment, & by the Romans styled Thensa, that is, the chariot of their gods. But beside this greater, there was a lesser frame wherein it was placed, a box, or shrine, call'd Ferculum by them. Accordingly at the bestowing of divine honors on their great men alive, or dead, the Romans had their Circean games, & in them, Thensam, and Ferculum, that Chariot, & that shrine bestow'd on 'em. As it is related of J. Cæsar. This Ferculum among the Romans differs not much from the Grecians Ναὸς, a little Chapel, representing the form of a Temple, with an image in it, which being set upon the altar, or other solemn place, & the valve, the leaves or doors open'd, the image stood, or sat in state, & so was represented to the spectators. Accordingly an old anonymous Scholiast on Aristotles Rhet. l.1. c.15. hath these words, Ναοποιοὶ οἱ τὰς ναοὺς ποιοῦσι, ἤτοι εἰκονοστάσιά τινα μικρὰ ξύλινα ἃ πωλοῦσι, noting the ναοὶ here to be εἰκονοστάσια, Chaplets with Images in them of wood, or any other metal (as here of silver, v.24.) which they make, and sell, as here v. 25. they are supposed to do, & so get wealth by that Trade. Thus we have men- * Deipnos. l. 11.

able to this is it, that Ammianus Marcell. saith of Asclepiades, that whithersoever he went he carried about with him, Deæ cœlestis argenteum breve figmentum, a small silver image of Urania. And Dion of the Roman Enfign Ῥωμαϊκ.
(which is known to be an Eagle) that it was νεὼς μικρὸς, l. 40.
καὶ ἐν αὐτῷ ἀετὸς χρυσοῦς, a little temple, & in it a golden eagle; & again, Ἐν τῷ Ἀλβανῷ, there was, saith he, νεὼς Ἥρας βραχὺς, a short, or little chapel of Juno, ὅτι τραπέζης τινὸς ἱδρυμένος set upon a table. This hath been shew'd Ib. l. 39.
(Note on ch.7. f.) to be the meaning of the tabernacle of Moloch, Acts 7. 43. taken from Am. 5. 26. סכות Σκηνὴ Μοsuch tabernacles or chapels to that end. The like also was the סכות בנות the tabernacle of Benoth, or Venus, another of those false deities, whose image was enshrin'd in such a little Chapel, ναὸς or ναΐσκος, to be worshipped. Ἀρτεμὶς

What Ἀρτεμις or Diana is, there is little question, no other than the Moon; & therefore saith Cleom. Meteor. l.2. c.5. p.111. it was the fashion, ὅπλα δόσθαι δᾷδας τοῖς εἰς τὰ Ἀρτεμίσια εἰσιοῦσι, to give torches to those that went into Diana's Temple, adding τοῦτο δὲ μὲν σύμβολόν ὅτι τὸ ἔξωθεν ἔχειν τὸν σελλωίου τὸ φῶς, for this is a signset to express that the moon receives her light from without, that is, from the Sun.

f. Ἀσιάρχαι — V.31. Chief of Asia] Among the heathens there were agones and games instituted ad placanda bona numina, to appease the good deities, saith Labeo, as sacrifices and victims to appease the bad or angry. And therefore in the Anthology, the τέσσαρες ἀγῶνες ἀν' Ἑλλάδα, the four games in Greece, Olympian, Nemean, Isthmian, Pythian, are called τέσσαρες ἱεροὶ all four sacred. And so in Julian, μισοπωγ. there is mention of the ἱπποδρόμια, the running of horses, ἐν ταῖς ἑορταῖς τῶν θεῶν, in the feasts of the Gods; & in the rescript of Honorius & Theod. sacra munera, sacra festa, sacros agones, sacred offices. sacred feasts, and sacred games. The original of them is set down by * Di- * Antiq.
onysius Halicarnasseus, as from the Grecians they were Rom. l.4. imitated by Serv. Tullus, & put into one body. They built Temples, saith he, by common charge, some to Diana of Ephesus, some to Apollo; and assembling there at set times with their wives and children, they imployed themselves e both in sacrifices and in merchandise. There were publick Agones, Race-horses Wrestlers, Musicians, & rewards were proposed to the Victors, and presents were by the cities brought to the gods. And when the games, and marts, and other festival and publick jollities were ended, if any city had a quarrel against another, the Judges were ready to compose it. Then they consulted of common affairs of war against the Barbarians, and peace among themselves:

Thus far Halicarnaſſ. At Rome the Pontifices or chief Prieſts, were preſidents of theſe, and therefore when the Heathen cuſtoms had gotten in among the Jews, we find Jaſon 2. Mac. 4.7. buying the Pontificate, and with it the power of inſtituting and moderating their games; and ſo in the ſeveral provinces the ſeveral chief prieſts, who were called by the names of the Provinces which they adminiſtred; ſo Κυπριάρχης the Governour of Cyprus, 2 Mac. 12.2. ſo Συριάρχαι, ſaith * Cujacius, Sacerdotes iſtius Provinciæ, qui ludos in honorem Deorum celebrari ſolitos curarent, moderarentur, præſiderint, The officers of Syria, that is, the Prieſts of that province, which took care of their games, which were cuſtomarily celebrated to the honour of their Gods, ruled them, preſided in them. So Bithyniarchæ, the officers of Bithynia, Cappadociarchæ of Cappadocia, and here Aſiarchæ of Aſia, that is, the officers of thoſe ſo many Provinces; not Kings, or Proconſuls, or Procurators, the Rulers and Governours of them, but popular officers or miniſters, to whom the care of thoſe things was entruſted, and the office was ſacerdotal. Whence in the Epiſtle of the Church of Smyrna, concerning St. Polycarp's Martyrdom, Philip the Aſiarcha, who preſided there in their ſpectacula, their θηριομαχίαι, which are there called κυνηγέσια, as in the Fathers Venationes, is after ſtyled Φίλιππος Ἀρχιερεὺς Philip the chief prieſt. So Ασιαρχία, Βιθυναρχία, Καππαδοκαρχία, are by * Modeſtinus recited among the ἔθνους ἱερωσύναι, chief prieſthoods of thoſe nations. And ſo Phœniciarchia, and Syriarchia, among the ſpecies of Prieſthood by Conſtantine the Great, in his Reſcript. So in the Baſilica, Η ἱερωσύνη, τυτέστι τὸ ἐπιτελεῖν τὰ κυνηγέσια, the prieſthood, that is, the office of managing their ſports, or ſpectacles. Beſide theſe which were National Officers, to whom belonged ἱερωσύνη κοινὴ τῆς Ἀσίας in Ariſtides, the common prieſthood of Aſia, the managery of their κοινοὶ ἀγῶνες, common games, there were others in particular cities, πολιτάρχαι, C. 17. 6. the city magiſtrates, the ἀθλοθέται, ἀγωνοθέται, ἀλιτάρχαι, all commands or offices of ſome honour among them, as appeared by Jaſons purchaſing them together with the prieſthood, but yet ſubject to the people, as being Executioners and miniſters of their will, and ſent them from Rome, but choſen by themſelves out of the chief men, or wealthieſt citizens among them. To theſe belonged alſo the execution of malefactors, condemn'd to the θηριομαχίαι, or fighting with beaſts on the Theatre, a cuſtomary ceremony or complement of their feſtivities (ſee note on 1 Cor. 15. b.) and ſo ſome of them here being kind to St. Paul, warn'd him not to come out, knowing the purpoſe of the people to have him thus put to death, if they could light on him. And that appears by the Regiſter's ſpeech, v. 37. ἠγάγετε τοὺς ἄνδρας τούτους ἱεροσύλους, &c. theſe men, Paul and his company, are neither robbers of Churches, nor blaſphemers of your Goddeſs, yet you have dealt with them as if they were, bringing or dragging them to the Theatre, for ſo 'tis ſaid, v. 29. that they ran, or hurried into the Theatre, συναρπάσαντες, carrying, or haling along with them thither Gaius and Ariſtarchus, Paul's fellow travellers; and v. 33. ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου, ſome of the multitude, προεβίβασαν Ἀλέξανδρον, brought forth Alexander, who, it ſeems, was a Chriſtian of Epheſus, tho' one that forſook Paul (probably upon the danger at this time) 1 Tim. 1.20. and, having done ſo, did him much injury, 2 Tim. 4.14. and here was about to excuſe himſelf to the people, (to eſcape the hazard approaching) and lay all the blame on Paul. Of this Alexander ſaith Phot. Epiſt. ρνή. That μὴ διαβολῶν δεηθεὶς, ἢ μηδὲ εὑρεῖν ἐλπίσας, αὐτὸς καθ' ἑαυτὸν μέγιστα ἐνεργετησάντων, καὶ γλῶσσαι καὶ χεῖρες ἐγένετο, neither wanting accuſations, nor hoping to find any, became he alone both tongues and hands, in the plural, againſt his greateſt benefactors. Whereas ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου being ſet for τινὲς ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου, ſome out of the multitude, ſignify ſome of the popular officers, ſerjeants or apparitors, ſo προεβίβασαν their bringing him forth, is to be underſtood as an act of their office, to bring forth to examination, (as among the Greek lawyers, the ſerjeants ὑπηρέται, πράκτορες in the Goſpels, are ſtyled ἐκβιβασταὶ, thoſe that ſerve men with writs and bring them before courts.) And therefore it follows that the Jews did προβάλλειν αὐτὸν, queſtion him that was thus brought forth, examin'd him about St. Paul. See note g.

V. 33. Putting him forward] Προβάλλειν hath a peculiar notion among the Grammarians, proper to forinſecal matters; it ſignifies to examin, to queſtion upon interrogatories, to call any man into the court to teſtify his knowledge concerning any thing in queſtion. So ſaith Phavorinus, προβάλλειν and προβάλλεσθαι, ἐρωτᾶν, to queſtion, and προβάλλεσθαι μάρτυρα, to call a man as a witneſs. So Domninus (cited by Jo. Malela, l. 12.) ſpeaking of the Ἀμφιθαλὴς an officer in the agones, αὐτὸν βουλὴ καὶ ὁ δῆμος προβάλλονται, the Senate and people called him to teſtify what was done in the agones. Accordingly muſt the Gloſs of Heſychius be mended, not as the printed copie hath it, Προβάλλει, ἐρωτήσει. Προβάλλειν ἄρνα, τὸ ἀπαγγεῖλαι, but Προβαλεῖ, ἐρωτήσει. Προβάλλειν μάρτυρα, τὸ ἀπαγγεῖλαι, noting this uſe of the word for interrogating a witneſs, calling a man to teſtify, ἐκκαλεῖν, to appeal to for the truth of what is controverted. And ſo the meaning of this whole paſſage is, that Alexander, a Chriſtian of Epheſus, but a Jew by birth, was in this tumult about St. Paul ſeized upon by the ſerjeants, and brought forth, and the Jews that were malicious to St. Paul, thinking that Alexander might be brought to lay ſome blame upon him, queſtion'd and examin'd him, & then he was preſently deſirous to have made his Apology to the people, that is, to avert the danger from himſelf, by laying it upon others. And altho', by reaſon of the cry that follows, v. 34. he is not permitted to do it to the people, yet by what St. Paul after ſaith of him, it appears that he forſook the Chriſtian profeſſion, 1 Tim. 1.20. and renounced, or blaſphemed, that is, forſook Chriſt, and did St. Paul very great injury, 2 Tim. 4.14.

V. 35. Town-clerk] Γραμματεὺς is the name of an office in the ſacri agones, the Regiſter or Actuary, who regiſtred the Victors' names in a book or table, called τοὺς γράμματα τῶν ἱερονίκων, and the office where thoſe records were put was γραμματεῖον, ſaith Petrus Faber Agoniſt. l. 3. c. 23. and 27. Of the ordinary γραμματεῖς, ſaith Phavorinus, ἀδένες ἦσαν κύριοι ἦτοι ἀλλ' ἢ τοῦ γράφειν καὶ ἀναγνῶναι, they had no authority, but only to write, and read what they had written. So ſaith the Scholiaſt on Thucydides, γραμματεὺς ὁ εἰωθὼς ἐν τῷ δήμῳ τὰ τοῦ δήμου γράμματα ἀναγινώσκειν, that uſed to read to the people the regiſters of their buſineſs. But in theſe ſacred games, where every thing was ſacred alſo, (the Alytarcha bearing the perſon of Jupiter, the Amphithales of Mercury) the γραμματεὺς here, ſaith Domninus, cited by Johannes Antiochenus, was honoured and adored as Apollo, wearing a white robe, and a crown of pure gold; and being, ſaith he, choſen by the ſenate and people, he was the better qualified to do what is here affirmed of him, to appeaſe the people. For that this ſhould be applicable to Alexander the Jew, v. 33. and that it was he, of whom it was here ſaid, φησὶν, he ſaid, Ye men of Epheſus, φησὶν &c. is a ſtrange over-ſight of the learned Cardinal * Baronius cauſed by not adverting to the Greek, καταστείλας δὲ ὁ γραμματεὺς τὸν ὄχλον φησίν. Where it is viſibly the γραμματεὺς which has appeaſed the tumult, and which ſaid, Ye men of Epheſus, &c.

Ib. A worſhipper of Diana] That the Epheſians, when they were beſieged by Cræſus, devoted or conſecrated their city to Diana, ἐξάψαντες ἐκ τοῦ νηοῦ χοινίον εἰς τὸ τεῖχος, tying with a rope the Temple and the wall of the city together, is affirm'd by Herodotus, l. 2. From hence it is, that that city had a peculiar relation to Diana ever after. But there being other cities that worſhipped that Goddeſs alſo, this is not, alone, ſufficient to appropriate that title to Epheſus, to be her νεωκόρος, or Sacriſt. That this was the title of a ſacred office, appears by Plato de Legib. Καταστῆσαι ἱερείας καὶ ἱερείας νεωκόρους γίνεσθαι τοῖς θεοῖς, they muſt conſtitute prieſts of both ſexes, to be in this office of Sacriſt to their gods. The word ſignifies ὁ τοῦ ναοῦ ἐπιμελούμενον, ſaith Phavorinus, he that takes care of the Temple; ὁ τὸν ναὸν κοσμῶν, he that adorns it, ſaith Heſychius; and ὁ ἐκσεσαρίζων, he that makes clean, ſaith Suidas; from κορεῖν to ſweep, or καλλωπίζειν to beautify, ſaith the Scholiaſt on Ariſtophanes in Νεφ. p. 61. longed to other cities, and accordingly in ancient Inſcriptions we find Νικομηδέων τρὶς Νεωκόρων, the Nicomedians being the third time in that office; and particularly of Diana, Μαγνήτων Νεωκόρων Ἀρτέμιδος, The Magneſians having that office, in Maximinus's time: and this in reſpect of the ἱεροὶ ἀγῶνες, the holy games, which in honour of the Gods, peculiarly of Diana, were in Greece, ſometimes in one city, ſometimes in another, according to the Gods which were celerated by them. So that now theſe feſtivities being celebrated to Diana, and this year, and at this time kept at Epheſus (which is alſo the reaſon of the concourſe of the people at this time) Epheſus had now the honour to take care of Diana's ſervice, and ſo to be her Νεωκόρος, her Sacriſt, or aditue, or Church-warden, as the Syriack renders the word in this place; and that is the meaning of the νεωκόρος ὤν, being at this time, this year, Diana's Sacriſt.

The word ſignifies alſo judicature ſimply; ſo in Strabo Geog. l. 13. p. 629. διοικήσεις ἐν αἷς τὰς ἀγοραίους ποιοῦνται, καὶ δικαιοδοσίας, the provinces in which they exerciſe their judicatures, and give every man his right. And ſo in Heſychius, Ἀγοραῖαι (perhaps it ſhould be ἀγόραιον) δικαιολογίαι, diſtribution of juſtice; and Ἀγορραία, δίκη, καὶ ἐκκλησιαστική, judgment, and calling of a court. Ἀγόραιοι

CHAP. XX. Paraphraſe.

1 AND after the uproar was ceaſed, Paul called unto him the diſciples, and embraced them, and departed for to go into Macedonia.]

1. And this commotion being thus compoſed at Epheſus, Paul called all the Chriſtians together, and having conſtituted Timothy Biſhop of Epheſus, 1 Tim. 1. 3. he took his leave of them, and departed from Epheſus, and paſt the direct way from thence (by Troas, 2 Corinth. 2. 12, 13.) to Macedonia.

2. And when he had gone over thoſe parts, and had given them much exhortation, he came into Greece,]

2. And there he ſpent ſome time, inſtructing and confirming them in the faith, and in all Chriſtian practiſe, (ſee note on John 14. b.) and after that departing thence, he wintred in Epirus, Tit. 3. 12. and came into Greece.

3. And there abode three months: and when the Jews laid wait for him, as he was about to ſail into Syria, he * purpoſed to return into Macedonia.]

3. And there he ſtaid three months: and being now on his journey to Syria, to carry alms to Judea, he was diverted by an advertiſement that the Jews, which knew of his purpoſe, laid wait for him in the way thither to rob him, and to take away his life; thereupon he changed his determination, and reſolved to go a little out of his way, and again to paſs through Macedonia the third time.

* reſolved, ἐγνώσθη γνώμη

4. † And there accompanied him into Aſia, Sopater of Berœa: and of the Theſſalonians, Ariſtarchus, and Secundus; and Gaius of Derbe, and Timotheus; and of Aſia, Tychicus and Trophimus:

4, 5. And Sopater went along with him as far as Aſia, never parting from him: but Ariſtarchus, and Secundus, and Gaius, and Timotheus, and Tychicus, and Trophimus, theſe ſix went not with him through Macedonia, (Sopater only doing ſo) but went before to Aſia, and expected Paul and his company at Troas, who accordingly came thither.

† And Sopater of Berœa accompanied him as far as Aſia, Συνεπέσθη δὲ αὐτῷ ἄχρι τῆς Ἀσίας Σωπ. Βερ.

5. Theſe going before, tarried for us at Troas.]

6. And we ſailed from Philippi, after the days of unleavened bread, and came unto them to Troas in five days, where we abode ſeven days.]

6. And after the Paſſover we departed from Philippi in Macedonia, and came and met them at Troas, and ſtayed there with them ſeven days.

7. And upon the firſt day of the week, when the diſciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow, and continued his ſpeech until midnight.]

7. And on the Lord's day, or Sunday, the Chriſtians being met together to receive the Sacrament, (Acts 2. 46.) Paul ſpake to them at large, and meaning to be gone the morrow, continued his exhortation to them until midnight.

8. And there were many lights in the upperch amber, where they were gathered together.

9. And there ſat * in a window a certain young man, named Eutychus, being fallen into a deep ſleep: and as Paul was long preaching he ſunk down with ſleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead.

* on the ἐπὶ τῆς

10. And Paul went down and fell on him, and embracing him, ſaid, Trouble not your ſelves, for his Life is in him.

11. When he therefore was come up again, and had broken bread, and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day, ſo he departed.

11. And they ſpent the time together in receiving the Sacrament of the body of Chriſt, and Paul farther inſtructing them till the next morning, then he departed. a.

12. And they brought the young man alive, and were not a little comforted.]

12. And the youth that fell out of the Window, and was dead, v. 9. recovered, and they were joyful at it.

13. And we went before to ſhip, and ſailed unto [a Aſſos] there intending to take in Paul: for ſo he had appointed, minding himſelf to go afoot.

13. Aſſos, a ſea-town of Aſia.

14. And when he had met with us at Aſſos, we took him in, and came to Mitylene.

15. And we ſailed thence, and came the next day over againſt Chios, and the next day we arrived at Samos, and tarried at Trogyllium, and the next day we came to Miletus.

16. For Paul had determined [to ſail by Epheſus] becauſe he would not ſpend the time in Aſia: for he haſted, if it were poſſible for him, to be at Jeruſalem the day of Pentecoſt.

16. Not to go in, or ſtay at Epheſus, but to paſs by.

17. And from Miletus he ſent to Epheſus, and called the Elders of the Church.]

17. But yet deſirous to ſpeak with the Biſhops of Aſia, ſee note on c. 11. 6. he ſent to Epheſus, the chief Metropolis of Aſia, and by that means gave Notice to the Biſhops of Aſia, that they ſhould come to him to Miletus.

18. And when they were come to him, he ſaid unto them, [Ye know from the firſt day that I came into Aſia, after what manner I have been with you at all ſeaſons.

18, 19. Ye know in what manner I behaved my ſelf among you of Aſia, all the ſpace of Three Years that I was among you preaching the Goſpel,

20. And * how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have ſhewed you, and taught you publickly, and from houſe to houſe,]

20. And how without all fear or tergiverſation I freely declared to you all things that I thought uſeful for you to know, willing to uſe all opportunities of inſtructing any both in the publick ſynagogues, ch. 19. 8. and in private ſchools, v. 9. and in your ſeveral houſes, whither I alſo came.

21. Teſtifying both to the Jews, and alſo to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

21. Preaching to the Jews and Proſelytes in their ſynagogues, and to the Gentiles elſewhere the whole doctrine of the Goſpel, aſſuring them that there was pardon to be had from God, upon amendment of their former lives, forſaking of all the impieties which they had been guilty of, through neglect of the Moſaical Law, and the dictates of nature, which before they ſtood obliged to obſerve, and exhorting them that they ſhould live according to the pure doctrine of Chriſt for the future.

b. 22. And now behold, † I go bound in the Spirit unto Jeruſalem, not knowing the things that ſhall befal me there;

23. Save that the holy Ghoſt witneſſeth in every city, ſaying, That bonds and afflictions abide me.

24. But none of theſe things move me, neither count I my life dear unto my ſelf, ſo that I might finiſh my courſe with joy, and the miniſtry which I have received of the Lord Jeſus, to teſtify the Goſpel of the grace of God.]

whereſoever I come, and I am prepared for it; and I know not whether death it ſelf may not attend it: but whatſoever it is, I am ready to ſuffer it for the Goſpel's ſake, (ſee c. 21. v. 13.) and count nothing of it, no nor loſs of life, if I may ſucceſsfully preach the Goſpel, and ſerve Chriſt faithfully in the office which he hath intruſted to me (ſee note on Heb. 13. d.)

25. And now this I know, that after this my departure from you, ye are never likely to ſee me again, yea, I ſay, of Aſia whom I have ſo long converſt with, preaching the Goſpel among you, and therefore I ſhall take this long farewel of you.

25. And now behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, ſhall ſee my face no more.]

32. And now I recommend you to God and the Goſpel, (ſee note on Heb. 13. d.)

32. And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are ſanctified.]

which if adhered to, will be able to inſtruct and perfect you, and bring you to the bliſs of Saints.

Alexander Cornelius ſaith, that Aſſos is in Myſia: For what is there Myſia, is all one with Æolis in other writers; for of Myſia † Pomponius Mela, Ex quo ab Æoliis incoli cœpit, Æolis fabla, From the time that it was inhabited by the Æolians, it was called Æolis; and Pliny, Æolis proxima eſt, quondam Myſia appellata, Æolis ſometimes called Myſia. This Aſſos is by Strabo reckoned as the firſt principal Sea-town of Myſia, going from Lectum to Caicus, over-againſt Lesbus, and Adramyttium, mentioned here, c. 27. 2.

b. Δεδεμένος τῷ πνεύματι

V. 22. Bound in the Spirit] What bound in Spirit, ſignifies may perhaps be judged by the like phraſe poor in Spirit, Matth. 5. 2. That ſignifies him, which though he be not actually poor, yet is prepared to bear poverty contentedly. And ſo Paul reſolving to venture the hazard of impriſonment here, by going up to Jeruſalem, whither if he go, he knows, and the Spirit of God tells him, v. 23. it will befal him, may be ſaid to be bound in Spirit. But it may alſo be interpreted only of his preſaging and fore-ſeeing his bonds, which being revealed by the Spirit of God to others of him, and probably immediately to him alſo, he may be ſaid to be δεδεμένος τῷ πνεύματι, bound in the Spirit in that reſpect. Nay, 'tis poſſible it may ſignify no more than reſolved, and ſo bound in ſpirit, or full purpoſe of mind, as ch. 19. 21. Ἔθετο ἐν τῷ πνεύματι, he purpoſed in ſpirit: but this more unmovable than that. See ch. 21. 12, 13.

c. Ἔθετο ἐπισκόπους

V. 21. Hath made you overſeers] What ἔθετο put, or ſet, or appointed, importeth here, is ſomewhat uncertain. It may ſignify their Ordination to the Epiſcopal office, attributed to the holy Ghoſt, as to the Original, by whoſe deſcent upon the Apoſtles, they were authorized rized to communicate this authority, to give Commiſſions to others, who were to ſucceed them in the dignity and office of governing Churches. But it may alſo ſignify the act of deſignation, election, nomination to this dignity, which at that time was done by the ſpecial revelation of God, and ſo might properly be attributed to the holy Ghoſt. So of Matthias it appears, that he was deſigned by lot, and choſen by God to ſucceed Judas in his office, Acts 1. 24. So c. 13. 2. The holy Ghoſt ſaid, Separate me Saul and Barnabas for the work, &c. So Timothy the Biſhop of Epheſus is ſaid to be advanced to it, διὰ προφητείας, by prophecy, by particular Revelation; of which St. Chryſoſtom ſaith, that as the Prieſts anciently were made by Prophecy, ſo Timothy was τῇ τοῦ Θεοῦ ψήφῳ, by the ſuffrage of God, choſen to his office, ἠρέθη εἰς τὴν ἱερωσύνην. So ſaith Clemens Romanus, Ep. ad Cor. that the Apoſtles conſtituted Biſhops, δοκιμάσαντες τῷ πνεύματι, trying, or approving them by the Spirit; and * Clemens Alexandrinus, of St. John and the Biſhops of Aſia here, that he did conſtitute Biſhops, τῶν ὑπὸ τοῦ πνεύματος σημαινομένων, of thoſe that were ſignified by the Spirit. And ſo this is the moſt probable notation of it in this place.

CHAP. XXI.

Paraphraſe.

1 AND it came to paſs, that after we were * gotten from them, and had launched, we came with a ſtreight courſe] unto Coos, and the day following unto Rhodes, and from thence unto Patara.

* plucked, ſnatched, ἁρπαγέντας

1. After this ſad parting (c. 20. 37.) from the Biſhops of Aſia at Miletus (c. 20. 17.) we took ſhip, and ſailed proſperouſly without any incommodation.

2. And finding a ſhip ſailing over into Phœnicia, we went aboard and ſet forth.

3. Now when we had diſcovered Cyprus, we left it on the left hand, and ſailed into Syria, and landed at Tyre: for there the ſhip † was to unlade her burthen.

† ſee note on ch. 15. c.

4. And finding diſciples, we tarried there ſeven days, who * ſaid to Paul through the Spirit, that he ſhould not go up to Jeruſalem.]

* ſpoke to Paul not to go up, ἔλεγον τῷ Παύλῳ μὴ ἀναβαίνειν

4. And meeting there with ſome that had received the Goſpel, and were indued with gifts, particularly that of prophecy, (ſee ch. 20. 23, 24.) we ſtayed with them a while at Tyre, and they by revelation told Paul, that he would incur much hazard by going up to Jeruſalem, and therefore adviſed him not to go.

5. And when we had accompliſhed thoſe days, we departed and went away, and they all brought us on our way with wives and children, till we were out of the city: and we kneeled down on the ſhore and prayed.]

5. But this moved not Paul (ſee c. 23, 24.) but we left that place, all of them, men, women, and children attending us out of the city, and there on the Sea-ſhore we kneeled down, and prayed at parting.

6. And when we had taken leave one of another, we took ſhip, and they returned home again.

7. And a † when we had finiſhed our courſe from Tyre, we came to Ptolemais and ſaluted the brethren, and abode with them one day.

† having ſailed,

a.

8. And the next day [we that were of Pauls company departed, and came unto Cæſarea, and we entred into the houſe of Philip the Evangeliſt (which was one of the ſeven) and abode with him.]

8. Paul and the reſt of us that accompanied him, (whereof Luke the writer of this book was one) went from Ptolemais to Ceſarea a haven town in Syria (ſee note on c. 18. c.) called Strato's Tower, but rebuilt by Herod, and called Ceſarea (ſee note on Mat. 16. c.) and went into the houſe of Philip, he that, being one of the ſeven Deacons, was by the Apoſtles ſent out to Samaria and other places to preach the Goſpel (ſee note on John 20, 21.) and with him we made ſome ſtay.

9. And the ſame man had four daughters, virgins, which [did prophecy.]

9. Had the gift of foretelling things to come.

10. And as we tarried there many days, there came down from Judea a certain [Prophet] named Agabus.

10. See note on c. 15. e.

11. And when he was come unto us [he took Pauls girdle, and bound his own hands and feet, and ſaid, Thus ſaith the holy Ghoſt, So ſhall the Jews at Jeruſalem, bind the man that oweth this girdle, and ſhall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.]

11. After the manner of Prophets of old, which often prophefied by ſymbols, or ſignificant expreſſions, of what they foretold, he took Paul's girdle, and bound his hands and feet with it, and ſaid, It hath been revealed to me by God, that after this manner that I have bound my ſelf with Paul's girdle, ſo the Jews of Jeruſalem ſhall bind Paul, and deliver him to the Procurator of the Romans to be put to death.

12. And when we heard theſe things, both we and they of that place beſought him, not to go up to Jeruſalem.

13. Then Paul anſwered, [What mean ye to weep, and to break mine heart? for I am ready, not to be bound only, but alſo to dye at Jeruſalem, for the name of the Lord Jeſus.]

13. Why do you by your compaſſionate ſad diſſwaſions trouble & grieve me who have nothing elſe to afflict or diſturb me, but your importunity againſt my taking this journey? For of my ſelf I am moſt heartily willing to ſuffer any thing, bonds or death it ſelf, for the propagating of the Goſpel of Chriſt, or for the profeſſing my conſtancy in it, in deſpight of all perſecutions.

14. And when he would not be perſwaded, we † ceaſed, ſaying, The will of the Lord be done.

† were quiet, ἡσυχάσαμεν

15. And after thoſe days we [took up our carriages, and went up] to Jeruſalem.

15. Laded mules with the goods which we had with us, and took our Journey from Ceſarea.

16. There went up with us alſo certain of the diſciples of Ceſarea, † and brought with them one Mnaſon of Cyprus, [an old diſciple, with whom we ſhould lodge.]

† bringing us to one Mnaſon a Cypriote, ἄγοντες Μνάσωνί τινι Κυπρίῳ

16. One who had formerly received the faith when Paul and Barnabas were at Cyprus, (c. 13. 4.) who would gladly entertain us at our journeies end.

17. And when we were come to Jeruſalem, the brethren received us gladly.

18. And the day following, Paul [went in with us unto James, and all the Elders were preſent.]

18. And we went to James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem (ſee note on 1 Cor. 15. a.) who with all the Biſhops of Judea (ſee note on Phil. 1. b.) were aſſembled together, that they might in council conſider of St. Paul's buſineſs.

19. And when he had ſaluted them, he declared particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his miniſtry.

20. And

20. They bleſſed God for his Wonderful Works wrought upon the heathen Idolaters by his preaching; and after that, began to tell him what at preſent would be prudent for him to do, not ſo much in reſpect of the unbelieving, as the converted Jews, of whom there were many Myriads, great multitudes in Judea, who tho' they had received the Goſpel, yet ſtuck cloſe to the obſervances of the Moſaical Law.

20. And when they heard it, [they glorified the Lord, and ſaid unto him, Thou ſeeſt, brother, how many * thouſands of Jews there are which believe, and they are all zealous of the Law.]

* myriads, or ten thouſands, μυριάδες

21. Theſe, ſaid they, have heard it affirm'd of thee, that not only according to the decrees of our council, thou permitteſt the Gentile-converts to remain uncircumciſed, but alſo that thoſe Jews that are diſperſed in Aſia, and elſewhere, whom thou haſt converted to the faith, thou perſwadeſt them that they may leave off circumciſion, and the other ceremonies of Moſes Law.

21. And they are informed of thee, that thou teacheſt all the Jews, which are among the Gentiles, to forſake Moſes, ſaying, That they ought not to circumciſe their children, neither to walk after the cuſtoms.]

22. This therefore, (ſay they) will be the event, in all probability, all theſe Jewiſh Chriſtians will hear of thy being come hither, and ſo will come in multitudes to ſee how thou behaveſt thy ſelf in this matter.

22. What is it therefore? The multitude muſt needs come together: for they will hear that thou art come.]

23. Therefore take our advice, There be four men here at this time, which have had a Nazarites vow upon them, which being accompliſht (ſee Acts 18. 18.) they are now to perform the ceremonies preſcribed, Num. 6. 13.

23. Do therefore this that we ſay to thee, We have four men, which have a vow on them:]

24. Theſe do thou perform with them, and make proviſion of ſacrifices for them, ſuch as the Law preſcribes, Numb. 6. 14. that ſo they may ſhave their heads according to order, Num. 6. 18. (ſee note on c. 18. b.) and by this means they will be perſwaded that they have had falſe reports of thee, and that thou doſt ſtill obſerve the Moſaical Rites.

24. Them take, and purify thy ſelf with them, and be at charges with them, that they may ſhave their heads; and all may know that † thoſe things whereof they are informed concerning thee are nothing, but that thou thy ſelf alſo * walkeſt orderly and keepeſt the Law.]

† there is nothing of thoſe things, or nothing is true of thoſe things, οὐδὲν ἐστιν--

* walkeſt keeping the Law, στοιχεῖς τὸν νόμον φυλάσσων

25. As for [the Gentiles that have received the Goſpel, c. 15. we have made a decree, thou knoweſt (and ſent it to Antioch by thee and Barnabas) by which they are not required to any ſuch obſervances, or to any more than only to obſerve the precepts of the ſons of Adam and Noah.

25. As touching the Gentiles which believe, we have written and concluded that they obſerve no ſuch thing, ſave only that they keep themſelves from things offered to idols and from blood, and from ſtrangled, and from fornication.]

26. And Paul took their advice, thus far to comply with the Judaizing Chriſtians, that he might not exaſperate them, and went into the Temple, and did all that belonged to the purifying of the Nazarites, and when that was done, gave ſolemn notice of it, upon which they were, according to the Law of Moſes, to proceed to offer an offering for each perſon.

26. Then Paul took the men, and † the next day purifying himſelf with them, entred into the Temple, to ſignify the accompliſhment of the days of purification, until that an offering ſhould be offered for every one of them.]

† ſee Note on Mark 1. b.

27. And when the ſeven days wherein thoſe ſacrifices were to be perform'd, were almoſt at an end, divers unbelieving Jews that dwelt in Aſia, and had oppoſed him there, and were now come to Jeruſalem, as ſoon as they ſaw him in the Temple, brought in the multitude tumultuouſly upon him, and apprehended him.

27. And when the ſeven days were almoſt ended, the Jews which were from Aſia, when they ſaw him in the Temple, ſtirred up all the people, and laid hands on him,]

28. Crying out upon him, as the man that had taught all men, whereſoever he preacht, that the Jews ſhould be deſtroyed, the Moſaical Law be aboliſht, and the Temple, where now he was purifying himſelf, laid waſt, and had brought heathen men into the Temple, which was utterly unlawful to be done, and was the profaning of it.

28. Crying out, Men of Iſrael, help: this is the man that teacheth all men every where againſt the people, and the law, and this place; and farther, brought Greeks alſo into the Temple, and hath polluted this holy place.]

29. (This laſt thing they ſpake confidently, but not truly, only having ſeen Trophimus with him in the city of Jeruſalem, and knowing him to be a Gentile of Epheſus, they believed that he had carried him into the Temple, and from thence made this concluſion.)

29. (For they had ſeen before with him in the city, Trophimus an Epheſian, whom they ſuppoſed that Paul had brought into the Temple.)]

30. And all the people were exaſperated upon this, and having apprehended, haled him out of the Temple, and the doors of the Temple were preſently ſhut after them.

30. And all the city was moved, and the people ran together: and they took Paul and drew him out of the Temple, and forthwith the doors were ſhut.]

31. And they fell a beating Paul, & had like to have killed him, had not the Commander or Colonel, that was appointed to guard the Temple, and to quell all tumults there, (ſee note on Luke 22. g.) been told, that there was an uproar.

31. And as they went about to kill him, tidings came to the chief captain of the band, that all Jeruſalem was in an uproar.]

32. But he taking with him ſome bands of ſoldiers, came haſtily in upon them: and when they ſaw the Colonel and his troops of ſoldiers, they gave over their violence toward Paul.

32. Who immediately took ſoldiers and centurions, and ran down unto them; and when they ſaw the chief Captain and the Soldiers, they left beating of Paul.]

33. Guarded by two ſoldiers, and chained to each of them, (ſee note on ch. 28. c.)

35. And as they were going up the ſtairs to the caſtle or tower, the violence of the multitude of Jews was ſo great, that the ſoldiers were feign to carry Paul in their arms, to ſecure him from them.

Annotations on Chap. XXI.

a. Διανύσαντες δὲ πλοῦν

V. 7. When we had finiſhed our courſe] Of this word διανύσαντες it is generally ſuppoſed, that it is compounded of the old word ἀνύω, and that that is to be rendred perficio, to perfect, or finiſh. But how this notion ſhould be competible to this place, where they are in the midſt of their journey or navigation, it is not eaſy to determine. It were ſomewhat more reaſonable to ſuſpect, that διανύσαντες might by a ſcribe be miſtaken for διαναύσαντες (as we find in Heſychius, Διαναῦσαι, διαπλεῦσαι) and then δὲ πλοῦν διαναύσαντες, will be no more then ſailing, or having ſailed, ἀπὸ Τύρου, from Tyre; and then it fitly follows, whither κατηντήσαμεν, which is again uſed in this ſenſe, c. 18. 13. or, as the King's MS. reads κατέβημεν (perhaps that ſhould be κατήχθημεν, ch. 27. 3. contrary to ἀνεχθέντες, lanching out, v. 4.) we advanced, or went forward, to Ptolemais. But if the ordinary reading be retain'd, then it muſt be obſerved, that as Ἀνύω is generally explicated by πληρόω, and τελειόω, and ἐκπελῶ in Heſychius; ſo each of theſe in theſe writers ſignifies many times no more then ποιεῖν to do, and receives the particular notion from the word that is joined with it. So ἐπιτελεῖν λατρείας, to perform the ſervices, Heb. 9. 6. So τελεῖν δρόμον, is to run a race, and is not ſo properly finiſhing his courſe, as that ſignifies Life, 2 Tim. 4. 7. for there it appears, ver. 17, 18. that his life and his apoſtacy was not at an end, (ſee Note on the title of that Epiſtle.) So in the old verſe of Linus,

Ῥᾴδια πάντα θεῷ τελέσαι, καὶ ἀνυσσάτου ἐδέν,

All things are eaſie for God to do, and nothing is impoſſible, 'tis evident that τελεῖν and ἀνύειν ſignifies to do, and no more. And then διανύσαντες δὲ πλοῦν ἀπὸ Τύρου (for there is no reaſon to ſet a comma before ἀπὸ) will be no more then ποιήσαντες, having ſailed, or made our navigation, or having taken (but not finiſhed) our courſe; for it follows immediately, we advanced to Ptolemais.

Καλῆχθημεν

Τελεῖν δρόμον

b. Αἰγύπτιος

V. 38. Egyptian] Under the time of Felix's Procuratorſhip of Judea there were, ſaith Joſephus, many which deceived the people, particularly one that came out of Egypt to Jeruſalem, ſaying that he was a prophet, and perſwading the people that they ſhould follow him to mount Olivet, and there they ſhould ſee the walls of the city fall at his command, ſo that they might enter the city. Theſe, ſaith he, Ant. l. 20. c. 6. Felix ſet upon, kill'd 400. and took 200. and put the Egyptian to flight. Which ſtory being compared with this in the Acts, gives Africanus occaſion to ſay, that under Felix's government there was an Egyptian falſe prophet with many with him, who μείζοσιν ἐπιχειρῶν πράγμασι τῇ Φήλικος καθελύθη στρατιᾷ, ſetting on great deſigns, was diſcomfited by Felix's army. See Euſeb. Chron. lib. 1. pag. 67. But Euſebius Hiſt. l. 2. c. 21. is more punctual, Μείζονι πληγῇ Ἰουδαίους ἐκάκωσεν ὁ Αἰγύπτιος ψευδοπροφήτης· παραγινόμενος γὰρ εἰς τὴν χώραν ἄνθρωπος γόης, καὶ προφήτου πίστιν ἑαυτὸν ἐπιθεὶς ἐφ' ᾧ, πρὸς τρισμυρίους μὲν ἀνδρολήψεσθαι τῶν ἐπαπειλῶν. The Jews received a greater miſchief by an Egyptian falſe prophet: For he being a magician, and taking upon him to be a prophet, came into the region or country of Judea, and gathered a company of deceivable people to him, to the number of thirty thouſand. Theſe, ſaith he, he brought out of the wilderneſs to the mount of Olives, meaning thence to force his paſſage into the city, and to ſeize upon the Roman guards, and ſo get the command of the people, and then keep it by the ſtrength that took it: But this was prevented by Felix. As for the σικάριοι, or ſhort ſwordmen, that were with this Egyptian, they were a ſort of men, of which Joſephus ſpeaks very much, (who on one ſide, as the ζηλωταὶ, or Zelots on the other, ſhed much blood, and wrought much miſchief in Judea) Ant. l. 20. c. 6. They came, ſaith he, under pretence of Religion up to Jeruſalem, with Sicæ or Daggers under their coats, and being once invited by Felix ſecretly to ſtrike into the train of Jonathan the high-prieſt, and ſo to kill him, for which they were not puniſhed, they after that ſolemnly came up at every feaſt, and either for revenge, or being hired, killed many even in the Temple it ſelf, ſaith Joſephus; and ſo polluted it in that manner, that made it neceſſary for God to ſend the Roman Armies thither to purify it by way of luſtration. And theſe, (ſaith he, c. 7.) within a little while, grew into a very vaſt number, uſing ſwords like the Perſian acinaces, ſuch as the Romans call Sicæ, &c. That which S. Chryſoſtom ſaith of them is ſomewhat ſtrange, Οἱ μὲν Ἐσσηνοὶ ... οἱ αὐτοὶ καὶ Σικάριοι διὰ τὸ εἶναι ζηλωταὶ, The Eſſenes were alſo the Sicarii, becauſe they were Zelots; where he confounds theſe three, Eſſenes, Sicarii, and Zelots, whereas the Sacarii are certainly far diſtant from either of the other two. This the learned Annotator on Chryſoſtom juſtly ſuſpects to be a miſtake in him, p. 693. but the original of it he obſerves not. That is very happily ſhewed by Mr. Fuller in his Miſcellanies, to have been by turning οἱ κάριοι into σικάριοι, the former noting the Karæans or Scripturarians (as they are diſtinguiſhed from, and oppoſed to the Traditionals) thoſe that adhered ſtrictly to the letter of the Law, and ſo were ζηλωταὶ νόμου, zealous for the Law, and ſuch the Eſſenes were, it ſeems, affirmed to be by ſome from whom Chryſoſtom took this. The like error alſo is committed by Suidas in this name, Σικάριοι λέγονται οἱ φαρισαῖοι ὡς ζηλωταί, the Phariſees are called Sicarii as being Zelots: he had ſure read οἱ κάριοι, and took it for σικάριοι, which is the more ſtrange, becauſe he had immediately before rightly interpreted Σικάριοι λῃστῶν γένος — they were a ſort of thieves, which in Claudius's time killed all they met with, ὀπισθαμανῆ ξίφη, hooked ſwords, which the Romans call ſicæ, which, ſaith he, the Egyptian led out into the wilderneſs, and Felix puniſhed. As for the number of men that were ſeduced by this deceiver, writers, it ſeems, do not agree upon them, neither is it neceſſary they ſhould, thoſe kinds of accounts of multitudes being of neceſſity uncertain: only 'tis a little ſtrange, that Euſebius in Chron. out of Africanus ſhould call them τρισχίλιοι, three thouſand, and in his Hiſtory thirty thouſand; but perhaps the miſtake of numeral letters may cauſe that variation. And then the three thouſand there will be more agreeable with the chief officers account here, who makes them but four thouſand.

And ſo did I to the Chriſtians.

Annotations on Chap. XXII.

a. Ἑβραΐδι διαλέκτῳ.

V. 2. Spake in the Hebrew tongue.] What the reaſon was of Paul's ſpeaking Hebrew at this time, and the Jews giving him audience thereupon, may here briefly be noted. Two ſorts of Jews there were at this time, ſome called by * S. Chryſoſtom οἱ βαθεῖς Ἑβραῖοι, profound Hebrews, ſuch as uſed no other language but the Hebrew, admitted not the Greek Bible into their aſſemblies, but only the Hebrew, and the Jeruſalem Targum or Paraphraſe. Others that ſpake Greek, and uſed the Greek Tranſlation of the Bible, and theſe were called Helleniſts (ſee Note on c. 6. a.) Now theſe ſeveral uſes bred ſome unkindneſs betwixt theſe two ſorts, as may in part be diſcerned, even after their receiving Chriſtianity, c. 6. 1. And of this latter ſort Paul ſure was one, and accordingly in his writings makes uſe conſtantly of the Greek Tranſlation of the Old Teſtament, and in that reſpect (among others) was much diſliked by the other ſort. Thoſe of them that were converted had great prejudices to him, c. 21. 21. and that is ſaid to be the reaſon why he concealed his name in the Epiſtle written to the Hebrews. But for thoſe of them that were not converted they would not indure to hear him, or hear of him; which is the account S. Chryſoſtom gives of his diſcourſing and preaching to the Helleniſts only, c. 9. 28. becauſe the other would not indure or admit him. Hereupon to avert this great diſpleaſure conceived by them, he here ſpeaks to them in the Hebrew language, and they were in ſome degree pacified thereby, ſo far as to give him audience.

* To. 4. p. 731. 12.

b. Πόδας Γαμαλιὴλ.

V. 3. Feet of Gamaliel.] It was the manner of diſciples to ſit at the feet of their maſters, which in Pirke Avoth is called to duſt themſelves in the duſt of their feet; for ſo ſaith Joſe there, Let thy houſe be the houſe of aſſembly for wiſe men, that is, be thou ever converſant in the ſchools of the Doctors, וְהֵוֵי מִתְאַבֵּק בְּעַפַר רַגְלֵיהֶם, and do thou roll, or duſt, or tumble thy ſelf in the duſt of their feet.

c. Ἀνετάζεσθαι.

V. 24. Be examined by ſcourging.] The notion of ἀνετάζεσθαι, among the ſacred writers will be diſcerned by two places in the Book of Wiſdom, c. 2. 19. Βασάνῳ ἐτάζωμεν αὐτὸν, let us torment him with the wrack, and c. 6. 6. δυνατοὶ δυνατῶς ἐτασθήσονται, the mighty ſhall be mightily tormented: in both which 'tis clearly uſed for tormenting or cruciating. And S. Chryſoſtom, Hom. 26. in Mat. p. 186. citing the latter of theſe places, applies it to the words of Chriſt, that he that knows his Maſters will and doth it not, δαρήσεται πολλὰς, ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes, ὥστε ἡ πλείων γνῶσις πλείονος κολάσεώς ἐστιν ὑπόθεσις, the greater knowledge is the cauſe of greater puniſhment, thus interpreting ἐτασθήσονται by beating and puniſhment. So Gen. 12. 17. ἔπαισεν ὁ θεὸς τὸν Φαραὼ ἐπάσμοις μεγάλοις καὶ πονηροῖς, God ſcourged or cruciated Pharaoh with great and ſore plagues.

d. Ἱμάντες.

V. 25. Bound him with thongs.] That ἱμάντες are here the ſame that μάστιγες, ſcourges, v. 24. there is no doubt to be made, Ἱμάντες, λῶροι, they ſignifie whips, or ſcourges, ſaith Heſychius; and Ἱμὰς, λῶρος, οἱ δὲ νέρθεν ὑποπίπτουσιν ἱμάντι, they whip him with a ſcourge, or cord, adding καὶ ὅτι τῷ καυσίᾳ, (it ſhould ſure be χοινίᾳ) it is alſo uſed for a rope. And ſo Ἱμᾶσιν ἐμάστιξεν, Ἱμάθλας, μάστιγας, ἀπὸ τοῦ ἱμάσσειν, ὅ ἐστι τύπτειν τῷ ἱμάντι, and Ἱμάσαι, πατάξαι, πλῆξαι, μαστίξαι, it ſhould ſure be μάστιξι. All to the ſame purpoſe that the word ſignifies cords, or ſcourges, to beat with. This of ſcourges was a puniſhment much ſeverer than that of rods. Porcia lex (ſaith Cicero pro Rabirio) virgas ab omnium Romanorum civium corpore amovet, hic miſericors flagella retulit, The Porcian law freeth a Roman citizen's body from rods, and he a merciful man (ſpeaking Ironically) hath brought back ſcourging. And accordingly the μάστιγες or ἱμάντες, ſcourges, here are uſed, as elſewhere the greateſt torments are, to make him confeſs what his crime was, v. 24. See 2 Mac. 7. 37. As for προτείνειν, that ſignifies literally to bend forward, it refers to the cuſtom in ſcourging, which was to faſten them to a block or piece of wood made faſt to the earth, of a cubit and an half high, for the perſon that was to be puniſhed for to lean on, bending his body down to it. And ſo προτείνειν here ſignifies the bending him forward to this block, or little pillar, that the upper part of his body ſhould lean on it, and ſo expoſing him to the Lictor, or Executioner. This is here ſaid of the Centurion in the ſingular number, προτείνει, whoſe office it ſeems it was to do this. Mr. Bois of Ely, a very learned man, hath here a conjecture, that the phraſe ſhould have an hypallage in it, for προτείνειν αὐτῷ τοὺς ἱμάντας, he extended the ſcourges to him, or, ſhewed them him extended, making it the deſcription of a Lictor holding his ſcourge in his hand, and ſhaking, and fitting it for execution, and ſtriking a terror into the priſoner alſo by that means. This conjecture being ingenious it was not unfit to have mentioned. Joſephus Scaliger alſo hath another, Epiſt. 146. that it refers to the manner of ſcourging, expreſs'd in the Comedy, Ego plectar pendens, I ſhall be ſcourged hanging, viz. that they were litted up from the ground, their heads higher than their heels, and tyed with ropes hands and feet, making thoſe ropes to be the ἱμάντες here, and that elevation of the body ἀναβαίνεσθαι.

c. Ῥωμαῖος. Ib. A Roman.] That Paul was free of Rome by being born in a city that had the Roman privileges, is ſufficiently known; ſo ſaith Philo of Agrippa, φίλων ἐνίων πατρίδας ὅλας τὴν Ῥωμαϊκὴν ἠξίωσε πολιτείας, he gave the privileges of the Roman citizenſhip to whole countries of ſome of his friends. So the Philippians call themſelves Romans, Acts 16. 21. Philippians ἐκ παρίδος by country, Romans, ἐκ ψηφισμάτων, by decrees, ſaith Photius, Ep. ρβ'. p. 146. and Ep. σμζ'. And that Tarſus the Metropolis of Cilicia was ſuch, is intimated by Diodorus Siculus, l. 47. where ſpeaking of the Emperors Julius and Auguſtus, he ſaith, ἔτω γὰρ φιλοφρόνως τῷ Καίσαρι τῷ προτέρῳ καὶ δι' ἐκεῖνον καὶ τῷ δευτέρῳ οἱ Ταρσεῖς εἶχον, ὥστε καὶ Ἰουλιόπολιν σφᾶς ἀπ' αὐτοῦ μετονομάσαι, Thoſe of Tarſus were ſo kind to Julius, and after for his ſake to Auguſtus Cæſar, that from his own name he call'd them Juliopolis. That it was unlawful for any ſuch perſon to be bound, or ſcourged, is apparent by Cicero, Or. 5. in Verr. Facinus eſt vincere civem Romanum, ſcelus verberare, prope parricidium necare, quid dicam in crucem tollere? It is a foul fault for any Prætor, &c. to bind a citizen of Rome, a piacular offence to ſcourge him, a kind of parricide to kill him, what ſhall I call the crucifying of ſuch an one? And for that that follows of his being ſcourged before condemnation, (as, being by way of examination, or ἀνετασμὸς, ver. 24. it is here ſuppoſed to be,) 'tis that which Cujacius hath obſerved out of Salvian to be diſtinctly againſt law; and all that is here ſaid in this verſe, is ſet down by S. Paul as diſtinctly according to the Roman form, as if the whole verſe were taken and tranſlated out of their Law. Yet was not this ſo far true, that a Roman citizen might not be puniſhed; but as * Ræwardus obſerves, the cuſtom was, that before he were ſo puniſhed, he ſhould, judicio duumvirûm, be adjudg'd to loſe his privilege, and be uncitizen'd, and pronounced an enemy of the commonwealth, and then he might be ſcourged or put to death, that being the form of diſfranchiſing him, Lictor, colliga manus, or caput obnubito, infelici reſte ſuſpendito, verberato vel intra pomærium vel extra pomærium, Lictor, bind his hands, or cover his face, hang him, ſcourge him either within or without the ſuburbs, as Livy teſtifies, l. 1.

Ἀκατάκριτον μαστίζειν Ἀνεδάζεσθαι.

*adLeg. 12. Tab. c. 29.

V. 28. Freedom.] Moſt of the Jews, ſaith Philo in * leg. ad Caium, were Ῥωμαῖοι ἀπελευθερωθέντες, Romans made free, ἀιχμάλωτοι γὰρ ἀχθέντες εἰς Ἰταλίαν ὑπὸ τῶν κλησαμένων ἠλευθερώθησαν, for being brought captive into Italy, they were ſet at liberty by their maſters that poſſeſs'd them, but pay'd a price for that favour. So 2 Mac. 4. 9. Jaſon promiſeth a great ſum of money to Antiochus, among other things to have power to make ſome of Jeruſalem citizens of Antioch, meaning to make his money ſoon up again by ſelling it to thoſe that deſired that privilege (ſee Note on Phil. 3. l.) So ſaith Photius Epiſt. ρβ'. p. 145. Τιμῆς γὰρ ἀπήλαυον κατ' ἐκεῖνο καιροῦ οὐχ ὅσοι μόνον ἐθαγενεῖς τῆς Ῥώμης ἐτύγχανον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὅσοις αὐτῆς ἡ κλῆσις νόμῳ χαείτων ἢ χρημάτων ἐπολιτεύετο, About that time that privilege was enjoyed not only by thoſe which were natives of Rome, but by as many as either by favour or money were made partakers of that appellation. So alſo Epiſt. σμε'. p. 378. and σμζ'. p. 379. ἔθνος καὶ παρίσθμον ὄντες ἀλλόφυλοι, εἰς τὴν Ῥωμαϊκὴν ἐτέλεσε πολιτογραφίαν, being aliens of another nation and country, they were received into the Roman Album, made citizens of Rome. Such an one it ſeems was the chief Commander here, who had himſelf perſonally bought this freedom or privilege of a citizen of Rome, But Paul was born to this liberty, by being born in a city that had obtained of the Emperors that privilege for all the inhabitants thereof, (ſee note c.) Thus in Euſebius Eccl. Hiſt. l. 5. c. 1. in the examining of Chriſtians by the perſecutors, ὅσοι ἐδόκουν πολιτείαν Ῥωμαίων ἐσχηκέναι, they that proved to be municipes, free denizens of Rome, τούτων ἀπέτεμνε τὰς κεφαλάς, their heads were cut off. A privilege which belongs to ſuch, inſtead of more ignominious puniſhments. So Joſephus the Hiſtorian, born at Jeruſalem, of the ſacerdotal family, ἐξ ἱερέων τε καὶ ἱερέως, of prieſts, and himſelf a prieſt, ſaith Photius, Ep. σμζ'. had the privilege of a Roman, and was called by a Roman Name, Flavius, the prænomen of the Emperor Veſpaſian.

CHAP. XXIII.

1. I have, all my life long, both when I was a propugner of the Moſaical Law againſt Chriſt's reformation, and ſince I have been a preacher of the Goſpel, acted ſincerely and uprightly according to my conſcience, and conſecrated my life to God's ſervice.

Doſt thou ſit like a Magiſtrate or diſtributer of legal juſtice, and doſt thou break the law thy ſelf, and before thou haſt heard the cauſe? (ſee c. 22. 25.)

4. Doſt thou ſpeak ſuch contumelious words to him who is the high prieſt of God's appointment, a ſacred perſon, and under God, the chief Magiſtrate among the Jews?

4. And they that ſtood by ſaid, [Revileſt thou God's high prieſt?]

5. I did not know that to be true which thou telleſt me, that Ananias was an high prieſt of God's appointment, (that he was not ſo, nor yet the high prieſt put in by the Roman Procurator at this time, ſee note on Luke 3. c.) however, knowing him to be a perſon in authority, placed in a judicature (as Paul confeſſeth v. 3.) I acknowledge I did amiſs, and am ſorry I did revile him, for that is unlawful, by that place of Scripture, Exod. 22. 28.

5. Then ſaid Paul, [I wiſt not, brethren, that he was the high prieſt: for it is written, Thou ſhalt not ſpeak evil of the ruler of thy people.]

6. And Paul diſcerning the Sanhedrim to conſiſt partly of Phariſees, who believe another life after this, and the main thing that I am queſtion'd for, is my believing that there is another life after this, which is a pure Phariſaical doctrine, which all of that ſect hold as well as I.

6. But when Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees and the other Phariſees, he cried out in the councel, Men and brethren, I am a Phariſee, the ſon of a Phariſee, of the hope and reſurrection of the dead I am called in queſtion.]

7. And when he had ſo ſaid, there aroſe a diſſenſion between the Phariſees and the Sadducees, and the multitude was divided.

8. No life after this, no immortal ſpirit, nor ſoul of man ſubſiſting without a body.

8. For the Sadducees ſay that there is [no reſurrection, neither Angel, nor Spirit;] but the Phariſees confeſs both.

9. Doctors of the Law, which were generally of the Phariſees opinion, took his part, part, and profeſt to think he had done nothing amiſs, and that 'twas poſſible that he had received ſome infuſion or incitation from God's Spirit, or elſe ſome voice from heaven, or viſion by an Angel, and if he had, 'twould not become them to reſiſt his doctrine, leſt if that were truly revealed to him by God, they ſhould fight againſt God himſelf.

10. * And when there aroſe a great diſſenſion, the chief captain, fearing leſt Paul ſhould have been pulled in pieces of them, commanded † the ſoldiers [to go down,] and to take him by force from among them, and to bring him into the caſtle.

10. To go to him at the bar, where he was as a priſoner, anſwering for himſelf.

11. And the night following [the Lord ſtood by him, and ſaid, be of good cheer, Paul; for as thou haſt teſtified * of me in Jeruſalem, ſo muſt thou bear witneſs alſo at Rome.]

11. Paul ſaw a viſion again, and God appeared to ſtand by him, and encourage him, telling him that he ſhould now receive no farther harm there, but as he had defended and avowed the faith of Chriſt there at Jeruſalem, ſo he ſhould live to do at Rome alſo.

12. And when it was day, certain of the Jews banded together, and bound themſelves under a curſe, ſaying, that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul.

12. And he had ſoon a notable teſtimony of the virtue of God's protection over him, promiſed him in that viſion, for early in the very next morning

13. And there were more than forty which had [made this † conſpiracy.]

13. Thus bound themſelves by oath and execration on themſelves.

14. And they came to the chief prieſts and elders, and ſaid, We have bound our ſelves under a great curſe, that we will eat nothing until we have ſlain Paul.

14. And they came to the Sanhedrim, and told ſome of them what they had reſolved on.

15. Now therefore ye, with the councel, ſignifie unto the chief captain, that he bring him down unto you to morrow, as though you would * enquire ſomething more perfectly concerning him: and we, or ever he came near, are ready to kill him.]

15. And therefore deſired that the whole Sanhedrim would ſignifie their deſire to the Collonel, that he would on the morrow bring Paul down to them, to examine him upon ſome interrogatories; And, ſaid they, by the way, before he come near the Council-houſe, we will lie in ambuſh, and be ſure to kill him.

16. And when Paul's ſiſter's ſon heard of † their laying in wait, he went, and entered into the Caſtle, and told Paul.

17. Then Paul called one of the [Centurions unto him, and ſaid, Bring this young man unto the chief captain: for he hath a certain thing to tell him.]

17. Captains of the guard and deſired him to conduct that young man to the Collonel, to deliver a meſſage to him.

18. So he took him and brought him to the chief captain, and ſaid, Paul the priſoner called me unto him, and prayed me to bring this young man unto thee, who hath ſomething to ſay unto thee.

19. Then the chief captain took him by the hand, and went with him aſide privately, and asked him, What is it that thou haſt to tell me?

20. And he ſaid, The Jews have agreed to deſire thee that thou wouldeſt bring down Paul to morrow into the Councel, as though they would enquire ſomewhat * of him more perfectly.

21. But do not thou yield unto them, for there lie in wait for him of them more than forty men, which have bound themſelves with an oath, that they will neither eat nor drink till they have killed him: and now they are ready, looking for a promiſe from thee.

22. So the chief captain then let the young man depart, and charged him, See thou tell no man that thou haſt ſhewed theſe things to me.

23. And he called unto him two [Centurions, ſaying, Make ready two hundred ‖ ſoldiers to go to Cæſarea, and horſe-men threeſcore and ten, b and ‖ ſpear-men two hundred, at the third hour of the night:]

23. Captains of two bands, and bid them have their bands in readineſs, and take to their aſſiſtance 70 horſe-men, and a guard of two hundred men to watch and ward, to go to Cæſarea Stratonis, an haven town, (ſee Note on c. 18. c.) preſently after nine of the clock that night.

24. And provide [them beaſts that they may ſet Paul on,] and bring him ſafe unto Felix the Governor.

24. A horſe or mule for Paul to ride on.

25. And he wrote a letter after this manner,

26. Claudius Lyſias unto the moſt excellent Governor Felix ſendeth greeting.

27. This man was taken of the Jews, and ſhould have been killed of them: then came I with † an army and reſcued him, having underſtood that he was a Roman.

28. And when I would have known the cauſe wherefore they accuſed him, I brought him forth into their Councel.

29. Whom I perceived to be accuſed of queſtions of their Law, but to have [nothing laid to his charge worthy of death or of bands.]

29. No charge brought againſt him puniſhable either with death or bonds by the Roman law (which had not yet ſet out any decree againſt Chriſtians.)

30. And * when it was told me how that the Jews laid wait for the man, I ſent ſtraightway to thee, and [gave commandment to his accuſers alſo to ſay before thee what they had againſt him.] Farewell.

30. Alſo gave order to his accuſers to appear before thee, and implead him.

31. Then the ſoldiers, as it was commanded them, took Paul, and brought him by night to Antipatris.

32. And on the morrow they left the horſe-men to go with him, and returned to the caſtle.

33. Who when they came to Cæſarea, and delivered the Epiſtle to the Governor, preſented Paul alſo before him.

34. And when [the Governor] had read the letter, he asked of what province he was. And when he underſtood that he was of Cilicia, 34. Felix the Procurator of Judæa under the Roman Emperor.

35. I will hear thee, ſaid he, when thine accuſers are alſo come. And he commanded him to be [kept in Herods judgment-hall.]

a. V. 9. A Spirit or an Angel.] Of the four ſeveral ways of Revelations which were among the Jews, theſe are confeſs'dly two, רוח הקדוש the holy Spirit, and בת קול the daughter of voice, or a voice from heaven, brought by an Angel, by which any thing was made known to them. The other two were אורים ותומים Urim and Thummim, under the firſt Temple, the twelve ſtones in the pectoral of the high Prieſt (which was called hoſchen judicii) the irradiation of which foretold many things to the Jews. This is by Joſephus called λόγιον, the oracle, which, ſaith he, ceaſed to ſhine 200 years before he wrote: Of which ſee Suidas in the word Ephod, and Note on Rom. 3. a. And the laſt was נבואה prophecy, which under the ſecond Temple, after the death of Haggai, Zachary and Malachi, was taken away. This was of two ſorts, either in time of ſleep, by way of dream, or when they were waking, by caſting them into a trance or extaſie, where by way of viſion they ſaw ſome body ſaying this or that to them, or elſe ſeeing no ſhape, only heard a voice. Both which ſorts of prophecy we have mention'd together, Joel 2. 28. dreaming of dreams, and ſeeing of viſions, as that other of the holy Ghoſt in the phraſe pour out my Spirit.

Ὄραμα. Many examples of the viſion or trance we have here in this book, of Ananias, Acts 9. 10. and of Saul, v. 12. of Cornelius ch. 10. 3. and of Peter, ver 10. and Ὅραμα διὰ νυκτός. of the dream alſo, called a viſion by night which was ſeen by Paul, c. 16. 9. and again c. 27. 23. where an Angel appeared to him in a dream, and the Lord, c.

Πνεῦμα ἐλάλησεν. 23. 11. as to Joſeph Mary's husband, Mat. 1. As for that of the holy Ghoſt, which belongs to this place, it is thus defined by the Jews, that a man being awake, and in his full ſenſes, ſpeaks and acts like another man, but the Spirit of God, or Spiritus excelſus, excites him, and ſuggeſts unto him words which he ſhall ſay; as in that of Chriſt to the Apoſtles, Mar. 13. 11. 'tis not you that ſpeak, but the holy Ghoſt, the interpretation of the dabitur in illa hora, it ſhall be given in that hour, which went before. Three of theſe four ways of Revelation the Jews reſolved to be aboliſhed at this time, that of the Urim and Thummim, with the firſt Temple, that of Prophecy, with Malachi, and that of the holy Ghoſt, in the ſecond year of Darius, as it is in Jona c. 7. and therefore ſaith S. John, c. 7. 39. οὔπω γὰρ ἦν πνεῦμα ἅγιον, as yet there was not the holy Ghoſt, only they did, according to the prophecy of Joel, expect that it ſhould return to them again in thoſe days: and ſo here we have mention of it in the πνεῦμα ἐλάλησεν αὐτῷ, the ſpirit hath ſpoken to him; and ſo of the בת קול alſo, in the word Angel (as indeed it was, when he heard a voice from heaven delivered out of thunder, Saul, Saul, &c.) Though 'tis poſſible that this laſt of the Angel may belong to that of the appearance of an Angel in a dream or viſion to him.

CHAP. XXIV.

1. Annas the chief of the Jews (ſee note on Lu. 3. c.) with ſome others of the Sanhedrim, and a lawyer or pleader, named Tertullus, went down all from Jeruſalem to Cæſarea, (ſee note on ch. 18. c.) to Felix, and brought in a bill of information. (ſee Theophylact) accuſation, or charge againſt Paul.

1. AND after five days [Ananias the high prieſt deſcended with the Elders, and with a certain orator named Tertullus, who informed the Governor againſt Paul.]

2, 3. And when Tertullus was admitted to ſpeak, he began his plea againſt Paul with a flattering oration to Felix, telling him how happy the Jews had always in every of their cities counted

2. And when he was called forth, Tertullus began to accuſe him, ſaying, Seeing that by thee we enjoy great quietneſs, and that very worthy deeds are done unto this nation by thy providence, ‖

3. We accept it always and in all places, moſt noble Felix, with all thankfulneſs.] themſelves under his government and managery of affairs, and that they were very thankful to him for it.

‖ always and in all places, 3. We accept it--- πάντοτε καὶ πανταχοῦ

4. Notwithſtanding that I be not farther tedious unto thee, I pray thee that thou wouldſt hear us of thy clemency a few words.

5. This Paul we Jews know to be a dangerous perſon, and every where where he comes he diſquiets the peoples minds, and prepares them to commotions and ſeditions againſt the preſent government, that of the Romans, (ſee v. 18. and ch. 25. 8.) and he is a great promoter of the Religion of thoſe that are ordinarily called Nazarens, from Jeſus that dwelt in Nazareth, (that is, of Chriſtians.)

5. For we have found this man a peſtilent fellow, and a mover of ſedition among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ring-leader of the ſect of the Nazarens.] Αποκαθέζεσθε---

6. And he hath done ſuch things in the Temple of the Jews among us at Jeruſalem, as are abſolutely contrary to the laws of our God (ſee c. 21. 21.) and we apprehended him, and would have had him puniſht, ſo as our law appoints thoſe to be puniſht that bring ſtrangers beyond that court of the Temple that was aſſigned them, and ſeparated from the other (ſee Eph. 2. 14.)

6. Who alſo hath gone about to prophane the Temple: whom we took, and would have judged according to our law.]

7, 8. But as we were proceeding againſt him, Lyſias, the Captain of the Temple, or commander of the guard of ſoldiers that guards the Temple, would not permit us to proceed againſt him in our Court, but carried him away with a guard of ſoldiers, c. 23. 10. and cited ſome of the Sanhedrim to come hither to thee, and accuſe him; whom therefore thou mayſt pleaſe to examine, and hear what they can ſay.

7. But the chief Captain Lyſias came upon us, and with great violence took him away out of our hands,

8. Commanding his accuſers to come unto thee; by examining of whom thy ſelf mayſt take knowledge of all theſe things whereof we accuſe him.]

9. And the Jews of the Sanhedrim that came down, v. 1. confirmed the truth of all that Tertullus had pleaded.

9. And the Jews alſo aſſented, ſaying, That theſe things were ſo.]

10. Given him leave, permitted him.

A Ruler or Procurator of Judea.

10. Then Paul, after that the Governor had [beckned unto him] to ſpeak, anſwered, For as much as I know that thou haſt been of many years [a Judge unto this nation,] I do the more cheerfully anſwer for my ſelf.

11. Becauſe

11. Becauſe that thou mayſt underſtand, that there are but yet twelve days ſince I went up to Jeruſalem for to worſhip.]

11. And firſt thou mayſt pleaſe to underſtand, that about twelve days ſince I came up to Jeruſalem to keep the feaſt of Pentecoſt, a ſolemn feaſt of the Jews there, when by law 'tis appointed to be kept.

12. And they neither found me in the Temple diſputing with any man, neither raiſing up the people, neither in the Synagogues, nor in the city.

13. Neither can they prove the things whereof they now accuſe me.]

12, 13. And there I behaved my ſelf very quietly, made no diſturbance, raiſed no ſedition; and they that ſay I am a ſeditious perſon, and raiſe diſturbances where-ever I come, are not able to prove any thing of this nature, but only content themſelves with a general charge of ſedition.

14. But this I confeſs unto thee, that after the way which they call * hereſie, ſo worſhip I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the Law and the Prophets;]

* ſect, αἵρεσιν, ſee v. 5. and c. 26. 5.

14. But as for the other part of the accuſation, ver. 5. that I am a great promoter of the Sect of the Nazarens, I acknowledge this, that that way of worſhipping the God of Abraham which Chriſt hath taught, and the Chriſtians practiſe, which I ſuppoſe they mean by the word Sect, or peculiar way of profeſſion or religion (ſee Acts 26. 5.) is the way that I do uſe, and in doing ſo, do agreeably to all that is written in the Moſaical Law, and the writings of authority among the Jews, by which they think themſelves obliged.

15. And have hope towards God, which they themſelves alſo allow, that there ſhall be a reſurrection from the dead both of the juſt and unjuſt.]

15. And the main part of this is, that there ſhall be a life after this, and that all that ever lived here, ſhall then be judged and rewarded, whether they be good or evil. And this is no more than theſe men themſelves, all but the Sadducees, profeſs to believe, and depend on.

16. And herein do I exerciſe my ſelf to have always a conſcience void of offence toward God, and toward men.]

16. In this religion and practice, I am as careful as I can to live blameleſly, and to do my duty in all things towards God and man.

17. Now after many years I came to bring alms to my nation, and offerings.]

17. As for that which they mention of my profaning the Temple, thus it was, Many years after my converſion to this way that they ſpeak of, I was ſent by the pious Jews, &c. of other parts to Jeruſalem and Judæa, with their charity, and free-will oblations, brought in for the ſervice of God, c. 11. 30.

18. Whereupon certain Jews from Aſia found me purified in the Temple, neither with multitude, nor with tumult;]

18. And whilſt I was doing thus, ſome Jews of Aſia ſaw me in the Temple, where I was far from prophaning of it, as was ſuggeſted ver. 6. and ch. 21. 23. but was there in ſuch a manner as the Law of the Jews required of me, and they ſenſleſly miſtaking, affirmed that I carried Trophimus a Gentile of Epheſus into the Temple, and ſo affirmed me to have profaned the Temple. But this was a down right falſity, for which there was no other ground of affirming, but only this, that he was ſeen with me in the city (ſee ch. 21. 29.) And as I was in the Temple without any ſuch company there which might be ſaid to profane it, ſo it is certain that I was not attended with any number of men that might bring me under ſuſpicion of raiſing any ſedition, ver. 5.

19. Who ought to have been here before thee, and object if they had ought againſt me.]

19. Or if any man living would affirm I had, he ought to come now in open court, and teſtifie againſt me here.

20. Or elſe let theſe ſame here ſay, if they have found any evil-doing in me, while I ſtood before the councel.]

20. Nay for all theſe things I ſhall make mine appeal to theſe that are here preſent of their own Sanhedrim, ver. 1. and deſire they will teſtifie, whether when I was brought before their Sanhedrim at Jeruſalem, c. 23. I was not diſmiſt with a good teſtimony from themſelves, ver. 9. viz. that there was nothing of moment charged and proved againſt me; and let them ſpeak, if it were not ſo.

21. Except it be for this one voice, that I cried ſtanding among them, Touching the reſurrection of the dead I am called in queſtion by you this day.]

21. There is I am ſure but one thing that can by any be teſtified againſt me from the proceeding there, and that none but Sadduces will lay to my charge, who are engaged in the maintenance of their own tenets, and that chargeable upon all the Phariſees as well as me, viz. my acknowledging another life after this, ch. 23. 8.

22. And when Felix heard theſe things, * having more perfect knowledge of that way, he deferred them, and ſaid, When Lyſias the chief captain ſhall come down, I will know the uttermoſt of your matter.]

* he put them off, ſaying. When I know more exactly the things that belong to this way, and when Lyſias the Commander comes down, I will determine the buſineſs between you, ἀνεβάλετο αὐτούς, ἀκριβέστερον εἰδὼς τὰ περὶ τῆς ὁδοῦ, εἶπεν, ὅταν Λυσίας ὁ Χιλίαρχος καταβῇ, διαγνώσομαι τὰ καθ' ὑμᾶς.

22. When Felix had had this cognizance of the matter, and diſcern'd how things ſtood, he deferred paſſing any ſentence, ſaying, Concerning Chriſtian religion, whether it were derogatory to the Law of the Jews, I will determine, when I have adviſed with learned men that know your pretentions, and that concerning the tumult ſaid to be raiſed by Paul, when Lyſias comes, whoſe teſtimony will decide it.

23. And he commanded a Centurion † to keep Paul, and * to let him have liberty, and that he ſhould forbid none of his acquaintance to miniſter or come unto him.]

† that Paul ſhould be guarded, τηρεῖσθαι Παῦλον.
* that he ſhould have ἔχειν.

23. And he commanded the captain of the guard to keep Paul ſafe, but not as a cloſe priſoner, and that any that would bring him any relief, or diſcourſe with him, might freely do it.

24. And after certain days. when Felix came with his wife Druſilla, which was a Jew, he ſent for Paul, and heard him concerning the faith of Chriſt.]

24. And Felix's wife, being a Jew, when ſhe came; he thought fit to have her preſent, and ſent for Paul, and bid him ſay what he had to ſay concerning the doctrine or Goſpel of Chriſt.

25. And as he reaſoned of † righteouſneſs, temperance, and judgment to come, a Felix trembled, and anſwer'd, Go thy way for this time; * when I have a convenient ſeaſon, I will call for thee.]

† juſtice and continence δικαιοσύνης καὶ ἐγκρατείας.
* But I will find a ſeaſon, and call for thee, καιρὸν δὲ μεταλαβὼν μετακαλέσομαί σε.

25. And Paul, in a diſcourſe of that ſubject, inſiſted particularly on the great obligation that by the Law of Chriſt lay on all men to obſerve juſtice between man and man, and to live chaſtly, either in conjugal or ſingle life, (two virtues contrary to two ſpecial vices that Felix was particularly guilty of) and withal of the ſevere judgment that all men one day ſhould be called to for their offences in theſe and the like kinds. And as he inſiſted on theſe three branches of the Chriſtian faith, wherein Felix was ſo much concern'd, he fell a trembling, and being in pain to hear ſuch doctrine, he broke him off abruptly, bidding him depart for that time, and he would find ſome other ſeaſon to hear him again.

26. He hoped alſo] that money ſhould have been given him of Paul, that he might looſe him: wherefore he ſent for him the oftner, and communed with him.

26. And, being a taker of bribes, (note a.) he hoped

27. But b after two years Portius Feſtus came into Felix's room; and Felix, willing to ſhew the Jews a pleaſure, left Paul bound.]

27. And when Paul had remained in cuſtody under the time of Felix's Procuratorſhip for the ſpace of two years, Felix was by Nero removed out of his place, and Portius Feſtus ſucceeded him; and though Felix had nothing to condemn in Paul, yet meerly to gratifie the Jews at parting, he left Paul in priſon.

Annotations on Chap. XXIV.

Ἔμφοβος Φήλιξ.

V. 25. Felix trembled.] The grounds of Felix's trembling at this diſcourſe of Paul's of juſtice and chaſtity, or continence, will be beſt fetch'd from a view of the character of this man both in Tacitus and Joſephus, Tacitus Hiſt. l. 5. mentions him an Eques Romanus, to whom Claudius the Emperor had intruſted that Province, where, ſaith he, per omnem ſævitiam & libidinem jus regium ſervili ingenio exercuit, he practiſed all all cruelty and injuſtice in his government, Druſillâ Antonii & Cleopatræ nepte in matrimonium acceptâ, and that he took to wife Druſilla the niece of Antony and Cleopatra. Of this marriage of his Joſephus enlargeth, and ſaith that Agrippa his brother had given her firſt to Azis the king of the Emiſſeni, and whilſt ſhe was his wife, Felix falls in love with her, and by the help of one Simon a Magician (not he of Samaria, but another of Cyprus obtained her from her huſbands bed. From theſe two parts of his character, an unjuſt Governor (of which his expecting bribes here, ver. 26. is an evidence alſo) and one that lived with another man's wife, ariſeth the fitneſs and properneſs of S. Paul's diſcourſe before him, of juſtice and continence; and the guilt of his conſcience, hearing that there was a judgment to come for ſuch ſins as theſe, might very well ſet him a trembling.

Ἐγκράτεια

V. 27. After two years.] That this two years is to be referred to Felix's Procuratorſhip is the opinion of Baronius, meaning thoſe two years which he ſpent in Nero's reign. But the truth is, Claudius had, five year before, placed him in the Præfecture, and there is no reaſon to think that S. Luke ſhould define the time of his Procuratorſhip from Nero's reign, who removed him, rather than from Claudius's, who put him in: And therefore the διετία, two years, muſt refer to Paul's impriſonment rather. b. Διετίαν πληρωθεῖσαν.

6. And when he had tarried among them * more than ten days, he went down unto Cæſarea, and the next day ſitting in the Judgment-ſeat, commanded Paul to be brought. * No more, οὐ πλείους.

7. And when he was come, the Jews which came down from Jeruſalem ſtood round about, and laid many grievous complaints againſt Paul, which they could not prove.

8. And he cleared himſelf againſt all the accuſations, which were reducible to three heads, offences againſt the Moſaical Law, profaning the Temple, raiſing ſedition againſt the government of the Romans (ſee ch. 24. 5, 6.)

8. While he anſwer'd for himſelf, Neither againſt the Law of the Jews, neither againſt the Temple, nor yet againſt Cæſar have I offended any thing at all.]

9. But Feſtus being willing to do the Jews a pleaſure, anſwered Paul, and ſaid, Wilt thou go up to Jeruſalem, and there be judged of theſe things before me?

10. I am a Roman, and I ought to be judged not by the Jewiſh Sanhedrim or laws, but by the Roman: (And though I were lyable to them, yet thou already diſcerneſt that they are not able to prove that I have any way treſpaſs'd againſt the Jews, or their Law.)

10. Then ſaid Paul, I ſtand at Ceſar's judgment ſeat, where I ought to be judged: to the Jews have I done no wrong, as thou very well knoweſt.]

11. And if I have done any thing which by the Roman laws is puniſhable capitally, I will be content moſt willingly to ſuffer death, I deſire no mercy, (this he did, knowing there was then no edict of the Emperors againſt Chriſtianity, ſee note on ch. 26. a.) But if all their accuſations are invalid, if I am, as thou knoweſt I am, v. 10. free from that charge of having wronged them, and being a Roman, ought to be judged by the Roman Laws, and none of them hath interdicted Chriſtianity, there is then no reaſon I ſhould be delivered up to my enemies to be my Judges. 'Twere abſolutely unjuſt to do ſo, and from that intention of thine, I make mine appeal to the Roman Emperor, and deſire that he may judge between us.

11. For if I be an offender, or have committed any thing worthy of death, I † refuſe not to die: but if there be none of theſe things whereof theſe accuſe me, no man may deliver me unto them. I appeal unto Cæſar.] † Deſire not to eſcape death, παραιτοῦμαι τὸν θάνατον.

12. And Feſtus conferring with thoſe of the Jewiſh Sanhedrim, that were there.

13. Agrippa, who, after Herod was Tetrarch of Galilee, and his ſiſter Bernice.

13. And after certain days [king Agrippa and Bernice] came unto Cæſarea, to ſalute Feſtus.

14. And when they had been there many days, Feſtus declared Paul's cauſe unto the king, ſaying, There is a certain man left in bonds by Felix, 15. Brought in an accuſation to me.

15. About whom, when I was at Jeruſalem, the chief Prieſts and the Elders of the Jews [informed me,] deſiring to have judgment againſt him.

16. To give ſentence of capital puniſhment againſt any man.

16. To whom I anſwered, It is not the manner of the Romans [to deliver any man to die] before that he which is accuſed a have the accuſers face to face, and have licenſe to anſwer for himſelf, concerning the crime laid againſt him.

17. And therefore that they muſt of neceſſity go to Cæſarea and accuſe him. And when they came, I uſed all expedition, and the very next day I went to the bench to hear this cauſe of Paul.

17. Therefore when they were come hither, without any delay, on the morrow I ſat on the judgment-ſeat, and commanded the man to be brought forth.]

18. And upon hearing I found him abſolutely free from all capital crimes, all ſeditious practices, whereof they accuſed him, and wherein I ſuſpected him to be moſt guilty.

20. And † becauſe I doubted of ſuch manner of queſtions, I asked him whether he would go to Jeruſalem, and there be judged of theſe matters.

21. But when Paul had appealed to be reſerved unto the hearing of Auguſtus, I commanded him to be kept till I might ſend him unto Cæſar.]

20,21. And making ſome ſcruple, whether it were fit for me to give ſentence in this matter, or whether it were not better to refer him to the Jews Sanhedrim, to be judged there, Paul appealed to Cæſar, claimed his privilege of a Roman, that he might not be delivered up to the Jews; and thereupon I remanded him to Priſon, till I could conveniently ſend him to Rome to Cæſar.

22. Then Agrippa ſaid unto Feſtus, I would alſo hear the man my ſelf. To morrow, ſaid he, thou ſhalt hear him.

* A great train, appearance, or ſhew, φαντασίας.

23. And on the morrow, when Agrippa was come and Bernice, with * great [b pomp, and was entred into the place of hearing, with the chief captains] and principal men of the city, at Feſtus command, Paul was brought forth.

23. Retinue and train, and entred into the court or hall with the Collonels. b.

† Beſought me, or pleaded to me, ἐντυχὸν μοι.

24. And Feſtus ſaid, King Agrippa, and all men which are here preſent with us, ye ſee this man, about whom all the multitude of the [Jews have † dealt with me, both at Jeruſalem, and alſo here, crying, that he ought not to live any longer.]

24. Jews whereſoever inhabiting, thoſe of Jeruſalem and others, have made complaints to me as againſt a moſt notable malefactor, that ought to be put to death.

25. But when I underſtood that he had committed [nothing worthy of death, and that he himſelf hath appealed to Auguſtus,] I have determined to ſend him.

25. No capital crime, and ſeeing he appealed to the Emperor of Rome, to be ſentenced at his tribunal.

26. Of whom I have no certain thing to write unto [my Lord] wherefore I have brought him forth before you, and eſpecially before thee, O king Agrippa; that after examination had, I might have ſomewhat to write.

26. The Emperor.

27. For it ſeemeth to me unreaſonable to ſend a priſoner, and not withal to ſignifie the crimes laid againſt him.

a. Καλήτορας πρὸς πρόσωπον

V. 16. Have the accuſers face to face.] Of this law and cuſtom of the Jews Philo Judæus is expreſs, ſpeaking of the Roman Præfects, that κοινὰς παρέχοντες ἑαυτὰς δικαστὰς, ἐξ ἴσου καὶ τὸν κατηγόρων καὶ τῶν ἀπολογουμένων ἀκροώμενοι, μηδενὸς ἀκρίτου προκαταγνώσεως ἀξιοῦντες ἐβεβήδουν, &c. They yielded themſelves to be common judges, and heard equally the accuſers and the defendants, and condemned no man unheard, prejudged none, but judged without favour or enmity, according to the nature of the cauſe.

1. THen Agrippa ſaid unto Paul, Thou art permitted to ſpeak for thy ſelf. Then Paul [ſtretched forth the hand, and anſwered for himſelf:]

1. Beckning to the byſtanders to hold their peace, and give audience, made this Apology for himſelf.

24. And as he thus ſpake for himſelf, Feſtus ſaid with a loud voice, Paul, [thou art beſide thy ſelf: much learning doth make thee mad.]

25. What I ſay is perfectly true, and hath nothing of exceſs or tranſportation in it.

25. But he ſaid, I am not mad, moſt noble Feſtus, but [ſpeak forth the words of truth and ſoberneſs.]

26. Agrippa, I am confident knows it to be ſo, and therefore I fear not his cenſure, (ſee John 7. a.) for theſe things, the life, death, and reſurrection of Chriſt, were things of very publick cognizance, and cannot be unknown to him that was a Jew born.

Annotations on Chap. XXVI.

a. ἄξιον θανάτου ἢ δεσμῶν

V. 31. Nothing worthy of death, or—] The truth of this ſpeech of King Agrippa and his company, that Paul had done nothing worthy of death or bands, depends on the conſideration of the time wherein it was ſpoken. For the Roman Magiſtrates judging by the Roman Laws, that which was not againſt any Law of the Emperors, was not cognoſcible, or puniſhable (eſpecially by death or impriſonment, deprivation of life or liberty) by them. Thus when Paul is accuſed by the Jews, and brought before the Proconſul of Achaia, Gallio, c. 18. he tells them plainly, that he will not be a judge of ſuch matters, which the Roman Law, then in Claudius's Reign, had ſaid nothing of. For tho' c. 18. 2. an Edict had been by Claudius, toward the end of his Reign, ſet out againſt the Jews, to baniſh them out of Italy, &c. and by that, the Chriſtian Jews, as Jews, not as Chriſtians, fell under that interdict, and ſo did Priſcilla and Aquila there, (and John the Apoſtle, baniſhed into Patmus, in Claudius's Reign, ſaith Epiphanius, hær. ἀλόγ.) yet as to the difference betwixt Jews and Chriſtians, there referred to by Gallio, (in proportion to the accuſation brought againſt him by the Jews, περὶ λόγου, of a word, as whether Jeſus were the Meſſias, or no, περὶ ὀνομάτων of names, as whether the name Chriſtian, or Diſciple, &c. were unlawful, as thoſe diſcriminated them from incredulous Jews, περὶ νόμου τοῦ καθ' ὑμᾶς, concerning the law in force among the Jews, about converſing with the uncircumciſed, &c.) there was then no Law ſet out by the Emperors at Rome, and therefore no rule for the Proconſul to go by, in taking cognizance of them. And thus it continued till Nero's rage againſt the Chriſtians began: for that he firſt dedicated perſecution, is Tertullian's expreſſion, and Primum Neronem in hanc ſectam gladio ferociiſſe, Nero was the firſt that made any capital Law againſt them. Now this appearance of Paul before Agrippa was in the ſecond of Nero's Reign, An. Ch. 57. long before this rage of his brake out; and accordingly Paul had made his appeal to Cæſar's tribunal, knowing that this difference betwixt him and the Jews was a thing of that nature, that no Law of the Romans could take hold of, all his danger being from the tumultuary proceedings of the Jews, inraging and importuning the Magiſtrates againſt him, and the beſt way of ſecuring himſelf, being a trial by the Roman Laws to which prudently he appeals, c. 25. 11. making it his plea, that he had done nothing againſt Ceſar, v 8. and as a Roman, claiming the priviledge of being judged by the Imperial Laws, and not to be delivered up to the Jews, v. 10. Which plea of his could have ſtood him in no ſtead, if Chriſtianity had then been under any Imperial Interdict, and by being accepted for him, demonſtrates that at that time it was not.

CHAP. XXVII.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND when it was determined that we ſhould ſail unto Italy, they delivered Saul and certain other Priſoners unto one named Julius, a Centurion of Auguſtus band.

3. The Captain of the guard, that was to guard the priſoners, was very civil to Paul, and permitted him to go on ſhore at Sidon, and viſit thoſe whom he knew there.

4. And when he had lanched from thence, we ſailed under Cyprus, becauſe the winds were contrary.

5. And when he had ſailed over the Sea of Cilicia and Pamphylia, we came to Myra, a city of Lycia:

Though I told you that no one perſon in the ſhip ſhould periſh, yet this was upon condition you would believe and truſt God for your preſervation, and if the mariners ſtay, and do their parts with all diligence, and not uſe this trick, ſome to eſcape, and leave the reſt in the danger: If this be done, aſſure your ſelves you will be drowned.

31. Paul ſaid to the Centurion and to the ſoldiers, [Except theſe abide in the ſhip, ye cannot be ſaved.]

And in the ſpace between that and day-break, Paul exhorted them to refreſh themſelves with eating, telling them that they had ſo ſollicitouſly attended the fate of this fourteenth day, as the ſpecial critical day, (had ſo much feared caſting away upon that day) that they had had no leiſure or thought of eating, and ſo had faſted till that time of night, eaten no bit all that day.

a. Νηστεία ἤδη παρελήλυθε

V. 9. The faſt was now already paſs'd] There is no queſtion but the faſt, which is here ſaid to be newly paſs'd, was the great anniverſary faſt, the day of Expiation; the deſcription of which we have Iſa. 58. under the name of a ſabbath, v. 13. which may ſeem to have occaſion'd that error in the heathen writers, which thought that the Jews had faſted on the ſeventh day or ſabbath. So * Suetonius, Nè Judæus tam libenter ſabbatis jejunium ſervat, &c. a Jew doth not faſt on his ſabbath ſo willingly; and Juſtin, l. 36. Septimum diem, more Gentis Sabbatum appellatum, in omne ævum jejunium ſacravit, the ſeventh day, being by their cuſtom called their Sabbath, was appointed a faſt for ever. Which error aroſe by not obſerving the difference betwixt the weekly and the anniverſary ſabbath. Now the preciſe time of this ſabbatick faſt is, Lev. 16. 29. on the tenth day of the ſeventh month called Tizri, which falls on the ſame time almoſt with our September, the firſt day of Tizri, on the ſeventh of that, and ſo the tenth of Tizri, on the ſixteenth of September, that is, thirteen days before our Michaelmas, or, as * Scaliger ſets it, on the twentieth of that month. This being thus obſerved, the reaſon of the Apoſtles obſervation, that ſailing was now become dangerous, becauſe the faſt was paſſed, will be eaſily cleared, it being all one, as if he had ſaid, becauſe it was paſt the twentieth of September; It being obſerv'd by all Sailers, that for ſome Weeks before and after Michaelmas, there are on the ſea ſudden and frequent Storms, which we now call Michaelmas flaws, which muſt needs make ſailing dangerous: and ſo the experiment proved it, v. 14. whereas the ſouth wind blew ſoftly, preſently comes a boiſterous wind called Euroclydon (or, as perhaps that word may be otherwiſe read with a light change, Εὐραχύλων, the North-eaſt wind, for which the King's and other ancient MS. read Εὐρακύλων) which ſo hurried the Ship that it could not ἀντοφθαλμεῖν, hold up the Eyes againſt it, and ſo ver. 20, there was no appearance of ſun or ſtars for many days together. Thus in * Heſiod, at the going down of the Pleiades, ſaith he, ναυτιλίη δυσπέμφελος, navigation is dangerous,

Δὴ τότε παντοίων ἀνέμων θύελλαι ἄητον, huge tempeſts of all kind of winds; where the fall of the Pleiades is ſaid to be μεσοπωρινὴ, viz. when after harveſt they begin to plough again (ἀρότοιο δ' δυομένων, l. 2. lin. 2.) which is clearly the time juſt now mentioned: ſo again, line 292. ſpeaking of proſperous ſailing, he deſigns the time fifty days after the ſummer ſolſtice or tropick, that is, about the end of July, and then deſigning ſome ſpace for navigation, he admoniſhes

Σπεύδειν ὅπι τάχιστα πάλιν, οἶκόν δε νέεσθαι, Μηδὲ μένειν οἶνόν τε νέον, καὶ ὀπωρινὸν ὄμβρον, to make haſte and be at home before new wine, and the harveſt ſhowers, for after that preſently comes μεσοπωρὶὸν, and —νῆϊ ἀμαρτήσας Διὸς ὄμβρῳ Πολλῷ ὀπωρινῷ, χαλεπὸν δέ τε πόντον ἔθηκεν.

that very thing that we here obſerved, making the ſea, or navigation, dangerous. Thus in * Philoſtratus καὶ γὰρ μεσοπωρινὸν ἦδη ἐτύγχανε, καὶ ἡ θάλαττα ἧττον βεβαία, the ſea was at this time more unſettled, for it was now the time immediately after ripe fruits: for ſo μεσόπωρον ſignifies (beginning about the midſt of Auguſt, and laſting near our Chriſtmas) at which time, ſaith Ariſtotle, Meteor. l. 1. χάλαζαι μάλιστα γίνονται, ſtorms are ſpecially wont to ariſe. So ſaith Philo leg. ad Caium, ἔτι πλωΐμων ὄντων, ἀρχὴ γὰρ ἦν μετοπώρου, The ſea was yet fit for navigation, for 'twas the beginning of that ſeaſon after ripe fruit, about the middle of Auguſt, which argues, that ſhortly it would not be fit, this being, as he ſaith, τελευτᾶν πλοῦς τοῖς θαλαττεύουσιν, the time of giving over the ſea. What this time was, will be yet clearer by what we find in him * adverſus Flac. that this Faſt was κατὰ τὴν μεσοπωρινὴν ἰσημερίαν, about the winter equinoctial.

V. 13. Thence] Ἄσσον, πλησίον, ſaith Heſychius, it ſignifies nigh. But firſt it is among the Poets only that it is thus uſed: and 2*ly*, being here joined with παρελέγοντο, which is the paſſing juſt under, there ſeems to be very little uſe of the word, or propriety, that here it ſhould be put. Perhaps there may here be place for a conjecture, reading θᾶσσον preſently, inſtead of ἄσσον, and then joining that, not with παρελέγοντο, but ἄραντες, precedent, preſently looſing thence. Thus in Syneſius, we find Ep. 4. ἄραντες εὐθὺς, looſing immediately, which is all one with θᾶσσον, τάχιον, ταχύτερον, ſaith Heſychius. And this I now ſee to have been the conjecture of the very learned and judicious Critick, Mr. John Bois of Ely.

b. Ἄσσον

V. 21. Gained] What κερδῆσαι ſignifies here, being joined with ζημίαν harm and loſs, may appear by Himerius in his Declamation againſt Epicurus, ὃ διὰ τὰς λόγους κερδανεῖς τῳ ἑτέρῳ, ἀλλὰ κολασθήσῃ πλέον, οἷς ἐπὶ τὸ ἀδικεῖν τοῖς λόγοις κέχρησαι, thou ſhalt not by thy orations gain, that is, avoid, or eſcape, puniſhment, but ſhalt be puniſhed the more ——So in Philemon,

Πᾶς γὰρ πένης ὢν μεγάλα κερδαίνει κακά, every poor man gains, that is, eſcapes, great evils. So of the Latin lucrifacio, ſaith Donatus on Terent. Andr. Act. 3. ſcen. 4. ut corporis impulſionem lucrifaciam, that is, vitem, that I may gain, that is, avoid or eſcape. As for the notion of ὕβρις, which we render harm, the Context reſtrains it from that general, to this particular ſort of ill, wherein at preſent they were, viz. that of the Tempeſt, as in Pollux we find ὑβρισὴς ἄνεμος, a tempeſtuous wind.

C. Κερδῆσαι

one ὕβρις

d. Ἄσιτος

33. Faſting] Ἄσιτος, is he that eateth nothing all day long (as μονόσιτος, he that eateth but one meal a day) and ſo 'tis here explained by μηδὲν προσλαβόμενοι, having taken nothing at all. The meaning therefore of this place (without any miracle of ſubſiſting without any nouriſhment 14 days together) is to be gathered from the former part of the period, τεσσαρεσκαιδεκάτην σήμερον ἡμέραν προσδοκῶντες, expecting this day the fourteenth day, that is, waiting to ſee the ſucceſs of this day, which, it ſeems, in the opinion of the mariners, was the critical day to them, their danger was then at the higheſt, and they were not likely to out-live it, and ſo there was no uſe of eating, and if they eſcaped this day, they might then poſſibly hope; and upon theſe conſiderations, they eat nothing all that day, they had no leiſure to conſider hunger, when their greater danger, and more inſtant fear was of drowning, and that is a clear meaning of the place. But if it ſhould be applyed to all the precedent 14 days, then it muſt be taken in that latitude wherein Zetzes on Heſiod expounds the phraſe, they eat not meat, διὰ τὸ μηδὲ ἐν τοῖς καιροῖς τῶν τραπεζῶν αὐτὸς ἠρεμεῖν, ἀλλ' ἐνόπλους καὶ πεφυρμένους ἐφίεσθαι ἐν αἵμασιν, ὅπερ αὐτὸς μηδὲ σῖτον ἐφίεσθαι, becauſe they were not at leiſure, or quiet, even at meal-times, but eat in their arms, and with their hands foul'd with blood, therefore he ſaid, neither did they eat meat; Τραπέζης γὰρ καὶ σίτων καιρὸς εἰρηναῖος ὅτι καὶ τερπίδυμος, for the meal-time is a time of leiſure, and rejoycing.

——οὐδέ τε σῖτον

a. Σανὶς V. 44. Boards] The word Σανὶς ſignifies any plain thing, a door, or table, or board, or plank, and is rendred by Heſychius firſt θύρα, a door, then λεύκωμα a white table, ἐν ᾧ αἱ γραφαὶ Ἀθήνησιν ἐγράφοντο τῶν κακούργων, on which among the Athenians Accuſations were written againſt malefactors, τί ἦσαν ἢ καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ σταυροῦ (not, as 'tis corruptly read ταύρου) and this was wont to be ſet upon the Croſs, (as the inſcription of Chriſt.) The former of theſe, or any thing like that, any plain tabulatum, is here meant by it, as that which would be moſt uſeful to eſcape by in this ſhip-wrack.

CHAP. XXVIII.

1 AND when they were eſcaped, then they knew that the Iſland was called a Melita.

a. 2. And the barbarous people ſhewed us no * little kindneſs; for they kindled a fire, and * received us every one, becauſe of the preſent rain, and becauſe of the cold.

3. A viper, driven out of her hole by the heat which the fire had cauſed, leaped out and

3. And † when Paul had gathered a bundle of ſticks, and laid them on the fire, [there came a viper * out of the heat, and] faſtned on his hand.

4. Divine revenge attends him, and ſo this poiſonous viper is ſent to bite and kill him, which will certainly do it, v.6.

4. And when the barbarians ſaw the † venemous beaſt hang on his hand, they ſaid among themſelves, No doubt this man is a murtherer, whom, though he hath eſcaped the Sea, yet [b vengeance ſuffereth not to live.]

b. 5. And he ſhook off the * beaſt into the fire, and felt no harm.

6. Howbeit they looked when he ſhould have ‖ ſwollen, or fallen down dead ſuddenly: but after they had looked a great while, and ſaw † no harm come to him, they changed their minds, and ſaid that he was a God.

7. Houſe and lands where reſided the Governour.

7. In the ſame quarters were [poſſeſſions of the chief man] of the Iſland, whoſe name was Publius, who received us, and lodged us three days courteouſly.

8. An excoriation of the guts.

8. And it came to paſs that the father of Publius lay ſick of a fever, and of [a † bloody flux:] to whom Paul went in, and prayed, and laid his hands on him, and healed him.

9. * So when this was done, others alſo which had diſeaſes in the Iſland came and were healed;

10. And they preſented us, and gave us great rewards (1 Pet. 3. c.) and at our departure furniſhed us with all neceſſaries for our journey.

10. Who alſo honoured us with many honours, and when we departed, they laded us with ſuch things as were neceſſary.]

11. Which was called the Dioſcuri.

11. And after three months we departed in a ſhip of Alexandria, which had wintered in the Iſle, [c whoſe ſign was Caſtor and Pollux.]

c. 12. And landing at Syracuſe, we tarried there three days.

13. And from thence we ſet a compaſs, and came to Rhegium: and after one day the ſouth-wind blew, and the next day we came to Puteoli:

14. Some Chriſtian profeſſors, who would needs ſtay us with them a week, after which we parted from them, and advanced toward Rome, (ſee John 6. 17.)

14. Where we found [brethren, and were deſired to tarry with them ſeven days: and ſo we went toward Rome.]

15. And when we were come toward Rome, as far as Appii forum and Tres Tabernæ, the Chriſtians in Rome hearing of our approach came out to meet us.

d. e. 15. And from thence, when the brethren heard of us, they came to meet us as far as d Appii forum, and ‖ the e three Taverns:] whom when Paul ſaw, he thanked God, and took courage.

16. Common gaoler to ſecure them, but let Paul ſtay in a private houſe, only with a ſoldier to guard him.

f. 16. And when we came to Rome, the Centurion delivered the priſoners to the [Captain of the guard: but Paul was ſuffered to dwell by himſelf with a f ſoldier that † kept him.]

17. And after he had been there three days, he deſired to ſpeak with the rulers of the Conſiſtory which the Jews then had at Rome, (ſee note on John 1. c.) and when they came to him, he ſaid unto them, Countrymen, though I have done nothing contrary to the laws or cuſtoms of the Jews, yet was I by the Jews at Jeruſalem apprehended and accuſed before the Roman Procurator.

17. And it came to paſs, that after three days, Paul called the chief of the Jews together. And when they were come together, he ſaid unto them, Men and brethren, though I have committed nothing againſt the people or cuſtoms of our fathers, yet was I delivered priſoner from Jeruſalem into the hands of the Romans,]

18. Who when they had examined me, would have let me go, becauſe there was [no cauſe of death in me.]

18. No capital accuſation brought againſt me.

19. Only to clear my ſelf, not to lay any thing to the charge of any of my countreymen.

19. But when the Jews ſpake againſt it, I was conſtrained to appeal unto Ceſar: [not that I had ought to accuſe my nation of.]

20. Aſſerting the reſurrection of the dead, which is the reſult of all the promiſes of God to the Jews, and that every true Iſraelite depends on, I am thus impriſoned.

20. For this cauſe therefore have I called for you to ſee you, and to ſpeak with you: becauſe that for [the hope of Iſrael I am bound with this chain.]

21. Chriſtian Jews made any complaints againſt thee.

21. And they ſaid unto him, We have neither received letters out of Judea concerning thee, neither any of the [brethren that came, ſhewed or ſpake any * harm of thee.]

22. This profeſſion and doctrine of Chriſtianity, we know that it is generally oppoſed by our brethren the Jews.

22. But we deſire to hear of thee what thou thinkeſt: for as concerning [this Sect, we know that every where it is ſpoken againſt.]

23. He preached and made known at large the doctrine of the Goſpel, demonſtrating from the Law of Moſes, and the prophecies that were of force among the Jews, the agreeableneſs and truth of the whole Chriſtian Religion.

23. And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him into his lodging, to whom [he expounded and teſtified the kingdom of God, perſwading them concerning Jeſus, both out of the Law of Moſes, and out of the Prophets, from morning till evening.]

25. And when they agreed not among themſelves, they departed, after that Paul had ſpoken one word, Well ſpake the holy Ghoſt by Iſaias the Prophet unto our fathers,

25. And when by this difference of minds there began to be ſome falling out (or, arguing on both ſides, v. 29.) between them, they departed, Paul telling them at their departure, that this unbelief of theirs was a thing which the Prophet Iſaias had punctually foretold.

28. It is therefore now to be expected by you, that we ſhould give over contending with this obduration of yours, and preach the Goſpel to the heathens, and they will moſt gladly lay hold on it.

29. And when he had ſaid theſe words, the Jews departed, and had great reaſoning among themſelves.

Annotations on Chap. XXVIII.

a. Μελίτη

V. 1. Melita] Two Iſlands there are of that name Melita. The one in the Libyan, ſaith Strabo, l. 6. the other in the Adriatick Sea. Of the former Ortelius ſpeaks in Theſaur. Geograph, Melita ex una Pegiis apud Ptolemæum. Hæc inſula B. Pauli naufragio celebris eſt, & hodie Rhodienſibus militibus habitatur, It was by Ptolemy ſaid to be one of the Pelagiæ. It is famous for Saint Paul's ſhipwrack, and is now inhabited by the Knights of Rhodes. And that this was it here ſpoken of, appears by the conſequents of this Story, which brings Paul from Mileta to Syracuſe, and from thence to Rhegium, within the ſtraits of the Sicilian, or Libyan Sea.

b. Δίκη

V. 4. Vengeance] That there is a Δίκη or vengeance, which will not let Murtherers go unpuniſhed in this World, hath been the obſervation of all ſorts of Men. In the Gemara tract. Sanhedr. there is the like ſtory of Simeon, ſon of Schutach, who found a man-ſlayer, but had no witneſs to teſtify it legally, and therefore prayed thus, He that knoweth the thoughts of men, puniſh thee as a murtherer. And preſently, ſaith he, a Serpent bit him, and ſlew him. In like manner as Oreſtes, that had killed his mother, dyed with the bite of a Viper, in a place of Arcadia called Oreſtion, ſaith Stephanus Byzant. περὶ Πόλε. in the word Ὀρεστεία. In that place of the Gemara there is alſo mention of a Tradition of Ezechias, that after the Deſtruction of the Sanctuary and the Sanhedrim, there yet ſtill continued among the Jews four kinds of Capital Puniſhment, inſtead of the four eſtabliſhed by the Law of Moſes. For he that deſerved to be ſtoned, either fell from an houſe, or was torn with wild Beaſts. He that deſerved to be burnt, either fell into the Fire, or was ſtruck with a Serpent; (which was therefore called Fiery by Moſes, becauſe they that were bitten with it felt ſuch a flame in their Veins.) They that were to be killed with the Sword, fell either into the hand of the King, or of Thieves. They that deſerved Suffocation or Hanging, either were Drowned, or dyed of a Melancholy or Suffocation, (ſuch as is affirmed of Judas; ſee Note on Matth. 27. a.) Two of theſe are here mentioned by the Barbarians, drowning, and the bite of the Serpent or Viper, as a revenge due to a murtherer in their conceit; and when they ſaw he eſcaped, they looked on it as a ſtupendious thing.

V. 11. Whoſe ſign] Παράσημος is the πρῶτομὴ, ſome Image or Picture of ſome Creature in the fore part of the ſhip, from whence the ſhip was named. So ſaith Agatharchides, when 'tis ſaid, that a Bull carryed away Europa, the meaning is, that a ſhip called the Bull, as having that παράσημον upon it, carryed her; and ſo the Eagle that carry'd Ganymede, was a Ship with an Eagle upon it, and ſo called the Eagle, ſaith Epiphanius. So Bellerophon's riding on Pegaſus, was his ſailing in a ſhip, that had a flying Horſe for its Sign and Name. So Virgil, Æn. 10. c. Παράσημον ——— erata Princeps ſecat æquora Tigri.

Where the ſign of the Ship, being ſet upon the roſtrum of it, (which was made of Braſs) was a Tyger, and ſo the Ship was called. So Diodorus Siculus, l. 4. of Phryxus, that is ſaid to ſwim upon a Ram through the Euxine Sea, ſaith, διαπλεῦσαι αὐτὸν φασὶν ἐπὶ νεὼς παράσημον ἐπὶ τοῦ προτόμεως ἐχούσης κριόν, that he ſailed in a ſhip which had the picture of a Ram on the fore-part of it. So Palæphatus of Pelops, that was ſaid to have winged Horſes, 'twas to be underſtood, ſaith he, in the ſame manner as of Pegaſus, that he had a ſhip, ἐγέγραπτο δ' ἐπὶ τῆ πλοίῳ ἵπποι πτερωτοί, and there were painted on it winged Horſes. And of Pegaſus he had before ſaid, Ὄνομα ἦν τῷ πλοίῳ Πήγασος, ὡς καὶ νῦν ἅπασιν τῶν πλοίων ὄνομα ἔχει, 'twas the name of a ſhip, as now every Ship hath a name. So that the mention of the παράσημον, or ſign here, is alſo the intimation of the name of the ſhip, Caſtor and Pollux, or Dioſcuri.

e. Τρεῖς ταβέρνας

Ib. The Three Taverns] Tres Tabernæ is a proper name of a Town or City, and ſo not to be rendred with Iſidore, πανδοχεῖα, and καπηλεῖα, Inns and Victualling Houſes, (as he will alſo have Appii forum to be a place which εἰκόνα τινὰ Ἀππίου, an Image of Appius) but (as all other proper names) is is in reaſon to continue the ſame, without tranſlation, or conſiderable alteration of ſound, in all Languages. Thus the Example of Areopagus, Acts 17. 19. and Appii forum in this very verſe demonſtrates; and ſo here St. Luke's Greek Τρεῖς Ταβέρναι, which is the retaining, not tranſlating, nor interpreting the Latin. And this the rather, if we conſider what the ancient ſignification of Tabernæ was. This * Scaliger tells us on occaſion of thoſe verſes of Auſonius,

Prætereo arentem ſitientibus undique terris
Damniſſum, riguáſque perenni fonte Tabernas.

Tabernæ, ſaith he, was the name of the Frontier Towns, which were built againſt the inrodes and inſolencies of the Barbarians. That there were ſuch every where erected by Diocleſian in the borders of the Romans, we are aſſured by Zoſimus, Hiſt. l. 2. *p.*65. Τῆς γὰρ Ῥωμαίων ἐπικρατείας ἁπανταχῇ τῶν ἐσχατιῶν—— πόλεσι καὶ φρουρίοις καὶ πυργοῖς διειλημμένης, καὶ παντὸς τοῦ στρατιωτικοῦ καλὰ ταῦτα τὴν οἴκησιν ἔχοντος, ἄπορος τοῖς βαρβάροις ἦν ἡ διάβασις, The Roman Empire being on every ſide of the borders divided and fortified with Cities and Garriſons, and Caſtles, and all the Military forces dwelling thereabout, there was no acceſs for the Barbarians. And ſo no doubt it was in theſe former times. And in all reaſon, as this was the notion of the Tabernæ Montanæ prope Weiſſenbrugum, and Tabernæ Rhenenſes, which Scaliger mentions, ſo alſo of the Tres Tabernæ here, which, ſaith he, Auſonius himſelf ſeems to ſignify, when he ſaith that the Sauromatæ had their habitations aſſigned them there, agreeable to what we cited out of Zoſimus. That this place was an Epiſcopal See, and ſo an eminent City in Conſtantine's time, appears by Optatus, l. 1. where amongſt the Nineteen Biſhops Delegated by Conſtantine, to decide the Controverſy betwixt Donatus and Cæcilianus is reckoned, Felix à Tribus Tabernis, Felix Biſhop of that City called Tres Tabernæ. Ed. Cauſa. p. 28.

V. 16. Soldier that kept him] The manner of the Soldiers guarding the Priſoner among the Romans is thus deſcribed by Lipſius on Tacitus, Ann. l. 3. p. 60. that the Priſoner ſhould have a chain on his right hand, and the other end of it on the Soldiers left hand, ſo that they might conveniently go together, the chain being of ſome length. Of this many Examples he there gives out of Authors: One eſpecially from * Athenæus of Quintus Oppius, (for which Aldus's Edition hath ὁ Ἱππίου corruptly) παραδοθεὶς δεσμῶι, a priſoner delivered to Cuſtody, and of Baſtarnes, whom Manlius Aquilius, one that had been Conſul, and came now in Triumph from Sicily, σύνδεσμον (not συνδέτην, as Aldus reads it) ἔχων ἁλύσει μακρᾷ, πρὸς ὃν αὐτὸς ἱππέως ἔλκεται, having him bound to him in a long chain, went himſelf a-foot with his Priſoner on Horſe-back. Thus here v. 20. St. Paul mentions his chain, ᾗ ἅλυσιν ταύτην περίκειμαι, I am bound with this chain. And accordingly Peter being between two ſoldiers, chap. 12. 6. is ſaid to be bound with two chains, with one of them made faſt to one ſoldier, by the other to the other. So Paul is bound with two chains, that is, thus guarded with two Soldiers, chap. 21. 33. f. Φυλάσσων στρατιώτης. * l. 5. p. 67. lin. 13. Αλύσεσι δυσὶ.

THE

b.

OF the Epiſtles of St. Paul and other the Apoſtles, it is firſt ſufficiently known, that being written to whole Churches (or ſingle perſons) of Chriſtians, they do preſuppoſe the Chriſtian faith planted among thoſe to whom they write, and were not deſigned to plant it any where, and conſequently that it is not to be expected of them, that they ſhould ſet down all the neceſſary Doctrines or the Foundations of Chriſtianity, any otherwiſe then by way of intimation ſometimes, as appeared neceſſary for the confuting ſome falſe Doctrines, which Hereticks had ſuper-induced and ſcattered in the Churches. Secondly, then the true reaſon of the writing all the Epiſtles to the ſeveral Churches, (and of thoſe to ſingle Perſons; to Timothy and Titus, they were the ſame alſo) being to confirm the Churches, to fence them againſt the invaſions of Hereticks, to reprove the falſe Doctrines, or vicious practices that were crept in, and to ſupply all their wants, it is conſeqnently to be reſolved, that the beſt way to interpret the difficult parts of all theſe Epiſtles, is to learn and conſider by the ſtories of thoſe times, what was the ſtate of thoſe Churches, what the oppoſitions which they then met with, what the dangers that were moſt cautiouſly to be prevented: and of theſe ſorts two eminent parts of ſtory are moſt known, and moſt uſeful to be taken notice of, in order to this end.

a. Επιστολὴ Αποστόλε

Firſt, The great ſcandal taken againſt the Apoſtles, eſpecially St. Paul, by the Jews, which alſo diffuſed it ſelf to the Chriſtians that were of that nation, and continued zealous for the Law of Moſes, viz. the Apoſtles Converſing with, and preaching to the Gentiles, and (either by their practiſe or their doctrine) aſſerting the abolition of Circumciſion, and other parts of the Moſaical Law, this brought upon the Chriſtians very heavy Perſecutions in every place where the Faith was received. And as it was neceſſary for the Apoſtles to defend and vindicate their Practice herein, and to anſwer all the Objections that were brought againſt any part of it; ſo it was very ſeaſonable to fortify the poor perſecuted Chriſtians in their Conſtancy, and to encourage them to the bearing of Perſecutions, and that not only by propoſal of that eternal Reward in another World, and of the advantages that were reaped in this exerciſe of their Chriſtian vertues (of both which none that were Chriſtians could be ignorant) but, as an antidote to the preſent pungency of their diſtreſſes, by remembring or advertiſing them particularly of the promiſe of Chriſt, to own, and protect, and ſecure thoſe who ſhould cleave faſt to him, and to that end to come in an eminent and notable manner, and that ſpeedily, to the deſtruction of the obdurate Jews, and, at the ſame time, and by that means, to the deliverance of all his faithful Servants, the perſecuted Chriſtians. From hence it is, that there is ſo often mention (under divers phraſes) of the approach of this coming, as that which would ſupport their patience, and help them cheerfully to perſevere, as expecting an iſſue e're long out of all their Troubles. And although the future eternal Reward in the Reſurrection were an excellent Motive to this end, yet that being ſuppoſed and preſumed to be believed and acknowledged by all Chriſtians, as it was not neceſſary that this foundation ſhould again be laid, ſo it was not unſeaſonable to ſuperadd to this (and ſo often to inculcate) that other conſideration of temporal Deſtruction upon theſe Perſecutors, and deliverance to the faithful, even in this Life, the contrary to which being more probable to the eye of the world, and more believed by carnal Goſpellers, was then the great Engine uſed to ſhake the Chriſtians Conſtancy. And upon this obſervation are founded many interpretations of ſeveral paſſages, as in the proceſs will appear. And this was a Theme fit to be inſiſted on, and inculcated to the Chriſtians, not only in Judea, but in all other parts where the Faith was planted, in Aſia, and at Rome it ſelf, becauſe of the diſperſion of the Jews in all thoſe parts, and ſo of the Perſecutions cauſed by them on the Chriſtians. To which it was conſequent in the Divine Juſtice, and by the Rules of Sympathy, which are ordinarily diſcernible in the ſuffering of Members of the ſame Body, that not only in Judea and Paleſtine, but in all other parts, in Syria and Aſia, &c. theſe Deſtructions ſhould follow them: And ſo it fell out according to Chriſt's words, that wherever the carcaſs was, thither ſhould the Eagles be gathered together; wherever the Jews were, the Roman Armies or Interdicts found them out and deſtroyed them. And conſequently as this deſtruction of the Jews was, among other ends of juſt vengeance, deſigned alſo to reſcue and free the Chriſtians in all parts from their preſſures, ſo it was reaſonable for the Apoſtles in their Epiſtles to them in all parts, whereſoever the Goſpel was received, to comfort them with this aſſurance, that it ſhould ſhortly come to paſs. To this purpoſe (as we now diſcern in their writings, ſo) Lactantius teſtifies of their preaching, l. 4. c. 21. Petrus & Paulus Romæ prædicaverunt, & ea prædicatio in memoriam ſcripta remanſit. In quâ cùm multa alia mira, tum etiam hoc futurum eſſe dixerunt, ut poſt breve tempus immitteret Deus Regem, qui expugnaret Judæos, & civitates eorum ſolo adæquaret, ipſos autem fame ſitique confectos obſideret, tum fore aut corporibus ſuorum veſcerentur, &c. Peter and Paul preached at Rome, and that which they preached remained written for a memorial. In which, as they foretold many wonderful things, ſo this among others, that after a ſhort time God would ſend a king, who ſhould deſtroy the Jews, and make their cities level with the ground, beſieging them ſtraightly, when they were brought low with a famine, ſo that they ſhould feed on one anothers bodies, &c. And ſo, ſaith Lactantius, it fell out, ſoon after their death, Veſpaſian extinguiſhed the Name and Nation of the Jews, &c.

The

The ſecond thing which is known in Story, and uſeful to be here premiſed, is, the riſe and growth of the Hereſy of the Gnoſticks, the followers of Simon Magus, which in a ſhort time, while the Apoſtles lived and preached, over-ran all their Plantations, and in a greater or leſs degree infeſted all the Churches of thoſe times, and by the two baits which they uſed, liberty of all abominable Luſts, and promiſes of immunity from Perſecutions, attracted many unto them; and, whereſoever they came, began with oppoſing the Apoſtles and Governours of the Churches. And accordingly theſe Epiſtles being adapted to the preſent urgencies and wants of thoſe Churches, it cannot be ſtrange, that there ſhould be frequent admonitions intermix'd in all of them, to abſtain moſt diligently, and fly from theſe. And from the ſeveral parts of that Character which belonged to theſe Hereticks, many paſſages of ſome difficulty will be explained alſo.

Beſide theſe, many other particular matters there were, either wherein the Apoſtles were themſelves concerned to vindicate their authority or practiſes, or which had been propoſed by the Churches to obtain ſatisfaction in them, which occaſioned ſeveral Diſcourſes on thoſe Subjects, as will be diſcernible alſo, when the particulars are ſurveyed. And then, though by Analogy and parity of reaſon, theſe may be extended very profitably to the general behoof and advantages of other Churches of God, and particular Chriſtians of all ages; yet for the right underſtanding of the literal and primary ſenſe of them, it will be moſt neceſſary to obſerve theſe, or the like particular occaſions of them, and accordingly to accommodate the interpretations. And this was all which I thought neceſſary to premiſe in general by way of entrance on the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles.

Of this Epiſtle of St. Paul to the Romans theſe few things will be fit to be premiſed.

Firſt, What is the reaſon of the place which it hath in the Canon, before all the reſt of his Epiſtles. And this will be defined, 1. Negatively, then Poſitively. 1. Negatively, that it is not to be taken from the order of time wherein it was written; for moſt of the other Epiſtles are antiently affirmed, and by ſome characters do ſeem to have been written before it. And although the defining the time and the place of writing them be but conjectural and fallible, no way deducible from Scripture-ſtory (there being ſo great a part of Paul's time, whereof the book of the Acts, which ends at his firſt being at Rome, ſaith nothing) yet becauſe, as Euſebius ſaith, the Story of thoſe years after the Acts is not written by any, and conſequently whatever different account be pitched on, that will be meerly conjectural alſo, I ſhall therefore by keeping (in this matter of time and place) to the ordinary road, rather chooſe to adventure erring thus (in matters of no greater importance, then to attempt any new way, which will be equally, if not more uncertain. a. b. ὡσὲι Παῦλος

Thus then it is commonly acknowledged, that the Firſt to the Theſſalonians was written at his firſt being at Corinth, A.C. 50. The Second to the Theſſalonians probably while he ſtaid there the next year after. The Firſt to the Corinthians in the third year of his being at Epheſus, A.C. 54. wherein accordingly he mentions his deſign to tarry at Epheſus till Pentecoſt, ch. 16. 8. The Firſt to Timothy from Macedonia in the ſame year. That To Titus from Greece, A.C. 55. The Second to the Corinthians from Philippi, as ſoon as he had received news by Titus, what ſucceſs his Firſt Epiſtle had found among them; which appears by 2 Cor. 2. 12. and by the freſh mention of his danger at Epheſus, c. 1. 8. to be ſoon after the firſt. And perhaps about the ſame time the Epiſtle to the Galatians alſo. After which coming again to Corinth he wrote this to the Romans, a little before the Emperor Claudius's death, which is placed by Chronologers in the 55 year of Chriſt. That he wrote it at this time may appear by his own words, c. 15. 19, 23, 25. For there, v. 19. he ſaith, he had preached the Goſpel through Greece round about to Illyricum, (agreeable to what we find Acts 20. 3. where after his departure from Epheſus, &c. he came, and ſtay'd three months in Greece, meaning thereby the region from Achaia to Illyricum) and v. 23. that he had no more to do in thoſe parts, but was at the preſent at the writing hereof, v. 25. a going to Syria and Jeruſalem, to carry the Alms to the Chriſtians there. This journey we find him ready to undertake, Acts 20. 3. though becauſe of the Jews laying wait for him, (not only to kill him, but to ſeize upon the money which he carryed with him) he diverted thro' Macedonia. By which it is manifeſt, that this was the point of time wherein this Epiſtle was written, after his coming to Illyricum, and before his going up to Jeruſalem with the Collection, and ſo about the death of Claudius, and after the writing thoſe other Epiſtles. The reaſon then of this precedence is to be taken (poſitively) from the dignity of the City to which the Epiſtle was addreſſed, viz. Rome, the Imperial ſeat, which, as afterward it gave precedence to the Biſhop of that city, and ſeat of majeſty, before all other cities, tho' earlier planted with the Faith, ſo in the forming of the Canon of Scripture, it brought the precedence to this Epiſtle, before thoſe which were more anciently written.

Secondly, That this Epiſtle was written to the Romans, before this Apoſtles having been among them: This appears very probable from ſeveral paſſages in the firſt chapter, v. 10, 11. 13. but eſpecially, v. 15. So as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the Goſpel to you that are in Rome alſo, joining them with the Greeks and Barbarians, to whom he was a debter, v. 14. that is, had not yet paid that charity of preaching the Goſpel to them. If this be rightly concluded, it will then follow, that a Church being before this time planted there, and that in an eminent manner, ſo as to be taken notice of in all the Provinces, c. 1. 8. ſome other Apoſtle, and particularly St. Peter, muſt before this time be ſuppoſed to have preached there, by force of that known affirmation of the ancients, that the Church of Rome was θεμελιωθεῖσα καὶ οἰκοδομηθεῖσα, founded and edified by thoſe two Apoſtles, Peter and Paul. So ſaith Irenæus of the Apoſtles indefinitely, and Epiphanius of theſe two by name. And ſo Gaius (in Euſeb. l. 2. c. κε.) ſpeaking of their monuments, calls them τροπαῖα τῶν ταυτῶν ἱδρυσαμένων ἐκκλησίαν, the Trophies of them which built that Church: and ſo Dionyſius Biſhop of Corinth (in the ſame place of Euſebius) affirms the Churches both of Rome and Corinth, ἀπὸ Πέτρου καὶ Παύλου φυτείαν θηθεῖσαν, to have been the plantation of both theſe, the one laying the foundation, or firſt preaching the Faith there, the other confirming them, v. 11. eſpecially the Gentile part of them.

Thirdly, That St. Peter, being the Apoſtle of the Circumciſion or Jews (as St. Paul of the uncircumciſion or Gentiles) the Church which was now at Rome conſiſted much of the Jews that were diſperſed from their own country, and dwelt there, but withal of ſome Gentile-Chriſtians alſo, to whom eſpecially this Epiſtle is addreſſed, as appears, c. 1. 13, 14, where the ὑμεῖς, you, to whom he writes, are joined with the other heathen nations, and the Ἕλλησι καὶ βαρβάροις, Greeks and Barbarians, v. 14.

Fourthly, That the Jewiſh Chriſtians here, as in other places, Acts 15. 1. & 21. 20. tho' they had received the Faith of Chriſt, were yet very zealous for the upholding the Jewiſh Law, the Moſaical rites, and conſequently oppoſed the preaching of the Goſpel to the Gentiles, unleſs they firſt became Proſelytes of the Jewiſh Covenant of Circumciſion, and ſo ſubmitted to their whole Law. And this they did eſpecially upon two arguments: 1. That the Gentiles being Idolaters, and ſo great ſinners, and by them ſtyled and counted ἁμαρτωλοὶ ſinners by way of eminence, were utterly uncapable of the favour or mercy of God, and conſequently ἁμαρτωλοὶ of of the benefits of the Goſpel. 2*ly*, That Circumciſion being the ſeal of God's Covenant of mercy; none were capable of mercy from God, that were not circumciſed. This doctrine of theſe Jewiſh Converts were directly contrary to that which was every where practiſed and taught by St. Paul: For as he freely preached the Goſpel to the Gentiles, and in every city, where the Jews reſiſted, forſook them, and profeſſedly betook himſelf to the Gentiles, Acts 13. 46. ſo he taught the no-neceſſity of Circumciſion, and other Moſaical obſervances, (as of an abrogated, aboliſhed Law, ſee Rom. 7. 1.) even to Jew-Chriſtians, Acts 21. 21. much more to thoſe that from the Gentiles ſhould convert to Chriſt, whoſe paſt ſins, how great ſoever they were, yet if they ſhould now upon the preaching of Chriſt forſake them, and accept the faith and obedience of Chriſt, they ſhould freely be forgiven them; whereas on the other ſide, without the receiving the Faith, the Law of Moſes (Circumciſion and Sacrifices, &c.) would not be able to juſtify any (whether Jew or Gentile-Proſelytes) from any wilful ſins againſt that Law. This was the ſum of St. Paul's doctrine at Antioch, Acts 13. 38, 39. that through Chriſt is preached unto them remiſſion of ſins, and by him all that believe are juſtified from thoſe things from which they could not be juſtified by the Law of Moſes, that is, from the guilt and puniſhment of known, deliberate ſins of the greateſt ſize, even Idolatry it ſelf (for which the Law afforded no mercy, no place of Repentance, but inflicted preſent death) in caſe of ſincere Reformation. As when Heb. 9. 15. Chriſt is ſaid to be mediator of a new Covenant; to redeem us by his death from the tranſgreſſions that were under the Law, that is, from thoſe ſins for which the Law afforded no pardon, upon repentance and reformation. And the ſame is the theme and ſubjects of a conſiderable part of this Epiſtle. And becauſe the objections of the Judaizers both in the groſs, and in every branch of them, being familiarly known to the writer, are not ſo diſtinctly and formally ſet down by him to receive their ſeveral anſwers, but proceeded to covertly, and ſo as might leaſt interrupt the thread of the diſcourſe, this is one chief cauſe of the difficulty of the Epiſtles, which may be leſſen'd by this Premonition.

Fifthly, That before the time of writing this Epiſtle, Simon Magus and the Gnoſticks (the darnel which in thoſe firſt times the devil conſtantly ſowed, wherever the Chriſtian Faith had entred) were come, as to other places, ſo to Rome alſo. For in Claudius's time it was that a ſtatue was erected at Rome, To Simon the Holy God, and to that this Apoſtle refers, 2 Theſ. 2. 4. which Epiſtle, as hath been ſaid, was written four years before this. From whence, as it will be eaſy to believe that many paſſages in this Epiſtle refer to, and are purpoſely oppoſed againſt that hereſy of the Gnoſticks, ſo when we remember the character of theſe men, that they were great aſſerters of the Moſaical Rites, oppoſed and condemned all that neglected them, and yet lived in all the foul villanies of the Gentiles, we ſhall the leſs wonder that a great part of this Epiſtle, being addreſſed to Chriſtians at Rome, is yet ſet diſtinctly to reprehend thoſe Gentile Practiſes; c. 1. & 2. and to anſwer the Jewiſh objections againſt the Chriſtians, there being ſo many unclean Judaizing Gnoſticks, which had crept in among the Chriſtians, and every where brought diſturbances among them, that the Apoſtles that deſired to defend the Faith, and confirm the weak ſeducible profeſſors of it, could do nothing more worthy of his Apoſtleſhip; meaning, as he ſaith, when he came among them, to withſtand theſe oppoſers of both ſorts with all boldneſs, c. 1. 16, 17, 18. and particularly to juſtify and vindicate his practice of preaching the Goſpel to the Gentiles (who neither by their former ſins, nor their want of Circumciſion, were prejudged or excluded from receiving benefit by it) at which the Judaizers were ſo much offended. That this was the occaſion of this Epiſtle, and that this was the theme accordingly ſet upon, c. 1. 16. I am not aſhamed of the Goſpel of Chriſt, for it is the power of God unto ſalvation, to the Jew firſt, and alſo to the Greek, and purſued from thence to the concluſion, at the end of c. 15. will appear in the explication of it; wherein as we ſhall find much of difficulty in many places, as particularly in that of c. 11. (the paſſage which St. Peter ſeemed to have pointed at, 2 Pet. 3. 16.) ſo our having this grand ſcope of the Apoſtle in our eye (the vindication of this act of God's providence, as in calling the Gentiles, ſo in leaving the obdurate incredulous Jews) will be very uſeful to extricate the reader out of thoſe difficulties, which the obſtruſeneſs of the writing, and the (unobſerved) conciſe paſſing from one Jewiſh objection to another (rather glancing, by the way, at their known objections, then ſolemnly propoſing and anſwering them) have firſt cauſed, and then ſome inconvenient prejudices and prepoſſeſſions have improved and enhanſed, and at length made appear ſo inſuperable. In order to which it is that I have in this Epiſtle taken liberty to enlarge the Paraphraſe to a great length in many places, by inculcating, and, by way of parentheſis, interſerting thoſe heads of diſcourſe, which I conceive are chiefly referred to, and from the obſerving of which the explication doth principally proceed, conceiving this length, and circumlocution, the ſhorteſt way to my deſigned end, the clear underſtanding of this Epiſtle, and that which hath ſuperſeded the neceſſity of multiplying the Annotations on all the dark paſſages, which would much more have lengthned the work, and have been leſs intelligible by the vulgar reader. The prime things that muſt here be taken care of are, firſt, that the occaſions of the ſeveral parts of the Apoſtles diſcourſe be adverted to, viz. ſome objections of the Judaizers againſt his doctrine and practice, which are ſecretly inſinuated, and require great and diligent care to diſcern them. And then ſecondly, that the rational importance of every part of this Epiſtle, the relation it hath to the concluſion, which it is deſigned to infer, and the Connexion of one part with another, be weighed and permitted to have its due influence on the interpretation, and then the bare ſound of ſome few incidental paſſages will not be of force to miſguide any.

THE EPISTLE OF Paul the Apoſtle to the Romans.

15. And ſo 'tis not my fault, who for my part, and as much as my will is concerned in it, am moſt cheerfully ready to take this journey to Rome alſo, to preach the Goſpel among you.

16. For I am ſo far from concealing, that I am very forward & earneſt to make known the Goſpel of Chriſt, whatſoever oppoſition, or perſecution, or pains it coſt me, knowing it to be a moſt effectual means, the only one now deſigned by God, to bring all men that embrace it, to repentance, and reformation of life (ſee note on c. 10. a.) and that which is by God appointed to be made known not only to the Jews; who had the priviledge of having it firſt revealed to them, (ſee Acts 3. 26.) but to all others of all the Nations of the World.

The juſt ſhall by God's mercy accepting and rewarding his faith, (his adherence and fidelity to him) return from captivity, and live happily, ſo now in like manner all that fear God ſhould return from the captivity of ſin, and continue to live a pure Chriſtian Life here, according to the rules of the Goſpel. b.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν

V. 4. Reſurrection from the dead] Ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν is the general word which contains under it the riſing again of every dead body, and is appliable to every ſuch particular that riſeth, and ſo here denotes the Reſurrection of Chriſt, being by the context particularly determined to that, as in other places it may denote the Reſurrection of any one or more men, as the Context ſhall enforce.

b. Δικαιοσύνη

V. 17. Righteouſneſs] For the explaining of this verſe, the firſt thing to be examined is the notion of Δικαιοσύνη, righteouſneſs, and with the addition of Θεοῦ the righteouſneſs of God. Δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſs, ſignifies not always the virtue of juſt dealing, but ſometimes, by a Metonymie, the matter about which that is converſant, the things which by Law are required of any, and in performance of which his righteouſneſs conſequently conſiſts. Thus when Mat. 3. 15. Chriſt ſaith to John, Thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteouſneſs, by righteouſneſs are meant all thoſe things that under that more imperfect miniſtry of John were preſcribed men, and required of them to do, to their being approved by God. Thus thoſe things which are required of Jews to perform under the Moſaical Law, are called Δικαιοσύνη ἡ ἐν νόμῳ, the righteouſneſs which is in the Law, Phil. 3. 6. And, there being two ſorts of Proſelytes of the Jews, one of thoſe which undertook the whole Law of the Jews, were circumciſed, &c. the other of thoſe which only received the ſeven precepts of the ſons of Adam, and Noah, the former of theſe were called indifferently גרי ברית Proſelytes of the Covenant, and גרי צדקה Proſelytes of righteouſneſs. Where righteouſneſs ſignifies all thoſe commands and ordinances, which in that Moſaical Covenant were required of the Jews, and without ſubmiſſion to which no ſtranger was permitted to come into their inner court of the Temple, and join with them in the worſhip of God. To this purpoſe it is obſervable, what was the prime occaſion of this Epiſtle, the great charge which by the Jews was laid on Paul for preaching the Goſpel to the Gentiles, and thereby promiſing them acceptance and mercy from God for all their paſt ſins on condition of their embracing the Goſpel, and living for the future according to that rule, without any performance of the ritual Laws of Moſes, Circumciſion, &c. This the Jews violently oppoſed, as that which was an apoſtatizing from the Law of Moſes, and the ſetting up a new righteouſneſs, a new ſummary of performances, a new Law, to the prejudice of the Moſaical. What Paul had thus done, he here aſſerts and ſtands to, as that which was now the declared will of God, under the Goſpel, tho' diſtant from that which had before been required of Jews under the Law. And as now he ſets up the faith of Chriſt, νόμον πίστεως, the Law of faith, the ſummary of thoſe things which Chriſt from God requires of all men, againſt the Ordinances of external obedience in the Moſaical Law, ſo he thinks fit to ſtyle one the righteouſneſs of God, as the other was the Jews righteouſneſs, and this righteouſneſs of God, ἐκ πίστεως, of, or by, faith, that is, that which Chriſt hath now revealed or declared to be our righteouſneſs, that which is required of us now under the Goſpel, to our being juſtified in God's ſight, in oppoſition to the Δικαιοσύνη ἐκ νόμου, that ſort of legal performances, Circumciſion, &c. by obſervation of which the Jew and the Judaizer pretended to be acceptable, and juſtified before God, and without which they contended that there was no juſtification to be had, and conſequently that the uncircumciſed Gentiles could not be juſtified, or acceptable in the ſight of God; the contrary to which is by St. Paul here undertaken to be proved, and is after enlarged on, c. 3. & 4. &c. Thus much for the occaſion of this phraſe, and the general importance of it, to note that way of œconomy of ſaving and juſtifying men under the Goſpel. As for the more particular nature of this way of God's dealing in Chriſt, that is alſo contained in the ἐκ πίστεως, by faith, as faith ſignifies the embracing, and obeying of Chriſt, after a former life of ſin & ignorance, ſuch as the heathens had lived in. For whatſoever their former lives had been, againſt which the Jews objected, that they were Idolatrous and vile, and neither capable of God's favour, nor fit to be converſed with by any pious perſon, yet Chriſt that came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance, came particularly, tho' not primarily, to call, and offer place of repentance to them, and upon reformation, to allow them pardon: which tho' it were not Δικαιοσύνη ἐξ ἔργων a righteouſneſs by, or from, works, a way of œconomy, whereby only juſt or worthy perſons are called, and received, yet it is a righteouſneſs by, or from faith, whereby thro' God's mercy, and pardon of ſin in Chriſt, thoſe that come in to him, and give up themſelves to ſincere obedience for the future, are accepted, and juſtified by God, as Abraham was, which is ſtyled God's juſtifying the ungodly, becauſe thoſe that have been moſt impious, have yet place of repentance given, and are accepted by God upon repentance. In this ſence we ſhall oft find this word Δικαιοσύνη, righteouſneſs in the enſuing chapters. So c. 9. 30. ἔθνη κατέλαβε Δικαιοσύνην, The Gentiles laid hold on righteouſneſs, that is, on this Evangelical way, and c. 10. 3. ἀγνοοῦντες Θεοῦ Δικαιοσύνην, the Jews not knowing this courſe of juſtifying ſinners, ſet down in the Goſpel, ſought to eſtabliſh their own (Judaical) righteouſneſs, and were not ſubject to Gods righteouſneſs. So again, v. 6. ἡ ἐκ πίστεως Δικαιοσύνη (the ſame phraſe, as here, in this placing and conſtruction of the words) the righteouſneſs from, or by faith, that is, this Evangelical way, which is by the faith, or the Goſpel, and is oppoſed to the Διακονία θανάτου, the promulgation of the Law which brought nothing but death to every act of wilful ſin. So the Apoſtles are called Διάκονοι Δικαιοσύνης, 2 Cor. 11. 15. miniſters of righteouſneſs, viz. of this way of juſtifying men in Chriſt, which elſewhere are called miniſters of the new covenant, noting righteouſneſs in this notion, to ſignify this new covenant (as righteouſneſs and covenant, and צדקה and ברית were ſaid to be all one) or this Evangelical way under it, explained, v. 24. by δικαιούμενοι δωρεὰν τῇ αὐτοῦ χάριτι, our being juſtified freely by his grace, or mercy, without any ſuch precedent obedience of ours, that may any way challenge it. All that remains is, to enquire, firſt, why ἐκ πίστεως, from, or by faith, ſhould in the conſtruction be joined with Δικαιοσύνη, righteouſneſs; then why εἰς πίστιν, to faith, ſhould ſignify that we may believe. For the firſt, it is but an ordinary ὑστέρον both in theſe and other authors, thus to tranſpoſe words, on the like occaſion; and that it is ſo here, is evident by the enſuing citation out of the Prophet, as it is written, (which notes theſe two to be parallel) the juſt by faith ſhall live, and by the like phraſe, c. 3. 22. & c. 10. 6. And for the ſecond, εἰς πίστιν, that we may believe, that will be very agreeable alſo to many other places in this book; for ſo εἰς σωτηρίαν, to ſalvation, v. 16. is, that they may be ſaved; ſo εἰς ναῦσιν, to burning, *Heb.*6.8. that it may be burnt; and ſo Wiſd. 11. 23. Παροράς ἁμαρτήματα ἀνθρώπων εἰς μετάνοιαν, Thou paſſeſt over the faults of men to repentance, that is, that they may repent; and ſo here, *c.*6.16. εἰς ὑπακοὴν, to obedience, is, that ye may obey, and v. 19. εἰς τὴν ἀνομίαν to iniquity, is, that you may commit all villany, as in the concluſion of that verſe, εἰς ἁγιασμὸν, to purification, or ſanctification, is, that ye may live pure and ſanctified lives.

c. Κατέχω

V. 18. Hold] The word κατέχω ſignifies two things, (very diſtant) to retain and hold faſt, and to obſtruct or hinder. Κατέχειν, κρατεῖν, κωλύειν, ζωώχειν, ſaith Heſychius, it ſignifies to hold faſt, to hinder, to compreſs. In the notion of hindring, 'tis taken 2 Theſ. 2.6,7. and in the other in divers places, By this means 'tis become uncertain, what it ſhould ſignify here, eſpecially when either way the ſenſe is very commodious: for even they that retain the truth in righteouſneſs, that under the acknowledgment and profeſſion of the truth, veil and join all manner of impious living, do thereby hinder and obſtruct the truth, viz. the force of it on themſelves, and the propagation of it to others by that impious living of theirs. But the former is the more likely ſenſe of it, and moſt agreeable to the conſequents, of their knowing the truth, and becoming unexcuſable thereby.

d. ἀπὸ Κτίσεως κόσμου

V. 20. From the creation] The phraſe ἀπὸ κτίσεως κόσμου is here joined with ἀόρατα αὐτοῦ, the inviſible things, or attributes of God, his power and Godhead, from the foundation, or creation, of the world, that is, ever ſince the creation; ſo doth ἀπ' ἀρχῆς κτίσεως, from the beginning of the creation ſignify, Mark 10.6. & 13.19. & 2 Pet. 3.4. ſo κεκρυμμένα ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου, Mat. 13. 35. the things hidden from the foundation of the World. and c. 25. 34, Luke 11. 50. Heb. 4. 3. where it clearly ſignifies from, that is, ever ſince the creation, and ſo ch. 9. 26. ſo Rev. 13. 8. & 17. 8. Names written and not written in the book of the Lamb from, that is, ever ſince, the foundation of the world. By which it appears that there is no neceſſity of underſtanding God's ποιήματα, doings or actions here, of the works of the creation, but of all things that from that time to this incluſively have been done in the world by him, and ſo it will be extended to all the doctrines, & miracles, and actions of Chriſt, the whole buſineſs of the Goſpel.

Ποιήματα

e. Γνόντες τὸν Θεὸν

V. 21. Knew God] The phraſe γνόντες τὸν Θεὸν, knowing God here ſeems to refer the whole preſent diſcourſe to the Gnoſticks, who were ſo called from their aſſuming to themſelves ſo much of the knowledge of God, and the myſteries of religion. And theſe being a ſort of Hereticks in that firſt age under the Apoſtles, who affirmed Simon to be God the Father, that appeared in Mount Sinai, as alſo God the Son that appeared in the fleſh, and the holy Ghoſt, who was promiſed to come, were the darnel ſown by the envious perſon, whereſoever the Goſpel was planted; and this as in other places, ſo in Rome, where Simon Magus the founder of them (contended after this time with St. Peter, but) before the writing of this, in Claudius's days, had a ſtatue erected to him, as to the ſupreme God. Theſe Gnoſticks pretended to be great zelots for the Law of Moſes, particularly for Circumciſion, thereby to avoid the perſecutions which the Jews raiſed againſt the Chriſtians, Gal. 6. 12. and on the other ſide thought it lawful to offer ſacrifice to Idols, 1 Cor. 8. (to comply with the heathens) becauſe, as they ſaid, an idol was nothing, and yet farther, worſhipped the images and pictures of Simon and Helena; and ſo, as Euſebius ſaith, τὸ σώφρονα καὶ δι' ἀκριβείας βίον βεβιωκόσιν παρὰ πᾶσι χριστιανῶν φιλοσοφίαν ἐπιτηδεύσαντες, ὡς μετὰ δόξης ἀπαλλαττόμενοι τὸν ἀρχαῖον δεισιδαιμονίας, οἷόν πόθεν αὖθις ἐπιλαμβάνονται, pretending to have turned Chriſtians, and ſo to have changed the idolatry and ſuperſtition that before they lived in, for the pure and ſober rules of life taught by Chriſt, they fell nevertheleſs back again to all that which they ſeemed to have forſaken, καταπίπτοντες δὴ γραφὰς καὶ αὐτοὺς αὐτῶν τὸν Σίμωνα, καὶ τὴν σὺν αὐτῷ δυσωδεστάτην Ἑλένην, θυμιάμασί τε καὶ θυσίαις καὶ σπονδαῖς τύτους θρησκεύειν ὑπο-χειρίους, falling down to the pictures and images of Simon and Helen, worſhipping them with incenſe, and meat and drink-offerings. Τὰ δὲ τύτων ἀπόῤῥητα——but for their more ſecret and hidden actions they were ſuch as would aſtoniſh any to hear them, δι' ὑπερβολὴν τῆς αἰσχρουργίας καὶ ἀῤῥησιοποιΐας, for the ſuperlative impurity and abomination that was in them. This, I ſuppoſe, will be a key of entrance into the deſign and meaning of this Epiſtle, wherein the Apoſtles willing to fortify the Roman Converts againſt the danger of theſe ſuperſeminations, confutes theſe doctrines of the Gnoſticks, eſpecially that of complying with the Jews concerning the neceſſity of obſerving the Judaical Law, and here firſt gives a character of them, as they agree with the heathens in Idolatry, and all kind of wickedneſs, and unnatural uncleanneſs, *ver.*29. &c. and by their Living ſo contrary to the Law, ſhew what little reaſon they have to pretend to the obſerving of it, when indeed 'tis the inward purity of the Heart and Actions, and not the outward Circumciſion of the fleſh, which the Law principally aimed at. That theſe Gnoſticks are the men here referred to, may farther appear by comparing this place, eſpecially, v. 27. with the diſcourſe of the Gnoſticks in St. Jude directly parallel to this (ſee Note on Jude d.) and ſo by their character here, v. 29. the πορνεία and πλεονεξία (fornication and inordinate deſires) compared with many other places of the Epiſtles, *Gal.*5.19. Eph. 5. 3. Col. 3. 5. and the pride, &c. ver. 30. with 1 Tim. 6. 4. and the like in the other particulars.

f. Δόξα

V. 23. Glory] The word δόξα glory, here ſeems to refer to the notion or uſe of it, Exod. 24. 16. where it is ſaid of God's preſence and appearance there in the Mount Sinai, וישכן כבוד יהוה על הר, the glory of the Lord abode upon the mount. From whence it is that the word ſchechinah, abiding, is ordinarily uſed to ſignify this or the like glorious appearance, or preſence of God, and is directly parallel to δόξα glory, here. Now of God's appearance on Mount Sinai, it is to be obſerved, 1. that God did not there exhibit himſelf in any bodily ſhape; only glorious appearances there were, ver. 16. as it were a paved work of Sapphire Stone, &c. and the ſight of the glory of the Lord was like devouring fire, ver. 17. but ſaith Moſes, Deut. 4. 15. Ye ſaw no manner of ſimilitude in the day that the Lord ſpake to you in Horeb. And this is there preſs'd by Moſes, to enforce God's Commandment, that they ſhould not corrupt themſelves, and make them a graven image, the ſimilitude of any figure, the likeneſs of male or female, the likeneſs of any beaſt, of any winged fowl, of any thing that creepeth on the ground, of any fiſh, &c. Now of theſe followers and worſhippers of Simon (the Gnoſticks) it is ſufficiently known, firſt that they affirmed Simon to be the ſupreme God, diſtinctly he that appeared in Sinai; ſo ſaith Cyril of Jeruſalem, Cat. 5'. ſpeaking of Simon at Rome, μεγίστος ἐβόλμησεν εἰπεῖν ἑαυτὸν μεῖζόν τι ἢ ὃν ὄφθη Σινᾶ ὡς πάλιρρα φανέντα, he preſumed to ſay of himſelf, that he was he that appeared on Mount Sinai as the father. Secondly, that he had a ſtatue erected to him at Rome inſcribed, To Simon the holy God, and ſo alſo his whore Helena, ſaith Euſebius, (ſee note e.) and both of them worſhipped by them. Nay moreover, 3*dly*, That the Gnoſticks complied with the other heathen Idolaters, partaking of their Sacrifices and Feaſts, and ſo were guilty of all kind of Idolatry. Of theſe therefore the Apoſtle may be believed to ſpeak here particularly, and to lay to their charge, 1ſt. That they changed the glory of God, that is, the glorious appearance of his in Mount Sinai, wherein yet there was no Similitude ſeen, into an image, or ſimilitude of a man, viz. of Simon Magus, a bodily ſhape of a meer mortal man; whereas the immortal God, that appeared in Sinai, was never ſeen in any ſuch ſhape. 2*ly*, That in doing this they are guilty of that great ſin of Idolatry, (there forbidden, upon this ground of their ſeeing no no ſimilitude in Sinai) viz. of worſhipping the image of a man, and of flying, and four-footed, and creeping things, which are here repeated, as the very things that had been there interdicted. And though it be true of the Gnoſticks, that by their joining with the heathen Idolaters, they were literally guilty of worſhipping every one of theſe here named, yet their worſhipping of Simon and Helen alone is ſufficient to own all the charge that is here laid on them. The worſhipping of one ſort of the things forbidden, the likeneſs of the male and female, being as direct a breach of the Commandment, which forbad that and others alſo, as the worſhipping of all and each of them would be. This is after ſet down more ſuccinctly, *v.*25. They turned the truth of God into a lie, that is, either the true ſtory, Exod. 24. where no ſimilitude was ſeen, into this falſe ſtory of Simon there appearing, or elſe transformed that infinite inviſible Deity into an Image or Idol, and παρὰ ϯ κλίσιν, above and beſide the Creator of heaven and earth, worſhipp'd alſo, ϯ κλίσιν, this creature, vile ſinful creatures of his, Simon, and his Whore. This phraſe of turning or transforming, the glory, &c. ſeems to be borrowed from Pſal. 106. 20. They made a calf in Horeb, and worſhipped a graven image: thus they turned their glory into the ſimilitude of a calf that eateth hay, &c. As they there that ſaw no ſimilitude in the mount, yet made one preſently, viz. the ſimilitude of a calf; ſo theſe Gnoſticks here making Simon to have appeared in Sinai, as the Father, make him an image and ſtatue to worſhip him in it. Of the word δόξα glory, ſomewhat hath been ſaid before, note on Mat. 3. k. and more will be added, Rom. 9. b.

g. Παρὰ. Ariſteas hiſt. 70. interp. p. 861. A.

V. 25. More then the Creator] Of the uſe of παρὰ for above one inſtance will ſuffice in the * Epiſtle of Eleazar the High-prieſt to Ptolemy, telling him by way of great acknowledgment and gratitude, πάντα ὅσα σοὶ συμφέρει, κὴ εἰ παρὰ φύσιν ἔστιν, ὑπακουόμεθα, All things that are profitable to you, though they be above nature, we will obediently perform. Thus Luke 13. 2. and 4. ἁμαρτωλοὶ παρὰ πάντας, ſinners above all others; though Luke 3. 13. it be more fully expreſſed by πλέον παρὰ, more beſides, or above. As for the other notion of παρὰ for contrary to (which here may have place alſo, for he that worſhips any thing above, or beſide the one true God, doth it in oppoſition to him, and to the wronging and robbing him) we have an expreſs teſtimony for it, Acts 18. 13. παρὰ ϯ νόμον, contrary to the Law.

h. Ἀδόκιμος

V. 18. Reprobate] The word ἀδόκιμος hath two notions eſpecially, one among the Metalliſts, the other belonging to the agones. Any metal that will not bear the δοκιμὴ or trial, or which, being tried, betrays it ſelf to be adulterate, is ἀδόκιμος, reprobate. But the notion that ſeems moſt peculiarly to belong to it in the New Teſtament, is the other, taken from the agones, where, as he that ſtrives as he ought, and conquers, is δόκιμος, approved, 2 Tim. 2. 15. and Jam. 1. 12. δόκιμοι κὴ λαμψάμενοι στέφανον, approved, and ſuch as ſhall receive the crown, and in other authors, εὐδόκιμοι well approved, (and of other creatures ἵππος δόκιμος, an approved horſe in the Ἱππιατρικῇ) ſo he that loſes the game and prize, that doth not run or ſtrive, νομίμως, according to the laws of the game, and ſo overcome, is ſaid to be ἀδόκιμος, to miſcarry in the race, and ſo to loſe the reward of it. Thus in Democrates, Δόκιμος ἀνὴρ κὴ ἀδόκιμος οὐκ ἐξ ὧν πράσσει μόνον, ἀλλ' ἐξ ὧν βούλεται, A man is approved or rejected not only by what he doth, but by what he wills. So in the Sibylline Oracles.

Δόκιμος

Ἀγνὸς γὰρ Χριστὸς τούτοις τὰ δίκαια βραβεύσει, Καὶ δοκίμους στέψει —— Chriſt will crown the approved.

Thus 1 Cor. 9. 27. 'tis at the concluſion of an agoniſtical diſcourſe of running and cuffing, &c. the cloſe of which is that the Apoſtle uſes all his moſt earneſt endeavours, leſt, (being a κήρυξ, preacher, crier, officer in the agones, to propoſe the laws and rewards of the agones to others, which is ἀνακηρύττειν and ἀνακηρύττειν, to proclaim, ſuch a man conqueror, ſuch a man to have loſt) he himſelf ſhould ἀποκηρυχθῶ, be rejected, found uncapable of the reward by all aſpired to, fail of that crown of eternal life. So 2 Tim. 3. 8. ἀδόκιμοι περὶ ϯ πίστιν, in the matter of faith, ſuch as were found unworthy of reward by God, propoſed to Chriſtians. So Tit. 1. 16. ἀδόκιμοι, to every good work, that do nothing fit to be approved by God or man: where yet, as in all the former places, the figure λιτότης is to be obſerved, the word being uſed not for him only that deſerves no reward, or that miſſes it, but for him that is moſt contrary, the moſt vile and wicked, that deſerves the contrary puniſhment, (as ἀσεβὴς, and ἄνομος, and ἀχρεῖος, and ἀχημοσύνη, ungodly, without Law, unprofitable, uncomelineſs, ſignify the moſt wicked, the moſt unfaithful ſervant, moſt violent oppoſer of the Law, the greateſt impurities, and many other the like) and therefore is interpreted by βδελυκτοὶ ὄντες κὴ ἀπειθεῖς, that went before, being abominable, and diſobedient, or contumacious. So Heb. 6. 8. of the ground that brings forth nothing but briars and thorns, that 'tis ἀδόκιμος, and κατάρας ἐγγὺς, reprobate, and nigh to a curſe. And ſo ſaith Heſychius and Phavorinus, Ἀδόκιμος, πονηρὸς, it ſignifies a wicked man. And ſo it is here taken in this ſenſe of extremely ill, as appears by the effects that follow, the μὴ καθήκοντα, all the abominable ſins that were in faſhion among the Gentile-idolaters, and Gnoſtick Chriſtians. And the ſame may be ſaid of that place, 2 Cor. 13. 5, 6, 7. which we will explain when we come to it. There is one thing more here obſervable, the anſwering of ἀδόκιμος here to οὐκ ἐδοκίμασαν, in the beginning of the verſe, They approved not, thought not good to have God in their acknowledgment, and anſwerably God gave them up to a mind, ſuch as neither God nor any elſe will approve of: which manner of ſpeaking is very frequent in the Scripture, eſpecially in ſetting down God's puniſhments on ſinners, in which the ſacred writers delight to obſerve ſome correſpondence. As Pſal. 18. With the froward thou wilt ſhew thy ſelf froward; and, Becauſe you have walked contrary to me, I will walk contrary to you; and Mat. 5. 19. Whoſoever ſhall break one of the leaſt of theſe commandments, the ſame ſhall be the leaſt in the kingdom of heaven. And many the like, which have formerly been obſerv'd.

μὴ καθήκοντα

V. 29. Covetouſneſs] The word πλεονεξία, in this and many other places of the New Teſtament, which we generally render covetouſneſs, ſignifies exceſſive, or unnatural, luſts, (not deſire of money only) and is ordinarily ſet down among the baſeneſſes of the Gnoſtick hereſy, as I here ſuppoſe it is. So Eph. 4. 19. Οἵτινες ἀπηλγηκότες, who giving over all labour (as idleneſs was the mother ſin of the Sodomites) gave themſelves up to laſciviouſneſs, to work all uncleanneſs, ἐν πλεονεξίᾳ in inordinate unnatural deſires. Thus in Photius Epiſt. 168. ἡ βάρβαρος πλεονεξία ſignifies ſuch luſt as was among barbarians or heathens, (and had been before exemplified in Joſeph's Egyptian miſtreſs) τὸν ὀχληρὸν ἔρωτα κτησαμένη, which poſſeſs'd the diſturb'd lover, as there it follows. So in * St. Chryſoſtom, ſpeaking of theſe unnatural luſts, ὁρᾷς, ſaith he, ὅτι ἀπὸ πλεονεξίας τὸ πᾶν, you ſee that it comes all from this inordinate deſire, ἐπιθυμίας οὐκ ἀναχωρούσης ἔτι τῶν οἰκείων ὅρων μένειν, luſt not enduring to ſtay or be contained within its own bounds. So in Antiochus, λογ. ξά. ἐπιθυμία γυναικῶν κὴ πλεονεξιῶν, deſire of women and ſuch like inordinations. For as to the nature of the word, it is known to come from πλέον ἔχω, and to ſignify any immoderate deſire of any thing above ones portion. So in Ariſtotle 'tis oppoſed ἰσότητι, to equality. So in Heſychius, Πλεονεξία, τὸ πλέον τοῦ δίκαιου ἔκ τινος λαμβάνειν, to take more then is due or meet of any thing. So in Lucian de Cal. the calumniator is deſcribed to be one, that will have and encloſe all his auditors to himſelf, will let no man elſe be heard, and for this he calls him πλεονέκτην, one that aſſumes more then belongeth to him: and ſo Democrates in his γνωμ. defines πλεονεξία to be ſpeaking all, and not enduring to hear any body elſe. And in Themiſtius Paraphraſe

i. Πλεονεξία

* To. 2. p. 24. l. 13.

of the firſt book de Anima, πλεονεκτῶν is taken for any kind of exceeding, πᾶσαν γνῶσιν πιμίαν εἶναι, πλεονεξίᾳ δὲ ἑτέραν ἑτέρας, one exceeds, or excels, the other; and in * Iſocrates, ſpeaking of Monarchies, τὰς ἐν πολέμῳ πλεονεξίας πάσας περιειλήφασι, they comprehend, ſaith he, all the advantages that are in war. And ſo in * Eophantes, Βασιλεὺς ἐν τᾷ κοινᾷ φύσει πλεονεκτῶν κρίνεται, a King hath a great eminence, or excellence, over the common nature of men: and in Alex. Aphrod. περὶ ἐμπαρμ. σωματικὰ πλεονεκτήματα, are the faculties of the body wherein beaſts exceed men, and ſo φυσικὴ (perhaps it ſhould be read ψυχικὴ) πλεονεξία, the excellence of the mind of men above beaſts. And the notion of which now I ſpeak, tho' it differ in the object, and matter about which it is converſant, is the ſame in effect with theſe, a deſiring and uſurping that which is not agreeable to his condition, ſex, nature &c. τὰ μὴ καθήκοντα, thoſe things that are not meet, which Alex. Aphrodiſ. more diſtinctly expreſſeth in his Schol. on Ariſt. de An. Ὁ ἄδικος αὐτῷ πλέον τῶν ἡδέων νέμει, The wicked man allows himſelf too large a proportion of ſweet things, or pleaſures. So Aſterius Hom. Cont. Avarit. Πλεονεξία ὄχ ἡ μόνον τῷ ἀργυρίῳ συν τοῖς ἄλλοις κτήμασιν ὀνομαίνεσθαι—— ἀλλὰ γνικώτερον εἰπεῖν, τὸ ὅπ παντὸς πράγματος πλέον ἔχειν βέλεσθαι τῆ ὀφειλομένη καὶ ὀπ-ςἀλλοντος. It is not uſed only for the mad love of money and other poſſeſſions, but in a more general acception, to deſire to have more of any thing then is due and convenient. So Hierax in his book of juſtice, (of which we have a large fragment in * Stobæus) makes ἀδικία and πλεονεξία all one, and then exemplifies it in Milo and Lais: and as 'tis one branch of it in Milo, διαρπάζειν ἀδυνατωτέρων χρήματα, to ſnatch away the eſtates of thoſe that are weaker then he, ſo 'tis another καὶ τὰς τούτων γυναῖκας, to force their wives from them. And ſo in Lais, as it is one act of it, πλεῖον εἰσπράξειν παρὰ τῶν ἐρασῶν, to require and gain immoderately by her lovers; ſo it is another, ἐνίων γυναικῶν καὶ γάμους διαλύειν, to diſſolve the marriages of ſome women, to get away their husbands from them. And of this we have a Grammatical ground in the Hebrew word, בצע, which ſignifies both covetouſneſs and luſt, and being by the Septuagint often rendrd πλεονεξία covetouſneſs, is once rendred μιασμὸς pollution, Ezek. 33.31. and to that notion of the word the place agrees, if we compare it with *v.*29. Where the cauſe of their deſolation is the abominations committed by them, and thoſe joyned with defiling the neighbours wife, v.26. Thus in an ancient Prayer of Ephraim Syrus appointed for confeſſion, and the ſin chiefly inſiſted on being that of uncleanneſs (as appears by ἐμὲ τὸν αἰσχρὸν, τὸν φλυαρὸν, τὸν μιαίνοντα τὸν αὐτὸν ἄρτα ἀπὸ τῶν αἰσχρῶν καὶ ἀτόπων ἔργων μου, τὸν μιαίνοντα τὸν ναὸν τῆς σώμαλός μου, &c. ἀτίμοις καὶ πονηραῖς φιληδονίαις μου, πᾶν μέλος μου ἐμίανε ἔφθειρε, &c.) he prays, σπλαγχνίσθητι ἐπ ταῖς ἁμαρλίαις μου, καὶ ἀδικίαις, καὶ πλεονεξίαις, καὶ μοιχείαις, καὶ πορνείαις, καὶ καλαλαλιαῖς, καὶ αἰσχρολογίαις, &c. have mercy on my ſins, my iniquities, my unnatural luſts, adulteries, fornications, idle and filthy ſpeakings; where, if we may judge by the attendants, the word is uſed in this ſenſe. Thus I conceive Plato uſed the word de *Rep. l.*9. where ſpeaking of ſenſual men, he compares them to the beaſts, χορταζόμενοι καὶ ὀχεύοντες, full fed and laſcivious, and farther adds, ἕνεκα τῆς τούτων πλεονεξίας κυρτοῦνλες καὶ λακτίζοντες, &c. where the πλεονεξία τούτων muſt refer to the fulneſs of luſt and fleſh together. To theſe may be added the Gloſs of Phavorinus, Πλεονεξία ἡ ὑπὲρ τῆς ἐπιθυμίας τοῦ πλείονος βλαβὴ (for which he cites the Apoſtle) the hurt of immoderate luſting, and ſo the word τρυφὴ which ſignifies this very thing, and which he expreſſeth by λιχνεία φιλήδονος, voluptuouſneſs, he expreſſeth alſo by πλεονασμὸς περίεργος περὶ ἡδυπάθειαν ἀεὶ μὲν ὤν, an exceſs which is always very curious, buſy, importunate to fetch in pleaſures, πλεονεξία, and πλεονασμὸς being but little different from one another. Thus 'tis uſed in the Epiſtle of Barnabas, p. 231. where giving the reaſon why hares were forbidden under the Law, to intimate that we ſhould not be παιδοφθόροι like them, he adds, ὅτι ὁ λαγωὸς καθ' ἑαυτὸν πλεονεκτεῖ τὸν ἀριθμὸν.

And in the fragments of Polycarpus's Epiſtle, ſpeaking of Valens an Elder of Philippi, and his having committed ſomewhat utterly unworthy of that calling, by his example he admoniſheth others to abſtain, ab avaritia (that ſure was in Greek ἀπὸ πλεονεξίας) from inordinate deſires, & ſint caſti, and that they be chaſte, adding that whoſoever did not thus abſtain, ὁ μὴ ἀπέχόμενος πλεονεξίας, ab idololatria coinquinabitur, & tanquam inter Gentes judicabitur, will be contaminated with Idolatry, and judged as among the Gentiles. And ſo there is little reaſon to doubt, but that, when Bede on Mat. 5.32. ſpeaking of Divorce ſaith, non hic intelligitur tantùm fornicatio in ſtupro, quod in alienis viris aut feminis committitur, ſed omnis concupiſcentia, vel avaritia, vel idololatria, &c. 'tis not only adultery that is here underſtood, which is committed on other mens wives, but every concupiſcence, or covetouſneſs, or Idolatry, he means by avaritia coveting, unnatural luſt, having, no queſtion, tranſlated that note out of ſome Greek commentator who had uſed πλεονεξία in this ſenſe. And ſo when * Holkot out of Papias obſerves, that the Scriptures call by the name of fornication, omnem illicitam corruptionem, all unlawful, or interdicted, corruption (ſicut eſt Idololatrii & avaritia, ſuch are idolatry and coveting) it is evident, that corruptio illicita is the ἀδικωτάτη φθορὰ abominable villany, as φθορὰ ſignifies (ſee Note on c.8.1.) and idolatry, and covetouſneſs, the unnatural ſins uſed by the heathen worſhippers, the πλεονεξία, which is Idolatry. And ſo when Theophylact on 1 Cor. 3. 12. in the higheſt rank of combuſtible matter (that is, of ſins) reckons ἀκαθαρσίαν, εἰδωλολατρείαν, πλεονεξίαν, in all reaſon it is to be underſtood of unnatural luſts, ſo as to agree with uncleanneſs and idolatry. Thus in all reaſon the word is to be taken here, where theſe four [πορνεία fornication, πονηρία villany, κακία naughtineſs, and πλεονεξία inordinate deſire] are put together, πονηρία and κακία in the ſame notion that Gen. 19. 7. & 9. πονηρεύεσθαι and κακῶσαι are taken, that is, to ſignify the ſin of Sodom there deſcribed, and in all probability πορνεία and πλεονεξία in the ſame ſenſe alſo. So Col. 3.5. in relation to the Gnoſticks, he bids them mortify fornication, uncleanneſs, πάθος (that is, as the Syriack render it) paſſivity, evil concupiſcence, and πλεονεξία inordinate deſire, which is Idolatry. So Eph. 5. 3. Let neither fornication, nor uncleanneſs, nor πλεονεξία, inordinate deſire be named among you, putting them in the number of the nefanda, ſins not to be named, add ſo v. 5. Every fornicator, or unclean perſon, or πλεονέκτης (not covetous, but inordinate luſter) who is an Idolater: as when Maimonides, Mor. Neb. l. 3. c. 38. ſpeaking of the unnatural ſins uſed by the Gentiles, and having named one abominable cuſtom of theirs, propter hoc, ſaith he, prohibita eſt inciſio arboris in aliam ſpeciem, ut elangemur à cauſis Idolatriæ & fornicationum. To the ſame ſenſe is πλεονεκτεῖν ἐν τῷ πράγματι τὸν ἀδελφὸν, 1 Theſ. 4.6. as ſhall there (Note a.) be explained. So 1 Cor. 5. 11. ἢ πόρνος ἢ πλεονέκτης ἢ εἰδωλολάτρης, either fornicator, or inordinate luſter, or Idolater, ſpeaking of the Gnoſtick Chriſtians again; as in Barnabas's Epiſtle, p. 252. in the bedroll of deſtroying ſins there is εἰδωλολατρεία, φαρμακεία, μαγεία πλεονεξία, ἀφοβία Θεοῦ, Idolatry, ſorcery, magick (in reference to the Gnoſticks witchcrafts) inordinate luſts, fearleſneſs of God. So the καρδία γεγυμνασμένη πλεονεξίαις, 2 Pet. 2. 14. by the matter of that whole Chapter is confined to this ſenſe, a heart exerciſed with inordinate luſts, which renders them κατάρας τέκνα, children of a curſe, ſure to be deſtroyed; and all this makes it reaſonable to pitch upon this notion of this word πλεονεξία in this place. So when Saint Paul, 2 Cor. 7. after an exhortation of coming out from among them, (as out of Sodom) and of not touching the unclean thing, chap. 6. 7. and of cleanſing themſelves from all filthineſs, c. 7. 1. ſubjoyns v. 2. Receive us, οὐδένα ἠδικήσαμεν, we have injured no man, οὐδένα ἐφθείραμεν, we have corrupted no man, and adds, οὐδένα ἐπλεονεκτήσαμεν, it may very fitly be rendred in this ſenſe, οὐδένα ἐπλεονεκτήσαμεν ſenſe, of foul unnatural luſts, referring all the three words to their Gnoſtick falſe teachers, that debauched thoſe who entertained them, brought them to all ἀδικία wickedneſs, injuſtice, (which is uſed for that ſin, Gen. 6. 5. and here Rom. 1. 18.) φθορᾷ corruption, (uſed for that ſin, Gen. 6. 11, 12. and 2 Pet. 2. 12. See Note on 2 Pet. 1.b.) and πλεονεξίᾳ inordinate luſts, in the ſame ſenſe: not that St. Paul had any reaſon to vindicate himſelf from theſe ſins (no more had he, whatſoever other notion they could be interpreted in) but to intimate the vaſt difference betwixt him and the Gnoſtick teachers, or ſeducers, which had theſe deſigns upon them: which the rather appears by his next words, v. 3. I ſpeak not to condemn you, which implies that what he laſt ſaid, was by way of reproach to their new leaders, tho' not to the condemning of them to whom he wrote. In the ſame ſenſe it is that he tells the Theſſalonians, 1 Theſ. 2. 5. that he was not with them, ἐν προφάσει πλεονεξίας. See Note on that place.

k. Τὴν ἕξιν] V. 30. Deſpightful] The word ὕβριστὰς may here moſt probably denote thoſe unnatural luſts alſo. And ſo is it manifeſtly affirmed and defined by * Plato, Ἐπιθυμίας δὲ ἀλόγως ἑλκούσης ἐπὶ ἡδονὰς, καὶ ἀρξάσης ἐν ἡμῖν τῆ ἀρχῆ ὕβρις ἐπωνομάσθη, when deſire draws us irrationally to pleaſures, and gets dominion over us, this is named ὕβρις contumely. So * Dio in Oeconomico, κλαίων οὐδεὶς πρωτεύσαλο ὕβριστὴν, by weeping none ever incited the contumelious, that is, the unlawful lover. So in * Phintys's book of the womans ſobriety, the adulterous wife is ſaid ἀδονᾶς ἕνεκεν ἁμαρτάνειν καὶ ὑβρίσειν, to be for pleaſures ſake guilty of ſin and contumely. And ſo in * Nicoſtratus παῖδες ἐξ ἀσελγείας καὶ ὕβρεως γεγονότες, are adulterous brats. So in Philoſtratus de vita Apol. l. 1. c. 11. ὑβριστὴς ἀνδρῶν, is preſently ſaid to be κακὸς τὰ ἐρωτικὰ, wicked in his loves, or luſts, and of him it follows, that he fell in love with Apollonius for his beauty. So in * Charondas his Proem to his Laws, ſpeaking of martial Chaſtity, and preſcribing the care of Procreation, not of pleaſure, he adds, μηδὲ τὸ φύσει καὶ νόμῳ τίμιον, ἀνόμως ἀναλισκέτω καὶ ὑβριζέτω, uſing ὕβρις for any inordinate or unlawful act of impurity. And this agrees moſt aptly with many former paſſages of this chapter, and the character of the Gnoſticks here ſet down, who diſliked marriage, and uſed all unlawful liberties and pollutions.

V. 31. Without underſtanding] Ἀσυνέτους, τοὺς ἀσυνέτους λέγει ὁ Ἀπόστολος, ſaith Phavorinus, the Apoſtle means thoſe that have no conſcience; knowledge and conſcience, σύνεσις and συνείδησις, being all one, and ſo the want of that is the want of Conſcience. This, it ſeems, was the judgment of that learned Grammarian of this place, to which, no doubt, he refers by the word Ἀπόστολος. Heſychius renders it only ἄφρων, fooliſh, but ſo as fooliſh ſignifies unreaſonable actions, and as ἄνοια Luke 6. 11. ſignifies deſigning malice and miſchief againſt Chriſt, and as Tit. 3. 3. Ἀνόητοι ſignifies thoſe that were guilty of unreaſonable practices. And this according to the uſe of σύνεσις which is ſometimes the mind, the underſtanding, Mark 12. 33. with which God is to be loved, as well as known, and ſo the not knowing him thus may be ſet for the greateſt impiety. Of σύνεσις ſee more in Note on 1 Cor. 1. e.

Ib. Covenant-breakers] Ἀσύνθετος, ὁ ἀσύμφωνος, καὶ ἡ συνθήκαις μὴ ἐμμένων, not apt to agree with others, one that ſtands not to pacts, bargains, ſaith Phavorinus; and ſo Heſychius being rightly pointed, Ἀσυνθέτους, μὴ ἐμμένοντας ἢ συνθήκαις, and Ἀσυνθετώτατον, ἀπιστότατον, καὶ ἀβεβαιότατον, unfaithful and unconſtant.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. II.

a. 1. By this it appears how little can be ſaid in excuſe of thoſe ſeducers among you, who judge and condemn the orthodox Chriſtians, as breakers of the Law, only becauſe they are not circumciſed, &c. when they who thus condemn them obſerve not the Law, no not in that very particular, which circumciſion peculiarly noted, the abſtaining from abominable uncleanneſſes, but live and go on in thoſe ſins, c. 1. 29. and ſo condemn themſelves in judging others.

1 THerefore thou art inexcuſable, O man, * whoſoever thou art that judgeſt: for wherein thou judgeſt another, thou condemneſt thy ſelf, for thou that judgeſt doſt the ſame things.]

* every one that judgeſt

b. 2. Whereas 'tis moſt infallibly certain, and acknowledged by all, that God paſſes judgment rightly, not ſparing a Jew for his outward ceremonies, when he puniſhes a Gentile that lives as well as he, but puniſhing ſin, rewarding diſobedience (if it be not reformed and forſaken) whereſoever he finds it, without any acceptation of perſons, or conſideration of external performances, or priviledges, or advantages in any.

2. But † we are ſure that the judgment of God is according to [b] truth againſt them which commit ſuch things.]

† we know, οἴδαμεν

3. And thinkeſt thou this, O man, that judgeſt them which do ſuch things, and doſt the ſame, that thou ſhalt eſcape the judgment of God?]

3. And then how is it poſſible, that thou ſhoud'ſt judge the pure Chriſtian to be a breaker of the Law, and thereupon in a damnable eſtate, only for not being Circumciſed, and yet deem thy ſelf ſafe, when thou art guilty of thoſe filthineſſes which were moſt eminently prohibited by the Law of circumciſion?

4. Or deſpiſeſt thou the riches of his goodneſs, and forbearance, and long ſuffering, not knowing that the goodneſs of God leadeth thee to repentance?]

4. Or ſhall God's great patience and longanimity in deferring his vengeance on unbelievers, and his forbearing ſo long to puniſh thy ſinful courſe, be caſt away upon thee, be deſpiſed, and not made uſe of by thee? Doſt thou not conſider all this long-ſuffering of God to thee is purpoſely deſigned to bring thee to reformation, and if it work not that effect, will tend to thy heavier ruine?

5. But * after thy hardneſs and impenitent heart, treaſureſt up unto thy ſelf wrath againſt the day of wrath, and † revelation of the righteous judgment of God?]

5. Wilt thou thus go on in obdurate reſiſting of all God's methods, and be never the better for his deferring theſe judgments ſo long, but only to add more weight to thy ruine when it comes?

* according to, κατὰ
† or, retribution of, for the K's MS. reads ἀνταποδόσεως

6. Who will render to every man according to his deeds.]

6. Who ſhall not conſider circumciſion or uncircumciſion, but puniſh or reward every man according to his actions.

7. To them who by * patient continuance in welldoing ſeek for glory, and honour, and immortality; eternal life:]

7. To them that by conſtancy of pure Chriſtian performances, and by patient bearing of the perſecutions that fall upon them for that profeſſion, go on in purſuit of that reward which Chriſt hath promiſed to ſuch, he ſhall beſtow another life upon the loſs of this, eternal bliſs in the world to come.

* patience of the good work, ὑπομονὴν ἔργου ἀγαθοῦ

8. But unto † them that are contentious, and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteouſneſs, indignation and wrath:

10. But glory, and honour, and peace to every man that worketh good, to the Jew firſt, and alſo to the * Gentile.]

8, 9, 10. But to ſchiſmatical factious men, which are as it were born; and compoſed, and made up of contention (as the Gnoſticks are) that reſiſt the right way; deny the Chriſtians the liberty of not being circumciſed, and themſelves live in all unnatural ſins, thoſe that do thus renounce the Goſpel, and live contrary to the Law, to ſuch all judgments muſt be expected, deſolations and deſtructions here in a moſt eminent manner, and eternal miſery attending them. And as the Jew ſhall have had the priviledge to be firſt rewarded for his good performances (as appears by Chriſt's being firſt revealed to him, in whom conſequently and proportionably he ſhall have all ſpiritual Grace and and crown, if he embrace Chriſt, and live exactly and conſtantly according to his directions) ſo muſt he alſo expect to have his puniſhment and deſtruction firſt, and that a ſad one at this preſent by the Roman armies, upon their final rejecting and refuſing Chriſt. The greater his privileges are, the greater alſo his provocations and his guilt will be. And then the Gnoſtick alſo that takes part with the Jew, ſhall bear him company in the vengeance. As for the Gentiles, as they are put after the Jews only (and not left out) in the mercies of God, particularly in the revealing of Chriſt, ſo ſhall their puniſhments upon their provocations only come after the puniſhment of the Jews, not be wholly ſuperſeded (and accordingly 'tis to be ſeen in the predictions of both their ruines, in the Revelation, the Jewiſh unbelievers and Gnoſticks are puniſh'd firſt, and then the Gentiles and carnal Chriſtian with them alſo.)

11. For there is no reſpect of perſons with God.] 11. For God's rewards and puniſhments are not confer'd by any uncertain rule of arbitrary favour or diſpleaſure, neither depend they upon any outward privileges or performances, as either having or not having received the Law, being or not being circumciſed, but are exactly proportion'd according to mens inward qualifications or demeanours.

12. For as many as have ſinned without Law, ſhall alſo periſh without Law: and as many as have ſinned in the Law, ſhall be judged by the Law.] 12. For all thoſe of the Gentile world, who having not received the Moſaical Law of circumciſion, have ſinned againſt that knowledge of God which hath otherwiſe been afforded them, ſhall be adjudged to perdition, though not by the Law of Moſes (it ſhall never be laid to their charge that they have not been circumciſed) or, though they be puniſhed, yet ſhall not they have that aggravation of their ſin and puniſhment, which belongs to thoſe which have received the Law of Moſes, they ſhall only be judged for their not obſerving the Law of nature, (ſee Theophylact) the Law of Moſes being not able to accuſe them. And thoſe who having received the Law of Moſes, and in it the ſign of the covenant, circumciſion, do not yet live according to it, (ſuch are theſe unbelieving Jews, and Judaizing Gnoſticks) all the benefit that they ſhall reap by their having received the Law and circumciſion, ſhall be to have that their accuſer, by which they may be condemn'd the deeper, inſtead of their advocate to plead for them.

13. For not the hearers of the Law are juſt before God, but the doers of the Law ſhall be juſtified.] 13. For, to ſpeak to the latter firſt (ſee note on Mat. 7. b.) 'tis a dangerous unchriſtian error, to think that the hearing or knowing their duty, the having the Law delivered to them (yea and the ſeal of the covenant, circumciſion in their fleſh) without conſcientious practice of the duties thereof, ſhall ſtand them in any ſtead: No, 'tis only the living orderly, according to rule and Law, that will render any man acceptable in God's ſight.

14. For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the Law, theſe having not the Law, are a Law unto themſelves.] 14. And for the former, 'tis clear, for when the other people of the world, which have not had that revelation of God's will and Law which the Jews had, do without that revelation, by the dictate of their reaſon, and thoſe natural notions of good and evil implanted in them, (and by thoſe precepts of the Sons of Adam by parents tranſmitted to children, and ſo, without any further revelation from heaven, come down unto them) perform the ſubſtantial things required in the Law of Moſes, and denoted by circumciſion and other ceremonies; this is an argument and evidence, that theſe men do to themſelves ſupply the place of Moſes's Law.

15. Which ſhew the work of the Law written in their hearts, their conſcience alſo bearing witneſs, and [c] their thoughts * the mean while accuſing, or elſe excuſing one another.] 15. And that obligation to puniſhment, which is ordinarily cauſed by the Law, c.

* Among themſelves, either accuſing, or pleading for them, μεταξὺ ἀλλήλων κατηγορούντων, ἢ καὶ ἀπολογουμένων.

theſe men demonſtrate themſelves to have, without help of the Moſaical Law; From whence alſo it is, that as conſcience (which, according to the nature of the word, is a man's knowing that he hath done, or not done, what is by Law commanded) is conſtantly witneſs either for, or againſt them, that they have done, or not done their duty, ſo the general notions and inſtincts of good and evil that are in them, without any light from the Moſaical Law, do either accuſe them as tranſgreſſors of the Law of God, or elſe plead for them, that they have not culpably done any thing againſt it. From whence it appears to be moſt juſt even by their own confeſſion, that they that have ſinned without Law, tranſgreſs'd the Law of nature, ſhould alſo be puniſh'd, though they never heard of this Moſaical Law, (which was the thing affirmed, v. 12. from whence to v. 16. all that hath been ſaid is but a parentheſis.)

16. In the day when God ſhall judge the ſecrets of men by Jeſus Chriſt according to [d] my Goſpel.] 16. And when I ſpeak of periſhing and judging, v 12. d.

I ſpeak of that doom which ſhall involve all both Jews and Gentiles at that great day, when Chriſt Jeſus, being by his Father ſeated in his regal power, ſhall at the end of all come forth again to judge the world, not according to outward priviſeges or performances, but inward qualifications and demeanures, being, as he is, a ſearcher of hearts: For then ſhall the Jews be dealt with either in judgment or mercy, as they have lived or not lived according to the rules of the Moſaical Law, and ſo the Gentiles alſo according as they have obey'd or not obey'd the Law of Nature. (And this is the very doctrine that hath been taught us by Chriſt, and by me and others preached to the world.)

17. Behold thou art [e] called a Jew, and reſteſt in the Law, and makeſt thy boaſt of God,] 17. And thus ſhall the proceſs be to the Judaizing e.

Gnoſticks, in this or the like form; Thou that calleſt thy ſelf, or ſaiſt thou art a Jew, though indeed thou art not, Thou that dependeſt upon the outward performances of the Law, circumciſion, &c. as if juſtification were to be had by that, and could not be had without it, Thou that boaſteſt that God is thy father, or favourer in a particular manner, becauſe thou adhereſt ſo faithfully to his Law, even in oppoſition to Chriſt's reformations, (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.)

18. And knoweſt his will, and [f] approveſt the things that are more excellent, being inſtructed out of the Law,] 18. Thou that undertakeſt to know all the myſteries of f.

God's will (and thence art by thy ſelf called called a Gnoſtick or knowing perſon) and upon examination, to approve and practiſe the higheſt perfections, by the skill which thou haſt in the law of Moſes.

19. And art confident, that thou thy ſelf art a guide to the blind, a light of them which are in darkneſs,] 19. And ſo by that advantage takeſt thy ſelf to be a moſt knowing perſon, fit to lead all others, and deſpiſing the orthodox Chriſtians for blind and ignorant, (ſee note on Jam. 3. a.)

20. An inſtructer of the fooliſh, a teacher of babes, which haſt the [g] form of knowledge and of the truth in the Law;] 20. Aſſumeſt great matters to thy ſelf, as having a g.

ſcheme or abſtract of all knowledge and true religion (ſee note on 2 Pet. 1. c.) by the knowledge and underſtanding which thou haſt, and by the gloſſes which thou giveſt of the Law;

21. Thou therefore which teacheſt another, teacheſt thou not thy ſelf? thou that * preacheſt, a man ſhould not ſteal, doſt thou ſteal? 21, 22. Thou therefore, I ſay, that pretendeſt ſuch zeal to, and skill in the Law, that are ſo ſtrict for legal performances, doſt thou

* Proclaimeſt, κηρύσσων.

22. Thou that ſayeſt, A man ſhould not commit adultery, doſt thou commit adultery? thou that abhorreſt idols, doſt thou commit ſacrilege?]

commit the ſame ſin thy ſelf (ſuppoſing it ſtealth, &c.) which thou condemneſt in others? doſt thou that condemneſt a Chriſtian for not being circumciſed, commit the great ſin forbidden in the Law of circumciſion? This is, as if he that pretended ſuch a pious reſpect to the place of God's worſhip, as not to endure with any patience a falſe God or idol to be ſet up in it, ſhould yet ſo much deſpiſe the ſame place, as to rob it of thoſe things that are conſecrated to it: which ſure is as abſolute a profaning of any holy place, as to ſet up the moſt heathen idol in it.

23. Thou that makeſt thy boaſt in the Law, through breaking the Law diſhonoureſt thou God?] 23. Thou that glorieſt in thy zeal to the Law, doſt thou commit the moſt unlawful practices, and by ſo doing bring a reproach on all Chriſtian religion?

24. For the name of God is blaſphemed among the Gentiles through you, as it is written.] 24. For the unbelieving Gentiles ſeeing and judging by your evil lives, are alienated from Chriſtianity, have an evil opinion of the profeſſion, and of Chriſt, whom you worſhip, and ſo thoſe Scriptures which mention the diſhonour of God's name among the Gentiles, Iſa. 52. 5. Ezec. 36. 20, 23. may fitly be accommodated to you.

25. For circumciſion verily profiteth, if thou keep the Law, but if thou be a breaker of the Law, thy circumciſion is made uncircumciſion.] 25. For men that thus live 'tis madneſs to think that circumciſion circumciſion will ſtand them in any ſtead: ¦For circumciſion is a Sacrament to ſeal benefits to them who are circumciſed, if the condition required of them (that is, the ſanctity and purity ſignified thereby) be performed alſo; but if not, there is no ſpecial advantage comes to them by being circumciſed, that is, thus complying with the Moſaical Law.

26. And by the ſame reaſon, if thoſe who are not obſervant of the Law, or circumciſed, viz. the Chriſtians of the Gentiles, live thoſe lives of purity and ſanctity, which that Sacrament was ſet to engage men to, they ſhall be accepted by God, as well as if they had been circumciſed.

26. Therefore if the uncircumciſion keep the † righteouſneſs of the Law, ſhall not his uncircumciſion be counted for circumciſion?

† Ordinances, δικαιώματα, See note on c. 8. b.

h. 27. And thoſe that having not been circumciſed, nor received the Law of Moſes (ſee note on Mat 5. g.) but only thoſe natural dictates, and directions, which are common to all men, if they yet do the things commanded in the Law of the Jews, that is, the moral ſubſtantial part of it, they ſhall condemn thee, who being in that legal ſtate, and obſerving not the ſenſe and meaning, but only the letter of the Law, art outwardly circumciſed, but doſt not perform that purity which that ceremony was ſet to ſignifie, and to engage all, that are circumciſed, to obſerve it.

27. And ſhall not * uncircumciſion which is by nature, if it fulfil the Law, judge thee, † who h by the letter and circumciſion doſt tranſgreſs the Law?]

29. But he is the Jew indeed, the true child of Abraham (who ſhall be accepted by God) though he be not ſo by birth, who in the purity of the heart performs thoſe ſubſtantial Laws required by God of the Jews, and revealed to them more diſtinctly than to other Nations, and the available circumciſion is that of him, who cuts off all ſuperfluities and pollutions which are ſpiritually, though not literally, meant by the Law of circumciſion, and ſo becomes pure in heart (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) who hath that Law, of which circumciſion was the ſign and ſeal, (the law of purity, or abſtinence from thoſe unnatural ſins, &c.) printed in his ſpirit or inner man, his ſoul, (that is, that practiſes it:) not he who hath literally obeyed it, and been circumciſed outwardly in the fleſh, even he whoſe praiſe is not of men (who ſees the outſide only, and among whom 'tis counted a great dignity to be a circumciſed Jew) but he who ſo behaves himſelf (whether he be a Jew or Gentile,) that God may accept of him, as a ſincere performer of his commands, an obedient ſervant of his.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Ὁ κρίνων. V. 1. Whoſoever thou art that judgeſt.] Ὁ κρίνων, thou that judgeſt here, and in the end of the verſe, and v. 3. is clearly the Gnoſtick Judaizer, who teaches the obſervation of the Moſaical Law, and accuſes the Orthodox Chriſtians, who are not circumciſed, for breakers of the Law; and yet himſelf runs riotouſly into thoſe ſins, for the abſtaining from which, Circumciſion was deſigned and inſtituted by God. This judging and condemning of the Gentile-Chriſtians was by them taken up from the Jews, who having themſelves guilt enough of ſins, as well as the Gentiles, would yet diſcriminate themſelves from all others by this or the like character of legal obſervances, as by that which ſhould juſtifie them, or free them from judgment, under which the Gentiles, which knew not the Moſaical Law, and were not circumciſed, were to lie, and be accurſed. This was the thing that John Baptiſt warns them of, to bring forth meet fruits of repentance, and not to ſay within themſelves, We have Abraham to our father, which they were apt to believe ſhould ſtand them in ſtead in the abſence of all thoſe fruits. This was the great error of that people, conſequent to their opinion of their abſolute election, whereby they reſolved, that 'twas not their juſt, or pious performances, that were looked on by God, or required to their Juſtification, but their being Abraham's ſeed, within the Covenant, and having the ſign of the Covenant in their fleſh, which they looked on as engagements (if not allurements and motives) of the favour of God to them, howſoever they lived; by this means making God a προσωποληπτης, one that choſe, or accepted, or favoured πρόσωπα, perſons, that is, men barely conſidered, with ſome outward advantages to ſet them off, without any intuition of their qualifications or demeanours. Which was the thing that is diſtinctly diſclaimed here, v. 11. and which S. Peter diſcerned to be ſo falſe, by the revealing of the Goſpel to the Gentiles, Acts 10. 34. Thus is the word ὁ κρίνων uſed, c. 14. 4. of the Jewiſh Chriſtian, that abſtained from ſome ſorts of meats, v. 2. and though he doth that either out of weakneſs, as that ſignifies diſeaſe, erroneous ſeduction, or at leaſt out of infirmity and ignorance, as thinking himſelf bound to it by the Moſaical Law (which he believes ſtill to oblige) and ſo ought not to be deſpiſed, or ſet at naught by him that underſtands Chriſtian liberty better, yet doth very ill in judging all others that do not abſtain as he doth. For this is the very ſame error that is here reprehended in the Jews and Gnoſticks, of judging all others as men out of God's favour, becauſe they do not what they do, or pretend to do, that is, obſerve not the ritual parts of Moſes's Law. And this being an error which the Jews and Gnoſticks were ſo guilty of, (and conſequently of this ſin attending it, of judging and condemning all but themſelves) is particularly mark'd in the Jews, Mat. 7. 1. and beaten down by Chriſt (as here in the Judaizers by the Apoſtle) as an irrational ſin, the grounds of which were quite contrary to the prime attribute of God, his juſtice, and rewarding all that diligently ſeek him, Heb. 11. 6. and every man according to his works here, ver. 6. and juſtifying the doers, not hearers of the word, v. 13.

Προσωποληπτης.

b. Ἀλήθεια. V. 2. Truth.] The Hebrew אמונת ſignifies both truth and juſtice, and is rendred by ἀλήθεια and δικαιοσύνη, and here one of them is put for the other, ἀλήθεια, truth, for δικαιοσύνη, juſtice, ſo as on the other ſide, ἄδικον μαμωνᾶ, the unjuſt mammon, is oppoſed to the true riches. See Note on Mat. 23. f.

c. Λογισμοὶ μεταξὺ ἀλλήλων. V. 15. Their thoughts the mean——] The λογισμοὶ μεταξὺ ἀλλήλων here are the practical κοιναὶ ἔννοιαι, common notions of good and evil, which are among the generality of men, even heathens, without any light from the Moſaical Law, and are called λογισμοὶ, reaſonings, becauſe reaſon, when it comes to a maturity, if it be not precorrupted with falſe doctrines and prejudices, will be able to conclude that this ought to be done, and not that, and ſo give us the principles of all moral actions.

d. Εὐαγγέλιον. V. 16. My Goſpel.] Paul's preaching every where, whither he came, is literally to be ſtiled his εὐαγγέλιον or Goſpel, and ſo it ſeems to ſignifie here. So in the Epiſtle of Clemens Romanus (contemporary to that Apoſtle) ad Corinth. after the mention of Bleſſed Paul's Epiſtles, he bids them mark τί πρῶτον ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ ἀρχῇ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου ἔγραψε, what he hath firſt written to you (Corinthians) in the beginning of the Goſpel, that is, at the time when the Goſpel was by him firſt preached among them.

e. Ἐπονομάζεσθαι. V. 17. Called a Jew.] Ἐπονομάζεσθαι is ſomewhat more than ὀνομάζεσθαι, it ſignifies an addition to one's proper name, and ſo it was here. The Gnoſticks aſſumed to themſelves the name of Jews, profeſſing to be of that religion, great friends to Moſes's Law; λέγουσιν ἑαυτοὺς Ἰουδαίους εἶναι, Rev. 2. 9. they ſay that they are Jews, when indeed many of them were not ſuch, either by birth, or obſervation of the Judaical cuſtoms, being not themſelves circumciſed (ſee Gal. 6. 13. and Note on Rev. 2. e.) and thoſe that were, living (not according, but) quite contrary to the Moſaical Law.

f. Δοκιμάζειν. V. 18. Approveſt.] That δοκιμάζειν, to prove, or trie, ſignifies ſo to examine and prove as to approve, appears appears by ſome other places, where the word is uſed. So 1 Cor. 11. 28. Let a man prove, or examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat of that, &c. where 'tis certain that, if upon examination he find himſelf unworthy, he muſt not ſo eat; for if he do, he eats damnation to himſelf, v. 29. and therefore it muſt ſignifie the approving himſelf to God and his own conſcience. So Rom. 14. 22. Happy is he who doth not judge, or condemn himſelf, ἐν ᾧ δοκιμάζει (not, in what he examines himſelf, but) in what, upon deliberation, he ſo likes, approves, as to think fit to act accordingly; that is, Happy is he that, when he is reſolved of the matter of the action, that it is lawful, doth it with ſuch care that he hurt not others that he hath nothing to blame in himſelf when he hath done it. So Gal. 6. 4. Let every man δοκιμάζειν, prove his own work, that is, ſo prove, examine his own actions, as to approve them to himſelf, his own conſcience, and to God, and then he ſhall have glorying, or rejoicing, (that is, he ſhall be able to comfort himſelf) εἰς ἑαυτὸν μόνον, toward himſelf alone, that is, by looking on himſelf abſolutely, and not only in conjunction or compariſon with other men, which is meant by, καὶ οὐκ εἰς τὸ ἕτερον, and not towards another, to which belongs the reaſon rendred in the next verſe, For every one ſhall bear his own burthen. So Eph. 5. 10. walk as children of light, δοκιμάζοντες τί ἐστιν εὐάρεστον τῷ Κυρίῳ, examining, proving, what is acceptable to the Lord; but this ſo, that they alſo approve themſelves to ſtudy and purſue it, or elſe they do not walk like children of light, like Chriſtians. The truth is, this is not ſo familiar a phraſe, the proving what is acceptable to God, as the former is, of proving and approving himſelf, or, his own works: yet becauſe the examining, and the approving of God's will, is a direct undertaking, and obligation to practiſe it, and becauſe it is a ridiculous thing, and that which will never ſtand in any ſtead, to examine what is well pleaſing to God, and, when he hath done ſo, to act or practiſe the contrary, therefore the Apoſtle, that exhorts to this, as to a duty which will ſtand them in ſome ſtead, and as an evidence of their walking as children of light (not as the partial condition, or a means to perform God's will, but as the knowing God's will in the Scripture, when 'tis look'd on as a good thing, is the practiſing of it) muſt be ſuppoſed to contain in this phraſe of proving, the approving alſo, and not only ſo, but alſo the performing (at leaſt endeavour and ſtudy) what is acceptable to the Lord, and ſhall to them appear to be ſo, and not only the examining what is thus acceptable. And then one other place Rom. 12. 2. will by the ſame reaſon be clearly intelligible alſo in this ſenſe, where they are exhorted by all the exceeding mercies and compaſſions of God to preſent themſelves to God a living and well-pleaſing ſacrifice, and inſtead of conformity with the world, to be transfigured, that is, eminently and viſibly changed, by, or in the renovation of their mind, εἰς τὸ δοκιμάζειν, (which notes this to be an effect, if not the end of this renovation of mind) that they may prove what is the will of God, the good, the acceptable, the perfect, which is directly the ſcheme or form of ſpeaking uſed to the Epheſians (only with the addition of ſome more words, not to alter, but enhanſe this notion of it) ſo to ſearch into the will of God, what is good and acceptable to him in the higheſt degree, as to practiſe and purſue it, and approve themſelves to God and their own ſouls to have done ſo. And by this means the meaning of δοκιμάζειν τὰ διαφέροντα both here and Phil. 1. 10. will be more intelligible alſo, than otherwiſe, if it were not compared with theſe two laſt places, it would be. In that to the Philippians, thus, I pray that your love may abound, &c. your great forwardneſs to the advancing and propagating the Goſpel, v. 4. εἰς τὸ δοκιμάζειν ὑμᾶς (as an effect again of their abundance of Chriſtian charity, or zeal to the Goſpel) that you may examine firſt, and then approve, or like, and then ſet your ſelves to the purſuit of τὰ διαφέροντα the things that excel, that are eminently good, (proportionably to the abounding of their charity going before) that is, do as much good as you can poſſibly; or as Theophylact interprets διαφέροντα, by τὰ καθήκοντα ἑκάστῳ, the things that belong to every man, and τὰ συμφέροντα, profitable, thoſe things which are proper and expedient for you to do. And then this will without queſtion belong alſo to the ſame phraſe in this place, where, of the Gnoſtick-Judaizers he ſaith, γινώσκεις τὸ θέλημα καὶ δοκιμάζεις τὰ διαφέροντα, Thou knoweſt (that is, pretendeſt to know above all others, and therefore art called Gnoſtick, knowing) the will, (that is, the will of God) and proveſt, that is, examineſt with all acuteneſs and diligence, and having by examination found out what is moſt excellent, moſt acceptable in the ſight of God, thou likeſt, chooſeſt, approveſt it (that is, pretendeſt and aſſumeſt to thy ſelf to do ſo) and practiſeſt accordingly, κατηχούμενος ἐκ τοῦ νόμου, being firſt, for thy foundation, inſtructed in the Law of Moſes, as all pious men ought to be, to lay their foundation their; and thus aſſuming to thy ſelf this high perfection above all others, (the Orthodox Chriſtians) πέποιθας, &c. v. 19. thou haſt confidence to thy ſelf that thou art a guide to the blind, &c. that none are ſo fit to be διδάσκαλοι, (ſee Note on Jam. 3. a.) inſtructers, and to be heeded, as you. Thus in Ignatius Epiſtle to the Smyrnæans, ſpeaking of the reverence due to the Biſhops judgment, ὃ ἂν ἐκεῖνος δοκιμάσῃ, τοῦτο καὶ τῷ Θεῷ εὐάρεστον, what he ſhall, upon examination, approve of, this is alſo well-pleaſing to God.

διαφέροντα. Γινώσκεις τὸ θέλημα. Κατηχούμενος ἐκ τοῦ νόμου. Πέποιθας.

V. 20. Form.] Μόρφωσις, ὁμοίωσις, εἰκών, ſaith Phavorinus (out of Heſychius) a ſcheme or image of a whole matter; but this, ſaith he, ἐπίπλαστον, οὐκ ὂν δέ, that which is feigned, or believed, or pretended to be ſo, but is not; and for this he cites this place of the Apoſtle, and ſo indeed very pertinently, the Gnoſtick here thinking that he hath a ſcheme or compleat form of all knowledge, and truth, and myſteries of religion, when he hath it not, but is far from it. Theophylact hath another notion of it for ζωγράφησις, painting to the life, and interprets the place of the Jewiſh Doctor, who ζωγραφεῖ καὶ μορφοῖ τὴν γνῶσιν τοῦ καλοῦ καὶ τὴν ἀλήθειαν ἐν ταῖς τῶν μαθητῶν ψυχαῖς, forms and draws to the life the knowledge of good and the truth in the hearts of diſciples. g. Μόρφωσις.

V. 27. By the letter.] The notion of διὰ is here to be obſerved, and is beſt expreſs'd by in. So in Pauſanias διὰ φόβων γίνεσθαι, in metu verſari, to be in a condition of fears, or dangers. So here ch. 4. 11. οἱ πιστεύοντες δι' ἀκροβυστίας, thoſe that being in uncircumciſion, that is, in the Gentile ſtate, do yet believe; and ſo here ὁ διὰ γράμματος καὶ περιτομῆς παραβάτης νόμου, thee, who being in the Law and circumciſion, that is, in that external condition of Moſaical œconomy, art yet a tranſgreſſor of the Law. Of this, or the like uſe of διὰ, ſee Note on 2 Pet. 3. d. h. Διὰ.

CHAP. III. Paraphraſe.

1. WHat advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumciſion?]

1. The former two chapters having been chiefly ſpent on the Gnoſticks (thoſe hæreticks, that, leading villanous, heathen lives, pretended zeal to the legal Moſaical obſervances) in perſwading and fortifying others againſt their pretenſes, not to be ſeduced by them to depart from the Church, or to condemn the uncircumciſed Gentile-Chriſtians, for not having the carnal circumciſion, the Apoſtle now proceeds to the defence of his doctrine, (and withal, of that great Apoſtolical practice (ſo heavily objected againſt him by the Jews and Judaizers,) of preaching to the Gentiles, departing from the unbelieving obſtinate Jews, and of that great diſpoſition of God's providence in Chriſt, the receiving the Gentiles, and rejecting the Jews,) and that he may vindicate it, he firſt propoſes ſome vulgar objections againſt it: As firſt, If this which was laid c. 2. 28, 29. be true, (if God reward the cleanneſs of the heart, and inward purity, without without any diſcrimination of birth, or regard of circumciſion, that is, if the Gentiles remaining uncircumciſed may be received into the Church) then it may ſeem that a Jew hath no advantage or privilege, or prerogative above the Gentiles, no benefit of the promiſes made to Abraham, when he was appointed to be circumciſed, he and all his ſeed. But all this is thus anſwered:

a. 2. That, this notwithſtanding, the advantages of the Jews have been in many reſpects very great; For firſt this is one advantage that they have had above the Gentiles, that they were intruſted with the oracles of God, that is, received all the revelations of his will, the Law (which ch. 2. the Jew ſo much boaſted in) and alſo the Prophecies, as the People with whom God thought fit to depoſite all theſe, for the benefit of the whole world.

2. Much every way; * a chiefly, becauſe that † unto them were committed the oracles of God.

* As firſt.
† They were intruſted with, ἐπιστεύθησαν.

b. 3, 4. Which certainly, though many Jews dealt unfaithfully in that truſt of theirs, heeded them not ſo far themſelves as to perform obedience to them, or to render themſelves capable of the benefit of them, were nevertheleſs real exhibitions of God's mercy, evidences of his favour, and ſo performances of God's promiſes, (ſee 2 Tim. 2. 13.) ſealed to Abraham at his circumciſion, as alſo truſts of God (ſo Theophylact renders it) God's committing or intruſting his Oracles to them, v. 2. and ſpecial favours to that people of the Jews, above what was afforded others; there being no appearance of reaſon that any default of ours, upon which the promiſes (being conditional) ceaſe to belong to us, ſhould be charged on God, as if his promiſes had not been made good unto us. For whatſoever falſeneſs or unfaithfulneſs there may be in man, 'twere ſure blaſphemy to think there ſhould be any in God; he is moſt faithful in performing what he hath promiſed, although every man ſhould be unfaithful, and fail to perform his duty in making uſe of it; nay, the greater and more provoking the ſins of men are, the more illuſtrious is his fidelity in making good his part toward thoſe that are ſo unworthy, according to that ſcripture, Pſal. 51. 4. to this ſenſe ſpoken of God by David, That thou mayſt be juſtified, &c. that is that thou mayſt appear juſt and faithful in performing all thou ſayeſt, and overcome whenſoever thou art impleaded or queſtion'd by any.

3. For what if ſome * did not believe? ſhall their unbelief † make the faith of God without effect?]

4. God forbid: yea, let God be true, and every man a lier, as it is written, That thou mightſt be juſtified in thy ſayings, and mightſt overcome when thou * art b judged.]

* Or, obey'd not, for the King's MS. reads ἠπείθησαν.
† make void the fidelity of God? τὴν πίστιν τοῦ Θεοῦ καταργήσει.
* Contendeſt

5. But if our unrighteouſneſs commend the righteouſneſs of God, † what ſhall we ſay? * Is God unrighteous, who taketh vengeance? (I ſpeak † as a man.)]

† What ſay we? τί ἐροῦμεν;
* Is not God unjuſt? μὴ ἄδικος ὁ Θεός;
† According to man) κατὰ ἄνθρωπον)

5. But here it will be objected, If God's way of gracious œconomy under the Goſpel (ſee ch. 1. note b) may be thus ſet out, and more illuſtriouſly ſeen by the ſins of men, why ſhould God then thus puniſh the Jews (as the Apoſtles ſay he will, every where foretelling their approaching deſtruction) for theſe ſins of theirs, which thus tend to his glory? (I recite the objection of ſome men) or if he do, is it not injuſtice in him to do ſo?

6. God forbid: for then how ſhall God judge the world?]

6. God forbid that we ſhould ſay any thing, on which this may be inferr'd, for that were to deny him to be God, who, as ſuch, is Judge of all the world. (This ſeems to be here inſerted by way of Parentheſis, as a note or expreſſion of averſation and deteſtation of any ſuch blaſphemous inference, after which he again proceeds in the propoſed objection, v. 7. repeating it again in other words, which therefore muſt connect with v. 5. and cannot be the reaſon of what is ſaid here in this verſe.)

c. 7, 8. For, ſay they, If the faithfulneſs and mercifulneſs of God in performing his promiſes to Abraham, that is, of giving the Meſſias, hath appeared more abundantly, and hath tended more to his glory, by, or through occaſion of the Jews ſins or infidelities, there will then be no reaſon, why they that are guilty of ſuch ſins, ſo much tending to God's honour, ſhould ſtill be impleaded, or complained of, or proceeded with in judgment, arraign'd and puniſh'd as ſinners, that is, that God ſhould ſo complain and avenge that in the Jews, which tends to his honour, but, on the other ſide, men might do well to commit ſuch ſins, from which ſo much good (or glory to God) might come. This indeed by ſome is thought to be an objection of great force againſt me, who am falſely accuſed to have delivered this very ſaying, in the caſe of the heathens having the Goſpel preached to them, viz. that the greatneſs of the heathens ſins makes God's mercy appear the more illuſtriouſly great, in vouchſafing to call them by the preaching of the Goſpel, and that therefore it is lawful to live heatheniſh ſinful lives, by that means the more to illuſtrate and ſet out God's mercy to us in pardoning ſuch great ſins. But as I ſhall ſpeak more to that anon, ch. 6. 1. ſo now, in a word, it is a calumny, a conſequence by miſtakers falſly laid to my charge, and all that is needful to reply to it at this time, is, to expreſs deteſtation of it, and my opinion, that 'tis a damnable doctrine in any that ſhould teach it, and ſuch as will render the deſtruction of thoſe Jews moſt juſt, who thus object. In oppoſition to which I diſtinctly affirm, that no one ſin is to be committed, though it be in order to, and in contemplation of the greateſt good, even the illuſtrating the glory of God.

d. 8. † d And not rather as we be ſlanderouſly reported, and as ſome affirm that we ſay, let us do evil, that good may come: whoſe damnation is juſt.]

7. For if the truth of God hath more abounded through my c lie unto his glory; why * yet am I alſo judged as a ſinner?

* Am I any longer impleaded, ἔτι κἀγὼ κρίνομαι.
† And why ſhould we not, &c.

9. Some farther objection there would be againſt what we have ſaid, if indeed the Jews were much better by having received the Law, leſs ſinful, more innocent than the Gentiles. For then it might be ſaid, that when the Gentiles are taken in, who were the greater ſinners, and the Jews, who were better than they, caſt off, there were ſome unequal dealing indeed. But the truth is, we Jews were not better, or more innocent than they, but as we have before charged the Jews (as they do the Gentiles) with wilful damnable ſinning, ſo it is moſt true of them, they were in a very foul courſe of vices when Chriſt came, and long before, before the far greateſt part of them (where the ſinfulneſs of the Gentiles being ſuppoſed by them to whom he writes, and not needing to be proved, but only that of the Jews, he inſiſts on the proof of that only, ſee v. 19.)

9. * What then? are we better than they? No, in no wiſe: for we have before † proved, both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under ſin,]

* What therefore? do we excel them? Τί οὖν; προεχόμεθα; † Accuſed, or charged, προῃτιασάμεθα.

10. This may be confirmed by the ſeveral teſtimonies of Scripture, ſpoken of the Jews in ſeveral texts of the old Teſtament, all which were too truly appliable to the Jews at the time of Chriſt's coming. They are univerſally depraved to all iniquity, Pſal. 14. 1. and 53. 1.

and the Prophets, thus ſay, they ſay to, and of the Jews, and ſo by complaining ſo much of their univerſal defection, and their all manner of wickedneſs, they conclude them (and not only the Gentiles) to be obnoxious to God's vengeance, and moſt juſtly puniſhable by him, without any thing to ſay for themſelves, as they are conſidered barely under the Law, having ſo viſibly ſinned againſt that, and incurr'd deſtruction by the rules of it.

20. Therefore by the deeds of the Law there ſhall no fleſh be juſtified in his ſight: for by the Law is the † knowledge of ſin.]

† Acknowledgment, ἐπίγνωσις.

20. To conclude then, There is no juſtification (ſee note b.) to be had for any Jew, (that hath been guilty of any ſin) by the legal obſervances, by circumciſion, and the reſt of the Moſaical rites, without remiſſion of ſins, through the Grace of God in the new Covenant. Nor indeed can it it be imagined that juſtification and ſalvation can be hoped from thence, from whence comes the acknowledgment of our ſin and guilt; and ſuch indeed is the Law, and ſuch is circumciſion particularly, whoſe nature it is only to oblige us to purity, and to tell us, what we ſhould do, and when we offend, to give us knowledge, and to reproach us of that, and to denounce judgment againſt us, and appoint ſacrifices (which are only the commemorating of our ſins before God, Heb. 10. 3. not the expiating of them) but not to help us to juſtification, without the mercies of God in the new Covenant, ſee Note on Mat. 5. g.

21. But now the righteouſneſs of God without the Law is manifeſted, being witneſſed by the Law and the Prophets,

22. Even the righteouſneſs of God, which is by faith of Jeſus Chriſt, unto all, and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference.]

21, 22. Whereas, on the other ſide, there is now a ſure, clear, new way to bliſs, ſee note on ch. 1. b. (to wit that which was in the world before, and ſo doth not depend at all upon the Moſaical Law, ſee Mat. 5. p.) manifeſted to men by Chriſt, but mentioned alſo, and obſcurely ſet down in the Old Teſtament, namely, that way of juſtifying men by faith in Chriſt, or by that courſe which is now preſcribed us by Chriſt, which way ſhall belong and extend to all, both Jews and Gentiles, (circumciſed or uncircumciſed, without any diſcrimination) who ſhall believe there is mercy to be had for all true penetents through Chriſt, and ſo ſet themſelves to a new life, whatſoever their ſins have formerly been.

23. For all have ſinned, and come ſhort of g the glory of God,]

23. For Jews as well as Gentiles are found alſo to be ſinners, and ſo far from meriting God's praiſe or acceptance, and ſo, by any way but by the Goſpel, there is neither juſtification nor ſalvation to be had for them. g.

24. being juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Jeſus Chriſt;]

24. And therefore whenſoever they are juſtified, (either one or other) it is freely by his undeſerved favour, (ſee note b.) through that great work which Jeſus Chriſt hath wrought for the redemption of man, that is, for the obtaining pardon for their paſt ſins, and working in them reformation for the future, (ſee note h.)

25. Which Chriſt, the Meſſias of the world, God from the beginning purpoſed to ſet forth unto men, as the means to exhibit and reveal to us his covenant of mercy, on condition of our faith, and conſtant new obedience to him who hath died for us, to make expiation for our ſins, and to work reformation in us, hereby demonſtrating the great mercifulneſs of God now under the Goſpel, in that he forbears to inflict vengeance on ſinners, but gives them ſpace to repent, and promiſes them pardon upon repentance. h. i.

* Righteous.
† That is of the faith of τὸν ἐκ πίστεως Ἰησοῦ.

26. To declare, I ſay, at this time his righteouſneſs, that he might be k * juſt, and the juſtifier of him † which believeth in Jeſus.]

26. To reveal, I ſay, and make known unto us at this time this way of juſtifying ſinners in the Goſpel (by grace, or mercy, and pardon of ſin) whereby God appears to all to be a moſt gracious and merciful God, and accordingly to accept and reward all thoſe which (though they have formerly ſin'd, do yet) upon this merciful promiſe, and tender, and call of Chriſt's, give themſelves up to be ruled by him, to live as he hath commanded in the Goſpel. k.

27. Where is boaſting then? It is excluded. By what Law? of works? Nay, but by the Law of faith.]

27. By this means then all proud reflections on ourſelves are perfectly excluded (a thing which the Moſaical Law was made uſe of to foſter in the Jews, they thought themſelves thereby diſcriminated from, and dignified above all other men in the world, and that, by being Abraham's ſeed, and circumciſed, and ſuch like external performances, they were ſecured of the favour of God, whatſoever they did) but by this Evangelical way of God's dealing in Chriſt, accepting and acquitting all, Gentiles as well as Jews, through grace and mercy, by which their ſins are forgiven, and they received into God's favour, (without any reſpect of perſonal priveledges, of being Abraham's ſeed, or of bare outward performances, &c.) only upon their return and change of life, upon performance of new faithful obedience unto Chriſt to which they are called, and to which they are by him enabled; wherein there being ſo little, ſo nothing imputable unto us, all boaſting is utterly excluded.

28. Therefore we l conclude, that a man is juſtified by faith without the deeds of the Law.]

28. The ſum or reſult therefore of this diſcourſe is, that by this Evangelical way, the favour of God is to be had for thoſe that never had to do with the Judaical Law, (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) circumciſion, &c. ſee v. 21. and note b. l.

29. Is he the God of the Jews only? is he not alſo of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles alſo.]

29. For otherwiſe it would follow that God had care or conſideration of no other part of the world, but only of the Jews, which certainly is not true, for he is the God of the Gentiles alſo, hath a peculiar care and conſideration of them that come not from Abraham's loyns, as long as they imitate Abraham's faith, or on condition they do ſo.

30. Seeing it is one God, which ſhall juſtifie the circumciſion by faith, and uncircumciſion through faith.]

30. And after the ſame manner receives all into his favour, the believing Jews, and the believing, though uncircumciſed, Gentiles, by this one Evangelical way of pardon and free remiſſion of ſin, to all that ſhall perform new obedience and fidelity to Chriſt, ſee note b.

31. Do we then make void the Law through faith? God forbid: yea, we eſtabliſh the Law.]

31. Which Evangelical way of receiving men into the favour of God is ſo far from evacuating the Law, or making it uſeleſs, that it is rather a perfecting of it, a requiring that purity of the heart, which was the inward notation of the legal ordinance of circumciſion (and ſo in all other things a bringing in the ſubſtance, where the Law had only the ſhadow, the ſufferings of Chriſt, and his interceſſion, inſtead of the ſacrifices and propitiatory (v. 25.) under the Law.)

Annotations on Chap. III.

2. Πρῶτον.

V. 2. Chiefly.] Πρῶτον here clearly denoteth a form of enumeration, anſwerable to our imprimis, and ſignifies that the Apoſtle was about to reckon up all the advantages of the Jew, in this place, and accordingly began with one, reſolving to have proceeded, had not an objection here diverted his purpoſe for many chapters together, not permitting him to return from that digreſſion till c. 9. where again he falls to the ſame matter, and enumerates the remainder of thoſe privileges, particularly v. 4. &c. The only privilege which here he begins with is, ὅτι ἐπιστεύθησαν τὰ λόγια τοῦ Θεοῦ, their being intruſted with the oracles of God. What is meant by that phraſe 'twill not be amiſs to explain in both parts of it, and firſt the λόγια, oracles. Beſide the four garments uſed by the Prieſt when he officiated, there were four more proper to the High Prieſt. The firſt of them was called חשן, pectoral, becauſe it was faſtned about the neck, and came down hanging upon the breaſt, חכשוט כנגד הלב, ſaith Sol. Jarchi on Exod. 28. 4. it hangs before, or near, the heart. In the Scripture 'tis called the חשן המשפט, the pectoral of judgment, becauſe by it the High prieſt received the reſponſes of God in all matters of difficulty, as when they ſhould make war, or peace, &c. This is called by Joſephus Ἔκλωι, Antiq. l. 3. c. 8. the very Hebrew word, the ח being not pronounced; and and of it he ſaith, that in the Greek language it ſignifieth λόγιον, (not rationale, I ſuppoſe, but) orationale rather, becauſe the word or oracle of God was revealed thereby. And from this uſe of the word λόγιον for that pectoral, by which all the reſponſes and oracles of God were received, it comes that the word λόγια in the plural is uſed to ſignifie thoſe oracles and reſponſes, all the revelations of God's will by this means vouchſafed unto men. (Of the other ways of Revelations among the Jews ſee Note on Acts 23. a.) If it be demanded how theſe reſponſes or oracles were given and received, the moſt probable way (though there be ſome uncertainty among the Jewiſh writers in this matter) and that which is moſt agreed on, is this, The Hebrew names of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, and the twelve tribes, with this addition, כל אלה שבטי ישראל all theſe are the tribes of Iſrael, were written on the Pectoral, and in theſe words every letter of the Alphabet is to be found, out of which all other words may be compoſed. Then when any reſponſe was to be received, the High-prieſt ſet his face toward the שכינה the ark, the teſtimony of God's preſence; and he that was concern'd in the reſponſe, ſet his face toward the High-prieſt; and the letters which were prominent, or which ſhined in the Pectoral, being put together made the reſponſe. And whereas ſome difficulty is conceived to have been in underſtanding the order, wherein the ſhining or prominent letters were to be taken (whereupon ſome of the Rabbins have been fain to ſay that the High prieſt heard a voice to direct him in that matter) I ſuppoſe that difficulty will be removed by conceiving that the letters of which the reſponſe conſiſted, did not ſhine or ſtick out all together, or at once (for ſome of the letters of the Alphabet being but once to be found in all thoſe words, which are ſuppoſed to be written on the Pectoral, 'tis poſſible the reſponſe might have in it ſome of thoſe letters more than once, and conſequently in that caſe it could not fully be expreſs'd by the Pectoral, if the manner were for all the letters that made up the whole reſponſe, to ſhine or ſtick out at once) but that firſt one, then another letter ſhone or ſtuck out, and ſo on, till the reſponſe were diſtinctly and compleatly delivered: and this ſhining or thruſting out of theſe letters of which the reſponſe conſiſted, is that which is called Urim and Thummim, שרן מתומין לפנידם את הדרך, becauſe they perfected the way before them, that is, ſhewed them the right way wherein they ſhould walk, which therefore is rendred ἀλήθεια, truth; and both together, becauſe by this means they were inſtructed in all doubtful things concerning either knowledge or practice, eſpecially whether ſuch a thing ſhould come to paſs or no. As when David asks whether the men of Keilah would deliver him up or no, and the Oracle anſwers that they will, if he intruſt himſelf to them. And of theſe reſponſes 'tis the obſervation of Gemara Babyl. that 'tis not in the power of repentance to alter what is there delivered: גזרת נביא חוזרת the decree of a prophet returns, that is, is reſcinded, and not performed ſometimes, but גזרת אורים ותומים אינה חוזרת the decree of Urim and Thummim never returns, becauſe it is called the judgment of Urim. This being the notion of the word λόγια oracles here, it will eaſily appear what is meant by λόγια ζῶντα, living oracles, Acts 7. 38. which Moſes is ſaid to have received from God, viz. the ten commandments from mount Sinai, which being ſignifications and revelations of God's will, are, by Analogy with the reſponſes from Aaron's Pectoral, fitly called λόγια oracles; and then ζῶντα living, either becauſe, being written in tables, they were more to the life and more laſting and durable than thoſe other which were produced by the temporary ſhining or prominence of the letters in the Pectoral; or again, becauſe they were delivered immediately by the voice of God, as we call that a living teſtimony which is received from the mouth of the party, in oppoſition to Records, which are dead witneſſes. So when Heb. 5. 12. we find στοιχεῖα τῆς ἀρχῆς τῶν λογίων τοῦ θεοῦ, the elements of the beginning of the oracles of God, τὰ λόγια τοῦ θεοῦ, the oracles of God, ſignifie God's will, revealed to us, the Chriſtian doctrine. Ἀρχὴ τῶν λογίων, the beginning of the oracles, is the firſt part of that Chriſtian doctrine, the things which Chriſt firſt revealed and preached to them, c. 6. 1. viz. repentance and faith; and the στοιχεῖα, elements, may refer to the letters in the Pectoral, of which reſponſes there conſiſted. Then for the ἐπιστεύθησαν, they were entruſted with, that is certainly the due rendring of it, as will appear not only by the plural number, which is here uſed, which would not regularly belong to it, if it agreed with the Neutral λόγια, oracles, (and therefore it muſt in the conſtruction be joined with the Maſculine Ἰουδαῖοι, Jews, implyed and underſtood, though not named, here, from the word περιτομὴ, the circumciſion, v. 1.) but alſo by the clear uſe of the word in this manner, Gal. 2. 7. πεπίστευμαι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, I have been entruſted with the Goſpel. One thing more may be yet obſervable of this word, from the nature of it, which denotes being entruſted for the uſe and goods of ſome others, and not only for theirs who are ſo intruſted. Thus it is ordinarily known of feoffees in truſt, that they are to imploy that which is depoſited with them, for the uſe of thoſe to whoſe advantage their truſt was deſigned and ſpecified. So in that place, Gal. 2. 7. where Saint Paul is ſaid to be entruſted with the διαγγέλιον τῆς ἀκροβυστίας, Goſpel of the uncircumciſion, and Saint Peter with the εὐαγγέλιον τῆς περιτομῆς, Goſpel of the circumciſion, the meaning is evident, that they were intruſted with that jewel for the uſe of others, Saint Paul to preach it to the Gentiles, and Saint Peter to the Jews. And ſo here, the oracles of God were depoſited with the Jews, not to keep them to themſelves, but to publiſh them to all the world beſides. And indeed therefore may this place ſeem to be pitch'd on by God, as the heart of the earth, the middle of the world, that it might be fitter for that turn of diſperſing and communicating it to others. Hence is it, that the Temple of Jeruſalem is ſaid to be the houſe of prayer to all people, and when it was to be re-edified, Hag. 2. 7. it is expreſs'd by the deſire of all nations ſhall come: and ſo we know many Proſelytes were attracted by the ſplendor of God's actions for and among this people, to come in, and receive their religion. But becauſe this did not do the work ſufficiently of converting and reforming the Gentile world, it is Chriſt's appointment to his Apoſtles, that they ſhould diſperſe themſelves unto all Nations, and ſo bring them to the knowledge of his will. To this ſenſe of the word ἐπιστεύθησαν the words of Athanaſius are obſervable, de incarn. verbi, ὁ διὰ Ἰουδαίους μόνους ὁ νόμος ἦν, οὐδὲ δι' αὐτοὺς μόνους οἱ προφῆται ἐπέμποντο, the Law was not for the Jews only, nor were the Prophets ſent for them alone, (the two things meant by the Oracles here) πάντως δὲ τῆς οἰκουμένης ἦσαν διδασκαλεῖον ἱερὸν τῆς περὶ θεοῦ γνώσεως καὶ κατὰ ψυχὴν πολιτείας, but this nation was the ſacred ſchool of the whole world, from whence they were to fetch the knowledge of God, and the way of ſpiritual living. Wherein yet there was an eminent difference betwixt this and the Evangelical œconomy. Under the Law they that would learn God's will, muſt come up to Palæſtine to fetch it, but under the Goſpel the law of Chriſt it ſelf goes out, and takes the journey to all nations, and comes home unto them; which is far the greater advantage, and makes them more unexcuſable which do not receive and imbrace it.

V. 4. Judged.] Κείνομαι, δικάζομαι, it ſignifies to have a ſuit in Law, ſaith Heſychius; and again, κείνομαι, μαχόμεθα, any civil controverſie, or contention. The Hebrew in Pſal. 51. 4. whence 'tis cited, hath בשפטך in judicando te, when thou judgeſt, literally, but then that word שפט though it ſignifie judicare, to judge, ſignifies often litigare, to contend, alſo to plead, or manage a cauſe, for one againſt another. So Ezech. 50. 4. wilt thou judge them? that is, wilt thou plead for them? ſo v. 7. and oft in theſe theſe Epiſtles, 1 Cor. 6. 1. πολμᾶ κείνεδαι, dares any * Ap. Stob. p. 228. wage a ſuit at law, implead another? So in * Demaratus Arcadicor. 2. φόνυ κριθεὶς ἀπελύθη τᾶ ἐγκλήματος, being impleaded of murther, he was freed from the accuſation: where κριθεὶς muſt ſignifie not judged, or condemned, for 'tis added, he was abſolved, but accuſed, or impleaded; and again it was by his mother that he was κριθεὶς, not by the judge, another evidence that it ſignifies accuſed, proſecuted, not condemned. And agreeable to this will be that notion of κρῖμα, Rom. 5. 16. for charging of ſin upon us, indictment, impleading, after which follows the κατάκριμα, or condemnation. From this notion of κρῖμα. κείνεδαι, to contend, in the forinſecal ſenſe, for pleading, or managing the ſuit in Law, will appear alſo what is the original notion of the word δικαιῶδαι, to be juſtified, which is ſo often uſed in theſe Epiſtles. For the phraſe ὅπως δικαιωθῇς ἐν τοῖς λόγοις σε, that thou mighteſt be juſtified in thy ſayings, in the former part of this verſe. is viſibly of the ſame importance with νικήσῃς ἐν τῷ κείνεδαί σε, that thou mighteſt overcome when thou pleadeſt, in the latter; and then, as λόγοι muſt ſignifie pleadings, ſo muſt δικαιῶδαι the good ſucceſs, or victory, of the pleader, being acquitted by the Judge, as in that known place of Solomon, Prov. 17. 15. juſtifying is ſet oppoſite to condemning. From hence it is juſtly reſolved by Divines, that though Rev. 22. 11. (and perhaps in ſome other places of the Greek of the Old Teſtament, as Eccluſ. 31. 5. and 18. 22.) δικαιῶδαι is oppoſite to ἀδικεῖν, and ſo ſignifieth to live, or do, righteouſly; yet there is this other notion which belongs to the word, and muſt conſtantly be affixed to it in almoſt all the places of the New Teſtament. For the due underſtanding of which theſe three things will be neceſſary to be remembred. Firſt, that the word being juridical, muſt always, when it is uſed in this ſenſe, imply a legal proceeding, and therein a Judge, a Client, and a Law, or ſomewhat proportionable to each of theſe. Thus when a man is ſaid to be juſtified by the deeds of the Law, or by the faith of Chriſt, in the ſight of God, as the man is the Client (ſuppoſable to be impleaded by Satan the ἀντίδικος, or adverſary, ἐν κρίσει, in judicature) and God the Judge, and the Law of Moſes on one ſide, or the Chriſtian law, the law of faith, on the other, the Rule, or Law, by which the judgment is made; ſo he that is ſaid to be juſtified, muſt be ſuppoſed to be acquitted by the rules of that law by which he is tried and judged, whether it be that given by Moſes, or this by Chriſt. Thus in that eminent place, Acts 13. 38, 39. (the ſummary of the whole Goſpel, and from which the notion of this word in the Epiſtles may moſt fitly be taken,) Be it known unto you, that by this perſon (Chriſt) remiſſion of ſins is declared, or preached, unto you, and through him every one that believeth is juſtified (δικαιοῦται) from all thoſe things from which you could not be juſtified in, or by, the Law of Moſes. Where, as it is evident that the law of Chriſt allows pardon and remiſſion for thoſe ſins; for which the Law of Moſes allowed no mercy, viz. in caſe of repentance, and ſincere returning to the obedience of Chriſt, after one or more acts of preſumptuous ſins, (for which the Law of Moſes admitted no ſacrifice, no expiation, but inflicted death without mercy on the offender, were he never ſo penitent, Heb. 10. 26, 28. and though there were hope of pardon for ſuch in another world, yet this was not by the purport of Moſes, but of Chriſt's covenant) ſo the Juſtification which is now declared from Chriſt, and conſiſts in God's pardoning ſuch ſins, acquitting the penitent believer, that now comes in to the obedience of Chriſt, whatſoever his paſt ſins have been, is a judicial act of God's, proceeding according to this rule now in force, this law of Chriſt, this Covenant under the Goſpel; which becauſe it is an act of meer mercy in God through Chriſt, the purchaſe of which coſt Chriſt his blood, but coſt us nothing, (by his ſtripes we were thus healed) and becauſe the condition of new life required of us, to make us capable of this remiſſion, hath nothing of virtue, or merit, of natural or moral efficiency in it, towards the purchaſing remiſſion, therefore it is here affirmed, that we are δικαιούμενοι δωρεὰν, &c. v. 24. juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption which is by Jeſus Chriſt.

The ſecond thing to be obſerved in this matter is, that the Goſpel, or the faith of Chriſt, being now that rule by which God either acquits or condemns, juſtifies or not juſtifies any, whenſoever Juſtification is mentioned, it muſt be underſtood with this reference to that rule, which is ſometimes mention'd explicitly, (as when we read of his juſtifying him that is of the faith of Jeſus, ver. 26. juſtifying by faith, and through faith, v. 30. that is, according to that Evangelical rule, the Law of faith, which gives place for repentance and remiſſion upon ſincerity of new life,) and is to be ſuppoſed, and implied, whenſoever it is not mention'd. The promiſes of mercy and pardon in the Goſpel, though general, being yet conditional, and no ground allow'd for any to hope for his part of it, but upon performance of that condition, which again muſt not be confined to any one notion of any one Chriſtian virtue, faith, or the like, but to ſincere obedience to the whole Law of Chriſt, and that comprehends all the particulars required by him, in the retail, or as it is in the groſs ſet down by the moſt comprehenſive words, either of repentance or converſion, without which we ſhall all likewiſe periſh, and we ſhall in no wiſe enter into the kingdom of God, or of Holineſs, without which no man ſhall ſee God. The not obſerving of which is the πρῶτον ψεῦδος, the procreative miſtake of the many great and dangerous errors in this matter.

The third thing is, that the Hebrew צדקה righteouſneſs, ſignifies two things, either a lower or a more eminent degree of righteouſneſs. theſe two differing one from the other, as Juſtice and Charity appear to differ, one ſuperadded to, and ſuperſtructed on the other: and as it is the part of a judge to conſider theſe ſeverally, and as well to reward the higher degree of the one, as to acquit the innocence, and reward the lower degree of the other, ſo there is a double notion of juſtifying in Scripture: the one for acquitting and pardoning, accepting, and rewarding in a lower degree, which upon repentance and forſaking of ſin and converting ſincerely to God, is afforded every one, through the ſatisfaction and blood ſhedding of Chriſt, under the Goſpel; another for an higher degree of approving and commending, and adjudging to reward, and that proportion'd to ſome eminent act of faith, or obedience, in caſe of extraordinary trial; ſuch was Abraham's believing in hope, and above hope, and his obedience to the higheſt commands, leaving his country, and ſacrificing his only ſon, and ſuch were the ſeveral acts of faith mention'd Heb. 11. and the ἔργα, works, Jam. 2. And thus there ſeems to be a difference betwixt God's imputing no ſin, and his imputing to righteouſneſs; the latter being his adjudging to a high reward, the former only the forgiving iniquity, and accepting in a lower degree; the one upon ſome eminent act of faith, or obedience, the other upon undertaking new life, anſwerable to theſe two ſorts of Juſtification. And accordingly c. 4. that which is expreſs'd ver. 4. by, it was accounted for righteouſneſs, is v. 5. the reward was reckoned, noting an eminent reward of ſome eminent act to be comprehended in that phraſe. And ſo ſometimes it is in the word Juſtified, and when it is ſo to be interpreted the Context will generally determine.

V. 7. Lye] As ἀλήθεια, truth, ſignifies alſo fidelity, or faithfulneſs, ſo ψεῦσμα on the contrary ſignifying a lie, imports alſo infidelity, or unfaithfulneſs, and is here ſet to ſignifie that ſin of not making good uſe of the oracles of God intruſted to the Jews, called their ἀπιστία, unbelief, v. 3. and ἀδικία, unrighteouſneſs, v. 5. So v. 4. Let God be true, and every man a liar: that is, the unfaithfulneſs of men in neglecting to do their part, doth no way prejudice, but rather commend the fidelity of God, in allowing them thoſe mercies which they make ſo ill uſe of.

d. Καὶ μὴ ὅτι

V. 8. And not rather.] The placing of the words in this verſe hath ſome harſhneſs, and conſequent obſcurity in it. The learned Hugo Grotius is inclinable to believe a tranſpoſition of μὴ ὅτι, for ὅτι μὴ, and then renders ὅτι cur, why, thus, And why not (the reſt being read in a parentheſis) or, why ſhould we not do evil, that good may come? But, I ſuppoſe, the more obvious and ſimple way ought here to be preferr'd, and the τί why, from the former verſe to be repeated; or elſe the ſenſe ſo to hang as that the τί why there ſhall have an influence here upon the μὴ not, and be thus rendred, καὶ μὴ and why not, as we are calumniated, &c. or, And why ſhould we not ſay, as we are calumniated, and as ſome ſay that we ſay. If this latter be it, then λέξομεν, ſay, is to be underſtood from the λέγειν following. But if the former, then the whole oration, placed ordinarily in a parentheſis καθὼς βλασφημούμεθα, καὶ καθάς φασί τινες ἡμᾶς λέγειν, (as we are calumniated, and as ſome ſay that we ſay) is, as it were, the Verb to the τί μὴ, why not, thus, And why ſhould not we ſay, what Paul is affirmed to ſay (but that is calumny, ſaith Paul:) and in either way the ὅτι that follows will be taken in the ſenſe that hath been noted of it, Mat. 7. d. for ſcilicet, or videlicet, to wit, only as a form to introduce the ſpeech following, thus, Why ſhould we not ſay, as we are calumniated — to ſay, to wit, Let us do evil that good may come — And ſo this will be a perſpicuous rendring of the verſe.

Ὅτι.

e. Τάφος ἀνεῳγμένος, &c.

V. 13. Their throat is an open —] Theſe three verſes that here follow, are evidently taken out of ſeveral places of the Pſalms and other Scriptures, and by the Apoſtle accommodated to his preſent purpoſe. And by occaſion of their being annexed to three verſes taken out of the 14th Pſalm, it hath come to paſs, that ſome antient Latin copies of that Pſalm, have taken them in from hence, and added them to that Pſalm, and accordingly the tranſlation which is uſed in the Liturgy hath three verſes more to that Pſalm, than the tranſlation in our Bibles doth acknowledge.

f. Πικρία.

V. 14. Bitterneſs.] The Hebrew word מרמות ſignifying deceits, was by the Septuagint miſtaken for מרורות, and ſo rendred πικρία, bitterneſs, and continued here from thence in this citation: As indeed in moſt citations of Paul, the Apoſtle of the Gentiles (who generally uſed the Septuagint) and of Luke alſo, his companion, (ſee Acts 8. Note e.) the Hebrew text is not made uſe of, but the Greek tranſlation retained, even when it differs from the original Hebrew.

g. Δόξα Θεοῦ.

V. 23. The glory of God.] The word δόξα, glory, or praiſe, being here joyned with Θεοῦ, of God, ſignifies not that glory which accrues to God, the glorifying or praiſing of his name, but that which accrues to man from God, and that may be either in this world, or in the next; the approbation or acceptance of any work here, or the reward of it hereafter. God's acceptance or approbation here, is called δόξα Θεοῦ, the praiſe, or glory, of God, Joh. 12. 44. they loved δόξαν ἀνθρώπων, the glory, or praiſe, of men, more than of God; and ſo God's teſtimony is δόξα παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ, praiſe from God, John 5. 44. And ſo it ſeems to denote here that reward which belongs to unſinning obedience, in which boaſting is founded, v. 27. and to which Grace, as it ſignifies pardon of ſins, is oppoſed, v. 24. and therefore of this all men are ſaid to come ſhort, who are found to be ſinners in the beginning of the verſe. Thus is glorying towards God ſet down as a conſequent of juſtification by works, c. 4. v. 2.

Δόξα παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ.

Καύχημα πρὸς Θεόν.

h. Ἱλαστήριον.

V. 25. Propitiation.] Some difficulty there is in this verſe, which muſt be explained by ſurveying the ſeveral parts of it. The Hebrew כפר ſignifying two things, to cover, and to expiate (ſee Note on Heb. 9. d.) the Noun כפרת, which is uſed for the covering of the ark, is indifferently rendred in the Old Teſtament ἱλαστήριον, propitiatory, and καταλλαγμα, covering: And indeed very fitly and properly both, becauſe as that place, where the Cherubim or Angels of God's preſence were placed, was the covering of the Ark, ſo Exod. 25. 22. God promiſed that in that place he would talk with Moſes, and give reſponſes, and ſhew himſelf propitious to the people. Thus (beſide the many places in the Old Teſtament) it is uſed in the New, Heb. 9. 5. where the Cherubim of Glory, that is, the pictures of the Angels in the manner wherein they were wont to appear, that is, in the reſemblance of a bright cloud or glory, are ſaid to overſhadow the ἱλαστήριον, that is, the covering of the Ark, or propitiatory. And in proportion to this, muſt the word here be rendred not propitiation (that is ἱλασμὸς, 1 John 2. 2.) but propitiatory, Chriſt being now the antitype (prefigured by that covering of the Ark, either as Theophylact conceives, in that our humane nature in Chriſt, πῶμα ἦν θεότητος, was the covering, or veil, of his Divinity, or becauſe God exhibited and revealed himſelf in Chriſt, as the Propitiatory was the place where God was wont to exhibit himſelf peculiarly) he by whom God ſpake to us, Heb. 1. 1. in whom the fulneſs of the Godhead dwelt bodily, and on whom the Angels deſcended with that voice, This is my beloved ſon, &c. and by whom God gave his reſponſes to the world, ſhewing himſelf propitious to them (which is the meaning of ἔνδειξις δικαιοσύνης, demonſtrating of his righteouſneſs, or mercy, that here follows) or ſhewing a way by which he will be propitiated, viz. through faith in his blood (not by any legal performances) the condition required on our part to be performed. This condition is here introduced by the word διὰ (with a Genitive caſe) through, which is the note of a condition (as with an Accuſative it is of a cauſe) and it is πίστις ἐν τῷ αἵματι αὐτοῦ, faith in his blood, where the blood being the object of the faith, it muſt ſignifie in concreto Jeſus Chriſt, who thus ſhed his blood (ſhed it to propitiate and ſatisfie for our ſins, and ſhed it to redeem us from all iniquity) in, or on whom we are to believe, and that is ſtiled, ver. 22. (in that ſimpler phraſe, yet to the ſame ſenſe) πίστις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, the faith of Jeſus Chriſt. Beſide this the blood is alſo the foundation or motive of the Chriſtian faith, that which perſwades us to believe and obey Chriſt, becauſe what he hath taught us, as the will of God, he hath thus confirmed, to be ſo, by ſigning it with his blood; and ſo the blood of Chriſt is ſaid by S. John to be one of thoſe, which teſtifie or bear witneſs on earth, and to induce our faith of the Goſpel, thus teſtified by the effuſion of his blood. And in both theſe notions, this faith is the condition on our part, parallel to Chriſt's being propoſed a propitiatory on God's part: for as God exhibits himſelf to us in Chriſt, demonſtrates his righteouſneſs, or mercifulneſs, and reveals himſelf propitious to us, in putting us in a way of finding mercy, entring a new covenant with us; ſo muſt we believe on him thus exhibiting and revealing his Father's will to us, and obſerve thoſe rules of repentance and new life, upon which he promiſeth to be thus merciful to us. And accordingly this condition is here immediately ſubjoined to God's propoſing Chriſt as a propitiatory, as the condition on our part, on which he ſo propoſeth him.

i. Ἔνδειξις δικαιοσύνης.

Ib. Declare his righteouſneſs.] Ἔνδειξις δικαιοσύνης will here beſt be rendred, Demonſtration of his righteouſneſs; and accordingly as the method of demonſtrating is wont to be the cauſe, ſo here follows διὰ, which, with an Acculative caſe, is a note of a cauſe, διὰ τὴν πάρεσιν, becauſe of the paſſing by (not taking notice) of paſt ſins, the ſins, whether by Jews or Gentiles, formerly committed, that is, before the revealing and manifeſting of God's will unto them by Chriſt: According to that of Acts 17. 30. that God, ὑπεριδὼν, looking over, not taking notice of, that time of ignorance, doth now command all men every where to repent; and Wiſd. 11. 23. παροράις ἁμαρτήματα ἀνθρώπων εἰς μετάνοιαν, thou lookeſt another way, and beholdeſt not the ſins of men, that they may repent. The ὑπεριδὼν and παροράω there is the direct interpretation of God's πάρεσις here, differing from ἄφεσις, pardon, as preterition doth from remiſſion, as paſſing by, not yet laying to their charge for puniſhment, doth from abſolving, acquitting of them. For tho' in order to their repentance and change, God doth at the preſent ſo paſs by their forepaſt ſins, as not to forſake them, or ſhut up all ways of mercy againſt them, but reveals Chriſt to them, with promiſe of pardon for what is paſt, if they will now obey him (this is the meaning of πάρεσις) yet unleſs that change be wrought, and for the future approved to him, there is no ἄφεσις remiſſion or pardon to be expected from him. This πάρεσις then conſiſts ἐν τῇ ἀνοχῇ Θεοῦ, in God's forbearance, or long-ſuffering, (ſo the word ſignifies, c. 2. 4.) in his not proceeding ſo ſwiftly and ſeverely with ſinners, as to cut them off, or forſake, and leave them helpleſs and hopeleſs in their ſins, but treating them gently, giving them ſpace to repent and amend, and uſing all effectual means to win them to it: all one with God's μακροθυμία, ſlowneſs to puniſh, mention'd oft in the caſe of Pharaoh, and elſewhere. And this being now God's dealing in Chriſt, is here mentioned as the medium to demonſtrate God's righteouſneſs, that is, that Evangelical way revealed by Chriſt, wherein it conſiſts, not in the purchaſe of pardon and forgiveneſs abſolutely, or for any but thoſe that do ſincerely return from their wicked lives, and embrace the faith and obedience of Chriſt, but to give ſpace, and to admoniſh and call to repentance, and uſe means on God's part effectual, if they be not obſtinately reſiſted or contemn'd by us, to bring us to new life. And that is the meaning alſo of the Ἀπολύτρωσις redemption which is in Chriſt, v. 24. his freeing men from that neceſſity of periſhing in their ſins, calling them to repentance, uſing all probable means to redeem and purify them from all iniquity, which is expreſs'd by λυτροῦσθαι, redeeming, Tit. 2. 14. and ποιεῖν λύτρωσιν, to work redemption, Luke 1. 68. And ſo ſometimes alſo forgiving ſignifies, as when Chriſt ſaith, Πατερ ἄφες, Father forgive them, Luke 23. 24. for there he prays not for final or actual, preſent, abſolute forgiveneſs to them, but for the giving them ſpace to repent, and means to convince them of their ſin, by the coming of the holy Ghoſt, and the Apoſtles preaching to them the reſurrection of Chriſt from that death which they had inflicted on him. And ſo muſt we underſtand the remiſſion of ſins, which in the Creed is propoſed to all to believe.

V. 26. Juſt] That the word δίκαιος juſt, or righteous, ſignifies a merciful, or charitable perſon, hath been ſhew'd from the Hebrew notation of צדקה righteouſneſs, for ἐλεημοσύνη mercy, Note on Mat. 1. g. And accordingly it may be obſerv'd, that the word ſeldom in theſe books, if ever, belongs, or is applied to the act of vindicative or punitive juſtice, but (as there in the caſe of Joſeph, who would not offer his wife to legal puniſhment, and therefore is called δίκαιος righteous) for the abating of the rigour of exact law, and bringing in ἐπιείκεια moderation, or equity, or mercy inſtead of it. Accordingly it is here to be reſolved, that this phraſe being uſed of God, εἰς τὸ αὐτὸν δίκαιον, that God may be righteous, muſt be underſtood to denote his mercy, and goodneſs, and clemency, in pardoning and forgiving of ſins, that being the thing look'd on in the many foregoing expreſſions, our being juſtified freely by his grace, v. 24. the propitiatory, v. 25. God's means of exhibiting or revealing his covenant of mercy, God's righteouſneſs, that is, his merciful dealing with men under this ſecond Covenant, v. 25. and 26. and the remiſſion of ſins, and forbearance, v. 25. 'Tis true indeed, that the ſatisfaction made, and the price paid for our ſins by Chriſt, being the meritorious cauſe of this remiſſion, and juſtification, may fitly denominate God δίκαιον juſt in that other reſpect; and it is moſt certain that God, to give a great example to his hatred to ſin, and his wrath againſt ſinners, was pleaſed to lay on his own ſon the iniquities of us all, rather then let ſin go utterly unpuniſhed. But the word δίκαιος righteous being ſo commonly taken in that notion of mercifulneſs, and ſo ſeldom in this of vindicative juſtice, there is no reaſon to interpret it thus in this place. k. Δίκαιος.

V. 28. Conclude] Λόγος ſignifies ratio, or ratiocinium, not only in the notion of the Logician, but alſo of the Arithmetician, not only reaſon or arguing, but alſo reckoning or counting, and ſo you ſhall find it, ch. 9. 28. whoſe art is called thereupon λογιστικὴ counting or reckoning; whence Phavorinus, λογίζομαι, ψηφίζω τῇ χειρὶ caſting account with ψῆφοι, which we therefore call counters, or thoſe by which we caſt account. Hence λογίζομαι is to perfect and make up an account, and to conclude, or ſum up; and ſo 'tis here uſed to conclude, not in the Logician's but Arithmetician's notion of concluding. Of this word λογίζομαι ſee Note on 1 Cor. 13. f. l. Λόγος. Λογίζομαι

CHAP. IV. Paraphraſe.

1. * a WHat ſhall we ſay then, that Abraham our father, † as pertaining to the fleſh hath found?] 1. What then do we ſay? Can it be ſaid, or thought, a. that Abraham who is ſaid in Scripture to be righteous, or accepted by God as righteous, obtained that teſtimony by the merit of his own innocence or performances? (This affirmative interrogation is in effect a negation, and ſo the meaning is) This cannot with any reaſon be affirmed by any.

2. For if Abraham were juſtified by works, he hath * whereof to glory, but not † before God.] 2. For if he were ſo juſtified by any thing in himſelf, any innocence or performance of his, he might then be ſaid to have ſomewhat to glory of, his juſtification being an effect of his performances, and not of the free grace of God, (ſee note a. & c. 3. 27.) But ſure there is no ſuch matter; or, if toward men, who had nothing to blame in him, he might have any place of boaſting, yet ſure toward God he hath none, he cannot be able to ſay to God by way of boaſt, as of any ſpecial merit or excellency (which alone is matter of boaſting) that he had done any thing, by virtue of which he was juſtified before God. And therefore certainly, whatſoever privilege or prerogative was, or could be conceived to belong to him, or his poſterity, it was from the free mercy of God, a fruit of undeſerved promiſe, and that excludes all boaſting, for what haſt thou (in this caſe) which thou haſt not received? and why then boaſteſt thou, as if it were not a meer act of mercy, and bounty to thee? (that is, as if it were not a meer act of mercy, and bounty to thee?)

3. For what ſaith the Scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteouſneſs.] 3. And this appears by that way of God's dealing with him, which is in the Scripture clearly enough ſet down; and that the very ſame by which we teach and profeſs that all men are now dealt with by God, that is, a way that belongs to the Gentiles, though ſinners, (if they will forſake their heathen ways, and now receive and obey Chriſt) as well as to the Jews, viz. that Abraham believed God, followed his call, and believed his promiſe, and thereupon, though he had formerly been guilty of many ſins, and though his obedience being due to God's commands, could not challenge any ſuch reward from God, yet did God freely juſtify him, that is, upon his forſaking his country and the Idolatries thereof, and after, upon his depending upon God's promiſes made to him (and ſo walking cheerfully in his duty towards God) pardon his paſt ſins, receive him into ſpecial favour, ſtrike a covenant of rich Mercies with him.

4. Now to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt.] 4. By this 'tis clear, that 'twas not his innocence, or blameleſneſs, by which he is ſaid to be juſt in the ſight of God, or any meritorious act, that was thus rewarded in him (ſee note on c. 3. b.) For if it were, then would it not be ſaid, that God did account or reckon his faith unto him for righteouſneſs, that is, freely out of meer mercy juſtify him (as v. 3. it was, and v. 5. is again ſaid, theſe two phraſes [it was reputed to him for righteouſneſs] there, and here [it is reputed to him according to grace or favour] being directly directly of the ſame importance) but that upon his perfect innocence and blameleſneſs, God was bound (by Laws of ſtrict juſtice) to reward and crown his innocence, and his virtues, as paying him that which he ought him (a due debt) and not freely giving it him by way of favour and grace, as is implied in accounting or imputing to him for righteouſneſs.

5. But his way of juſtification was by believing pardon for ſinners upon reformation, and thereupon reforming and giving himſelf up to do whatſoever God now would have him do; and ſo 'twas not any original innocence of his (which might challenge the reward, as due) but only God's acceptation of his faith, which was an act of God's meer mercy, and that may be vouchſafed to Idolatrous Gentiles upon their repentance, as well to him, and their receiving of the faith, and leaving their former courſes of ſin on Chriſt's command, as he did in his country, upon God's, be accepted to the juſtification.

5. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that juſtifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteouſneſs.]

6. Agreeable to which is that deſcription of bleſſedneſs in David, Pſal. 32. that he is bleſſed whom the Lord out of his free grace and pardon of ſin accepteth and accounteth as righteous, and not on any merit of their own performances; that is, that bleſſedneſs conſiſts in having this Evangelical way of juſtifying ſinners (or thoſe who have been ſinners, and now repent and return) vouchſafed to any man, not that of never having lived in ſin (for want of which the Jews will not admit the Gentiles to any hope of juſtification) but the other, I ſay, of mercy and forgiveneſs, upon reformation, and forſaking their former evil ways, as appears by the words of the Pſalm.

6. Even as David alſo deſcribeth the bleſſedneſs of the man unto whom God imputeth righteouſneſs without works,]

7. Bleſſed are they, not who never ſinn'd at all, that were never in a wicked or wrong courſe, (as of the Gentiles it is acknowledged that they were) but who having been ill, have reformed and found place of repentance, and of mercy upon reformation, meerly by the forgiveneſs and pardon of God.

7. Saying, Bleſſed are they whoſe iniquities are forgiven, and whoſe ſins are covered.]

8. Bleſſed is the man whoſe ſin (tho' he have been guilty, as 'tis acknowledg'd the Gentiles have) is not charged on him by God, but freely pardoned and forgiven unto him upon his reformation.

8. Bleſſed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute ſin.]

9. This then being the nature of the Evangelical courſe of God's gracious way of dealing with ſinners, giving them place for repentance, and upon the ſincerity of that, juſtifying and accepting them, whatſoever their former ſins have been, we may now farther conſider, whether this courſe may not be taken with uncircumciſed Gentiles, as well as with the Jews; and that will beſt be done, by conſidering how God dealt with Abraham, and what condition Abraham was in, when God thus reckoned his faith to him for righteouſneſs, or juſtified and approved of him, and rewarded him ſo richly for believing.

9. Cometh this bleſſedneſs then upon the circumciſion only, or upon the uncircumciſion alſo? for we ſay that faith was reckoned unto Abraham for righteouſneſs.]

10. And of this the account is eaſy, if we but obſerve the time when Abraham's juſtification is ſpoken of, viz. when thoſe words were ſaid of him, Abraham believed, and it was counted to him for righteouſneſs. For we find that was Gen. 15. 6. before he was circumciſed, c. 17. 24. and therefore it could not be a priviledge annext to circumciſion, but as a grace and favour of God, whereof the uncircumciſed Gentiles are no leſs capable then the Jews, who are within the covenant of circumciſion: (which is an evidence that receiving of Chriſt now, and believing and obeying of him, as then Abraham obeyed, will be accepted by God, without circumciſion.)

10. How was it then reckoned? when he was in circumciſion, or in uncircumciſion? not in circumciſion, but in uncircumciſion.]

11. And being juſtified after this Evangelical manner upon his faith, without and before circumciſion, he received the ſacrament of circumciſion, for a ſeal, on his part, of his performing thoſe commands of God given to him, his walking before him ſincerely, Gen. 17. 1. (upon which the covenant is made to him, and thus ſealed, v. 2, 4, 10.) and on God's part, for a teſtification of that faith of his, and obſignation of that precedent juſtification; and ſo by conſequence he is the father in a ſpiritual ſenſe, that is, an exemplar, or copy (which they that tranſcribe are called his ſons) of every uncircumciſed believer, who therefore ſucceeds him, as a ſon to a father, in that priviledge of being juſtified before God.

11. And he received the ſign of circumciſion, a ſeal of the righteouſneſs of the faith, which he had yet being uncircumciſed; that he might be the father of all them that believe, * tho' they be not circumciſed, that righteouſneſs might be imputed unto them alſo;]

* thro', or in uncircumciſion, δι' ἀκροβυστίας. See note on 4. 2. h.

12. And in like manner a ſpiritual father conveying down mercies and the inheritance to the Jews, that were circumciſed, and do now convert to Chriſt, and ſo beſides Circumciſion, which they drew from him, do alſo tranſcribe his diviner copy, follow his example of faith and obedience, which were remarkable in him before he was circumciſed, leave their ſins, as he did his country, and believe all God's promiſes, and adhere to him againſt all temptations to the contrary.

12. And the father of circumciſion to them who are not of the circumciſion only, but alſo walk in the ſteps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumciſed.]

13. For the great promiſe made to Abraham and his poſterity, that they ſhould poſſeſs ſo great a part of the world, Idumea and a great deal more beſide Canaan, (under which alſo heaven was typically promiſed and comprehended, Heb. 11. 14, 16.) was not made by the Moſaical Law, or conſequently upon condition of performing and obſerving of that (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) but by this other Evangelical way of new obedience, without having obſerved the Law of Moſes, without being circumciſed.

13. For the promiſe † that he ſhould be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his ſeed, thro' the Law, but thro' the righteouſneſs of faith.]

† to Abraham or his ſeed, that he ſhould be the heir of the world, was not by the Law, ἡ διὰ νόμου ἡ ἐπαγγελία τῷ Ἀβραὰμ ἢ τῷ σπέρματι αὐτοῦ, τὸ κληρονόμον αὐτὸν εἶναι τοῦ κόσμου

14. For if that inheritance were made over to 'em upon obſervation of the Moſaical Law, upon the Jews being circumciſed, &c. then, as faith, or this Evangelical way of juſtifying ſinners, is vaniſhed on one ſide, and what is ſaid of Abraham's being juſtify'd by faith is concluded to be falſe, ſo the promiſe it ſelf, which was ſhewed to be the thing by which Abraham was juſtified, and to belong to all Abraham's ſeed, not to the Jews only, v. 12. is vaniſhed alſo.

14. For if they which are of the Law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promiſe made of none effect.]

15, 16. This again appears by another argument; for it's evident of the Law of Moſes, that all which that doth, is to bring ſin and puniſhment into the world, as the Law of circumciſion given to the Jews made it a ſin, and puniſhable in a Jew, if he were not circumciſed on the eight day, but gave him no right of merit, no title to heaven, or to any other reward, in caſe he did obſerve that or the like ordinances, were circumciſed, &c. (for theſe were before the command of circumciſion made over to Abraham and his ſeed by the promiſe of God.) And ſo for other more ſubſtantial duties, the Law by commanding them doth but enhanſe the contrary ſin, which if it were not for the commandment could not be ſo high a degree of crime, or contempt of known Law, but doth not give a man right to any reward for obſerving it. From whence it neceſſarily follows, that it, that is, the promiſe of reward, v. 13. juſtification, &c. muſt have been made in reſpect to faith, or to believers, (and not founded upon any merit of any legal performances, on God's giving, or our obſerving that law of circumciſion, &c.) and by that means indeed it becomes an act of promiſe, and that promiſe meerly of grace, not depending on Judaical performances, and ſo it belongs to all the ſeed (that is, to all that do as Abraham did) is made good (ſee note on 1 Pet. 2. d.) and to all ſorts of believers (not only to the Jews) who are ſpiritually children of Abraham, that is, believers like him, born anew after his example or ſimilitude, tho' not ſpringing from his loyns, for in this reſpect it is, that he is ſaid to be the father of us all, that is, of all the faithful, Gentiles as well as Jews.

15. * Becauſe the Law worketh wrath: for where no law is, there is no tranſgreſſion.

* for, γὰρ

16. Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; † to the end the promiſe might be ſure to all the ſeed, not to that only which is of the Law, but to that alſo which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all,]

† that it may be a firm promiſe, εἰς τὸ εἶναι βεβαίαν τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν

b. 17. (As it is written of him, that he ſhould be the father of more nations then one, nay (as the word [many] often ſignifies) of all, that is, of the Gentile believers alſo) in like manner as God, in whom he

17. (As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations) * b before him whom he believed, even God, who quickneth the dead, and calleth thoſe things which be not as though they were;]

* anſwerable to him

he believed, is the Father of the Gentiles as well as Jewiſh believers and accordingly juſtified Abraham without Moſaical obedience, and ſo will juſtify Gentile Chriſtians, begetting them by the Goſpel to a new life, and then upon this change, this reformation, tho' ſinners and Gentiles by birth, yet accounting them children, receiving and embracing them in Chriſt. And there is nothing ſtrange in all this, when we remember who it is that hath made this promiſe, even that God who is able to do all things, even to raiſe the dead to life again, and ſo to quicken the Gentiles that are dead in ſins (as he quickned the womb of Sarah, and enabled old Abraham to beget a ſon) and give them grace to forſake their former deadneſs and barrenneſs, and incapacity of God's favour, viz. their heathen ſins, and to deal with thoſe deſpiſed heathen as he doth with the Jews themſelves, that have received moſt of his favour, and pretend a peculiar title to it, ſee Luke 15. 24.

18. Who againſt hope believed in hope, that he * might become the father of many nations: according to that which was ſpoken, ſo ſhall thy ſeed be.]

* ſhould become, εἰς τὸ γενέσθαι

18. And this is exemplified to us in that which, we ſee, befel Abraham, who having no natural grounds of hope (either in reſpect of Sarah or himſelf) did yet (upon God's promiſe, Gen. 15.) hope and believe that he ſhould have a Son, and ſo be a ſtock, from whence (that is, literally, from his body) many nations ſhould ſpring, a moſt numerous progeny, even as many as the ſtars of heaven for multitude. (And then why may not the Gentiles upon coming in to the faith of Chriſt, and reforming their Gentile lives, be as capable of God's promiſes, made to all true penitents, whatſoever impoſſibility ſeem to be in it, in reſpect of their former ſins, and deſperateneſs of their condition?)

19. And being not weak in faith, he conſidered not his own body † now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadneſs of Sarah's womb:]

† grown already dead, ἤδη νενε νρωμένον

19. He, we know, by a ſtrong faith overcame all the difficulties in nature, and conſidered no objections that might be made againſt the probableneſs of God's performing the promiſe:

20. He c * ſtaggered not at the promiſe of God through unbelief, but was ſtrong in faith, giving glory to God:]

* doubted

20. Neither interpoſed he any queſtion, demur, or doubt, through any ſuſpicious fearful paſſion in himſelf, but, without all diſpute to the contrary, depended fully on God for the performance, and how difficult ſoever, yet he look'd upon God in his glorious attributes, perfectly able to do whatſoever he promiſed, and moſt faithful, and ſure never to fail in the performance, collecting nothing elſe from the difficulty of the matter, but that it was the fitter for an almighty power, and a God that cannot lye, having promiſed, to magnify his power in performing it.

21. And being fully perſwaded that, what he had promiſed, he was able alſo to perform,]

21. Having for it all, this one hold, on which he depended moſt confidently, that as God was able, ſo he would certainly make good and perform what he had freely promiſed to him. (And then, now that the Goſpel is by Chriſt ſent to the Gentiles, and mercy offered them upon reformation, why ſhould the wickedneſs of their former lives (any more then Sarah's barren womb, and Abraham's old age) keep God from performing his promiſe to them, of accepting, and juſtifying penitent Gentiles, whoſe reformation tends ſo much to God's glory, tho' they be not circumciſed.

22. And therefore it was imputed to him for righteouſneſs.]

22. Which ſtedfaſt faith of his was a ſign of the opinion he had of God's power and fidelity, and was moſt graciouſly accepted by God, and rewarded in him with the performance of the promiſe, and not only ſo, but alſo (and over and above it) was reputed to him as an eminent piece of virtue. And ſo it will be now in the Gentiles, if upon our preaching to them, they now believe and repent.

23. Now it was not written for his ſake alone, that it was imputed to him;

24. But for us alſo, to whom it ſhall be imputed, * if we believe on him that raiſed up Jeſus our Lord from the dead.]

* that believe τοῖς πιστεύ-ουσι

23, 24. For this is recorded of him for our inſtruction, to teach us how God will reward us, if we believe on him, without doubt or diſpute, in other things of the like or greater difficulty, ſuch is the raiſing Chriſt from the dead, which was wrought by God for us and all mankind, Gentiles as well as Jews, and our belief of it is now abſolutely required of us, to fit us to receive and obey him, that is thus wonderfully teſtifyed to us to be the Meſſias of the world, and that receiving and obeying of him will now be ſufficient to the juſtifying of us, without the obſervations of the Moſaical Law, as Abrahams faith was to him, before he was circumciſed.

25. Who was delivered for our offences, and was raiſed again for our juſtification.]

25. For to this end was both the death & reſurrection of Chriſt deſigned: he died as our ſurety, to obtain us releaſe and pardon, to make expiation for our ſins paſt, to deliver us from the puniſhments due to ſin; and roſe again from the dead, to open the gates of a celeſtial life to us, to enſure us of a like glorious reſurrection, which could never have been had, if Chriſt had not been raiſed, 1 Cor. 15. 16, 17, 20. And in order to our receiving this joyful benefit of his reſurrection, other ſpecial advantages there are of his riſing, partly to convince the unbelieving world by that ſupreme act of power, and ſo to bring them to the faith that before ſtood out againſt it; partly that he might take us off from the ſins of our former lives, bring us to new life, by the example of his riſing, and by the miſſion of the Spirit to us, whereby he was raiſed, and ſo to help us to actual juſtification, which is not had by the death of Chriſt, but upon our coming in to the faith, and performance of the condition required of us, ſincere obedience to the commands of Chriſt.

So that as the faith of Abraham, which was here ſaid to be reputed to him for righteouſneſs, was the obeying of God in his commands, of walking before him, &c. the believing God's promiſe, and without all dubitancy relying on his all ſufficient power to do that moſt impoſſible thing in nature, and his veracity and fidelity, that he would certainly do it, having promiſed it, (which contains under it alſo by analogy, a belief of all other his divine attributes, and affirmations, and promiſes, and a practice agreeable to this belief, going on conſtantly upon thoſe grounds, in deſpight of all reſiſtances and temptations to the contrary) ſo the faith that ſhall be reputed to our juſtification, is the believing on God in the ſame latitude that he did, walking uprightly before him, acknowledging his power, his veracity, and all other his attributes, believing whatſoever he hath affirmed, or promiſed, or revealed unto us concerning himſelf, particularly his receiving of the greateſt ſinners, the moſt Idolatrous heathens, upon their receiving the faith of Chriſt, and betaking themſelves to a new Chriſtian life, and as an Emblem, and token, and aſſurance of that, that great fundamental work, the baſis of all Chriſtianity, his raiſing Jeſus from the dead, whom by that means he hath ſet forth to us to be our Lord, to be obeyed in all his commands, delivered to us, when he was here on earth (the obligingneſs of which is now ſealed to us by God, in his raiſing this Lord of ours from the dead) and this faith not only in our brains, but ſunk down into our hearts, and bringing forth actions in our lives (as it did in Abraham) agreeable and proportionable to our faith. And as this faith is now required to our juſtification, ſo will it be accepted by God to the benefit of all the heathen world that ſhall thus make uſe of it, without the addition of Moſaical obſervances, circumciſion, &c. as in Abraham it was, before he was circumciſed.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. V. 1. What ſhall we ſay then——] The underſtanding of the Apoſtles diſcourſe in this chapter depends much on a right underſtanding of this verſe, which contains the queſtion to which the ſatisfaction is rendred in the following words. And in this verſe four things muſt be obſerved: Firſt, that the τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν. what ſay we then? is a form of introducing a queſtion, and tho' not here (in the ordinary printed copies) yet in other places hath a note of interrogation immediately following it, as c. 6. 1. & 7. 7. This being ſuppoſed, the ſecond thing is, that the remainder of the verſe is the very queſtion thus introduced, that Abraham, &c. that is, Do we ſay that Abraham found according to the fleſh? And this interrogation being not here formally anſwer'd, muſt it ſelf be taken for an anſwer to it ſelf; and as interrogations are the ſtrongeſt negations, ſo will this, and muſt thus be made up by addition of theſe or the like words, No certainly he did not. Then for the third difficulty, viz. what is here the meaning of εὑρηκέναι, hath found, that will ſoon be anſwered, 1. that to find, agreeably to the Hebrew מצא ſignifies to gain, obtain, acquire, as to find life, Mat. 16. 25. 2*ly*, that there muſt be ſome Subſtantive underſtood, ſomewhat which he may be ſaid to have found, and that is either indefinitely τί ἄρα, that which he did find, or obtain, or elſe more diſtinctly δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſs or juſtification, which had before been named favour, approbation with God. So we have εὗρες χάριν. thou haſt found favour, Luke 1. 30 and it ſeems to be a proverbial form, and will then be the ſame with being juſtified, v. 2. And ſo the illative particle For, concludes, Do we ſay he hath found? (or, Certainly he hath not found) For if he were juſtified, that is, if he had thus found — which notes finding, and being juſtified to be all one. Fourthly, then it muſt be examined what is meant by κατὰ σάρκα according to the fleſh. And firſt it appears to connect with the εὑρηκέναι, for ſo it lies, εὑρηκέναι κατὰ σάρκα found according to the fleſh, and is not joined with Abraham our Father, as in reaſon it would have been, (and not εὑρηκέναι interpoſed) if the meaning of it had been, our father according to the fleſh: which being ſuppoſed, it will likewiſe follow that κατὰ σάρκα according to the fleſh, muſt ſignify the ſame with ἐξ ἔργων, by works, v. 2. in like manner as found and juſtified import the ſame. And this again is evident by the Laws of reaſoning. For this ſecond verſe being by the For in the front evidenced to be the proof of what was ſet down in the firſt, and this proof being in form of an hypothetical ſyllogiſm, thus, If Abraham were by works juſtified before God, then he hath matter of boaſting before God; But Abraham hath not any matter of boaſting before God; Therefore he was not juſtified by works, it muſt follow neceſſarily that this concluſion, Abraham was not juſtified by works, was the ſame with that which was ſet down in other words, v. 1. or if not of the ſame latitude and extent with it, was comprehended, as a part, under it. Which it cannot be, unleſs κατὰ σάρκα according to the fleſh, and ἐξ ἔργων by works, be either of the ſame force directly, or the latter contained in the former. Any greater (tho' never ſo ſmall) difference that ſhould be admitted, being of neceſſity to affix four terms to the Apoſtles ſyllogiſm, and ſo to evacuate all force in his argument. From hence it follows, that the way of diſcerning what is meant by ἐξ ἔργων, by works, will be the moſt probable means of interpreting κατὰ σάρκα according to the fleſh. And this we have from v. 4. & 5. in theſe words, To him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that juſtifieth the ungodly, his faith is reckoned for righteouſneſs. Where it is evident, that working is that to which reward is by debt, or juſt wages, to be adjudged, and that in oppoſition to God's reckoning of grace, or favour, and juſtifying the ungodly. From whence it follows, that being juſtified by works in this place (in St. Paul's and not St. James's dialect) ſignifies that innocence of the former life, and thoſe eminent performances wrought by a man's ſelf, that may challenge from God as due unto them, God's acquittance, and ſpecial reward, without any intervening of pardon, as to an offender, or of grace, in giving him any thing that is not perfectly due to him. Whereas on the contrary, God's imputing righteouſneſs without works, v. 6. is God's pardoning graciouſly the ſins that the man hath been guilty of, (viz. upon repentance and reformation) which he might moſt juſtly have puniſhed, v. 7, 8. and rewarding ſome mean imperfect act, or acts of fidelity, or obedience in him, which could no way challenge impunity, much leſs ſuch a degree of reward, did not God out of meer mercy thus improve, and enhanſe the value of them. So that ἔργα works are the man's own performances, firſt blameleſs in not ſinning, and then meritorious, as the eminent difficulty of the commands, wherein his obedience is tried and exerciſed, is apt to enhanſe the value of them; and he that were ſuppoſed to be juſtified by them muſt 1. have lived blameleſly all his former life, and then have done eminent, rewardable actions alſo, at leaſt the former of theſe. And Abraham having been ἀσεβὴς a ſinner, v. 5. having lived in idolatry for ſome time, and all that he did, upon which he was juſtified, Gen. 15. 6. being but obeying God's call, Gen. 12. 4. and believing his promiſes, Gen. 15. 5. it is clear he was not, nor could be thus juſtified, but only by the way mentioned by the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 32. by God's forgiving, covering, not imputing of ſin. And ſo this muſt be the meaning alſo of his not finding according to the fleſh, viz. being not juſtified by any thing in himſelf, abſtracted from the mercy and gracious acceptance of God. Thus Rom. 9. 8. the children of the fleſh are oppoſed to the children of the promiſe, and ſignify literally Iſmael that was begotten by the ſtrength of nature, (as Iſaac was a work of God's promiſe and ſpecial mercy) and myſtically the Jews conſidered with their own performances, whereby they expected juſtification, without any reſpect to the pardon and mercy of Chriſt. And thus Gal. 4. 29. Iſmael is ſaid to be κατὰ σάρκα γεννηθεὶς, born according to the fleſh, and Iſaac κατὰ πνεῦμα according to the ſpirit, in the ſame notion, the Spirit, and the Promiſe ſignifying the ſame thing in that place, as appears by v. 28. The words being thus interpreted, are a confutation of one part of the objection of the Jews againſt the Apoſtles practice of preaching the Goſpel to the Gentiles, viz. that taken from the ſins of the Gentiles, which here by the example of Abraham is proved to be of no force againſt their juſtification, they being as juſtifiable as Abraham a ſinner was, by God's free pardon of ſins paſt, upon forſaking of them. And this is inſiſted on and proved in the eight firſt verſes. In the ninth verſe the Apoſtle proceeds to the confuting the other part of their objection (ſee note b. on the Title of the Epiſtle) viz. that if the heathens would be capable of any part of the benefit of God's promiſe, they muſt then be Proſelytes of their Moſaical covenant, or righteouſneſs, be circumciſed, &c. Which again is proved falſe by the example of Abraham, who was juſtified before he was circumciſed, and before the giving of the Law, by Faith, not by Circumciſion, by Gods pardon and mercy, not by any legal performances. The only matter of doubt and uncertainty is, whether theſe objections which are thus in the enſuing chapter confuted, were both propoſed in the firſt verſe, (for if there were, then ἐξ ἔργων by works, v. 2. will not be of the ſame latitude with κατὰ σάρκα according to the fleſh, but contained under it, as a part under the whole) or whether the firſt only were there comprehended, and the ſecond ſeverally ſubjoined, v. 9. The latter of theſe ſeems moſt probable, and accordingly the explication of the Chapter hath proceeded, tho' if the former were true, it would be of no greater concernment then only this, that κατὰ σάρκα according to the fleſh, ſhould refer to Circumciſion, and Moſaical obſervances, as well as to the blameleſs and meritorious performances wrought by a man's own natural ſtrength, abſtracted from God's pardon and favourable acceptance.

V. 17. Before him] The importance of κατέναντι θεοῦ is not ordinarily obſerv'd, and muſt be fetch'd from the uſe of נגדו in Hebrew, as it is uſed Gen. 2. 18. where God, ſaith he, will make Adam an help, we render it meet for him, and the vulgar, ſimile ei, like, or agreeable, or anſwerable to him; where the Septuagint have κατ' αὐτὸν by him, or on the ſide of him, or anſwerable, parallel to him. And to this Hebrew the Greek κατέναντι bears exact proportion, the word נגד ſignifying coram, ex oppoſito, and yet uſed to denote that which is like and anſwerable. Thus 'tis certain St. Chryſoſtom underſtood the word in this place; for ſo with he, κατέναντι δὲ ἐπιτέθεται θεοῦ· ὃ δὲ λέγει τοιοῦτόν ἐστιν, ὥσπερ ὁ θεὸς οὐκ ἔστι μερικὸς θεὸς, ἀλλὰ πάντων πλήν, οὕτω καὶ οὗτος, The meaning is, as God is no partial God, but the Father of all, ſo Abraham: and again, if he were not the father of all that dwell on the earth τὸ κατέναντι οὐκ ἔχει χώραν, this word ſhould have no place ἀλλ' ἐκπεπτωκὸς ἂν εἴη τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ δωρεᾶς, but God's gift would be maimed; and in expreſs words, τὸ δὲ κατέναντι ἰσοδυναμεῖ τῷ, the word ſignifies in like manner. And ſo Theophylact from him, Κατέναντι τοῦ θεοῦ, ἀντὶ τοῦ ὁμοίου τοῦ θεοῦ, before God, is inſtead of, like God. —— This Obſervation may poſſibly be uſeful to the finding out the full importance of ſome other places. As when the Commandment is given to Abraham of walking before

CHAP. V.

Paraphraſe.

* toward πρὸς

1 THerefore being juſtified by faith, we have peace * with God, through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt:]

1. By this faith therefore it is, that as many as ſincerely embrace the Goſpel are freely pardoned, and accepted by God in Chriſt, and being ſo, they are reconciled unto God through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and though they have formerly been Gentiles, need not become Proſelytes of the Jews, need not any legal performances of circumciſion, &c. to give them admiſſion to the Church of Chriſt, as the Judaizing Gnoſticks contend.

† have had ἐσχήκαμεν * or joy, for the K's MS. reads χαρὰν † have ſtood, ἑστήκαμεν

2. By whom alſo we † have acceſs by faith into this * grace, wherein we † ſtand, and * rejoyce in hope of the glory of God.]

2. Nay by him we have already received, by faith only (not by virtue of thoſe performances) reception and admiſſion to thoſe priviledges, to this Evangelical eſtate, wherein now we ſtand, and have done for ſome time, and have a confident aſſurance that God, which hath dealt thus graciouſly with us, will, if we be not wanting on our part, make us hereafter partakers of his glory: and this is matter of preſent rejoycing to us.

* glory, or rejoice exceedingly, καυχώμεθα

3. And not only ſo, but we glory in tribulation alſo, knowing that tribulation worketh patience;]

3. And we not only rejoice in this hope of future glory, but (on this ſcore) alſo we are infinitely pleaſed with our preſent ſufferings (ſee note on Heb. 3. b.) whatſoever befal us now, knowing, that altho' our afflictions be in their own nature bitter, yet they are occaſions to exerciſe, and thereby to work in us the habit of many excellent virtues, as firſt patience, and conſtancy, which is required of us, and which is moſt reaſonable to be ſhewed in ſo precious a cauſe.

* tryal, δοκιμὴν

4. And patience, * experience; and experience, hope:]

4. And this patience works another fruit, for without that we could have no way of exploring or trying our ſelves touching our ſincerity, which is only to be judged of by tryal, and without this tryal and approbation of our ſincerity, we could have no ſafe ground of hope (which is only grounded on God's promiſes, and thoſe made only to the faithful, ſincere, conſtant Chriſtians.)

† poured out on, ἐκκέχυται ἐν

5. And hope maketh not aſhamed, becauſe the love of God is † ſhed abroad in our hearts by the holy Ghoſt, which is given unto us.]

5. Which hope being thus grounded will be ſure never to fail us, 'tis impoſſible we ſhould ever be aſhamed or repent of having thus hoped, and adhered to Chriſt. An evidence of which we have in God's having ſo plentifully expreſs'd his love to us, in teſtifying the truth of what we believe, by ſending his holy Spirit to that purpoſe, which aſſures us that we can never miſcarry in depending on him for the performance of his promiſes, that being the great fundamental one, promiſed before his death, on which all the others depend.

* weak, ἀσθενῶν
† at a fit ſeaſon, κατὰ καιρὸν

6. For when we were yet * without ſtrength, † in due time Chriſt died for the ungodly.]

6. This appears from the very beginning of Chriſt's dealing with us; for without all reſpect to any worth in us, Chriſt, when we were all in a ſick, yea a mortal, that is, ſinful (ſee Theophylact) damnable eſtate (ſee 1 Cor. 8. note b.) came then in a moſt ſeaſonable opportunity, to reſcue us from that certain damnation which attended us, as impious wicked creatures, vouchſafed to ſuffer in our ſtead, himſelf to die that he might free us from certain eternal death, if we would now reform, and come in to the obedience of the Goſpel.

* any one, τις
† though

7. For ſcarcely for a righteous man will * one die: † yet peradventure for a good man ſome would even dare to die.]

7. And what a degree of love this was, you may judge by this, that among men, tho' for a very merciful perſon (ſee note on Mat. 20. b.) ſome one man would perhaps venture his life, yet for any man elſe, tho' he were a righteous and juſt man, you ſhall hardly find any man that will be ſo liberal or friendly as to part with it.

8. But God commendeth his love towards us, in that while we were yet ſinners Chriſt died for us.]

8. Whereas God's expreſſion of mercy was infinitely above this proportion of any the moſt friendly man; for he, when he had nothing in the object to move him to it, when we were ſo far from being good or juſt men, from being merciful or pious in the higheſt degree, that we were profane cuſtomary ſinners, he then ſent his ſon Chriſt to die for us, to obtain, by the ſhedding of his own blood, pardon of ſins for us upon our reformation and amendment.

9. Much more then, being now a juſtified by his blood, we ſhall be ſaved from wrath through him.]

9. And having thus dy'd and done ſo much for us, a.

when we had nothing (but our ſins) to provoke him to, or make us capable of any mercy, much more now being thus far reſtored to his favour, and by that ranſom of his paid for us, redeemed out of that certain ruin that attended us, we ſhall, if we be not wanting to our ſelves, in performing the condition required on our parts, be actually delivered from all effects of his diſpleaſure in another World: and for the effecting of this, great advantage we receive from him alſo, viz. by his reſurrection from death, and miſſion of his Spirit, which tends more to our actual juſtification then his death did, (ſee c. 4. 25.)

10. For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his ſon, much more, being reconciled, we ſhall be ſaved by his life.]

10. For if God when men lived and went on in ſin and hoſtility againſt him, were pleaſed to have ſuch favourable thoughts toward them (ſee note on Mat. 5. m.) if by the ſatisfaction wrought for our ſins by Chriſt, we were then thus far reſtored to his favour, that he was pleaſed to propoſe unto us free and eaſy conditions of mercy in the Goſpel; if he then uſed us ſo friendly, as not to preclude the way of ſalvation, but called us to repentance, with promiſe of pardon for all paſt ſins, upon our coming penitently in unto him? much more eaſie will it be, and agreeable to that former eſſay of his goodneſs to us, now (after he hath gone ſo far with us) to reſcue us out of the power and danger of our ſins, by his riſing from the dead, c. 4. 25. and ſending that ſpirit by which he was raiſed, to raiſe us up to a new life: And this alſo, as far as concerns God's part, is wrought for us.

* glory, καυχώμενοι reconciliation, καταλλαγὴν

11. And not only ſo, but we alſo * joy in God, thro' our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom we have now received the † atonement.]

11. And yet this is not all, but having receiv'd theſe benefits of reconciliation, (and promiſes of future ſalvation, if we be not wanting to our ſelves) we have now ground even of the greateſt joy, and confidence, and dependence on God in all that can befal us in this life (ſee v. 3.) through this ſame Chriſt Jeſus, who having made peace between God and us, and tendred us ſuch eaſie conditions of mercy now under the Goſpel, hath alſo given us a title to all conſequent acts of friendſhip and kindneſs, which can be received from God, ſo that all that now befals us, being for our good, is conſequently matter of rejoycing to us.

* paſſed through to, (to, on) διῆλθεν εἰς

12. b Wherefore, as by one man ſin entred into the world, and death by ſin, and ſo death * paſſed upon all men, for that all have ſinned.]

12. From all which the concluſion is, that as by Adam's diſobedience to that Law given to him under the penalty of death, (that is, by eating the forbidden fruit) ſin came into the world, and death or mortality by ſin, and being come in ſeized not only on Adam, to whom 'twas particularly and expreſly threatned (In the day that thou eateſt thou ſhalt die the death) but upon all meer men alſo, that were after born, becauſe all were ſinners, that is, born after the image and likeneſs of Adam, (that was now a ſinner, and had begotten no child in his innocence.) b

13. For

13, 14. For after Adam's time, before Moſes, or the time of giving the Law, men ſinned; and tho' it be true, that ſin is not charged to puniſhment but when there is a Law to forbid it expreſly under that penalty, and therefore it might be thought that ſin without the Law would not bring death into the world, yet, by the parity of reaſon, all men, being Adam's poſterity, and begotten after the image or ſimilitude of a ſinful parent, v. 12. (and God being ſuppoſed to rule the world ſtill, after the manner that he had firſt explicitly revealed) that death that was once come in did lay hold on all that poſterity of Adam from that time 'till Moſes (when the Law was given, and death again denounced expreſly) tho' they ſinned not againſt a Law promulgated under that penalty, or in that high preſumptuous degree that Adam did. In which thing Adam is in the compariſon the oppoſite member to Chriſt the Meſſias to come; for as death, which was the puniſhment of Adam's ſin, paſt on all men, begotten after the ſimilitude of ſinful Adam, though they committed not that particular ſin of eating the Apple, againſt which the death was expreſly decreed and threatned, that is, though they ſinned not ſo preſumptuouſly againſt a Law promulgated under that penalty; ſo juſtification and eternal life belongeth not only to thoſe who were, as Chriſt, perfectly juſt, who have never lived in ſin, but cometh upon all others, who having not obeyed after the likeneſs of Chriſt, do yet return unto him by faith and repentance, and then for the future obey ſincerely, tho' not exactly, and ſo in ſome manner and degree reſemble Chriſt, as Children do parents, and as mankind did Adam.

13. For until the Law ſin was in the world: but ſin † is not imputed when there is no law.

14. Nevertheleſs death reigned from Adam to Moſes, even over them that had not ſinned after the ſimilitude of Adam's tranſgreſſion, who is the figure of him that was to come.]

† or, was not imputed, while there was, for the K's MS. reads ἐκ ἐλλογεῖτο

15. In this place there ought to be, in ordinary manner of writing, another member of the period, anſwerable to the beginning of it, v. 12. (the 13. and 14th verſes being certainly to be read as in a parenthеſis) after this manner, For as, &c. So, &c. But the Apoſtle having inſiſted on the firſt part of the compariſon thus far, and finding that the grace in Chriſt roſe much higher then the condemnation in Adam, he is fain to forſake that compariſon, and to riſe above a compariſon, and conclude not with a [So] but with a [Not only ſo, but much more] thus, The gift communicated from Chriſt to believers, is far greater then the puniſhment communicated from Adam to his poſterity as ſinners; for as they were begotten after the ſimilitude of lapſed Adam, and ſo were all ſinners, as well as Adam, ſo probably were they as great ſinners in other kinds, as Adam was in that, but theſe to whom the mercy in Chriſt belongs, are not righteous in ſuch a degree, as well as Chriſt.

15. But not as the offence, ſo alſo is the free gift: for if thro' the offence of one, many * be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift † by grace, which is by one man, Jeſus Chriſt, hath abounded unto many.]

* died, ἀπέθανον
† thro' grace, that grace of one ἡ χάρις ἡ τοῦ ἑνός.

16. And as in reſpect of the likeneſs, the advantage is on Chriſt's ſide of the compariſon, believers being not ſo like Chriſt in degree of holineſs, as they were like Adam in degree of ſin, ſo again for the ſin for which Chriſt wrought atonement, the advantage is great again, on Chriſt's ſide above Adam's. And not only as by Adam, ſo by Chriſt; but the benefit far exceeded the hurt, for indeed the charge or enditement (ſee note on c. 3. b.) and conſequently the ſentence that was on occaſion of one ſin, did naturally, and by the ſame reaſon belong to the condemnation of all others, that were born after his image, ſinners as well as he, but the gift that was brought in by Chriſt, pardon for all new creatures, was upon occaſion of many ſins, and to the juſtifying of thoſe that were not righteous, as Chriſt, no nor as Adam, but had been guilty of more then one, even of many ſins. And this makes the compariſon again very uneven: for if as ſin was a means to bring condemnation into the world, ſo the ſame or ſome other one ſin had been the occaſion of bringing mercy in, and pardon had been wrought for that one ſin, and no more, or for thoſe that ſhould for the future perfectly and exactly obey, then the compariſon had been equal; but the ſins that occaſioned the mercy, and have their parts in the benefit of this juſtification, are many ſins, and the perſons that ſhould receive it, not righteous in that degree as Chriſt was, and that makes the compariſon uneven.

16. And not * as it was by one that ſinned, ſo is the gift: for the † judgment was by one to condemnation; but the * free gift is of many offences unto juſtification.]

* as by one man having ſinned, ὡς δι' ἑνὸς ἁμαρτήσαντος † ſentence on occaſion of one (offence) was to condemn κρίμα ἐξ ἑνὸς εἰς κατακρ.
* mercy was by occaſion of, χάρισμα ἐκ.

17. For if by Adam's ſin in that one kind, death came into the world, and thro' that one man's loyns, and by the parity of reaſon, that death was entailed upon all his poſterity, as being born after his image, and guilty of other ſins, tho' not of that ſpecial kind; then in like manner, or rather indeed much more, they that believe on Chriſt, that receive and make uſe of that (moſt rich) grace, and righteouſneſs of Chriſt, that is, are holy, gracious, and righteous too, tho' not in his degree, and ſo are, according to this Evangelical way, capable of this juſtification, ſhall, by the reſurrection of Chriſt, and by his living and interceding for ever for them, be ſure to reign with him.

17. For if by one man's offence death reigned by one, much more they which receive abundance of grace, and of the gift of righteouſneſs, ſhall reign † in life by one Jeſus Chriſt.]

†thro' his life ἐν ζωῇ

18. To conclude therefore, as by one Adam's offence, v. 12. & 16. ſentence came on all offenders, that is, upon all meer ſons of Adam, to condemnation; ſo by the righteouſneſs of one, God's gift of mercy in Chriſt, v. 17. is come on all men, Gentiles as well as Jews, to juſtification, that is, to the accepting them as juſt (tho' they formerly lived in never ſo ſinful a courſe) if they imitate the righteouſneſs of Chriſt by ſincere renovation.

18. * Therefore, as by the offence of one † judgment came upon all men to condemnation: even ſo by the righteouſneſs of one, the free gift came upon all men unto juſtification of life.]

* therefore I ſay, Λεγω οὖν
† the ſentence was v. 16.

19. For as by one man's diſobedience * many were made ſinners; ſo by the obedience of one ſhall † many be made righteous.]

19. For as by Adam's one act of eating the forbidden fruit, againſt which death was threatned, all his poſterity, as ſuch, and (much more) all that ſinn'd in any other kind, that is, all meer men in the world, were ſubjected to that puniſhment, death, which was then pronounced only againſt the eating of that: ſo by Chriſt's having performed exact perfect obedience, and then ſuffered death in our ſtead, or to make ſatisfaction for us, all men even the Gentiles themſelves, that ſhall come in to Chriſt, and perform ſincere, faithful obedience to him, ſhall be juſtified, (tho' they be not perfectly juſt) and accepted by him.

* the many were conſtituted, κατεστάθησαν οἱ πολλοὶ
† the many be conſtituted, κατασταθήσονται οἱ πολλοὶ

20. As for the Law (that was given by Moſes) that came in by the by, as it were, to give men the more convincing clear knowledge of duty and ſin, and ſo tho' it were not deſigned to that end (ſee Theophylact) yet by conſequence it became a means to aggravate and enhanſe ſin (ſee note on Mat. 1. k.) to render it more exceedingly criminous, by being againſt a promulgate Law; and that again is a means of making the mercy now in the Goſpel to be far a greater mercy to the Jews, to whom Chriſt and the Goſpel were firſt ſent.

20. * Moreover the Law entred that † the offence might abound: but where ſin * abounded, grace did much more abound:]

* but the law that came in betwixt, Νόμος δὲ παρεισῆλθεν † ſin might be increaſed, πλεονάσῃ τὸ παράπτωμα
* hath been increaſed, grace hath more then abounded, ἐπλεόνασεν, ὑπερεπερίσσευσεν ἡ χάρις

21. That as we viſibly ſee the great power and authority of ſin over men, by the puniſhment it hath brought on them, as is evident by death's ſeizing upon all; ſo it may be as viſible, what a royal illuſtrious power there is in the mercy of Chriſt over ſin, in reſpect of this new way of juſtification by Chriſt, even to take away all its condemning and reigning power from it, by granting pardon and forgiveneſs of, and victory over it, thro' Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, and all this to Gentiles as well as Jews.

21. That as ſin hath reigned † unto death, even ſo might grace reign thro' righteouſneſs unto eternal life, thro' Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.]

† thro' death, διὰ τοῦ θαν.

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Δικαιωθέντες

V. 9. Juſtified] Having formerly given the notion at large of δικαιῶν, to juſtify, Note on c. 3. b. all that is here neceſſary to be added, will be by way of enquiry whether the paſſive δικαιωθέντες, being juſtified here, be only a Nominal or real paſſive, that is, whether it only note the action, as far as concerns Chriſt's part, in meriting, and obtaining God's pardon and acceptance for us, and God the Father's part, in admitting ſinners to pardon, giving them place of repentance, which is no more, in effect, but the offering pardon, and acceptance on the conditions of the Goſpel; or whether to this action of the Father, and Chriſt, it farther ſuperadd the reception thereof in the patient, the actual partaking of it. For theſe two (ſomewhat diſtant) notions, the word is capable of, either 1. that we are, as far as belongs to God's and Chriſt's part, juſtified, (the price being paid by him, and accepted by his Father) and that if we be not now actually ſo,

'tis through our own default, our non-performance of the condition; or 2. that we have the benefits of Chriſt's death beſtowed and conferred actually on us, pardon of ſins, &c. that is, are actually juſtified. That the former is the meaning of the word here, may appear 1. by the general drift of this chapter, which is to ſet out the love of the father and of Chriſt towards us, v. 8. &c. God commendeth his love towards us, &c. where therefore the matter is determined to that which Chriſt doth for us toward our juſtification, that is, to his death, the ſole meritorious cauſe of it, without looking to that which is extrinſecal to it, our performance, or non-performance of the condition, which is required on our parts to make us capable of the benefit thereof, that having been formerly (and often) mentioned, v. 1. δικαιωθέντες ἐκ πίστεως, being juſtified by faith: 2ly, by that which is ſaid v. 8. we being yet ſinners Chriſt died for us; where 1. his dying for us is all one with our being juſtified by his death, as appears by the circumſtances of the Context, the 8, 9, 10 verſes compared together; and 2. by ſinners meaning habitual groſs ſinners, which is alſo expreſs'd by ἀσθενῶν, v. 6. not weak, but ſick, even to death (ſee 1 Cor. 8. note b.) 'tis certain that to them, continuing ſuch, actual juſtification belongs not; ſo again, v. 10. We, when we were enemies, were reconciled to God by the death of his ſon; where, as death is all one with blood, ſo is reconciled to God with juſtified, and that belongeth to enemies, while they are ſuch, to whom yet we know, by many other places, that actual pardon, and ſo actual juſtification or reconciliation belongs not: 3*dly*, by comparing of this juſtification by Chriſt with the condemnation by Adam, v. 16. where Adam's condemnation belonging to all, the juſtification ſpoken of muſt be that alſo which belongs to all, and ſo not the actual pardon, which doth not belong to all, or to any, but thoſe who perform the Condition. All which being ſuppoſed, 'tis from other places manifeſt, that ſome condition there is required of us to make us capable of this benefit of the death of Chriſt, the non-performance of which is that which reſtrains and limits the number of men actually juſtified to a far narrower compaſs then that which is here ſpoken of; and this condition being to be performed by us, by the means of the reſurrection and grace of Chriſt, 'tis therefore ſaid, c. 4. 25. that he roſe again for our juſtification, that is, to make us capable of thoſe fruits and benefits of Chriſt's death, as well as died for our ſins. See note on c. 3. h.

V. 12. Wherefore] διὰ τοῦτο here being an illative form, and moſt fitly rendred Wherefore, makes it here neceſſary to enquire how that which follows is inferr'd from what went before; and the ſatisfying that enquiry will prepare for a right underſtanding of the remainder of this chapter. The former chapters had maintained the right of the Apoſtles preaching to the Gentiles, by ſhewing that God was an impartial Judge both to puniſh impenitent, foul ſins, and to reward penitence and good living, without any partiality, whether in Jew or Gentile, c. 1. & 2. but moſt diſcernibly, c. 2. 6. to the end. Then in the third chapter follow objections againſt this, and anſwers to them, and on occaſion of one of them, taken from the ſinfulneſs of the Gentiles, is inſerted a diſcourſe of Juſtification under the Goſpel, ſhewing how that is no way prejudiced by paſt ſins, if they be ſincerely forſaken, nor hindred by want of Circumciſion and Moſaical obſervances. And this is inſiſted on, and exemplified, in both parts, by the ſtory of Abraham, ch. 4. and then brought home to all believers in the former part of this chapter. From all which, as ſo many premiſes, or mediums of probation, the concluſion is here inferr'd, but withal by comparing the juſtification by Chriſt with the condemnation by Adam, farther confirm'd & illuſtrated in the remainder of this chapter, viz. that the mercy of God under the Goſpel belongs unlimitedly, or indefinitely, to all ſorts of men, the Gentiles as well as Jews. For the diſcerning of which, it will be needful, that thro' the remainder of the chapter, an Emphaſis be laid on the univerſal forms of ſpeech, † κόσμον the world, and πάντας ἀνθρώπους, all men, v. 12. ἐν κόσμῳ in the world, v. 13. οἱ πολλοὶ the many, and εἰς τοὺς πολλοὺς, toward the many, v. 15. and again εἰς πάντας ἀνθρώπους toward all men, twice v. 18. and οἱ πολλοὶ the many, twice v. 19. By all and each of which are meant in the wideſt latitude, without excluſion of any, all mankind, to whom (Jews and Gentiles) the mercy and life introduced by Chriſt belongeth, (only on condition of new life required of them) as the condemnation or death in Adam did to all his poſterity. The other difficulties in the chapter, (cauſed by ellipſis, v. 15, 16, 18. by a parentheſis of two verſes, 13, 14 by a compariſon, divided one part from the other by that parentheſis, and the ſecond part of it riſing higher then the former, and ſo neceſſarily changed from the form of a compariſon or equality, to that of an argument à minori ad majus, from the leſs to the greater) are explicated in the paraphraſe, and need not here farther be inſiſted on.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphraſe.

1. * WHat ſhall we ſay then? † ſhall we continue in ſin, that grace may abound?

2. God forbid: * how ſhall we that are dead to ſin, live any longer therein?]

1, 2. Now therefore for that objection (againſt our doctrine of the Gentiles being taken in by God) intimated ch. 3. 8. Do we affirm indeed, what we are accuſed to affirm, that men may live, and continue, and go in ſin, that by that means the mercy of God, which we acknowledge is illuſtrated by his looking graciouſly on the Gentile ſinners, may be, in like manner, the more ſet out by pardoning the greater ſinners continued and gone on in by us Chriſtians? God forbid we ſhould make any ſuch concluſion, or make any ſuch uſe of the doctrine of God's mercy to ſinners, which we know was deſigned only to call and draw the Gentiles out of their ſinful courſes to ſincere reformation, upon this promiſe of pardon for what is paſt, Acts 17. 30. on condition of future amendment, and not to encourage them to continue, or go on one minute longer in that courſe, or to flatter them with hope of impunity if they did. Certainly our doctrine is of a far diſtant making from this, and our profeſſion of Chriſtianity moſt ſtrictly obliges us to the contrary; for our baptiſm is a vowed death to ſin, and therefore we that are baptized muſt not in any reaſon return to, or live any longer in it; our being baptized Chriſtians obligeth us not to return to this mire again, after we are thus waſhed.

* What therefore do we ſay, τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν; † or, Let us continue, for the K's. MS. reads ἐπιμείνωμεν

* as many of us as have died to ſin, how ſhall we, Οἵτινες ἀπεθάνομεν τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ πῶς

3. Know ye not that ſo many of us as were baptized into Jeſus Chriſt, were baptized into his death?

4. Therefore we are buried with him by baptiſm into death; that like as Chriſt was raiſed up from the dead by the glory of the father, even ſo we alſo ſhould walk in newneſs of life.]

3, 4. 'Tis a thing that every Chriſtian knows, that the immerſion in baptiſm refers to the death of Chriſt, the putting the perſon baptized into the water denotes and proclaims the death and burial of Chriſt, and ſignifies our undertaking in baptiſm, that we will give over all the ſins of our former lives (which is our being buried together with Chriſt, or baptized to his death) that ſo we may live that regenerate new life (anſwerable to Chriſt's reſurrection) which conſiſts in a courſe of all ſanctity, a conſtant Chriſtian walk all our days.

5. For if we have been planted together in the likeneſs of his death, we ſhall be alſo in the likeneſs of his reſurrection;]

5. For if we have in baptiſm undertaken to forſake ſin, and to be dead to the motions of it, and ſo to imitate Chriſt's death, and thereby have been ſo graffed into Chriſt, that we are become the ſame tree with him, partaking of the ſame juice with that root, we are then under the ſame obligation to imitate and tranſcribe his reſurrection, by our new regenerate lives, which are our firſt reſurrection, and the lively reſemblance, and pourtraiture of his.

6. Knowing

a. 6. Reſolving this with our ſelves, that as this was one end of Chriſt's ſuffering for our ſins, and dying upon the croſs, that he might give us example to do ſo too (ſee Tit. 2. 14.) to crucify, that is, forſake our former courſe of life; ſo our forſaking of ſin, and conforming our ſelves to his crucifixion, which in baptiſm we undertake, obliges us to the mortifying of every ſin, ſo far that we no longer yield any obedience to it, that is, neither willingly indulge to any preſumptuous acts, nor ſlaviſhly lie down in any habit or courſe of ſin.

6. Knowing this, that our old man † is crucified with him, that a the body of ſin might be deſtroyed, * that henceforth we ſhould not ſerve ſin.]

† was crucified, συνεσταυρώθη
* that we ſhould no longer, τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ

7. For as a man truly dead, is freed from the authority of all thoſe that in life-time had power over him; ſo he that is dead to ſin (in this figurative ſenſe, wherein I now ſpeak) is freed from the power of ſin acting formerly in him, and conſequently he that hath, by being baptized into Chriſt, ſo far undertaken to accompany Chriſt in his death, as really to die unto ſin, muſt demonſtrate himſelf to be freed from the power of it, muſt not permit it to live in him, that is, himſelf to be acted by it, or elſe he doth quite contrary to his undertaking.

7. For he that is dead, is † freed from ſin.]

† abſolved, δεδικαίωται

8. And if we ſincerely perform our pardon in this, if we imitate Chriſt in his death, that is, die to ſin, forſake and never return to it again, then we muſt alſo remember, that it is another part of our Chriſtian faith, and undertaking of our baptiſm, to imitate Chriſt in his reſurrection, to riſe to new and holy and godly lives (and then we have grounds of believing that we ſhall together with him, or after his example, have a joyful reſurrection to eternal life. But upon no other terms but theſe do we expect or believe any good from Chriſt.)

8. Now if we be dead with Chriſt, we believe that we ſhall alſo live with him:]

9. This being it for which we have a copy in Chriſt's reſurrection alſo, as well as in his death, viz. So to riſe to new life, as never to return to our old ſins again; as his was a reſurrection that inſtated him on an eternal life, never to come under the power of death again.

9. Knowing that Chriſt being raiſed from the dead, dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him.]

10, 11. For as when he died for our ſins, he died once, never to undergo that death again, but when he roſe from death he was immediately inſtated, not into one ſingle act of life (ſo only, as it might be truly ſaid, he was once alive after death) but no more; but into an immortal endleſs life, a life, co-immortal with the Father, God eternal, ſo muſt we, after that double example of his death and reſurrection, account our ſelves obliged by our baptiſm (which accordingly is not wont to be reiterated) ſo to die, to forſake ſin, as that we need never die any more, die one final death, never reſume our former courſes again, and on the other ſide, for our new Chriſtian life, to take care, that that be eternal, no more to return to our ſins again, then we think Chriſt or God can die again, but perſevere in all virtuous and godly living, according to the example and precepts of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who died and roſe again on purpoſe to raiſe us up to this kind of new life, never to die again.

10. * For in that he died, he died unto ſin once; † but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God.

11. Likewiſe reckon ye alſo your ſelves to be dead indeed unto ſin; but alive unto God, thro' Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.]

* For that which died, died unto ſin once for all, Ὃ γὰρ ἀπέθανε, τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ ἀπέθανεν ἐφάπαξ
† but that which liveth, ὃ δὲ ζῇ, ζῇ

12. And ſo you now ſee what your Chriſtian duty is, whatſoever we are calumniated to affirm, that whereas your fleſh hath many ſinful deſires, which, if they be obeyed, or obſerved, will ſet up a kingdom or dominion of ſin in you, make you ſervants and ſlaves to ſin, you are moſt ſtrictly obliged to take care that ſin get not this Dominion, that you obey it not in yielding to, or ſatisfying the luſts or prohibited deſires of your bodies.

12. Let not ſin reign therefore in your mortal body, that ye ſhould obey it in the luſts thereof.]

13. But inſtead of offering up, or preſenting your members unto ſin, as inſtruments or weapons to do what ſin would have done, ye muſt conſecrate your ſelves unto God, as men that are raiſed unto new life, and therefore are fit to do him ſervice, and your bodies as active and military inſtruments of performing to him all the obedience in the world.

13. Neither * yield ye your members as inſtruments of unrighteouſneſs unto ſin; but yield your ſelves unto God, as thoſe that are alive from the dead, and your members as inſtruments of righteouſneſs unto God.]

* preſent your members unto ſin, weapons of unrighteouſneſs, but preſent- μηδὲ παριστάνετε τὰ μέλη ὑμῶν ὅπλα ἀδικίας τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ, ἀλλὰ παραστήσατε

14. 'Twere the vileſt thing in the world for ſin to have dominion over you, who are now no longer under the weak unefficacious pædagogy of the Law (which could only forbid ſin, and denounce judgment, but never yield that man hope of mercy on amendment, which is neceſſary to the working reformation on him, or checking any ſin that men are tempted to) but under a kingdom of grace, where there is pardon for ſin upon Repentance, and ſtrength from heaven to repent, and ſo no want of ability or encouragement to mend our lives. (See note on Matt. 5. g.)

14. For ſin ſhall not have dominion over you, for ye are not under the Law, but under grace.]

15. From hence again ſome carnal men are ready to collect matter of ſecurity in ſin: For, ſay they, if now under the Goſpel there be pardon allowed for ſin, and not condemnation (as it was under the Law) for every wilful ſin we have committed, why may we not ſecurely ſin? This is the unreaſonableſt concluſion, and detorſion of this doctrine, very diſtant from the truth of it, which is, that this pardon for ſin belongeth not to them that ſecurely go on in ſin, but only to the penitent, and is offered to men that are ſinners, on purpoſe, that in hope of pardon upon ing, they may timely do ſo, and not that they may the longer continue in their courſe, which is the moſt abhorred uſe of God's mercy imaginable.

15. What then? ſhall we ſin, becauſe we are not under the Law, but under grace? God forbid.]

16. 'Tis a known thing, that he that delivers himſelf up to any man as a ſervant or ſlave, and actually ſerveth or obeyeth him, is to be accounted his ſervant, and to receive wages from him: and ſo it muſt be among you, if ye give your ſelves up to any ſin, to ſerve that, ye are ſlaves to ſin, and muſt expect the wages of that ſervice, eternal death, as on the other ſide, if ye deliver your ſelves up to ſerve God in obeying his commands, ye will be reputed his ſervants, and have the wages that belong thereto, eternal life. See 2 Tim. 4. note a.

16. Know ye not, that to whom ye † yield your ſelves ſervants to obey, his ſervants ye are to whom ye obey, whether of ſin, unto death, or of obedience, unto righteouſneſs?]

† preſent, v. 13.

17. But 'tis a great mercy of God to you, that having been formerly the ſervants of ſin, having lived and gone on ſo long in the courſe of ſin, ye have now cordially obey'd that ſummary of Chriſtian Doctrine, to the belief and practice of which ye were delivered up, and ſolemnly conſecrated in your baptiſm, ſee note on Matt. 9. d.

17. But God be thanked, that ye were the ſervants of ſin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine * which was delivered to you.]

* unto which ye were deliver'd up, εἰς ὃν παρεδόθητε

18. And having receiv'd a manumiſſion from that evil maſter, ye have given your ſelves up to a more ingenuous ſervice, obliging your ſelves to live righteouſly for ever after.

18. † Being then made free from ſin, ye became the ſervants of righteouſneſs.]

† And being freed from ſin, ye have been ſubjected, or made ſervants to righteouſneſs, Ἐλευθερωθέντες δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς ἁμαρτίας, ἐδουλώθητε τῇ δικ.

b. 19. I ſhall expreſs this by an ordinary reſemblance, or I will deal with you after the mildeſt and moſt eaſie equitable manner, require no more then any man would in reaſon require, becauſe of the weakneſs of your fleſh, which I cannot expect ſhould bear too much ſeverity, or elſe too high expreſſions; All that I ſhall ſay, is, that you will but have the ſame care of ſanctity now, be but as diligent to obey the precepts of Chriſt, and by that means aſpire to ſanctification, as you were formerly induſtrious in the ſerving of your luſts and unlawful vile affections, to act all the villany in the World. This in all reaſon I muſt require of you, and ſhall require no more (though according to ſtrict Juſtice I might require greater care to ſecure your life and ſalvation, then to ruin and damn your ſelves ye had expreſs'd.)

19. I b ſpeak after the manner of men, becauſe of the infirmity of your fleſh: for as you have yielded your members ſervants to uncleanneſs, and to iniquity unto iniquity, even ſo now yield your members ſervants to righteouſneſs unto * holineſs.]

* ſanctification ἁγιασμὸν

20. For (by way of ordinary diſtributive juſtice) when ye ſerved ſin, righteouſneſs or piety (ye know) had no whit of your ſervice; why then ſhould ſin now have any of your ſervice, when you have delivered up your ſelves to righteouſneſs or Chriſtian life, to be obſervant Followers of that; why ſhould ye not now abſtain as ſtrictly from all ſin, as then ye did from all good? ſure this the rules of juſtice will oblige you to.

20. For when ye were ſervants of ſin, ye were † free from righteouſneſs.]

† free men to righteouſneſs ἐλεύθεροι τῇ δικ.

21. What

21. What fruit had ye then in thoſe things, whereof ye are now aſhamed? for the end of thoſe things is death.]

21. And this will be much more reaſonable, if ye conſider the nature of your former ſins, in your own experience of them, how little fruit or benefit, or ſatisfaction they brought you at the very time of enjoying them, and how nothing but ſhame at the preſent remembrance of them, and how certain the concluſion is, that they will bring death upon you; whereas the ſerving of Chriſt on the other ſide will be matter of joy and pleaſure at the preſent, matter of comfort and confidence after, and will bring ſalvation at the end.

22. But now being made free from ſin, and become ſervants to God, * ye have your fruit unto † holineſs, and the end everlaſting life.]

22. But now having given over the ſervice of ſin (vowed your ſelves never to go on farther in that courſe) and undertaken the ſervice of God, bring forth fruit, ſuch as by which ſanctification may daily encreaſe in you, and as may reap, for it's crown, eternal life.

* have ye ἔχετε
† ſanctification, v. 19.

23. For the wages of ſin is death: but the gift of God is eternal life, thro' Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.]

23. For according to the Law, and to ſtill to every impenitent, the reward or payment of every deliberate ſin, all that it brings in to him by way of ſtipend, is death: but the mercy that is in the Goſpel reached out to all penitents, is eternal life, as it is now purchaſed and contrived, by what Chriſt Jeſus our Lord hath done and ſuffered for us in the Goſpel.

Annotations on Chap. VI.

a. τὸ σῶμα

V. 6. The body] The phraſe τὸ σῶμα, the body, &c. hath a peculiar uſe in S. Paul when it is joined with a Genitive caſe following, for then it paſſes into the ſignification of that which is joined with it, and its ſelf loſes its force; the body of ſin ſignifying nothing more then ſin here, and Rom. 7. 24. σῶμα θανάτου τούτου, the body of this death, no more then this death, this ſad miſerable kind of death. So σῶμα αὐτῶν, Eccl. 7. 24. their body, ſignifies them, and σῶμα Χριστοῦ, Chriſt, Rom. 7. 4. and σῶμα μου, me, Gal. 6. 17. & Phil. 1. 20. ſo τὸ σῶμα τῆς ταπεινώσεως ἡμῶν, Phil. 3. 21. and σῶμα δόξης αὐτοῦ, the body of our humiliation, and the body of his glory, is no more then ſimply our humiliation, and his glory. So Col. 2. 11. ἀπέκδυσις τοῦ σώματος τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν τῆς σαρκός, the putting off the body of the ſins of the fleſh, is the putting off the ſins of the fleſh, or carnal ſins. And perhaps 1 Cor. 9. 27. ὑπωπιάζω τὸ σῶμά μου, I beat, or cuff my ſelf, for ſo the matter of the diſcourſe before, concerning the uſe of Chriſtian liberty, doth moſt encline us to interpret it. And all this ſeems in S. Paul to be an imitation of the Hebrew form of ſpeech, among whom the word עצם that ſignifies a body, frequently ſignifies no more then being or identity, ſo that עצמו his body ſignifies no more then idem ipſe, the ſame he. So Joſ. 9. עצמכם your body, that is, your very ſelves, or as the Targum reads it, קריבנין your near kinſman, and Job 2. touch עצמו his body: the Targum reads לגרמיה himſelf, the former touches having been on his family, and goods, &c. And that place of Col. 2. 9. ἐν αὐτῷ κατοικεῖ πᾶν τὸ πλήρωμα τῆς θεότητος σωματικῶς, in him dwelleth the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily, may ſeem capable of the ſame ſenſe, that the fulneſs of the Godhead dwells in Chriſt by identity of his very eſſence, and ſo directly in the notion of עצמו. As for the καταργηθῆναι σῶμα, aboliſhing the body of ſin, it is a phraſe to ſignify reformation of life. Of which ſort many other phraſes there are in Scripture, which ſignify the ſame thing, ſome of them referring to the new life, to which the change is made, others to the old courſe that is forſaken. I ſhall ſet down ſome of them; to repent, to be converted, to be transformed, to be waſhed, to purify hands and heart, Jam. 4. 8. himſelf, 1 John 3. 3. to be purified with the laver of regeneration by the word, Epheſ. 5. 26. ſprinkled in the heart from an evil conſcience, Heb. 10. 22. to be renewed in the mind, to put on the new man, created according to God, Eph. 4. 24. a new creature, to be born of the Spirit, Joh. 3. 6. to be ſpiritually-minded (in oppoſition to being born of the fleſh, and minding fleſhly things) to be regenerate, or to be born again, or of water and of the ſpirit, to be begotten by the word of truth, Jam. 1. 18. to be enlightned, to revive, and be riſen with Chriſt, to riſe from the dead, to be circumciſed with the circumciſion not made with hands, Col. 2. 11. the circumciſion of the heart (explained by putting off the body of the ſins of the fleſh, that is carnal ſins) to eſcape from the wicked generation, and ſimply to eſcape, or to be ſaved, Acts 2. 47. to go out from among them, to grow ſober, 2 Tim. 2. 26. to awake out of ſleep, Rom. 13. 11. 1 Cor. 15. 34. and (in a ſpecial Scripture ſenſe of the phraſe) to be reconciled unto God, 2 Cor 5. 20. that is, to lay down all that averſation and enmity which they had formerly to God, or by their wicked works, Col. 1. 21.) had expreſs'd toward him, to put off all filthineſs, Jam. 1. 21. works of darkneſs, Rom. 13. 12. the old man, &c. Epheſ. 4. 22, 24. and to put on Chriſt, Gal. 3. 27. to depart from evil, 1 Pet. 3. 11. to deny, or renounce, ungodlineſs, Tit. 2. 12. to draw nigh unto God, Jam. 4. 8. to become ſervants to God, Rom. 6. 22. to take Chriſt's yoke upon us, Mat. 11. 29. to yield our members weapons of righteouſneſs to God, Rom. 6. 13. to be freed from the law (that is, the empire, or dominion, or command) of ſin, Rom. 8. 2. to ſuffer in, or to the fleſh, 1 Pet. 4. 1. (referring to ſins) ſuffering or dying to, and ſo ceaſing from, ſin. See note a. on that place. So to be crucified with Chriſt, Gal. 2. 19. to crucify the old man, Rom. 6. 6. the fleſh with affections and luſts; and κρίνεσθαι καὶ ἀνθρώπους σαρκὶ, being judged, or condemned, according to men in, or to, the fleſh, 1. Pet. 4. 6. that is, judged and executed to carnal fleſhly actions, ſo cuſtomary among men, that they may live according to God, (in imitation of, or compliance with him) to the Spirit, after a ſanctified ſpiritual manner. So the world being crucified to me, and I to the world, Gal. 6. 14. mortifying by the Spirit the actions of the body (Rom. 8. 13.) and the members on the earth, to be dead to ſin, Rom. 6. 11. and here being planted together with Chriſt in the likeneſs of his death, v. 5.

b. Ἀνθρώπινον λέγειν

V. 19. Speak after the manner of men] Ἀνθρώπινον λέγειν here is thought to ſignify his taking expreſſions out of common life, διὰ ἀσθένειαν τῆς σαρκὸς ὑμῶν, in reſpect of the weakneſs of their groſs or carnal underſtandings, his uſing Allegories and Figures; and as before he had uſed proofs from ſacred types, the death and reſurrection of Chriſt applied to his purpoſe of mortification, and new life, ſo now proceeding to vulgar known ſimilitudes, taken from maſters, and ſervants, as Gal. 3. 15. And thus is may fitly be interpreted; but it may otherwiſe be rendred alſo, that the weakneſs of their fleſh be taken in reſpect of ſtrength to perform God's will (and not to underſtand Paul's language) and conſequently the ἀνθρώπινον λέγειν be, ſpeaking, or requiring from them, moſt moderately, by way of condeſcenſion to their infirmities, requiring the leaſt that in any reaſon could be required of them, ſo as ἀνθρώπινος, 1 Cor. 10. 12. ſignifies that which hath nothing extraordinary in it, that which is common among men; ſo St. Chryſoſtom there, ἀνθρώπινος, τυπικὸς μικρὸς, βραχὺς, σύμμετρος, it ſignifies little, ſhort, proportionable to their ſtrength. So in Demoſthenes contr. Midiam, ἀνθρωπίνη καὶ μετρία σκέψις, an humane and moderate conſideration. So in Horace, l. 2. humane commoda ſignifies parum commoda, little profitable. And if it be here conſidered how moderate and equitable a propoſal it is which here follows, 'twill be acknowledg'd that this of ἀνθρώπινον λέγω in this notion may very well be the form to introduce it.

CHAP. VII.

a. 1. But to that which is laſt ſaid, c. 6. 23. of eternal life to be had by Chriſtians thro' the Goſpel, ye are ready to object, yea, but Chriſtians of your inſtitution do not obſerve the Law of Moſes, and ſo ſin contemptuouſly againſt God, that gave that Law to Moſes; nay, not only the Gentiles, that are converted to Chriſtianity, are by you permitted to neglect circumciſion, &c. and not to become Proſelytes of juſtice, Acts 15. but, which is more unreaſonable, the converted Jews are taught, by you that they need not obſerve the Law of Moſes (ſee Acts 21. 21. and note b. on the title of this Epiſtle) and then how can the Goſpel help them to eternal life that thus offend againſt the preſcript Law of God? to this third head of objections the Apoſtle in the beginning of this chapter gives a perſpicuous anſwer, affirming (that which was now neceſſary to be declared, tho' perhaps formerly it had not been affirmed to the Jews at Rome) that they were now no longer obliged to obſervance of the Ceremonies of the Moſaical Law: Which being to Paul revealed from heaven, Epheſ. 3. 3. among the many revelations which he had received, 2 Cor. 12. 7. he thus declares to them, preparing them firſt by ſhewing the reaſonableneſs of it, by the ſimilitude of an husband and a wife; my brethren of the ſtock of Abraham, ye cannot but know the quality or nature of thoſe Laws which give one perſon intereſt in, or power over another, (for I ſuppoſe you inſtructed therein, by frequent hearing, and reading of the books of Moſes) that any ſuch law ſtands in force, as long as the perſon that hath that intereſt liveth.

1 KNow ye not, brethren, (for I ſpeak to them that know the Law) that * the a law hath power over a man as long as he liveth?]

* or the law of the man hath power, or force, ὁτόμος κυριεύει τῦ ἀνθρώπε

2. For it is known of any married woman, that by the conjugal law ſhe is oblig'd to cleave to the husband as long as he lives; but upon the husband's death, the conjugal law, which is founded in his life, is dead alſo, and ſo the wife is abſolutely free, the law of matrimony hath no force upon her, ſee Gal. 5. 4.

2. For the woman which hath an husband, is bound by the Law to * her husband, ſo long as he liveth: but if the husband be dead, ſhe is looſed from the law of her husband.]

* the living husband, τῦ ζῶντι ἀνδρὸς

3. And this is ſo far from being a nicety, that indeed matters of the greateſt importance depend upon it; for if while her husband liveth, ſhe yield her ſelf to any other, ſhe is acknowledgly guilty of adultery: But if her husband be dead, ſhe may freely marry another man, and live with him conjugally, and be as innocent in ſo doing, as if ſhe had never had former husband.

3. So then, if while her husband liveth, † ſhe be married to another man, ſhe ſhall be called an Adultereſs: but if her husband be dead, ſhe is free from that law; ſo that ſhe is no Adultereſs, though ſhe be married to another man.]

† ſhe be to another γένηται ἑτέρῳ

b 4. And thus (my brethren, even thoſe of the Jews that are believers in Chriſt) the Law is thro' Chriſt dead to you alſo, (and not only to the Gentile believers, Acts 15.) and ſo ye alſo are freed from the obligation of the Law, that is, as it were dead to it, that ye may now, according to the Laws of marriage, be ſafely joined and eſpouſed to another, viz to that Chriſt, whoſe reſurrection from the dead ſhews him to be alive, that ſo ye may live in conjugal affection and obedience to him, and being made fruitful by his ſpirit we may, as wives that live with their husbands, bring forth all holy Chriſtian actions to the honour and praiſe of God.

4. Wherefore, my brethren, ye alſo b are become dead to the Law by the body of Chriſt, that ye * ſhould be married to another, even to him who is raiſed from the dead, that we † ſhould bring forth fruit unto God.]

* may be to another γενέσθαι ἑτέρῳ † may

c. 5. This, while we lived under the pædagogie of the Law, was not done by us, (which is one reaſon of aboliſhing it, Chriſt now giving precepts of inward purity, inſtead of thoſe external ordinances, and giving his Spirit to enable to perform them, over and above what was under the Law.) For when we were under thoſe carnal ordinances, though all ſinful practiſes were forbidden by that Law, and ſo were rendred more criminous by being prohibited by a promulgate Law, yet our ſinful deſires and affections, that propoſed thoſe objects which were thus forbidden, that Law had no power to mortify and ſubdue, and ſo notwithſtanding that Law, thoſe ſinful affections were obeyed and yielded to in our members, and ſo brought forth that ſad fruit, obligation to puniſhment eternal, and that was all the good we reap'd by the Law.

5. For when we were in the fleſh, the * motions of ſins, which † were by the Law, * did work in our members † to bring forth fruit unto death.]

* affections, παθήματα † are by * were wrought, ἐνηργεῖτο * ſo as to bring forth fruit, εἰς τὸ καρποφορῆσαι

6. But now we are freed from the Law, as that (beſide the moral precepts) contain'd alſo thoſe carnal external performances, (ſee Mat. 5. g.) that obligation being cancelled by which they were due, ſo that now inſtead of being outwardly circumciſed, and in our lives impure, we muſt think our ſelves moſt ſtrictly obliged to ſet to the performing of that real ſubſtantial purity which was ſignified by the legal obſervances of circumciſion, &c. ſerving Chriſt in new life, and evangelical obedience, (ſee ch. 8. 1.) in lieu of that external bloody obedience, which the Law of Moſes (written of old by God's appointment, and ſo here called the writing or the letter) did then require of all Jews. See note on Mat. 5. g.

6. But now we are delivered from the Law, that being dead wherein we were held, that we ſhould ſerve in newneſs of ſpirit, and not in the oldneſs of the letter.]

d. e. 7. But here again it is objected to us, that by thus arguing we lay charge and blame upon the law, that it is ſin, or the cauſe of ſin, contenting it ſelf with that external performance of the ceremony, and not exacting the inward purity of us. To this I anſwer, by way of deteſtation of that calumny, of which our doctrine is perfectly guiltleſs: No ſure, we lay no ſuch thing to the charge of the Law, we ſhould be moſt unjuſt, if we did. For the Law hath done its part, given us knowledge that the very deſires of the heart are ſins (and that diſtinctly in the tenth Commandment) which I had not known, had not the Law diſtinctly told me that it was ſo, and ſet circumciſion as an emblem of that duty of mortifying all carnal deſires.

7. What * ſhall we ſay then? Is the Law ſin? God forbid. † Nay, d I had not known ſin but by the Law: for I had not known * e luſt, except the Law had ſaid, Thou ſhalt not covet.]

* ſay we, ſee ch. 4. a. † nay, but I had not known the ſin ἀλλὰ τὴν ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ ἔγνων * covetng, luſting

8. But the Law having indeed only given me the prohibition, and that ceremony to fence it, and no more, and in this particular of coveting, not ſo much as denouncing any preſent legal infliction upon the Commiſſion of it, the cuſtomary ſins of men, ſeeing there was no puniſhment aſſigned to this ſin, (that is, being only forbid by the Law without any annexation of puniſhment) took an advantage by the Laws only prohibiting, and not puniſhing this ſin, and ſo perſwading me, that the external Ceremony of Circumciſion (which was commanded under penalty of exciſion) would ſerve the turn, without any more, invaded me, and wrought in me all inward impurity, which as it would not ſo probably have been able to do, if the Law that mentioned this prohibition had fortified it with denunciation of puniſhment (as in other caſes) or if indeed the truſting on the external performance, the priviledge of being circumciſed, had not given [men ſome ſecurity and confidence, that nothing ſhould be able to do them hurt, (deprive them of the favour of God, that were thus circumciſed) ſo would it not have been neer ſo criminous, if it had not been diſtinctly prohibited by the Law. For it is a known truth, that the criminouſneſs and puniſhableneſs of any act ariſeth from its being prohibited by ſome law.

8. But ſin † taking occaſion by the commandment, wrought in me all * manner of concupiſcence: for without the law ſin † was dead.]

† receiving advantage ἀφορμὴν λαβοῦσα * coveting or luſting, ἐπιθυμίαν † is,

9. The people indeed of the Jews lived formerly without the Law (ſee note d.) that is, before the promulgation of it; but as ſoon as the Law was given, the ſin of diſobeying a promulgate Law became greater, and the diſobedient Jew more puniſhable by reaſon of the Law, and no way the better for it; as when a man is ſick, and doth not know his condition and danger, the Phyſician coming tells him of both, and preſcribes him a ſtrict diet for the future, if he will recover; but he obſerves not his preſcriptions, continues intemperate, and ſo dyes under the Phyſicians hand, and in ſpite of his care.

9. For * I was alive without the law once; but when the commandment came, ſin revived, and I dyed.]

* I indeed lived ἐγὼ δὲ ἔζων

10. And the law, which was meant to keep them ſinleſs, and ſo bring them to life, being not obeyed, did in the iſſue of it bring only death on them.

10. And the commandment, which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death.]

11. For † advantage, v. 8.

11. For ſin taking † occaſion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it ſlew me.]

11. For the Law preſcribing circumciſion under penalty of excision, but not preſcribing the inward purity under that threat (nor denouncing any preſent judicial puniſhment upon the commiſſion of the contrary ſin) but only prohibiting it, and no more, ſin took advantage by this impunity of the Law, and firſt ſeduced me to inward impurity, and then, by occaſion of the Commandment which forbad it, and ſo made it criminous, inſnared and wounded me to death.

* So that, ὥστε

12. * Wherefore the Law is holy, and the Commandment holy, and juſt, and good.]

12. And ſo the objection v. 7. was a groundleſs objection; for tho' the Moſaical Law were the occaſion of ſin (or were made advantage of by ſin) yet it was not the cauſe, and ſo ſtill that Law is holy, (and the Commandment againſt coveting, holy) juſt, and good: firſt holy) whither that ſignify piety toward God, or purity from all allowance of impurity; and ſo ſecondly, juſt, in allowing no manner of injuſtice; and thirdly, good, as requiring charity to others, and ſo no manner of colour or tincture of ill in it, (only 'twas not ſo highly perfect in any of theſe reſpects, 'twas not fill'd up to ſo high a pitch, as is now by Chriſt required of us.)

† hath then that which is good become to me death? τὸ οὖν ἀγαθὸν ἐμοὶ γέγονε θάνατος; * to me, μοι

13. † Was that then which is good, made death unto me? God forbid. But ſin, that it might appear ſin, worketh death * in me by that which is good; that ſin by the Commandment might become exceeding ſinful.]

13. Was therefore this good law guilty of death to me? was it the cauſe of bringing it on me? No, not ſo neither, but ſin was that onely cauſe, which is guilty of all. And ſo (ſee note on Mat. 1. k.) this is a means of ſetting out ſin in its colours, that it works deſtruction to men by that which is good, and ſo ſin it ſelf is by this means extremely aggravated, and making this uſe of the Law, it becomes extremely or ſuperlatively ſinful, or the Law ſhews me what a ſinful thing ſin is, which will not be repreſs'd by the Law.

14. For we know that the Law is ſpiritual; but I am carnal, f ſold under ſin.]

f.

14. And the reaſon why the effect of the Law is ſo contrary to what was intended by it, is this, that the Law is ſpiritual, and not performable by a carnal man, but the carnality of men (ſold under ſin, that is, habitual ſlaves to ſin, ready to do all that it bids them, tho' the Law never ſo diſtinctly prohibit) that is the cauſe of all.

† know, γινώσκω

15. For that which I do, I † allow not: for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I.]

15. For ſuch men as I now ſpeak of, carnal men, v. 14. tho' they are taught their duty by the Law, yet do they not by the dictate of their underſtanding or conſcience, that which they do, it is not that which in conſent to the Law they approve, but that which by their conſcience, directed and inſtructed by the Law, they hate and diſlike, that they do.

16. If then I do that which I would not, I conſent unto the Law, that it is good.]

16. And this very thing is an argument, that the Law is acknowledg'd to be good, that they diſlike that which they do in diſobedience to the Law, they never commit any prohibited evil, but their Conſciences accuſes and ſmites them for it.

* But now, Νυνὶ δὲ † no longer, οὐκέτι

17. * Now then it is † no more I that do it, but ſin that dwelleth in me.]

17. And ſo 'tis not the whole they that commits ſin, or as they are led and inſtructed by the Law (and ſo the Law ſtill is vindicated from the charge, v. 7.) but it is their carnality reſiſting the Law, or ſin having gotten power over them, and ſo carrying them in deſpight of the Law, and Conſcience admoniſhing the contrary.

* good dwelleth not, οὐκ οἰκεῖ ἀγαθὸν † to me, μοι * or, not to do that which is good, for the K's. MS. reads, τὸ δὲ κατεργάζεσθαι τὸ καλὸν, οὐ

18. For I know that in me (that is, in my fleſh) * dwelleth no good thing: for to will is preſent † with me, but * how to perform that which is good, I find not.]

18. For in men whoſe affections are not mortified by the ſpirit of Chriſt, but carnally diſpoſed, or led by their own corrupt cuſtoms, 'tis not the law, or knowing their duty that will do any good on them. To approve indeed, or like that which is good, the law enableth them, but the carnal affections do ſtill ſuggeſt the contrary, and carry them in deſpight of the prohibitions of the Law.

19. For the good that I would I do not, but the evil which I would not that I do.]

19. And this is clear by the experiment, for they do not perform that good, which, as the law commands, ſo they conſent to be good; but the evil which they conſent not to be good, and which the law tells them they ſhould not do, that they do.

20. Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but ſin that dwelleth in me.]

20. Which plainly argues the truth of that which was ſaid, v. 15. & 17. (and is full anſwer to the objection againſt the law, v. 7.) that the law is far from being guilty of their ſin, and that 'tis not they by the duct and dictate of the law, or their own conſcience guided by the law, that do evil; but carnality or cuſtom of ſin, that hath got ſuch a ſway or power over them.

* the law that, or, in that τὸν νόμον, ὅτι

21. I find then * a law, that when I would do good, evil is preſent with me.]

21. By this then you may diſcern the law, and the goodneſs, and the energy or force of it, that when carnality moves men to evil, the mind illuminated by the law enclines them to good; or, that evil, when it is repreſented to them, finds them enclined to the contrary.

† have the ſame delight with, συνήδομαι τῷ

22. For I † delight in the law of God, after the inward man.]

22. For according to the underſtanding, or ſuperior faculty (contrary to the carnal or bodily part of them) they are pleaſed with all thoſe things that the law of God is pleaſed with.

g.

23. But I ſee g another law in my members, warring againſt the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of ſin which is in my members.]

23. But there is another commanding power in the members, which ſets its ſelf in direct oppoſition to thoſe dictates of the law in the mind, which in carnal men, v. 14. gets the better of the day, carries them captive-ſlaves, to do what the fleſh requires to have done by them.

24. O wretched man that I am! who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death?

24. This is a ſad condition, (the very ſtate of a carnal man under the law) and out of which the law cannot reſcue any man, nor from the deſtruction that attends it.

* the ſame I with my mind, αὐτὸς ἐγὼ τῷ νοΐ

25. I thank God through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. So then * with the mind I my ſelf ſerve the law of God, but with the fleſh the law of ſin.]

25. Yet, bleſſed be God, by the grace and ſtrength of Jeſus Chriſt, c. 6. 23. there is a way to get out of this curſed eſtate; 1. pardon to every penitent ſinner, which may encourage any to break off this eſtate of ſin; and 2. grace and ſtrength in Chriſt, to perform what God in Chriſt will accept, that is, ſincere, tho' not perfect obedience (the thing affirmed, v. 6. and reſumed at the beginning of ch. 8.) So then the concluſion of this digreſſion from v. 7. to this place is, that the bare knowledge of the Law of Moſes doth only direct the underſtanding, what is the duty; which notwithſtanding, the carnal man accuſtomed to his own ways of ſin, may think fit ſtill to go on in them, and ſo (tho' one and the ſame perſon) doth two things at once, with his underſtanding he ſerves the law of God, is delighted and pleaſed with thoſe things wherewith that is delighted, and yet at the ſame time with the fleſh ſubmits to the ſuggeſtions and cuſtomary actions of the fleſh, and falls into ſins directly contrary to the Suggeſtions of his Conſcience, and the law in it, and this is juſtly rewarded with death, c. 6. 23.

Annotations on Chap. VII.

a. ὁ Νόμος ἰσχυει ἐφ' ὅσον χρόνον ζῇ ὁ ἄνθρωπος

V. 1. The law hath power over ——] The conſtruction and meaning of theſe words, ὁ νόμος κυριεύει ἀνθρώπου ἐφ' ὅσον χρόνον ζῇ, which are commonly rendred, the Law hath power over a man as long as he liveth, is ſomewhat uncertain; and for the determining of it, the firſt thing to be conſidered, is the deſign and matter of the diſcourſe in this chapter, which is diſcernibly this, to vindicate his doctrine, (charged on him Acts 21. 21. it is not certain whether then truly or no, but without doubt now profeſſedly taught by him) that the Judaical Law was aboliſhed by the death of Chriſt, Epheſ. 2. 15, 16. Col. 2. 14. and ſo now was not obligatory to the Jew. This he now thinks fit to declare to the Jewiſh Chriſtians at Rome, as in the former chapters he had vindicated the liberty of the Gentiles from the obligation of it to them, and juſtified his preaching the Goſpel to them, both which together did, by way of interpretation, and neceſſary conſequence, contain under them this of the obligingneſs of the Law to a Jew. For the Law of the Jews commanding a ſtrict ſeparation from the Gentiles, all that were not their Proſelytes, and circumciſed, and Paul and other the Apoſtles being Jews, their converſing with, and preaching to the Gentiles, could not be allow'd upon any ſcore, but that of the abrogation of the Jewiſh Law, which accordingly was of neceſſity to be revealed to St. Peter in a viſion, Acts 10. (and ſo ſeems to have been to S. Paul, Epheſ. 3. 3.) before he durſt preach to Cornelius, who tho' a Proſelyte of the Jews, yet was not a Proſelyte of their Covenant, or righteouſneſs, that is, was not circumciſed. This abolition of the Law to you, that is, to his brethren the Jews, v. 4. and to the ἡμᾶς us, v. 6. that is, to St. Paul, and thoſe he ſpeaks to, that is, to them that know the Law, v. 1. and ſo ſtill the Jew-Chriſtians at Rome, is here evidently proclaimed, v. 4. & 6. And therefore in all probability that muſt be the importance of theſe words, which may moſt directly prepare, and contribute to the inferring of that concluſion. To which end firſt it is neceſſary, that εἰς ὅσον χρόνον ζῇ muſt be rendred, as long as he (the man, not as it) liveth. This appeareth by the inſtance, v. 2. by which that which is ſaid v. 1. is exemplified, ἡ γὰρ ὑπανδρος γυνὴ τῷ ζῶντι ἀνδρὶ δέδεται νόμῳ, The woman which hath an husband is by the (conjugal) law bound to the living husband; where the husband is the perſon whoſe life is conſidered in this caſe, who as long as he lives, hath power over his wife, and ſo long the wife by law is bound unto him, but if he die, ſhe is free, &c. By this alſo it is manifeſt in the ſecond place, that the man which is meant in the latter part of this firſt verſe, as long as he liveth, cannot be the perſon on whom the Law hath power or force, but ſome other, who by law hath power and authority veſted in him. For it is apparent v. 2. & 3. that the life or death of the perſon under ſubjection is not the thing taken into conſideration, and if it were, it would not tend to the inferring of the deſigned concluſion; for the Jews could not be ſuppoſed to be dead, but the law that had power over them, and tho', v. 4. the word ἐθανατώθητε, you are put to death, may make that ſeem poſſible to be here meant, yet the contrary being ſo evident by the whole drift of the diſcourſe, it is certain that ἐθανατώθητε τῷ νόμῳ there, you are put to death to the law, muſt be interpreted as a figurative ſpeech, to ſignify the law is put to death to you; as when καταργεῖσθαι ſignifies to be made ἀργὸς void, to be evacuated, or cancelled, and ſo is all one with being put to death (and is ſo uſed, Epheſ. 2. 15. καταργήσας νόμον, having cancell'd the Law, all one with ἐξαλείψας, having blotted it out, Col. 2. 14. and προσηλώσας τῷ σταυρῷ, having nailed it to the croſs) we read of the woman, v. 2. κατήργηται ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου τοῦ ἀνδρός, which would literally be rendred, ſhe is cancell'd from the law of the husband, but indeed ſignifies, the law of the husband is cancell'd, or ceaſeth to be in force, to her; and ſo v. 6. κατηργήθημεν τῷ νόμῳ, we are cancelled to the law, ſignifies, the law is cancelled to us. Which being thus far deduced, it remaineth in the third place, that the former part of the words, ὁ νόμος κυριεύει τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, muſt either thus be rendred, the law of the man hath power, or force, or remains valid, (joyning τοῦ ἀνθρώπου of the man, to νόμος, law, not to κυριεύει hath power) be elſe (becauſe the word ἀνθρώπου is otherwiſe placed, being affix'd to κυριεύει, and indeed κυριεύει properly governs a Genitive caſe, and is uſed with one, Luke 22. 25. juſt as here it will be, if τοῦ ἀνθρώπου be governed by it) it is poſſible that the word man, which is the he in the latter part, may be implied and underſtood (tho' not ſpecified) in the word ὁ νόμος law, thereby ſignifying not Law in general, but more ſpecially any Law which conveyeth a right, or giveth power or dominion to one man over another; according to the primitive notion of νόμος law, from νέμω diſtribuo, noting an aſſignation, or diſtribution of every Man's right unto him, (and ſo νόμος, v. 2. evidently ſignifies the conjugal law, which ſubjects and binds the wife to the husband) for of ſuch a law it will be truly ſaid, that κυριεύει τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, it is in validity, or force, over the man, (meaning the ſubject) as long as he, that is, the owner, or the Lord, liveth. That this is the true ſenſe and aim of the words is unqueſtionable, and the latter way of expreſſing it ſeems to be the moſt commodious and eaſie, tho' the former may poſſibly be it, (by an eaſy and ordinary ὑπέρβατον:) and then νόμος τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, the law of the man will be a fit phraſe to ſignify any ſuch Law, wherein mens intereſts are concerned, Municipal, or humane laws, which are in force 'till they be aboliſhed legally.

V. 4. Dead to the Law] That ἐθανατώθητε τῷ νόμῳ, you are dead to the Law ſignifies the Laws being dead to them, being aboliſhed, having no power over them, hath been ſaid (Note a.) and may farther appear by v. 6. where the ground of their freedom from the Law is expreſs'd by ἀποθανόντος ἐν ᾧ κατειχόμεθα, that being dead by which we were held; where the law being by an ordinary proſopopœia (as when ſin is ſaid to reign, c. 6. 12.) uſed for a perſon, is ſaid to be dead, (and to be nail'd to Chriſt's Croſs, Col. 2. 14.) and ſo under the fiction of a perſon, is more fitly anſwerable to the huſband, whoſe death frees the wife from all obligation to him, that ſhe may lawfully marry and ſubject her ſelf to any other; and ſo in like manner may Jews to Chriſt, upon the abolition of their Law. As for the διὰ τοῦ σώματος τοῦ Χριστοῦ, by the body of Chriſt, by which the Judaical Law is aboliſhed, that ſure notes the crucified body, the death of Chriſt, and is accordingly expreſs'd in this very matter, Eph. 2. both by ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ αὐτοῦ, by his fleſh, v. 15. and διὰ τοῦ σταυροῦ, by the croſs, v. 16. and ſo Col. 2. 14. by προσηλώσας τῷ σταυρῷ, nailing to the Croſs.

V. 5. Were in the fleſh] That ὅτε ἦμεν ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ, when we were in the fleſh, ſignifies the Judaical ſtate under the Law, appears by the whole diſcourſe in this chapter, which is of the ſtate of men conſidered under the Law (ſee note d.) and particularly by the oppoſition here betwixt this, and κατηργήθημεν ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου, we are freed from the Law. For ſo 'tis manifeſt the oppoſition ſtands, For when we were in the fleſh — But now we are freed from the Law, —— And it is thus ſtyled in oppoſition to ἐν πνεύματι εἶναι, being in the ſpirit, uſed for them that have received the Goſpel, and are partakers of the grace which is afforded there, to which that they have not attained, but are only under the Pædagogie of the Law, they are only in the fleſh, have no other but that weak and corrupt principle of their own nature (which is ſo prone to carnality) abiding in them. And thus it is uſed, c. 8. 8. They that are in the fleſh, cannot pleaſe God: but you are not in the fleſh, but in the ſpirit, if ſo be the ſpirit of God dwelleth in you, that is, if as ye are outwardly profeſſors of the faith, baptized Chriſtians, ſo ye are ſincerely ſo, ſuch as in whom the holy Spirit of God may vouchſafe to inhabit, which will not abide when unrighteouſneſs cometh in. And accordingly Chriſtianity is call'd the law of the ſpirit of life, c. 8. 2. and here v. 6. the newneſs of the Spirit, in oppoſition to the oldneſs of the letter, the Moſaical Law. And a peculiar propriety there is in this phraſe for this matter in many reſpects; Firſt, in reſpect of the nature of the Moſaical precepts, which were external, waſhings, Circumciſion, bodily reſts, &c. (all which are ſeated in the fleſh, and ſo proportionably carnal promiſes, and threats: whereas the precepts of Chriſt, go deeper to the mind and ſpirit, require the purity of that, and accordingly are back'd with ſpiritual promiſes and terrors; Secondly, in reſpect of the aſſiſtance that Chriſt affords toward his obedience, by giving of his ſpirit, to aſſiſt (if it be not grieved and reſiſted) our ſpirits, in oppoſition to which the ſtate under the Law having none of that ſtrength joyn'd with it, may juſtly be call'd the being in the fleſh. To which may be added, that one eminent effect of the Spirits deſcending, was the commiſſionating of the Apoſtles for their office of preaching to the Gentile world, remiſſion of ſins upon Repentance, and in oppoſition to that, the Law allowing no place for Repentance for any preſumptuous ſin, but inflicting preſent puniſhment on the offender, that ſtate may be fitly ſtyled being in the fleſh. Mean while as there is a difference betwixt the weakneſs of the natural eſtate conſidered without any other aid, then what the Law affordeth, and the ſinfulneſs of carnal acts and habits continued and indulged to, and on the other ſide, betwixt the ſtate of a baptized Chriſtian, afforded the grace and ſtrength of Chriſt, and of him that makes uſe of that grace, and leads a pure Chriſtian life; ſo the being ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ, in the fleſh, differs from living, or walking, κατὰ σάρκα, after, or according, to the fleſh, and on the other ſide, being in the ſpirit, or being in Chriſt, from walking after the Spirit: All which phraſes are to be met with here, and in the next chapter. Here and c. 8. 9. we have being in the fleſh, and κατὰ σάρκα ὄντες, they that are after the fleſh, v. 5. that is, under the Law, not elevated above the fleſh, or reſcued out of the power of it by Chriſt; and c. 8. 1. walking after the fleſh, (and ſo v. 4. & 12. all in the ſame ſenſe) for going on in a carnal courſe, obeying and following the fleſh in the luſts thereof. And ſo c. 8. 9. being in the ſpirit, or having the Spirit of Chriſt, and being in Chriſt Jeſus, ver. 2. all to the ſame ſenſe, of having the Spirit of Chriſt beſtow'd on us, which as it enableth, ſo it obligeth us to walk, and and lead a Chriſtian life, and if we do ſo, then that is περιπατεῖν κατὰ πνεῦμα, walking after the Spirit, v. 1. & 4. all which muſt thus nicely be diſtinguiſhed, or elſe they will be apt to betray to ſome miſtake.

d. Οὐκ ἔγνων V. 7. I had not known] It is an ordinary figure to ſpeak of other men in the firſt perſon, but moſt frequent in blaming, or noting any fault in others; for then by the putting it in this diſguiſe, faſtning it on ones own perſon, it is more likely to be well taken by them to whom it belongs. So ſaith St. Chryſoſtom of this Apoſtle, Ἀεὶ τὰ φορτικὰ ὅταν τῷ οἰκείῳ προσώπῳ γυμνάζει, when he mentions things that are any way grievous, or likely to be ill taken, he doth it in his own perſon. And S. Hierom on Daniel, Peccata populi enumerat perſonâ ſuâ, quod & Apoſtolum in Epiſtola ad Romanos facere legimus, Confeſſing the ſins of the people, he doth it in his own perſon, which we read practiſed by the Apoſtle in the Epiſtle to the Romans, that is, moſt probably, in this place. Thus when 1 Cor. 4. 4. S. Paul had ſpoken in his own perſon, I know nothing by my ſelf, but hereby I am not juſtified, he tells them plainly v. 6. that he had in a figure transferred theſe things unto himſelf for their ſakes, that they might not be puffed up, as counting ſuch ſchemes and figures as theſe, the moſt profitable and efficacious on the Reader. Thus the ſame Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 6. 12. All things are lawful to me, but all things are not expedient, that is, thoſe things which are by you look'd on as indifferent, if they be yielded to, may be very hurtful to you; and 1 Cor. 13. 2. If I have all faith, and have not charity, that is, if ye want charity to your other gifts. So Gal. 2. 18. If what I have deſtroyed I build the ſame again, I make my ſelf a tranſgreſſor, that is, whoſoever doth ſo, or whenſoever ye do ſo, it muſt needs be a fault in you. Thus Rom. 3. 7. If the truth of God have abounded by my lie unto his glory, why am I alſo judged as a ſinner? Which words are certainly the perſonating of an impious objecter, which ſpeaks or diſputes thus, not of the Apoſtle himſelf. And the ſame ſcheme or faſhion of ſpeaking or writing is very frequent among all Authors. And that it muſt be ſo taken here, may appear by theſe evidences. Firſt by v. 9. Ἐγὼ δὲ ἔζων πότε. I indeed once lived without the Law, which can with no appearance of truth be affirm'd of Paul's Perſon, who was born and brought up a Jew in the knowledge of the Moſaical Law, and muſt therefore be the perſonating of a man firſt conſidered without, then with the Law, to whom becauſe the Law is given in the ſecond perſon, οὐκ ἐπιθυμήσεις, Thou ſhalt not covet, v. 7. therefore he to whom it is given is in the following verſes fitly ſet down in the firſt perſon, I, being relative to the thou antecedent: and ſo Marcus Eremita, De baptiſm. p. 921. E. οὕτω καὶ τὰς λοιπὰς, &c. Thus do men pervert other Scriptures. Read the chapter from the beginning, and you ſhall find that St. Paul ſpeaks not of himſelf after his baptiſm, ἀλλὰ τὸ τῶν ἀπίστων Ἰουδαίων πρόσωπον λαμβάνει but aſſumes the perſon of unbelieving Jews. And ſo Theophylact diſtinctly affirms, ἐν τῷ οἰκείῳ προσώπῳ ἀνθρωπίνην φύσιν λέγει, In his own perſon he ſpeaks of humane nature; and again on v. 15. he ſpeaks of men before Chriſt's coming, tho' he ſets it in his own perſon. Secondly, by the ſeverals affirmed in this chapter, which cannot belong to St Paul. For that Paul was at the writing of this a reformed, regenerate perſon, there is no doubt, and they which would have it ſpoken by him in his own perſon, make that advantage of this chapter, by reconciling thoſe things which are here mentioned to a regenerate ſtate. But if we compare the ſeverals which are here mentioned with the parts of a regenerate man's character, given by the ſame Apoſtle in other places, we ſhall find them directly contrary. Here in the 8*th* verſe, he ſaith, that ſin had wrought in him all manner of concupiſcence, whereas of the regenerate man it is affirmed, Gal. 5. 24. They that are Chriſt's have crucified the fleſh with the affections and luſts. Here in the 9. verſe 'tis ſaid ſin revived, and I died; whereas of the regenerate man 'tis ſaid, ch. 6. 2. How ſhall we that are dead to ſin, live any longer therein? Here in the 14*th* verſe 'tis ſaid, I am carnal; whereas of the regenerate man 'tis affirmed, c. 8. 1. that he walketh not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit. Here again in that 14th verſe 'tis ſaid, I am ſold under ſin, (of which ſee note f.) whereas of the regenerate 'tis affirmed, c. 6. 18. that he becomes free from ſin, and becomes the ſervant of righteouſneſs. Here v. 20. ſin dwelleth in me, and κατεργάζεται accompliſheth, worketh, that which I will not, like not with my mind, or conſcience, and ſo 'tis ſaid v. 23, 24. that the law in the members carries him into captivity to the Law of ſin, and, who ſhall deliver him from this body of death? and ſo that he is under the power of the law of ſin and death, that he obeys the law of ſin, v. 25. whereas c. 8. 2. of the regenerate 'tis affirmed, that the law of the ſpirit of life in Chriſt Jeſus hath made him free from the law of ſin and death. Nothing can be more contrary and unreconcileable to a regenerate ſtate in theſe ſo many particulars, then what is here affirmed of the ἐγώ, I, the perſon here thus repreſented. And indeed unleſs ſinning againſt Conſcience be the only way of alleviating (and not aggravating) ſin, it is impoſſible that the doing that ill he would not, and the not doing that good he would, ver. 19, 20. can be deemed a fit ingredient in the character of a regenerate man: 'tis certain this was, in the perſon of Medea, made, by the heathens, the higheſt pitch of villany, to ſee and like that which was good, and do the direct contrary (ſee Note f.) and therefore cannot in any reaſon be thought to be the Apoſtles deſcription of a regenerate man, or good Chriſtian.

Ib. Luſt] That by ἐπιθυμία coveting, here is meant the ſin forbidden in the tenth Commandment of the Decalogue, appears by the end of the verſe. But how the Apoſtle can truly ſay, that he had not known it had been a ſin, if the Law had not told him it was, will be be all the difficulty. To which may be anſwer'd, 1. that the Apoſtle doth not ſpeak particularly of himſelf (ſee note d.) but in the perſon of a Jew, or man in general, and then it is not only true of this, but of all other the commandments (of which this one may be ſet as the inſtance) that the knowledge of ſin is by the promulgation of the Law, that forbids it. But then there may from the Jewiſh Doctrine appear ſome reaſon why the Apoſtle ſhould rather inſtance in this commandment, then any other. For the Jews before and under Chriſt's time, ſeeing that there was no puniſhment judicially appointed for thoughts or deſires, whether unclean, or of getting any thing from their neighbours, had reſolved this to be no ſin, and conſequently that the tenth commandment was but a Moral proverbial Eſſay or Councel, like that of Menander, ——————ἐδὲ βελόμης,

Δαμόνιε, ἐπιθύμησον ἀλλοτρίας ποτὲ,

Not to covet ſo much as a pin of anothers, but not any precept of God; or of nature, affirming that, unleſs it be in caſe of the worſhip of falſe gods, no ſin is committed by the bare will, without ſome actual commiſſion following it. Thus ſaith Eben-Ezra in the beginning of the Decalogue; Kimchi on Pſ. 66. 18. and Joſephus concerning Antiochus's deſigned ſacrilege, τὸ γὰρ μηκέτι ποιῆσαι τὸ ἔργον βουλευσάμενον, οὐκ ἔστι τιμωρίας ἄξιον, to have conſulted only, and not acted, doth not deſerve puniſhment. According to which S. Paul might well ſay of any Jew brought up under ſuch Maſters, that he had not believed coveting to be a ſin, had not the more exact conſideration of the direct words of the Law aſſured him that it was.

f. Πεπραμένος ὑπὸ τὴν ἁμαρτίαν

V. 14. Sold under ſin] The phraſe ſold under ſin ſignifies as it doth, when 'tis ſaid of Ahab, that he was ſold to work wickedneſs, or of the revolting Jews, 1 Mac. 1. 15. as a ſlave or captive ſold from one Maſter, one ſin, to another: and ſo here 'tis joined with Σαρκικὸς a carnal man, and is farther expreſs'd by the character of him following, that the evil that he would, not, that he doth, and the good that he would, that he doth not; juſt like that which the Poets ſay by way of aggravation of that wicked condition of Medea the witch,

Καὶ μανθάνω μὲν οἷα δρᾶν μέλλω κακὰ,
Θυμὸς δ' κρείσσων τῶν ἐμῶν βουλευμάτων, Eurip.

I underſtand the evils that I am about to commit, but my paſſion overcomes my reaſon: and of him in the Tragedy,

Λέληθεν ἐξὸν τῶνδε μ' ὧν σὺ νουθετεῖς,
Γνώμῃ δ' ἔχουσα μ' ἡ φύσις βιάζεται.

I am ignorant of none of thoſe things of which thou admoniſheſt me, but my nature (or cuſtom) forces me contrary to my opinion. Which is ſo far from being matter of alleviation, or leſſening of the ſin, that as Euripides ſaith of it,

Ὅστις μεγίστων αἴτιός κακῶν βροτοῖς,

It is the author of the greateſt evils unto men, ſo 'tis by Plutarch ſet down for the greateſt aggravation; for citing that in the Tragedy of Atreus,

Αἰ Αἰ τόδ' ἦδη θεῖον ἀνθρώποις κακὸν, Ὅταν τι εἴδῃ τ' ἀγαθὸν, χρῄζῃ δ' μή.

that 'tis an evil that falls on men from God, to do evil, when they ſee their duty, he corrects it thus, θηριωδέστατον ἴσως καὶ ἄλογον καὶ οἰκτρὸν, εἰδότα τὸ βέλτιον ὑπὸ τοῦ χείρονος ὑπ' ἀκρασίας καὶ μαλακίας ἄγεσθαι, 'tis the moſt beſtial, irrational, miſerable condition for a man that knows what is beſt, to be led by incontinency and effeminacy from it. And ſo * Xenophon from Socrates, ὅσοις μὲν τὰ κράτιστα μὴ σκοπεῖ, τὰ ἥδιστα δ' ἐκ παντὸς τρόπου ζητεῖ ποιεῖν, τί ἂν διαφέροι τῶν ἀφρονεστάτων θρεμμάτων; he that conſiders not the beſt things, but by all means ſeeks the moſt pleaſant how differs he from the fooliſh beaſts? And ſo Simplicius upon Epictetus, c. 11. p. 74. upon occaſion of thoſe verſes of Medea, reſolves, χρὴ δὲ μὴ δόξαζειν μόνον ὀρθῶς, καὶ ὀρέγεσθαι, καὶ ἐκκλίνειν ὀπὶ πολλὰ, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰ ἔργα σύμφωνα ταῖς ὀρθαῖς δόξαις ἀποδίδοναι, we ought not only to think right, and be affected accordingly, but to conform our works to our right opinions. And 'till we do ſo, the beſt that he can ſay of us is, that perhaps we are ἀρχόμενοι παιδεύεσθαι, beginning to learn, are come as far as the knowing of the Law, which notwithſtanding ἁμαρτάνομεν, καὶ ἑαυτῶν ἐγκαλοῦμεν, men ſin and accuſe themſelves for ſinning; οὐκ ἐνδυς γὰρ τὰ ἄλογα πάθη μετρεῖται καὶ ῥυθμίζεται καὶ ὑποπίπτει τῷ λόγῳ, for irrational affections are not preſently brought within meaſure and proportion, nor ſuddenly ſubjected to reaſon.

*1. 4. de dict. & fact. Socr.

g. Νόμου ἐν μέλεσιν ἀντίπαλον πόλεμον.

V. 23. Another's law] For the underſtanding the ſenſe of the Apoſtle in this whole chapter, 'tis uſeful to compare this paſſage with Gal. 5. 17. The ſpirit luſteth againſt the fleſh, and the fleſh againſt the ſpirit, &c Which is thought to be parallel, and to import the ſame ſenſe with this. Of theſe two places therefore it muſt firſt be remembred, that the difference which is between theſe Texts ariſeth not from the diſtinction between the ſpirit in the one, and the Law of the mind in the other, nor conſequently is it to be placed betwixt the luſting of the fleſh againſt the ſpirit, ſimply taken, and the warring of the Law in the members againſt the Law in the mind, as that is no more than a war; but betwixt the former ſimply taken, or with the addition of the ſpirit luſting back again againſt the fleſh, or with the circumſtances mentioned, Gal. 5. 17. (none of which imply a yielding to the luſts of the fleſh) and the latter, taken with that addition, here mentioned, of bringing the man into captivity to the Law of ſin. And this indeed is all the difference that can be aſſign'd betwixt a regenerate and unregenerate man, that in the one the ſpirit prevails, in the other the fleſh is victorious; that is, the will of the one is led by the ſpirit, chooſes and acts the deeds of the ſpirit (the will of God) but the will of the other follows the carnal dictates, τελεῖ ἐπιθυμίαν σαρκὸς, performs the will of the fleſh, and ſo falls under the condemnation which belongs to ſuch: ἡ γὰρ τοιαύτη κατάστασις ὑποκειται πάντως τῇ κολάσει, πᾶσα γὰρ ἡ κατ' ἐνέργειαν ἁμαρτία ὑπὸ τὸ ᾅδου ἐστὶν, ſaith Dorotheus, διδασκαλ. 1. ſuch a ſtate is altogether ſubject to puniſhment, for every ſin that is acted is under hell, and ὑπὸ τὸ ᾅδου εἰσὶ πάντες ἐφ' ὅσον ἐνεργοῦσιν, they are all under hell, in that they act. And if it be ſuggeſted, that the conſequents in the place to the Galath. ἵνα μὴ ἃ ἂν θέλητε ταῦτα ποιῆτε, ſo that what things you would, ye do them not, ſeem parallel to ἃ ὃ θέλω ποιῶ, what I would that I do not, here, v. 15, 19. and ſo neither of them ſignify this carnal ſtate; to this it muſt be anſwered, that theſe two are not parallel, but on the contrary that paſſage, ἃ ὃ θέλω ποιῶ, what I would, I do not, is really equivalent with the captivation to the Law of ſin, (as by the whole Context appears) tho' indeed there is ſome obſcurity in it, which till by the Context it be explained, may miſlead one to think otherwiſe. The truth is evident, theſe two things are conjoyn'd in both thoſe verſes, what I would, that I do not; but what I hate, that I do, v. 15. and the good that I would I do not; but the evil that I would not, that I do, v. 19. And being ſo conjoyned in the ſame perſon, the ſubject of the diſcourſe, and but equivalent phraſes with thoſe other of captivation to the Law of the members, and being carnal, and ſold under ſin, the meaning muſt be, that he neglects to do the good that the Law of God and his own mind dictates to him, and doth commit, on the contrary, the evil, that according to his mind and the declaration of God's will in the Law he diſliketh and hateth, and ſo evidently acteth in oppoſition to conſcience, commits the ſins of the fleſh willingly and knowingly, non obſtante, the contrary dictate and ſolicitation of conſcience. But then this is much more than is contained in that luſting of the fleſh againſt the ſpirit, Gal. 5. (ſtyled by Nemeſius περ. φύσ. c. 37. μάχη τῷ λογισμῷ καὶ ἀθυμίαι, the ſtriſe of the reaſon and luſt, στάσις καὶ φιλονεικία, a diſſention and emulation betwixt them.) For as there the fleſh luſteth, ſo the ſpirit luſteth too, and it is not affirmed of either of them, that it leads the other captive. All the event that is taken notice of, is, ἵνα μὴ ἃ ἂν θέλητε ταῦτα ποιῆτε, that what you would, that you do not; which being ἃ ἂν θέλητε.

ing the effect of the double ἐπιθυμία or luſting, muſt have ſuch a ſenſe proportioned to it as ſhall be founded in that double ἐπιθυμία, and that can be no other than this, that θέλειν to will, be taken in the ſenſe of ἐπιθυμεῖν to luſt, and ſo not for an act of the elective faculty which to one matter is but one, either chooſing or refuſing, but for an act of ſome kind of woulding or appetite, and that is conſtantly twofold to the ſame matter; the fleſh hath one woulding, and the Spirit hath another: the fleſh deſires, and would have a man yield to the pleaſant propoſal, the Spirit would have him reſiſt it; and both theſe are evidenly mentioned in that verſe, one called the luſting of the ſpirit, and the other of the fleſh. From the contrariedty of which it neceſſarily follows, that whatſoever (in matters of this nature, good or evil) any man doth, he doth againſt one of theſe wouldings, and conſequently he doth not ποιεῖν ὃ θέλει, do what he would. Whereas if θέλειν were taken for the elective faculty, which we ordinarily call the will of man, it is evident, every voluntary agent doth ποεῖν ὃ θέλει, do what he will, his actings follow his will or choice, and whenſoever he doth not ſo, he acts by violence, or rather is acted, and to that is required, that he be conquer'd by ſome other; and yet of any ſuch conqueſt there is no mention in that place of Gal. 5. 16. which mentions only the ἐπιθυμία luſting equally on both ſides; and ſo the reſult is, that Gal. 5. 16. there is no more ſaid but this, that which way ſoever a man act, he acts againſt ſome ἐπιθυμία deſire, or luſting of his; if he act according to the fleſh, he acts againſt the ſolicitation of the mind and ſpirit; and if he act according to the ſpirit, he doth not τελεῖν ἐπιθυμίαν σαρκὸς, but acts contrary to all its importunities: and he that doth the latter of theſe is far from being led captive to the law of ſin, which is in the fleſh, or members, being indeed a conqueror over it, tho' he have not eradicated or extirpated it. For the yet fuller clearing of this, take the plain importance of thoſe two verſes, and ſet 'em ſeverally, and then you will ſoon ſee how no correſpondence there is between them, Gal. 5. 16. the Apoſtle ſets down this plain Aphoriſm, that the deſires of the fleſh and ſpirit are one contrary to the other, and conſequently that to whichſoever of them the Will of Man conſents, it muſt needs reject the other. But Rom. 7. 15, 19. the Apoſtle ſets down the ſtate of a particular man, which deliberately chooſes and acts the evil which he knows he ſhould not do, or which the Law of God in his own mind tells him diſtinctly he ought not to do; as when Nemeſius περὶ φύσ. ἀνθρ. ch. 33. ſpeaks of an intemperate man, that he is, κρατούμενος ὑπὸ τῆς ἐπιθυμίας, καὶ πράττων ταύτην μὲν μάλιστα καὶ καλὰ προαίρεσιν, ἀλλοκαίνει γὰρ ἐπ' αὐτῇ ἡ προαίρεσις τῇ ἐπιθυμίᾳ, his election is contrary to his luſt, yet he is overcome by his luſt, and acts what that ſuggeſts. And ſo S. Auguſtin, confeſ. l. 8 c. 5. Lex peccati eſt violentia conſuetudinis, quâ trahitur & tenetur etiam invitus animus, The Law of ſin (in that place) is the violence of cuſtom by which the mind is drawn and held againſt its inclination; plainly ſignifying the ſtate of the perſon ſpoken of, Rom. 7. to be that of an habitual ſinner. What agreement now is, or can there be betwixt theſe two verſes? 'Tis true indeed, that they which do what they hate, and would not, may well be ſaid not to do the things which they would, and ſo are encluded in thoſe words, Gal. 5. 17. but that proves not that thoſe places, Rom. 7. and Gal. 5. are parallel; becauſe Rom. 7. 'tis determined to doing the ill which he hates, whereas Gal. 5. the ſpeech lyes open to both parts, to the doing the good which the fleſh hates, as well as the evil which the fleſh loves. Now this being ſpoken of men indefinitely, is very diſtant from defining it on one ſide, and applying it to a particular perſon, as it is evidently done, Rom. 7. when he ſaith, Non quod volo bonum, hoc ago, ſed quod odi malum, illud facio, I do not the good that I would, but the evil which I hate that do I: and conſequently, tho' the fleſh's diſliking the virtuous actions, and liking the vitious, be perfectly reconcileable with walking in the ſpirit, and ſo with a regenerate ſtate, and ſo the place to the Galations (tho' not ſpoken particularly of the actions of regenerate men, but delivered as an Aphoriſm indefinitely, appliable to mens actions whether good or evil) may be appliable to the actings of ſuch; yet the place to the Romans being determined to the facio malum, I do the evil, and that evidently againſt the dictate of the mind, the reſiſtence of the conſcience, is ſtill unreconcileable with that ſpiritual walking, & ſo with the regenerate ſtate, Rom. 8. 1. Another notion there is, which ſome of the ancients have had of the words ὃ μισῶ ποιῶ, what I hate that I do, viz. that it ſhould belong only to * deſires or thoughts unconſented to. So S. Jerom, and S Auguſtin alſo, l. 1. Cont. 2. Epiſt. Pelag. c. 10. being perſwaded by ſome Doctors, and a conceited advantage againſt the Pelagian hereſy, to retract in ſome part what before he had aſſerted, and ſpoken the moſt for of any man. And of this opinion is * Methodius alſo, Ὃ μισῶ, ποιῶ ſaith he, that which I hate, I do, is to be underſtood οὐκ ὅτι τῷ πρᾶξαι τὸ φαῦλον, not of the doing that which is ill, ἀλλ' ὅτι τῷ μόνον ἐνθυμηθῆναι, but only of thinking, or imagining; and again, ὅτι λογισμῶν ἀνοικείων, ἡμῖν παρεισπαμβώντων πλεονάκις, καὶ ἐμφαλλομένων ἡμᾶς πρὸς ἃ μὴ θέλομεν, of alien imaginations which frequently make incurſions on us, and bring us to phanſy things which we would not, adding, ἐπὶ γὰρ ἐφ' ἡμῖν ὅλως τὸ ἐνθυμεῖσθαι ἢ μὴ ἐνθυμεῖσθαι κεῖται τὰ ἄτοπα, ἀλλά τὸ χρῆσθαι ἢ μὴ χρῆσθαι τοῖς ἐνθυμήμασι· κωλῦσαι μὲν γὰρ μὴ ἐμπίπλειν εἰς ἡμᾶς τοὺς λογισμοὺς ἃ δυνάμεθα——μὴ πεισθῆναι μέντοι ἢ μὴ χρῆσθαι αὐτοῖς δυνάμεθα, for it is not wholly in our power, to think or not to think abſurd things, but either to uſe or not to uſe ſuch thoughts or phanſies; for we cannot hinder thoughts from coming upon us, but we can chooſe whether we will be perſwaded by them, or uſe them. And again, Πῶς ὁ Ἀπόστολος τὸ κακὸν——ἐποίει, εἰ μὴ περὶ τῶν ὀθνείων ἐνθυμημάτων ἔλεγεν, How did the Apoſtle do evil, if he ſpake not of abſurd thoughts? This interpretation of St. Paul's words, if it were ſecure from being any farther extended then the authors of it deſigned, could have no hurt or noxiouſneſs in it, it being certainly true, that every regenerate man is thus infeſted with phanſies and thoughts which he hates, and gives no conſent unto. Yet if the words of the text be well conſidered, this cannot but appear a ſtrange interpretation. For when it is certain that πρᾶξαι ſignifies neither leſs, nor other, then ποιῆσαι to do, and when that word is varied into κατεργάζομαι and πράσσω, v. 15. and both thoſe are directly all one with πρᾶξαι, and when ὃ μισῶ what I hate in one place, is ὃ οὐ θέλω, what I would not, v. 16. and that again ὃ οὐ θέλω κακὸν, the evil that I would not, v. 19. and κακὸν, and φαῦλον are directly all one, 'tis not imaginable how ὃ μισῶ, ποιῶ, what I hate, I do, ſhould not be underſtood ὅτι τῷ πρᾶξαι τὸ φαῦλον, of doing evil, this being no leſs than a direct contradiction, to interpret ποιῶ, by οὐ πρᾶξαι, for that is, ποιῶ, by οὐ ποιῶ, πράσσω, by οὐ πράσσω, do, by not do, which neither Methodius, nor any other mans authority can prevail with any reaſonable man to receive from him. This inconvenience when Methodius foreſees, his only anſwer is, that he deſires them who make this objection, to declare what evil it was that the Apoſtle hated and would not do, and yet did; whether when he willed to ſerve God, he yet committed Idolatry. But ſure the whole force of this anſwer (if there be any) is founded in interpreting the words to be ſpoken by S. Paul in his own perſon, and ſo is perfectly prevented by him that underſtands the Apoſtle not of himſelf, but of an unregenerate man. From which proceſs of Methodius, and what he there adds in that place of the Apoſtles pronouncing againſt Idolaters, and other ſuch ſinners, that they cannot inherit the kingdom of heaven, the concluſion is regular and unavoidable, that if ποιῶ ſignifies ποιῷ, and πράσσω and κατεργάζομαι, do, and work, be interpreted of actions, or of any more then thoughts unconſented to, then the perſon that is ſpoken of by Paul St. Rom. 7. is

* Ὃ μισῶ ποιῶ

* Concupiſcendo, ſed eidem concupiſcentiæ non conſentiendo

* Ap. Epiphan. hær. 64. Baſil. Ed. p. 252.

is one that ſhall not inherit the kingdom of God, and then ſure no regenerate perſon, by Methodius's arguing: which therefore is moſt conſtringent, and convincing, that this chapter ſpeaks of an unregenerate perſon; for that 'tis beyond all controverſy, that he cannot uſe thoſe words, ποιῶ, I do, &c. of meer λογίζεσθαι, ἐνθυμεῖσθαι, thinking, or phanſying only, ἢ ἐπιθυμῶ, or ἁρπάζω, and not of conſenting, or doing. And ſo in like manner, that being carnal, and ſold under ſin, (which is all one with a ſervant of ſin, in other places of the ſame Apoſtle, it being then ſo ordinary to ſell ſervants ſub haſta, under his ſpear, as it were, that had taken or conquered them) and carried captive by the Law in his members, (that is, by his own carnal heart) cannot be affirmed of him that lives in, and walks after the ſpirit. To which this farther evidence may alſo be added, from the uſing the phraſe the Law of ſin, v. 23. the unqueſtionable importance of which we have from the immediate conſequents, Νόμῳ ἁμαρτίας, or law of ſin, is ſure the command or empire of ſin, to which he that is captivated, as the perſon here ſpoken of is, muſt be acknowledged to be under the dominion of ſin, and that certainly is unreconcileable with a regenerate ſtate. This is farther expreſt, v. 24. by the body of death, and ſo bears proportion to what had been ſaid v. 5. when we were in the fleſh, as that is there oppoſed to the ſpirit, the motions of ſin did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death, which concludes that condition which is here ſpoken of to be a damnable condition. And it is remarkable that c. 8. 2. the law of the ſpirit of life which is in Jeſus Chriſt is ſaid to have made the Apoſtle free from this law of ſin and death. From whence the argument is irrefragable; that to which the perſon Rom. 7. 23. is ſaid to be captivated, is the ſame from which the grace of Chriſt hath delivered the regenerate juſtifyed perſon, c. 8. 2. But the grace of Chriſt doth not free the regenerate man in this life from injections of phanſy, or thoughts unconſented to (for certainly the regenerate man doth not pretend to that meaſure of grace as ſhall free him from all ſuch) Therefore, that of thoughts unconſented to is not it to which the perſon, Rom. 7. 23. is ſaid to be captivated. Againſt the evidence of this I foreſee not what can reaſonably be ſuggeſted.

Νόμος ἁμαρτίας.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. VIII.

1. There is therefore now no obligation lying on a Chriſtian, to obſerve thoſe ceremonies of Moſes's Law, circumciſion, &c. c. 7. 4, 6. (from whence to the end of that chapter the Apoſtle had made a digreſſion to anſwer an objection, v. 7.) nor conſequently danger of damnation to him for that neglect, ſuppoſing that he forſake thoſe carnal ſins that the circumciſed Jews yet indulged themſelves to, and perform that Evangelical obedience, (in doing what the mind illuminated by Chriſt directs us to) that inward true purity (which that circumciſion of the fleſh was ſet to ſignify) that is now required by Chriſt under the Goſpel (ſee note on c. 7. c.)

1 THere is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Chriſt Jeſus, * who walk not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit.]

* not walking, μὴ κατὰ περιπατοῦσι

2. For the Goſpel, which deals not in commanding of carnal outward performances, but of ſpiritual inward purity, the ſubſtance of thoſe legal ſhadows, and that which was meant by them, and ſo is proper to quicken us to new life in or thro' the grace and aſſiſtance of Chriſt, who brought this new law into the World, hath freed us Chriſtians from the power and captivity of ſin, c. 7. 23. and ſo alſo from death the wages of ſin, from neither of which was the Law of Moſes able to reſcue any man.

a. 2. For the Law of the Spirit of life in Chriſt Jeſus hath made me free from [a] the law of ſin and death.]

3. For when tho' the fleſhly deſires of men, carrying them headlong into all ſin, in deſpite of the prohibitions of the Law, c. 7. 14. the Law of Moſes was by this means weak, and unable to reform and amend mens lives, then moſt ſeaſonably God ſent his own ſon in the likeneſs of fleſh, that is, in a mortal body which was like ſinful fleſh (and differed nothing from it, ſave only in innocence) and that on purpoſe that he might be a ſacrifice for ſin, and by laying our ſins on him, ſhew'd great example of his wrath againſt all carnal ſins by puniſhing ſin in his fleſh, that ſo men might be perſwaded by love, or wrought on by terrors, to forſake their ſinful courſes.

b. 3. For † what the Law could not do, for that it was weak thro' the [b] fleſh, God ſending his own Son in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, and * for ſin condemned ſin in the fleſh.]

[b] as to that which was impoſſible to the law τὸ ἀδύνατον τῷ νόμῳ

* a ſacrifice for ſin, περὶ ἁμαρτίας, ſee note on 2 Cor. 5. d.

† ordinance

4. That ſo all thoſe ordinances of the Law, circumciſion, &c. which were given to the Jews, to inſtruct them into their duties, might in a higher manner more perfectly be performed by us (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) which think our ſelves ſtrictly obliged to abſtain from all that carnality that that outward ceremony was meant to forbid them, and now to perform the Evangelical obedience that he requires, and will accept from us, without being circumciſed.

c. 4. That the [c] † righteouſneſs of the Law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit.]

5. For they that are carried by their own carnal inclinations, or by cuſtoms and habits of ſin, and the carnal affections conſequent thereto, do generally mind and meditate on carnal things; but they that are led by the Spirit of Chriſt, the duct of the Goſpel, ſtudy and mind thoſe things wherein inward purity and ſanctity doth conſiſt.

5. For they that are after the fleſh, do mind the things of the fleſh; but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit.]

6. And as the Goſpel is of force to free from ſin, more then the Law was, ſo to free from death too, v. 2. For that ſtudy or appetite, or deſire of the carnal man bringeth death, c. 7. 5. but that will or deſire that the Spirit or Goſpel infuſes into us, or the deſire and purſuit of Spiritual things (ſee Theophylact) brings life and peace, that is, a vital ſtate of ſoul under God here, and eternal ſalvation hereafter.

6. For to be carnally minded is death; but to be ſpiritually minded is life and peace.]

7. For the carnal appetite is a downright oppoſition to the Law of God, too unruly to obey the commands of God: neither indeed can it be brought to that obedience by a bare prohibition of the Law, for the ſwinge of paſſions and luſts are much more violent then ſo.

7. Becauſe the carnal mind is enmity againſt God: for it is not ſubject to the law of God, neither indeed can be.]

8. And ſo theſe men, carnal Jews, tho' they know the Law, are very far from pleaſing God, (ſee note on Mat. 12. e.) from being acceptable to him: the Law doth nothing to the juſtifying of them, that are thus far from obeying the true meaning of the Law.

8. So then they that are in the fleſh cannot pleaſe God.]

9. But, ye Chriſtians under the Goſpel, if ye have any of that ſpiritual divine temper which Chriſt came to infuſe by his doctrine and example, are thereby engaged to all manner of ſincere inward purity, to mortify the fleſh with the affections and luſts; and if ye do not ſo, ye live not according to the Goſpel, and if not ſo, ye may thereby know that ye are no Chriſtians, Chriſt will not own you for his, however ye have received the faith, and are admitted into that number.

9. But ye are not in the fleſh, but in the Spirit, if ſo be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, he is none of his.]

10. But if ye be Chriſtians indeed, tranſlated & raiſed above the pretenſions of the Jew, to the purity of the Goſpel of Chriſt, and your lives be anſwerable thereto, then, tho' being ſinners, the puniſhment of ſin, that is, death, befal you, and ſo your bodies die, and return to duſt, which is the puniſhment of ſin, yet your ſouls ſhall live for ever an happy and a bleſſed life, as the reward of your return to Chriſt in the ſincerity of a new and righteous life, to which the Evangelical juſtification belongs.

10. And if Chriſt be in you, * the body is dead, becauſe of ſin; but the Spirit is life, becauſe of righteouſneſs.

* the body indeed may be a dead body, τὸ μὲν σῶμα νεκρὸν

11. And then even for your dead bodies, they ſhall not finally periſh neither, they ſhall be ſure to be raiſed again; for the Spirit of God, by which you are to be guided and led, is that divine omnipotent

11. But if the ſpirit of him that raiſed up Jeſus from the dead dwell in you, he that raiſed up Chriſt from the dead ſhall alſo quicken your mortal bodies, by the Spirit that dwelleth in you.]

Spirit

Spirit that raiſed Chriſt's dead body out of the grave, and if you be guided by that, animated and quickned by that, live a pious and holy life, there is no doubt but God will raiſe your mortal bodies out of the graves alſo by the power of that ſame Spirit that raiſed Chriſt's.

12. Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the fleſh, to live after the fleſh.] 12. By theſe ſo many obligations therefore and intereſts of yours, the eternal well being both of ſouls and bodies, ye are engaged to give over all care of ſatisfying or gratifying your fleſh in its prohibited demands, to live no longer in your former habits of ſin, now ye have received the faith of Chriſt.

13. For if ye live after the fleſh, ye ſhall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortifie the deeds of the body, ye ſhall live.] 13. For if contenting your ſelves with the external performances of the Moſaical law, circumciſion, &c. ye ſtill continue to commit thoſe ſins which that was ſet to prohibit, this will bring all deſtruction upon you; 'tis not the Moſaical Law will keep you from ruine. But if by the faith and example, and with all the grace and aſſiſtance of Chriſt, ye ſhall actually mortifie all the polluted deſires of the fleſh, and live ſpiritually, according to what Chriſt now requires, ye ſhall certainly riſe to the life immortal, or live eternally.

14. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the ſons of God.] 14. For this being led by the Spirit of Chriſt, living after Chriſt's example, and doing what he commands and enables us to do, is an evidence that we, and not only the Jews, who challenge it as their peculiar, are (not only the ſervants, but) the children of God, and conſequently that God will deal with us as with children, beſtow the inheritance upon us.

15. For ye have not received the ſpirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we d crie, Abba, Father.] 15. Nay the truth is, the condition of a Jew (ſee note on Luke 9. 10.) is ſo far from making men ſons of God, that at the beſt it is but a ſlaviſh condition, to be obliged to thoſe performances, which being external, (as circumciſion, &c.) and having nothing of goodneſs in them, are done meerly for fear of diſobeying, and being puniſhed by ſtoning and the like (ſee Theophylact.) Which is juſt the condition of ſervants, who muſt do what the maſter commands, or be beaten if they do them not, (and ſo was fitteſt for the Jews, an hard ſtubborn people, and accordingly had effect among them, they obſerved what came ſo back'd, but what did not, they obſerved not, which is it, that denominates the law weak through the fleſh, v. 3.) But our Chriſt now hath engaged and drawn us with more liberal bands, the cords of a man, the bands of love, ingenuous commands, ſuch as of our ſelves we cannot but judge beſt to be done, and moſt agreeable to our reaſonable natures, and to them added, as to children, the promiſe of an eternal inheritance, upon our obeying of him; and for the puniſhments now left in his Church, they are not thoſe ſervile of ſtoning and the like, but paternal, ſuch as toward children, removing them from the Table of the Lord, by ſuch fatherly diſcipline, frowns and chaſtiſements to reform them (ſee Theophylact.) And ſo his dealing with us is (as with children adopted, and received into the family) paternal and gracious, by which we are allowed to come unto God, as to a father, to expect all fatherly uſage from him, grace and aſſiſtance to do what he now commands us to do, and the reward of eternal bliſs, able infinitely to out-weigh all the carnal pleaſures and delights of ſin, that can ſollicit us to the contrary. And ſo this is infinitely an happier condition, than that ſervile condition of the Jews, of being bound to do things which had no goodneſs in them, but as they were commanded, and had no promiſe of heaven upon the performing of them, but puniſhments upon the non-performance. d.

† That ſame Spirit, αὐτὸ τὸ πνεῦμα.

16. † The Spirit it ſelf beareth witneſs with our ſpirit, that we are the children of God.] 16. And this condition, and manner of God's dealing with us under the Goſpel, (ſee Luke 9. note d.) is on God's part a ſure evidence to our conſciences, if our filial obedience, and being wrought on by theſe means, be the like evidence on our parts, that we are more than ſervants, which was the higheſt that that kind of legal obedience could pretend to, even ſons of God.

17. And if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Chriſt: if ſo be that we ſuffer with him, that we may be alſo glorified together.] 17. And if ſons, then (according to the cuſtoms of all nations, ſee note c.) heirs of heaven, heirs indeed of God the Father, and Co-heirs with Chriſt, coming to the inheritance after the ſame manner that Chriſt did, to wit, by ſufferings, v. 29. which are proper for ſons alſo, to ſuffer firſt with Chriſt, and then to reign with him.

* Seaſon, καιρὸν. † Ready to be μέλλουσαν. * On us, εἰς ἡμᾶς.

18. For I reckon, that the ſufferings of this preſent * time are not worthy to be compared with the glory † which ſhall be revealed * in us.] 18. And when I mention ſufferings, (which as filial chaſtiſements muſt be expected by us from our father) the ſufferings which at this time lie upon us Chriſtians, I muſt not be thought to look upon them with any ſadneſs, even in reſpect of this preſent life; for whatever our ſufferings are, the deliverance is likely to be ſo much the more eminent, and illuſtrious, and glorious towards us that firmly adhere to Chriſt, (perhaps in this life, in reſcuing us, while the Jews that perſecute us, and all others that joyn with them are deſtroyed, but moſt certainly in in another) that our ſufferings will not be thought to bear any the ſlighteſt proportion with them.

† Attends the revelation.

19. For the earneſt expectation of the e creature † f waiteth for the g manifeſtation of the ſons of God.] 19. For all the Gentile world are now attending or waiting as it were, to ſee what you Jews will do, who of you be true ſons of God, who not, that is, who will now accept and embrace the faith of Chriſt, who will not, their happineſs depending punctually upon the iſſue of this. e. f. g.

20. For the creature was h made ſubject to i vanity, not willingly, but by reaſon of him who hath ſubjected the ſame, in hope.] 20. For the heathen world hath for theſe many years been (for the generality of them) enſlaved to Satan, and, by him, to that wretched miſerable eſtate of ignorance and idolatry, and all thoſe vain and unclean beſtial worſhips, and ſo as many as have gone on in thoſe vile courſes have been involved alſo under that deſperate impoſſibility (as to the eye of man) of recovering to the leaſt degree of bliſs: And all this (not abſolutely) willingly, or upon their own free choice, but by the devils impoſing it on them as an act of religion, a concomitant and effect of their Idol-worſhips (ſee note g.) in which he commanded all theſe villanies. This makes it reaſonable to ſuppoſe of theſe heathens, that they are willing to be reſcued from lying any longer under theſe ſlaveries, and the Goſpel was the only means to do that. Thus much of the verſe ſeems to be beſt put in a parentheſis, that ſo that which follows may connect the 19. with the 20. verſe, thus, The creature attends the revelation of the Sons of God, In hope. h. i.

† That, ὅτι.

21. † Becauſe the creature it ſelf alſo ſhall be delivered from the bondage of k corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.] 21. That they alſo (the very heathens) ſhall by the Goſpel and the grace of Chriſt be reſcued from thoſe courſes of ſin, to which they have been ſo long inſlaved, into that glorious condition, not only of free men redeem'd by Chriſt out of that bondage to Satan, to live and amend their lives, but even of Sons of God, to have right to his favour, and that immarceſſible inheritance attending it. k.

* Is in pangs of child-birth συνωδίνει.

22. For we know that the whole creation groaneth, and * travaileth in pain together until now.] 22. For this is viſible enough every where in our preaching, that the Gentiles are very forward to receive the Goſpel, when they hear it, while ye Jews generally reject it, and ſo the Gentile world is as it were in pangs of travail, ever ſince Chriſt's time till now, ready to bring forth the ſons of God, the true Children of faithful Abraham, when the Apoſtles, who muſt midwife out this birth, ſhall but preach unto them, Acts 28. 28.

† And not only ſo, but they alſo, οὐ μόνον δὲ, ἀλλὰ καὶ αὐτοὶ * The deliverance,

23. † And not only they, but our ſelves alſo which have the firſt fruits of the Spirit, even we our ſelves groan within our ſelves, waiting for l adoption, to wit * the m redemption of our body.] 23. And as the Gentile world do earneſtly expect this diſcovery (v. 19.) who of you Jews will receive Chriſt, who not, that they may reap their advantage by it, have the Goſpel freely preached to them; ſo they that have received the faith, that are already converted, and ſo have not that want of the preaching or revealing of it, have yet another advantage of this revelation, viz. to have their perſecutions at an end, which ſhall be according to Chriſt's promiſe as ſoon as Chriſt hath been preached over all the Cities of Jewry, Mat. 10. 23. and ſo even we our ſelves wait for this ſeaſon, and groan in the mean while under the perſecutions, expecting one kind of adoption, deliverance from ſervitude and oppreſſions, the reſcuing our outward man out of the afflictions which encompaſs us at the preſent (ſee v. 18.) (and deliverance from which 'tis clear we have not yet attained to) and alſo from death it ſelf by the reſurrection of the body. l. m.

† For in hope we are eſcaped, Τῇ γὰρ ἐλπίδι ἐσώθημεν. * Why doth he alſo hope? τίς ἐλπίζει ?

24. † For we are ſaved by hope: but hope that is ſeen is not hope, for what a man ſeeth * why doth he yet hope for?] 24. For though by the promiſe of Chriſt we certainly expect this reſcue in God's time, yet this we have as yet no poſſeſſion of, ſave only in hope, which, according to the nature of it, is of things not preſently enjoy'd, for viſion or poſſeſſion excludeth hope.

25. But if we hope for that we ſee not, then do we with patience wait for it.] 25. All that hope doth is to provide us patience of what hardſhips at preſent lye upon us, being confident that in God's time we ſhall be, though yet we are not reſcued out of them.

n. 26. And for the fortifying and confirming of this hope, and this patience in us, even in the time of our greateſt preſent preſſures, we have this advantage from Chriſt now in the Goſpel, his ſpirit that raiſed him from the dead, and will raiſe us, v. 11. intercedes and prays for us at the right hand of his Father, where he always maketh interceſſion for us, that not what is moſt eaſie, but moſt advantageous, may be ſent us. And ſo though according to the notion of things under the Law, temporal felicity was a very conſiderable thing, and affliction in this world an expreſſion of God's wrath; now under the Goſpel there is a ſpecial kind of proviſion made, by aſſuring us that God knows beſt what is for our turns, and conſequently that when we pray, but know not our ſelves what is beſt, nor conſequently what we ought to pray for particularly, health, or wealth, or honour, then Chriſt joins his helping hand to ours, joins his all-wiſe and divine prayers (for that which he knows we moſt want) to our prayers, and ſo helps to relieve us in all our diſtreſſes, not by rehearſing or reciting all our particular requeſts, and inforcing them upon his father, but (which is far more for our turns) preſenting unto him our general wants, interceding, yea more than interceding for us, even powerfully beſtowing thoſe things which are truly beſt for us, though oft-times they be leaſt for our palates at the preſent.

26. Likewiſe the ſpirit alſo † helpeth our n * infirmities: for we know not what we ſhould pray for as we ought; but the † ſpirit it ſelf * maketh interceſſion for us with † groanings which cannot be uttered.]

† Joyns in relieving, συναντιλαμβάνεται, See note on Luke 10. b. * Diſtreſſes. † Same ſpirit, αὐτὸ τὸ πνευμα. * Doth more than intercede, ὑπερεντυγχάνει. † Unuttered groans, στεναγμοῖς ἀλαλήτοις.

27. And then God, that by being a ſearcher of hearts knoweth our wants exactly, underſtand alſo the deſire and intention of the ſpirit of Chriſt, without any need of its being articulately formed in words, viz. that interceding for all holy men, it asks for them all thoſe things that tend to the making them better, whatſoever God likes, and thinks beſt for them, not what they like themſelves (and this immediately God grants to us, whatſoever it is, ſometimes tribulations and afflictions, as the moſt proper and agreeable for us.)

27. And he that ſearcheth the heart knoweth what is the mind of the ſpirit, * becauſe he maketh interceſſion † for the Saints * according to the will of God.]

* That, ὅτι. † Perhaps, for holy things, ὑπὲρ ἁγίων. * According to God, κατὰ Θεὸν.

28. And accordingly this we know and find, that all things that do come to paſs, or befall them that ſincerely love God, thoſe that cordially adhere to him, or that according to the purport of the Goſpel are received and favoured by him (ſee Rom. 1. 6. and note on Mat. 20. c.) do by the gracious diſpoſition of God concur and co-operate to their advantage, which ſure is a ſign that the ſpirit of Chriſt by its interceſſion obtains for all ſuch thoſe things that are beſt for them, v. 27. though not at preſent ſo pleaſing for themſelves.

o. 28. And we know that † all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called o according * to his purpoſe.]

† Or, God co-operates all to good, for the King's MS. reads, πάντα συνεργεῖ ὁ Θεὸς εἰς τὸ ἀγαθόν. * To purpoſe, πρόθεσιν.

29. For indeed whatſoever thus befalls us is not to be look'd on as the act of man, by ſome general permiſſion only of God, but as his ſpecial decree and choice for us. For all whom God hath fore-approved and acknowledged for his, according to the purport of the Goſpel, whom he knew as a ſhepherd doth his flock, Joh. 10. 14. (that is, the lovers of God, ſo favoured by him, v. 28. and c. 11. 2.) thoſe he hath alſo fore-appointed to ſuffer, 2 Theſ. 3. 3. after the manner of Chriſt, Phil. 3. 10. that they might be like unto him as younger brothers unto the elder, Heb. 2. 10. and 12. 2. that he might have a Church of perſecuted Chriſtians attaining to deliverances, and to glory, v. 18. juſt as he himſelf hath done before them.

29. For whom he did foreknow, he alſo † did predeſtinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firſt-born amongſt many brethren.]

† Hath pre-ordained, προώρισεν.

30. And thoſe whom he hath thus predetermined to ſufferings, thoſe he hath accordingly called to ſuffer actually, 1 Pet. 2. 21. and thoſe whom he hath thus called to ſuffer, thoſe upon ſuch tryals ſincerely paſt, he juſtifieth, or approveth of, commendeth, and pronounceth them ſincere; and thoſe again he either hath, or certainly will reward with eternal glory.

30. Moreover whom he did predeſtinate, them he alſo called; and whom he called, them he alſo juſtified; and whom he juſtified, them he alſo glorified.]

31. What difficulty then can there be in all this? what matter of doubt but that it will go well with us? For if God be a friend, all tends to our good (which was the thing to be proved v. 28. and is proved convincingly, v. 29, 30. by an argument called by Logicians Sorites.)

31. * What ſhall we then ſay to theſe things? If God be for us † who can be againſt us?]

* What ſay we then, c. 6. 1. † Who ſhall.

32. For he that parted with his own Son in his boſome, and delivered him up to dye for our ſakes, how is it poſſible that he ſhould not complete that gift by beſtowing all other things that are profitable for us? and either afflictions or deliverances from preſent preſſures, as he ſees them moſt for our real advantage.

32. He that ſpared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how ſhall he not with him alſo freely give us all things?]

33. Who ſhall produce any accuſation againſt thoſe whom God doth approve of? (This the Jews did moſt bitterly againſt the Chriſtians, and eſpecially againſt St. Paul the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, judging them for breakers of the Law, &c. c. 2. 1. and c. 7. 2.) 'Tis certain that God hath acquitted them.

33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that juſtifieth.]

34. And then who dares be ſo bold as to condemn them? As for us, whatever we ſuffer here, our comfort and ſure ground of hope and rejoicing is, that Chriſt our Lord and Captain hath ſuffered before us, and, which is more for our advantage, to aſſure us of delivery either here or hereafter, our crucified Lord is riſen again, is aſcended to the greateſt dignity, and now reigns in heaven, and is perfectly able to defend and protect his, and hath that advantage to intercede for us to his Father (which he really doth, v. 26.) to help us to that conſtantly, which is moſt for the ſupply of our wants.

34. Who is he that condemneth? It is Chriſt that dyed; yea rather, that is riſen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who alſo maketh interceſſion for us.]

35. And then 'tis not in the power of any perſecutor on earth to put us out of the favour of God, or to deprive us of the benefits of his love to us, when Chriſt hath thus fortified us, and ordered even afflictions themſelves to tend to our good; we may now challenge all preſent or poſſible evils to do their worſt, all preſſures, diſtreſſes, perſecutions, wants, ſhame, the utmoſt fear, and force, the ſharpeſt encounters.

35. Who ſhall ſeparate us from the love of Chriſt? ſhall tribulation, or diſtreſs, or perſecution, or famine, or nakedneſs, or peril, or ſword?]

36. (As indeed 'tis the portion of a Chriſtian to meet with all theſe things in the diſcharge of his duty, and to have never a part of his life free from them, our Chriſtianity being but as it were the paſſage to our ſlaughter, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 44. 22. ſpoken of himſelf, but moſt punctually appliable to us at at this time, For thy ſake, &c.)

36. (As it is written, For thy ſake we are killed all the day long, we are accounted as ſheep for the ſlaughter.)]

37. No certainly; we have had experience of all theſe, and find theſe have no power to put us out of God's favour, they are on the contrary the ſureſt means to ſecure us in it, to exerciſe our Chriſtian virtues, and to encreaſe our reward, and ſo the moſt fatherly acts of grace that could be beſtowed on us, through the aſſiſtance of that ſtrength of Chriſt enabling us to bear all theſe, and be the better for them.

37. † Nay in all theſe things we are more than conquerors, through him that loved us.]

† But, Ἀλλά.

38. For I am reſolved that neither fear of death, nor hope of life, nor evil angels, nor perſecuting Princes or potentates, nor the preſſures that are already upon us, nor thoſe that are now ready to come.

38. For I am perſwaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, * nor things preſent, nor things to come,]

* Nor the preſent things nor thoſe that are to come, οὔτε ἐνεστῶτα οὔτε μέλλοντα.

39. Nor ſublimity of honours, nor depth of ignominy, nor any thing elſe ſhall be able to evacuate the promiſes of the Goſpel, or deprive us of thoſe advantages which belong to Chriſtians (according to God's faithful promiſes) immutably, irreverſibly.

39. Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the love of God which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord.]

Annotations on Chap. VIII.

a. Νόμος ἁμαρτίας.

V. 2. The law of ſin.] What νόμος ἁμαρτίας, the law of ſin here ſignifies, is diſcernible by the phraſe immediately foregoing, ὁ νόμος τοῦ πνεύματος τῆς ζωῆς, &c. the law of the ſpirit of life by Jeſus Chriſt, which unqueſtionably ſignifies no more than the holy Spirit now under the Goſpel, which frees us from that which the Law was not able to do. So ſaith Chryſoſtom and Theophylact, νόμον πνεύματος ἐν τούτοις τὸ πνεῦμα (τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα) καλεῖ, νομῶ, The law of the ſpirit he there calls the ſpirit, or holy ſpirit. And then proportionably the law of ſin muſt ſignifie ſin it ſelf, which this holy ſpirit given by Chriſt in the Goſpel ἐλάλησε, ſay they, hath mortified. This thoſe two ancients preſs, in oppoſition to ſome πονηραὶ γλῶσσαι, evil tongues, which interpreted the law of ſin to be the Moſaical Law. Of which yet the ſame Apoſtle in the precedent chapter, ſaith that it is ſpiritual, v. 14. and holy, juſt, and good, v. 12. ſpiritual, as given by the ſpirit of God, and the teacher and cauſe of virtue; and holy, juſt and good, as giving rules of Piety, Juſtice, and Charity, and as they add, Chryſoſt. t. 3. p. 184. l. 1. ἁμαρτίας ἀναιρετικὸν, that which hath power to take away ſin, and Theophyl. p. 66. κακίας πολέμιον, an enemy to ſin. And in this ſenſe the phraſe is evidently uſed, ch. 7. 23. where bringing into captivity to the law of ſin is no more than bringing to the commiſſion of ſin, or as Theophylact, δυνάμει καὶ τυραννίδι, to the power and tyranny of it.

b. σὰρξ. V. 3. The fleſh.] σὰρξ, the fleſh, in this place cannot ſo fitly be ſaid to ſignifie the ſtate or condition of men under the Law (mention'd c. 7. Note c.) but that which is the means by which occaſionally (as the διὰ notes) the Law became ſo weak and unable to reſtrain men, viz. the carnal or fleſhly appetite, which is ſo contrary to the propoſals and preſcriptions of the Law. So c. 7. v. 18. I know that in me, that is, in my fleſh, that is, the carnal part of a man, (ſuch eſpecially as is there repreſented, and defined v. 14. to be carnal, and ſold under ſin) dwelleth no good thing: ſo here v. 1. They that walk after the fleſh, are oppoſed to thoſe that walk after the ſpirit, and that are in Chriſt Jeſus: and ſo v. 4, 5, 6, 7. where the φρόνημα σαρκὸς, mind, or deſire, of the fleſh is enmity to God, direct oppoſition to him (viz. that law in the members warring againſt the law in the mind, c. 7. 23.) and v. 8. 9, 12, 13. And ſo in this verſe, viz. that the carnality of mens hearts was too ſtrong for the Moſaical Law to do any good upon them. And ſo the Law was weak, not abſolutely, but διὰ τῆς σαρκὸς, through the fleſh, that is, The Moſaical diſpenſation by the promiſes and terrors which it propoſed, was not able to ſubdue carnal affections, to mortifie luſts, to bring men to inward purity, which to the fleſh was more ingrateful than that temporal promiſes ſhould perſwade any man to undertake it, when there were not temporal puniſhments to drive them to it, as in caſe of Concupiſence, oppoſed to that inward purity, there were not, (ſee Note on ch. 7. e.) And ſo 'twas not poſſible for the Law to bring them to any good, Chriſt's reformation was neceſſary thus to call carnal ſinners to repentance.

c. δικαίωμα V. 4. Righteouſneſs.] The word δικαίωμα is any thing that God hath thought meet to appoint or command his people (ſee c. 2. 26.) from δίκαιον, meet or right, as ἀρεστὸν, or δόγμα, an ordinance, or decree, are from ἀρέσκω and δοκέω, being pleaſed, or thinking good. It is anſwerable to the Hebrew חקים Num. 30. 17. Deut. 4. 14, 40, 45. Pſ. 119. 12. and denotes thoſe laws which God hath given to the Jews beſide the Moral Law, or Law of Nature to all, the peculiar ordinances of circumciſion, &c. So Heb. 9. 1. The firſt covenant had δικαιώματα, ordinances, σύμβολα, διατὰξεις καὶ νομοθεσίας, ſaith Theophylact, types, inſtitutions, laws, as alſo λατρείας, worſhips, and ἅγιον κοσμικὸν, meaning the Tabernacle, all which were peculiar to the firſt covenant, the Moſaical œconomy; ſo Luke 1. 6. where to ἐντολαὶ, the commandments or Moral Law, is ſubjoined δικαιώματα, ordinances, or Jewiſh obſervances. And ſo here δικαίωμα τοῦ νόμου is the ordinances of the Law, or ſtatute-law, as it were, as that of circumciſion, &c. which being deſigned by God to teach them abſtinence from all impurity, but not ſo made uſe of by the carnal Jews, is ſaid here to be perfected and compleated by Chriſt by his plain precepts of inward purity. By this perhaps may be explained, Rev. 19. 8. where of the βύσσινον καθαρὸν καὶ λαμπρὸν, fine linnen pure and white, it is affirmed, that it is δικαιώματα ἁγίων, which may be rendred the ordinances of the ſanctuary (for ſo ἅγια ſignifies, Heb. 9. 2, 8.) that is, the garment that the Prieſt, when he entred into the Sanctuary, was to wear, by the Levitical Law. See Note on Rev. 19. a.

d. ἀββᾶ, ὁ πατὴρ. V. 15. Cry, Abba, Father.] The phraſe, κράζειν, Κράζει, that is, Father, ſo as the ὁ be the Neuter, not Maſculine gender, and the abbreviate of ὅ ἐστι μεθερμηνευόμενον, or πατὴρ. ὅ ἐστι, which is by interpretation, or, which is. If that be not it, both here and Gal. 4. 6. then, as Mar. 14. 36. (when it is uſed by Chriſt, who ſpake Syriack, 'tis certain that it was but the ſame word twice repeated) ſo muſt it be here, and no more than a form of compellation, wherein a ſon expreſſeth his confidence and dependence on his father's kindneſs and goodneſs to him; or elſe a form of petitioning, as in Chriſt it was, Abba, Father, all things are poſſible to thee, remove this cup from me. And ſo it ſignifies no more than to look upon God, as children on a father, as on one that means all good to us, if we be not wanting to our ſelves; referring to his rich Evangelical promiſes, in oppoſition to the more ſervile affections of the Jews, which performed thoſe external obediences only that were commanded under penalties, but had no care of purity and uprightneſs of actions, as ſlaves, and not as ſons. That this ſhould be taken from a Roman form of hæredipetæ, ſuing to a rich man for his inheritance, is but a fancy, ſufficiently confuted by this, that the crying Abba here ſuppoſes having received the Spirit of adoption, and doth not prepare for it. And ſo Gal. 4. Becauſe ye are (not, that ye may be) ſons, God hath ſent the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father; where firſt they are ſons, and have the Spirit of Chriſt in their hearts, that filial ſpirit, and becauſe they are ſuch, God hath ſent, &c. As for that that follows, And if ſons, then heirs, that is not peculiar to the Romans neither; for though among them the children of both ſexes were admitted to inherit, but among the Jews the females were not admitted, ſave in defect of males, yet ſpeaking here of ſons, he may very fitly refer to ſons among the Jews, and from the law of their inheriting the fathers goods, conclude of all children of God, and not only of males (for that difference is not at all conſidered here) that they ſhall do ſo too, that is be heirs alſo. Beſides, it was a law among the Jews, as well as the Romans, that adopted ſons, in reſpect of inheriting, were equal with natural; and that is the thing that is chiefly here meant by, If ſons, then heirs, that is, this adoption into ſonſhip is as ſure to bring us the inheritance, as if we were the natural ſons of God.

εἰ Τέκνα, καὶ κληρονόμοι

e. Κτίσις. V. 19. Creature.] The word κτίσις, the creation, or creature, being a general word, without a reſtraint (and likewiſe with πᾶσα, all, joined to it, v. 22.) is here ſet to comprehend all mankind, the Gentiles as well as the Jews, and (having before ſpoken of the Jews) here the Gentiles peculiarly. Thus κτίσις and κόσμος are all one, the creature, and the world, and πᾶσα κτίσις, all the creation, (as the ſame is expreſs'd here, v. 22.) and πᾶς ὁ κόσμος, all the world, Mark 16. 15. which is in S. Matthew in the parallel place, Mat. 28. 19. πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, all nations, and ſo Col. 1. 15. and ſo alſo κόσμος, the world, ſimply, as κτίσις, creature here, for the heathen world, 2 Pet. 1. 4. and elſewhere. So καινὴ κτίσις, a new creature, 2 Cor. 5. 17. is all one with καινὸς ἄνθρωπος, the new man, Eph. 4. 24. All by Hebrew idiom, wherein בריאה creature, ſignifies man among their Rabbins, as when they ſay of God, יבוא לדין את הבריות, he ſhall come to judge the creatures, that is, men. And that this is the meaning of πᾶσα ἀνθρωπίνη κτίσις, 1 Pet. 2. 13. every humane creature, that is, the heathens peculiarly (as far as the Relative ὑποτάγητε, ſubjection, will extend it, that is, to all heathen magiſtrates in authority over them, which is the importance of all, v. 17. not all men abſolutely, but all ſuperiors, as it follows, εἴτε βασιλεῖ, εἴτε ἡγεμόσι) will appear, 1. by the doctrine which he is there confuting, that of the Gnoſticks, which taught liberty and manumiſſion of Chriſtian ſervants from heathen maſters, and proportionably of Chriſtian ſubjects from heathen Kings; and 2*ly*, by the particularity of his care, v. 12. that their converſation ſhould be good among the Gentiles, that they might not ſpeak ill of them as of evil-doers, which they would be moſt apt to do, in caſe they ſhould withdraw their obedience from their lawful Princes, as ſoon as they were become Chriſtians; and 3*dly*, by the uſe of the phraſe πάντες ἄνθρωποι, all men, in the ſame ſenſe, for the Gentiles among whom they lived, Rom. 12. 17, 18. with whom they are there required to live peaceably, and to do nothing but what might be καλὸν, good before them. From which general precept the Apoſtle there immediately proceeds to (the ſame particular, which is the matter of S. Peter's command) obedience to the ſupreme power (then heathen) ch. 13. 1. (ſee Note on Col. 1. 6.)

πάντες ἄνθρωποι.

f. Ἀποκαραδοκία. Ib. Waiteth.] What is here ſaid of the ἀποκαραδοκία τῆς κτίσεως, the expectation of the creature, that is, of the Gentile world, muſt be underſtood according to the ſacred prophetick dialect, wherein men are ſaid to deſire, and ſeek, and hope, and expect that (ſometimes) which they do not diſtinctly know or think of, upon this ſcore, that it is the general, indefinite, though not the particular, determinate object of their deſires; that, ſuppoſing men to deſire that which is beſt for them, moſt for their preſent turn, this being moſt eminently ſo, is the only true matter of ſatisfaction to thoſe their appetites. Thus all men being ſuppoſed to deſire felicity, are ſaid to expect and deſire Chriſt, becauſe he is the only true way to that: As on the other ſide, the wicked, that purſue an evil courſe, are by the wiſe man ſaid to ſeek death, though 'tis ſure they have no particular deſign upon it; and ſo Prov. 8. 36. to love death. Thus when Jacob, Gen. 49. calls Shiloh, or the Meſſias, προσδοκία τῶν ἐθνῶν, the expectation of the Gentiles, and on whom the Gentiles ſhall truſt, and ſo Hag. 2. 7. The deſire of all nations ſhall come, that is, literally the Temple (that ſhould then be re-edified) and under that ſhadow, Chriſt, he in whoſe coming was contained a full ſatisfaction to all the wants, and deſires, and thirſts of all the heathens in the world. And ſo here it is not at all neceſſary to the verifying of this ſpeech of the Apoſtle, that the Gentile world all this while, (or even at that time wherein he ſpake) ſhould either know Chriſt, or what 'twas to be the ſons of God, or that the revelation of this by the preaching of the Goſpel to the Jews tended ſo particularly to their advantage: But, as the Goſpel of Chriſt was the collection of all thoſe advantages that they aſpired to, and as being the ſons of God was the believing on Chriſt when he was preached, ſo the Apoſtle, that knew that upon the having preach'd over all the cities of Jewry (and ſo made diſcovery who of them would repent and believe the Goſpel, who would be finally contumacious) the Goſpel ſhould immediately be preached to the Gentiles, and ſo the bleſſedſt thing in the world befal them, the ſatisfaction to all their deſires and groanings, may truly ſay, that the expectation of the Gentile world attended and waited for this. Which interpretation will be more perſpicuous, when it is conſidered, that both ἀποκαραδοκία, lifting up the head, or, as Theophylact fetcheth it, παρὰ τὸ ἀπὸ καιρὸν ὅλην δοκεῖν καὶ ἐπιδύειν πρὸς τὸ βεβαίως ἐλπιζόμενον, from holding out and bending forward the whole head to that which is firmly hoped for, and the ἀπεκδέχεται, waiting, or attending, that follows, are but phraſes noting the approach of any thing, and not their explicit knowledge that it doth ſo; as when Chriſt bids them, when ſuch and ſuch things come to paſs, liſt up their heads, for their Redemption draweth nigh, Luke 21. 28. that is, then your deliverance approacheth, though perhaps many of them that ſhould have their parts in it, knew nothing of it. And indeed ἀπεκδέχεται being beſt rendred attendeth, waiteth, notes only this period to be it, before which the Goſpel was not to be ſo freely preached to the Gentiles, and after which it was, and is not to be reſtrained to their looking, or expecting of it.

g. Ἀποκάλυψις. Ib. Manifeſtation.] The word ἀποκάλυψις, Revelation, ſignifies the explaining or diſplaying ſomewhat that was before obſcure and covered, and ſo the revelation of the ſons of God will be the diſcovering who are truly ſuch. This was to be done among the Jews, who all pretended to that title, by the Apoſtles preaching the Goſpel to them, in the power of Chriſt's reſurrection; and they that did not now receive him ſo teſtified, 'tis evident they were baſtards and not ſons, though before they might have the excuſe of ignorance to extenuate their fact, Luke 23. 34. 1 Cor. 2. 8. Thus it is ſaid by old Simeon of Chriſt (which ſhould prove for the falling and raiſing of many in Iſrael, Luke 2. 34. a ſtumbling block to the proud obſtinate Phariſee, but a means of raiſing the humble ſinner to new life, and a ſign that ſhould be matter of contradiction, a ſtrange perſon, that ſhould be matter of great diſpute and diviſion among the Jews, ſome believing and others rejecting him) that by this means the thoughts, or machinations, or deſigns, of many ſhould be revealed, that is, by their dealing with Chriſt it ſhould be diſcovered what kind of men they were, truly pious, or no, thoſe obedient children of God which they pretended to be, or elſe the quite contrary. Now becauſe by the Apoſtles preaching of Chriſt to the Jews this diſcovery was to be made, and ſo the Goſpel firſt preached to them, before they went to the Gentiles, and upon the Jews rejecting Chriſt, the Apoſtles were then to depart and go to the Gentiles, therefore the creature, or Gentile world, are ſaid earneſtly to expect, or wait for, this diſcovery, as a thing by which they were to receive this great advantage, ἐπ' ἐλπίδι (in the end of ver. 20. which muſt connect with this, the former part of that verſe ſo far being but in a parentheſis) in hope that they alſo ver. 21. that is, the Gentiles, that ſhall receive the Goſpel, as well as the believing Jews, ſhall be redeemed from their cuſtoms of ſin, which made them ſuch ſlaves, and become partakers of that glorious title of ſons of God alſo.

Ἀποκάλυψις. Ἀποκαλυφθῆναι διαλογισμοί.

h. V. 20. Made ſubject.] The only difficulty here is, by whom the heathen world was ſubjected to that which is here called vanity, and after φθορὰ, corruption, ver. 21. For though here the paſſive ὑπετάγη, was ſubjected, might be ſo rendred as to refer to no other Agent but themſelves, that αὐθαιρέτῳ δαίμονι, the ſpontaneous devil, that moſt of our miſchief and ſin is imputable to, yet here follows, in this verſe, mention of the ὑποτάξας, he that hath ſubjected them; and 'tis alſo affirmed of the creature, that is, the Gentile world, that it was thus ſubjected, οὐχ ἑκοῦσα, not willingly, but διὰ τὸν ὑποτάξαντα, becauſe of him, whoſoever it is, that ſubjected them. The place is generally interpreted of God, that he is the ὁ ὑποτάξας, and if ſo, it muſt then be ſaid that he ſubjected the heathen not by any poſitive act, but (as he is ſaid to harden) by deſertion, and leaving to themſelves, to which this ſlavery to their cuſtoms of ſin is conſequent. But it may alſo be interpreted of the Devil, who by God's permiſſion (in juſt puniſhment for their Idolatries) had, and exerciſed ſuch power among the heathens, and engaged them in all wickedneſs. And this is perfectly agreeable with the truth of the fact. For the Devil being worſhip'd by the heathens, did by that means infuſe into their worſhips all the villany in the world, made all unnatural ſins part of their devotions, in their myſteries Eleuſinia ſacra, Venus and Flora's feaſts, &c. and ſo what they did in that kind they did not willingly, as 'tis here ſaid, but in obedience to this ὁ ὑποτάξας, that is, the Devil that had gotten ſuch authority among them, and kept them in this δουλεία τῆς φθορᾶς, ſlavery, or ſervitude, of corruption, doing it in obedience to his commands. Thus doth Euſebius, l. 4. c. ζ' tell us of Carpocrates, that it was his avow'd doctrine, that there was no other way of eſcaping or appeaſing the κοσμικοὶ ἄρχοντες, worldly princes, as they called them, but by paying them their dues by all their ἀῤῥητοποιΐαι, unnatural filthineſs. And we know 'twas moſt ordinary among the heathen to have ſacrificing of men, and devoting them preſcribed ad pacanda numina, to appeaſe thoſe falſe gods. Thus are men ſaid to be caught and held in the ſnare of the devil, and ἐζωγρημένοι, taken alive, or captive, by him, 2 Tim. 2. 26. which concludes them in the ſtate of ſlaves and ſervants for ever after, till by repentance and reformation they get out of it. And there is no circumſtance in the whole context, that renders this improbable to the meaning of it, but on the contrary this ſubjection from whence they hope to be delivered, is oppoſed to that freedom which Chriſt gives, and that is, from the hands of enemies, Luke 1. 74. that is, from Satan, &c. who may therefore be reſolved to be the ὁ ὑποτάξας, he that ſubjected them. That which hath enclined interpreters to apply it to God is, firſt, the ἐπ' ἐλπίδι, in hope, which follows, it being not imaginable that the Devil ſhould ſubject them thus, in hope, &c. But that ſeems to be a miſtake, the ἐπ' ἐλπίδι, in hope, belonging to the end of the former verſe, ἀπεκδέχεται ἐπ' ἐλπίδι, waits in hope, all the reſt of the 20th v. being read in a parentheſis, as the reaſon of their waiting, v. 19. Secondly, the reſolving that κτίσις, creature, ſignifies the other creatures of God, beſide man; but that hath been ſhewed to be a miſtake alſo, Note d.

ἐπ' Ελπίδι

i. Ib. Vanity.] Ματαιότης, vanity, hath a double notion, one as it refers to the heathen Idols, which being הבלים nothings, are called μάταια, vain, or vanities, Acts 14. 14. and ſo vanity here is all their ignorant filthy Idol-worſhip; and ſo 'tis Eph. 4. 17. where he warneth them not to walk as the reſt of the Gentiles do, in the vanity of their own mind; and ſo ἐματαιώθησαν they grew vain, Rom. 1. 21. and φύσει μάταιοι, vain by nature, in the Book of Wiſdom, ſpeaking of that popular cuſtom of Idolatry, that had generally over-run them all, and ſo 2 Pet. 2. 18. Another notion of the word there is as it is rendred by Heſychius, Μάταιος, τάλας, wretched, miſerable. And both theſe may ſeem to be here put together, as the courſe of the Gentiles was an idolatrous, villanous, and withal an unhappy wretched courſe (to which the devil had brought them, and God in his juſt judgments had delivered them up, for their deſpiſing the light of nature) of which ſome of them were ſo ſenſible, viz. thoſe that by ſtudy of Philoſophy, or travel into Ægypt (where they might hear of the worſhip of the true God) came to any knowledge of the truth, that they expreſs'd their diſlike of their own ways, and their deſires to be rid of theſe ſo great burthens, that thus preſs'd down their ſouls. Thus did Porphyrie and others lament the impurities of their natures, which they found within themſelves, and ſet up a ſpecial project and purſuit of καθαρτικὰ, purgatives, and, when other helps failed, made uſe of γοητεία and θεουργεία, magick and ſorcery to that end, conſulted with the devil to help to make them pure; and this, as diſcerning this want of purity to be utterly deſtructive of that true happineſs which, as rational creatures, they could not but ſeek after. And in this reſpect it is, that here 'tis ſaid of theſe heathens, that they were thus ſubjected not willingly, but through Satan's malice, and God's juſt judgments upon them, and yet had ſome kind of dark hope, that they ſhould have ſome means allow'd of reſcuing them, and ſo did in a manner expect Chriſt, and wait for a reverſion of the Goſpel, when the Jews had done with it, and ſo (as 'tis obſervable in the Acts) when he was preach'd unto them and the Jews together, did more readily and univerſally receive him, than the Jews did.

k. V. 21. Corruption.] Φθορὰ ſignifies ſometimes thoſe abominable unnatural uncleanneſſes which the Gentiles were guilty of, τὸ τῆς ἐν κόσμῳ ἐν ἐπιθυμίᾳ φθορᾶς, 2 Pet. 1. 4. the corruption through luſt which was in the world, the unnatural luſts among the Gentiles and Gnoſticks. So again 2 Pet. 2. 12. γεγεννημένα εἰς φθοράν, made to corrupt, or good for nothing but to corrupt others, an expreſſion of ἄλογα ζῶα φυσικὰ, unnatural irrational creatures; and again in the end of the verſe, ἐν τῇ φθορᾷ αὐτῶν, in their corruption, which what it ſignifies may be gueſs'd by the luxury and licentiouſneſs that follows, v. 13. and ἐντρυφῶντες ἐν ταῖς ἀπάταις αὐτῶν, living luxuriouſly in their deceits, or heretical Gnoſtick practices: ſo again δοῦλοι τῆς φθορᾶς, v. 19. ſervants of corruption, anſwerable to δουλεία φθορᾶς here, the ſervitude of corruption, in the ſame ſenſe clearly, and this very agreeable to Deut. 4. 16. leſt you corrupt your ſelves, &c. So Wiſd. 14. 12. having ſaid that the deviſing of Idols is the beginning of fornication, he adds that the invention of them is φθορὰ ζωῆς, the corrupting of life. And in Philo de ſpecial. leg. præc. 7. we have φθορὰ, πορνεία, μοιχεία, corruption, fornication, adultery, ſeveral branches of ſin againſt that law. (See Note on 2 Pet. 1. b. and c. 2. b. and Col. 2. h.) φθορὰ.

V. 23. Adoption.] Υἱοθεσία, adoption, ſignifies the aſſuming thoſe into the number of children which are not ſo naturally. In the 15. v. it is ſet oppoſite to δουλεία ſervitude, and v. 21. it is called ἐλευθερία, the liberty of the ſons of God; for they that are adopted, if they were ſervants before, are made free men and ſons together: and ſo here it may ſignifie the change of ſtate from ſervitude to ſon-ſhip; and becauſe it is ſpoken of in this verſe as a thing not yet had, but expected by S. Paul and ſuch as he, thoſe that had the firſt-fruits of the ſpirit, that is, had received the Goſpel, and believed in Chriſt, and ſo were already Sons of God, received into his family by adoption, therefore it muſt here be taken in ſome other notion, different from that which is ordinary, and in oppoſition to ſome other ſervitude; and the ἀπολύτρωσις τῦ σώματος that follows, will incline to interpret it an aſſumption and delivery out of that that then lay upon the body, the perſecutions, (a kind of Ægyptian ſervitude) which lay then ſharply upon the Orthodox Chriſtians, and that partly by reſcue here out of them, granting them Halcyonian days, as upon the deſtruction of the Jews, their perſecutors, they had, and partly by the reſurrection of the body, for thoſe that were not thus reſcued in this life. 1

Υἱοθεσία.

Ib. Redemption.] Ἀπολύτρωσις ſignifies deliverance generally, and that from preſſure or calamity, preſent or approaching, ἀπουγὴ, ἀπόλυσις, eſcaping, releaſe; and ſo ἀπολυτρωσις τῦ σώματος may well be the bodies eſcaping from thoſe preſſures and perils that lye upon that, and make it groan alſo (though in another ſenſe than that wherein the word is uſed, v. 22. according to the uſe of Scripture-ſtyle and the figure ἀντιπέλασις. of uſing a word, that had been uſed before in a different ſenſe) Titus Luke 21. 28. your ἀπολύτρωσις, redemption, deliverance from perſecutions, draweth nigh, and ſo it ſeems to be uſed here, of which he ſaith, v. 24. that in hope they are eſcaped, and in the mean time with patience expect, v. 25. And of theſe diſtreſſes, and the advantages of, and deliverance from them, he continues the diſcourſe from hence to the end of the Chapter, (as he had begun it, v. 17, 18.) as that wherein our conformity with our elder brother conſiſted, to ſuffer, as he did, and wherein their delivery, ſo glorious and remarkable, would be a firſt preparative conformity to his reſurrection. But this not to exclude, but include alſo the farther deliverance of the body from death it ſelf, by the reſurrection, which is anſwerable to Chriſt's reſurrection alſo, and promiſed as the only means to ſupport their faith, and patience, who ſhould not be delivered here, but loſe their lives for the faith of Chriſt. Thus the word is uſed, 1 Cor. 1. 30. m.

Ἀνταπόκλασις.

V. 26. Infirmities.] The word ἀσθένεια, and ἀσθενέω, weakneſs, weak, and being weak, in the New Teſtament oft ſignifies diſeaſes, diſtreſs, miſeries, afflictions, that befal our humane ſtate; ſo Mat. 8. 17. it ſignifies the diſeaſe that Chriſt cured, and ſo Luke 13. 11, 12. John 5. 5. and 11. 4. Acts 28. 9. and ſo ἀσθενὴς, ſick, Mat. 25. 39. Luke 10. 9. Acts 4. 9. and 5. 15, 16. 1 Cor. 11. 30. (as on the contrary, ἰσχύων, the ſtrong, Mat. 9. 12. ſignifies the healthy) and ἀσθενέω, Mat. 10. 8. 25. 36. Mark 6. 56. Luke 4. 40. 7. 10. 9. 2. John 4. 40. 5. 3, and 7. ſo c. 6. 2. 11. 1, 2, 3, 6. Acts 9. 37. 19. 12. Phil. 2. 26, 27. 2 Tim. 4. 20. Jam. 5. 14. (and very oft for ſin the diſeaſe of the ſoul.) And ſo it ſignifies here, even all the ſad particulars mention'd v. 35. and which, if the Context be obſerved, will appear to belong unto this place, and will be agreeable to the notion of עצב, which ſignifying πόνος λύπη, labour, ſorrow, is frequently uſed for diſeaſe, diſtreſs, and rendred by the word here uſed, ἀσθένειαι, weakneſſes; ſo is the word uſed 1 Cor. 2. 3. referring to the perſecutions and dangers that Paul at Corinth had met with in his preaching. n.

V. 28. According to his purpoſe.] The phraſe κατὰ πρόθεσιν, according to purpoſe, is by * Cyril of Hieruſalem thus interpreted, that it ſignifies γνησίαν προαίρεσιν every man's genuine choice and reſolution of mind, that love of God that caſts out fear, that courage that is not daunted with ſufferings, (not, as Grodecius interprets it, cujuſlibet propriam voluntatem, in oppoſition to God's, but, I ſay) every man's genuine, that is, ſincere choice, or purpoſe, in oppoſition to the hypocritical, temporary, outward profeſſion of ſome that enter into Chriſtianity. For as in him it follows, κἂν σῶμα ᾖς᾽ ἔχῃς, ἡ δὲ διάνοια οὐκ ἔχῃς, οὐδὲν ὠφελῇ, if thy body be preſent among the diſciples of Chriſt, or the illuminate, but thy mind go not along with thy body, it profits thee nothing. Thus, ſaith he, Simon had his body baptized with water, but not his heart illuminated by the Spirit; his body deſcended into, and aſcended out of the water, but his ſoul was not buried with Chriſt, nor raiſed again with him. And ſo he concludes, ἡ πρόθεσις γνησία ὅσα κλητὸν οὐ ποιεῖ, the purpoſe of mind when it is genuine or intire, all one with πρόθεσις καρδίας, purpoſe of heart, Acts 11. 23. (not, as the interpreter reads, propoſitum cùm adeſt proprium) renders thee called, that is, puts thee in number of thoſe who are ſtyled the called of God, that is, ſincere diſciples of his, to whom this Goſpel-privilege here belongs that all things tend to their good, from tribulation to death it ſelf. So in the ſame author a little before, πρόθεσις ἀγαθὴ, a good purpoſe and reſolution (conſequent to the ὀνοματογραφία and στρατείας κλῆσις, having their names enrolled, and their perſons entred into the military calling) is uſed as a phraſe to expreſs them to be Chriſtians that had reſolvedly taken that calling upon them. And ſo indeed κλητὸς is oft taken in the Old Teſtament for a follower, adherent, ſubject, ſervant, eſpecially in an army, 1 Kings 1. 41, 49. 2 Sam. 14. 11. This is clearly the interpretation of that very ancient Father, making our ſincere embracing of Chriſt's diſcipleſhip (or the being called, that is, wrought upon by Chriſt's call effectually, and not bringing only the body to Chriſt, and leaving the mind behind) the condition without which the promiſes and advantages of the Goſpel do not belong to any. In the ſame ſenſe as * Clemens Alexandr. Strom 7. ſpeaking of the one true Church, in oppoſition to hereticał mixtures, ſaith, εἰς ἣν οἱ κατὰ πρόθεσιν δίκαιοι ἐγκαταλέγονται, into which thoſe that are juſt according to purpoſe are admitted; in the ſenſe that elſewhere * ἡ ἑκάστου πρόθεσις, every man's purpoſe, and * πρόθεσις εὐσχολίας, a purpoſe, or reſolution, of ſingle life is uſed by him. In like manner Theophylact, κλητὸς γίνεται ἄνθρωπος κατὰ πρόθεσιν, τουτέστι κατ᾽ ἰδίαν προαίρεσιν, A man becomes called according to purpoſe, that is, according to his own choice, for, ſaith he, οὐκ ἀρκεῖ ἡ κλῆσις, ἐπεὶ πάντες ἂν ἐσώθησαν, πάντες γὰρ ἐκλήθησαν, ἀλλὰ χρεία καὶ τῆς προαιρέσεως, Calling is not ſufficient, for then all ſhould be ſaved, for all are called, but there is need of our will and choice in obeying the call. But if the word πρόθεσις, purpoſe, be applied to God, which calls (and not to them which are obedient to the call) then the meaning muſt be, thoſe that are called according to purpoſe, that is, thoſe that according to God's counſels revealed in the Goſpel, are the men to whom God's favour, and ſo his promiſes belong. That the former of theſe is rather to be embraced in this place, may be conjectured by the nature of the ſubject, which this phraſe called according to purpoſe, is ſet to expreſs, viz. thoſe that love God, which are Chriſtians, endued with that grace of charity, or love of God, which will fit them to ſuffer for, or with Chriſt, and if it doth ſo, doth by that appear to be cordial and ſincere, not hypocritical. And of ſuch conſtant reſolute lovers of Chriſt it is here ſaid, that it is one of the privileges of the Goſpel, that all things (how ſharp ſoever) that befal them, do tend to their good. And ſo κατὰ πρόθεσιν κλητὸς ὤν here, one that is called according to purpoſe, one that ſtedfaſtly and cordially adheres to God, will be directly all one with ὁ τῇ προθέσει τῆς καρδίας προσμένων τῷ Κυρίῳ, Acts 11. 23. one that with purpoſe of heart adheres to the Lord. And though Rom. 9. 10. πρόθεσις, purpoſe, be clearly applied to God, and that in the matter of election without conſideration of works, only ἐκ τοῦ καλοῦντος, in reſpect of God that calls the Gentile Idolaters to Chriſt, when the perverſe Jews are left to themſelves, yet that which determines it there to God is not only the matter which makes it neceſſary, but the very word Θεοῦ of God joyned with πρόθεσις purpoſe, the purpoſe of God to call the Gentile world to the knowledge of Chriſt. And in other places, as there is πρόθεσις αἰώνων, Epheſ. 3. 11. the eternal purpoſe (of God again,) or God's promiſe concerning the ſeveral ages of the world, ſo there is alſo πρόθεσις, purpoſe, 2 Tim. 3. 10. which demonſtratively ſignifies a grace or vertue among Chriſtiſtians, being joyned with πίστις faith, μακροθυμία long-ſuffering, ἀγάπη charity, ὑπομονὴ patience, and ſure ſignifies a general good reſolution and purpoſe of mind, having an influence on the whole Chriſtian life, and ſo fit to follow ἀναγκὴ, the whole converſation next before it.

CHAP. IX.

Paraphraſe.

a. 1. Theſe things being ſo, that there is no true purity or conſequent juſtification to be had by the Law of Moſes, nor any way but by Chriſt, whatſoever ye think of me, (looking on me, I know, with an evil eye, as if I were your enemy) I proteſt before Chriſt, and teſtifie to you, my brethren of the Jewiſh nation, that truth, of which mine own conſcience in the preſence of the holy Ghoſt (that is privy to, and ſearcher of hearts) is witneſs to me.

1. I Say the truth in Chriſt, I lie not, my conſcience alſo bearing me witneſs a in the holy Ghoſt.]

2. That the thought of my brethren the Jews, that depend upon the Law, and confide in their own righteouſneſs, and will not be brought to look after Chriſt, and that inward purity by him preſcribed, inſtead of the external circumciſion, &c. is matter of great grief and inceſſant torment to my ſoul.

2. That I have great heavineſs and continual ſorrow in my heart.]

b. 3. So far am I from deſerving to be thought (as I am) their enemy, that I could be content that I were ſeparate or excommunicate from Chriſt's Church, not only to want the honour of Apoſtleſhip, but to be the moſt abject creature, ſeparate from the body of Chriſt, the communion of Saints, and ſo delivered up to Satan (ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. e.) Or that, as Chriſt being not accurſed, or worthy of any ill, became a curſe for us, ſo after his example, any the ſaddeſt condition might fall on me; Or, if it were poſſible, and if it might any way tend to this end, I could, me thinks, be content to part with all mine own hopes and intereſts in Chriſt, even mine eternal heaven and bliſs, on condition my brethren and conſanguineans, the Jews, would leave their truſt in the Law, and in their being Abraham's ſeed, and come in to the Goſpel, and make uſe of the Privileges that are allowed them there. So paſſionate is my love toward them, that I could endure any loſs by way of expiation for them, to reſcue them from their infidelity, and the deſtruction that attends them.

3. For I could wiſh that my ſelf were * b accurſed from Chriſt, for my brethren, my kinſmen according to the fleſh;]

* An anathema, ἀνάθεμα.

c. 4. They being the people to whom Chriſt was primarily and principally ſent, the poſterity of Abraham, and Iſaac, and Jacob (and favoured by God for their fathers ſakes) and honoured with the privilege of being acknowledged as ſons, or people of God, the privilege of having God preſent among them, his majeſty ſhining, as it did in the ark, 1 Sam. 2. 12. Pſal. 83. 3. the covenants, that is, both the word of the covenant, and the ſacrament of the covenant, circumciſion and ſprinkling of blood, Gen. 17. 10. Exod. 24. 8. the giving of the law to them in tables, the preſcript manner of worſhip appointed by God himſelf, and the promiſes of the Meſſias, &c.

4. Who are Iſraelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and c the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the Law, and † the ſervice of God, and the promiſes.]

† The worſhip, ἡ λατρεία.

5. Whoſe

5. Whoſe are the fathers, and out of whom as concerning the fleſh Chriſt came, who is over all, [d] God bleſſed for ever. Amen.]

5. They coming from the Patriarchs, and Chriſt d.

the (incarnate) Son of God coming from them, taking his fleſh, and being born of a Jewiſh woman, though he were above and over all creatures in the world, God bleſſed for ever, the title by which the one ſupreme God was known and expreſs'd among the Jews.

* But it is not poſſible that οἷον ἢ ἴση. † Should have miſcarried ἐκπέπτωκεν.

6. * Not as though the word of God † hath taken none effect: For they are not all Iſrael, which are of Iſrael.]

6. But whatſoever becomes of theſe children of Abraham according to the fleſh, yet for all this the promiſe of God made to him doth no way miſcarry, the ſins of Abraham's carnal ſeed cannot make God's promiſe to be fruſtrated, ch. 3. 3. (from which place to this, the diſcourſe begun ch. 3. 2. had been interrupted, and not reſumed again till now, and here reſumed and purſued) for the promiſe was not made to his carnal, but ſpiritual ſeed, to believers begotten after the image of his faith; the privileges made to Iſraelites do not belong to all that are of the ſtock of Jacob.

* The ſeed be called to thee, κληθήσεταί σοι σπέρμα.

7. Neither becauſe they are the ſeed of Abraham, are they all children: but in Iſaac ſhall * thy ſeed be called.]

7. Nor doth the adoption (the ſecond privilege, v. 4.) or the privilege of being received in by God as his peculiar people, belong to all that are come from Abraham, for it was once ſaid to Sarah, Gen. 21. 12. that the promiſed ſeed ſhould be confined to Iſaac's line (or, from Iſaac ſhall come the bleſſed ſeed, or that ſhall be the bleſſed ſeed that comes from Iſaac, ſee note on Mat. 2. k.) Iſhmael, though he were Abraham's child, ſhould not inherit, nor have any part in it, or (as Theophylact) thoſe ſhall be the ſeed of Abraham, who are born after the manner of Iſaac's birth, that is, by the word or promiſe of God.

8. That is, they which are the children of the fleſh, theſe are not the children of God: but the children of the promiſe are counted for the ſeed.]

8. Which ſignifies that the privilege of adoption belongs not to all Jews, or to men as being born of that ſtock, but being made over by promiſe, it belongs to thoſe to whom the promiſe was made: that is, not to thoſe that expect juſtification by obſervation of the Moſaical law of circumciſion, &c. or depend upon their abſolute election, as Abraham's ſeed, and ſo live negligently and ſecurely; but to the faithful regenerate Chriſtians, which are the ſeed adumbrated in Iſaac, and called the children of promiſe here, and heirs according to promiſe, Gal. 3. 29. the men to whom the promiſe belongs which was made to the faithful Abraham, and ſuch as he was, begotten ſpiritually after the ſimilitude of his faith, though they ſprang not from his loyns.

† Speech was a ſpeech of promiſe, ἐπαγγελίας ὁ λόγος οὗτος. * According to this time, κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον.

9. For this † is the word of promiſe, * [e] At this time will I come, and Sarah ſhall have a ſon.]

9. For the birth of Iſaac was an act meerly of God's e.

free mercy, a work of extraordinary providence, for which neither Abraham nor Sarah had any ground to hope, but only that promiſe made, Gen. 17. 21. and 18. 10. in theſe words, According to this time, (that is, the time of bearing children after conception) I will viſit thee, and give thee a Son; by which 'tis clear, that the birth of Iſaac was in effect of God's promiſe, and nothing elſe, and ſo that they to whom the promiſe belongs, that is, not the natural Sons of Abraham, but the ſpiritual ſons, not they that deſcended from his loyns, but they that follow the example of his faith, whoſoever they be, Jews or Gentiles, may, (upon obedience to the faith) and ſhall be accepted for his children, as Abraham was.

† But alſo Rebecca conceiving at once.

10. And not only this, † but when Rebecca alſo had conceived [f] by one, even by our father Iſaac,]

10. Another type there was, and proof of this, in f.

the children of Rebecca, twins, which ſhe conceived by our Father Iſaac, to wit, Eſau and Jacob.

* Abide, μένῃ † Not from works, but from him, οὐκ ἐξ ἔργων ἀλλ' ἐκ τοῦ

11. (For the Children being not yet born, nor having done any good or evil, that the purpoſe of God according to [g] election might * ſtand, † not of works, but of him that calleth,)]

11. For before their birth, and when neither had done good or evil g.

(which notes the Jews and Gentiles, the one conſidered without any reſpect of their legal ſervices, the other of their Idolatries,) that the intention and reſolution of God to prefer one before the other, might appear to be not on conſideration of their (nor conſequently of the Jews and Gentiles) performances, but as an act of his own free diſpoſal, in diſpenſing that greater meaſure of his favours, as ſeemed beſt to him, (for that is meant by calling, ſee note on Mat. 20. c.) even to the Gentiles which had done a great deal of ill, and not to the Jews when they rejected Chriſt, even though they performed ſome external obediences.

12. It was ſaid unto her, The elder ſhall ſerve the younger,]

12. It was revealed to her by God, that the elder of the twins ſhould be inferior to the younger (which ſignifies by way of accommodation, that the Jews the elder people, who had the privilege as it were of primogeniture, ſhould forfeit and loſe thoſe privileges which the Gentile Chriſtians attained to, whom God after begat to himſelf.)

13. As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Eſau have I hated.]

13. According to the prediction of the elder's ſerving the younger, Mal. 1. 2, 3. which though it had been true in their perſons, Jacob getting away the birth-right firſt, then the prime bleſſing from Eſau, yet it had not its primary completion in their perſons (it no way appearing probable, that Eſau did in his perſon forſake the true God, and fall off to Idols) but had its principal and full accompliſhment in their poſterities, of whom Malachi hath delivered it from God, long after the death of both their perſons, that God preferred the Iſraelites before the Edomites, though indeed their progenitors Jacob and Eſau were brothers, and Eſau the elder of them. By both which typical ſtories it is plain, that as God binds not himſelf to obſerve privileges, to give Iſhmael inheritance with Iſaac, only becauſe he was born of Abraham as well as he, nor to prefer Eſau before Jacob, and the Idumæans before the Iſraelites, only becauſe they were of the elder houſe or line; ſo neither doth he beſtow the promiſes made in Chriſt either as a prerogative of Iſraelites, or a reward of legal obedience, but leaves himſelf free to receive Gentiles as well as Jews, nay to call Gentiles, and reject the Jews, and to accept of the Chriſtian faith, inſtead of the Moſaical obſervances, the internal, ſincere, Evangelical, inſtead of the external legal obedience.

* What ſay we then? ch. 6. 1.

14. * What ſhall we ſay then? Is there unrighteouſneſs with God? God forbid.]

14. But do we not by ſaying this make God unjuſt? Is it not injuſtice in him to accept theſe, to have mercy on believing Gentiles, and to caſt off Jews, that are Abraham's ſeed, which perform the ordinances of the Law, circumciſion, &c. No certainly, we charge nothing on God by this; that which we ſay is agreeable to his own words, Exod. 33. 19.

15. For he ſaith unto Moſes, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compaſſion on whom I will have compaſſion.]

15. For there, upon Moſes's deſire to ſee his glory, he tells him his Name by which he will be proclaimed, I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, &c. and ſo again, Exod. 34. 6. that is, In ſhewing Mercy I will do what I think good, without giving thee or any man any further account of it, than mine own moſt gracious will and pleaſure, (not that I have not reaſons to do it, but that I need not, in diſtributing of mercies, which have no foundation in the merits of men, render any other reaſon or motive, but mine own will, whereby I may do what I will with mine own.) And accordingly God cannot now be reſtrained in reaſon or juſtice from ſhewing mercy to the heathen world, ſo far, as to appoint Chriſt to be preached to them. For what ſhould oblige or lay any neceſſity on him to damn or reject eternally every one that deſerved it? From which declaration of God's it follows, that therefore God may moſt juſtly call, and accept, and have mercy on Gentiles, invite them to Chriſtianity, though never ſo Idolatrous, and then ſave them upon Chriſtian, without legal, performances.

16. So then it is not of him that willeth, or of him that runneth, but of God that ſheweth mercy.]

16. From which teſtimony it is plain, that this mercy is not the merit or due peculiarly of them that moſt violently pretend to have it ſo, and ſtrive moſt for it, (that is, of the Jews, as is implied, v. 31. though they ſtrive not as they ought to do) and again that 'tis not any thing of merit in the Gentile, for which God calls him to Chriſtianity, (now the Jew hath rejected it) as 'twas not all that Iſaac could do by willing to beſtow the bleſſing on Eſau, nor that Eſau could do by running to obtain it, when he came running and crying, Haſt thou but one bleſſing, &c. (ſee Chryſoſt. t. 5. p. 775.) but only the free mercy of God to undeſerving Gentiles, (when the Jews have firſt had, and contemned this mercy.)

† Raiſed thee.

17. For the Scripture ſaith unto Pharaoh, Even for this ſame purpoſe have I [h] † raiſed thee up, that I might ſhew my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth.]

17. And for the other part of the doctrine, againſt h.

which injuſtice was objected, viz. that of the rejecting of the Jews, and not juſtifying them, upon obſervation of Moſaical external performances, without inward purity preach'd by Chriſt, there is as plain a teſtimony again of God's, concerning his dealing in the like caſe, viz. ſhewing exemplary puniſhments on impenitent ſinners (and ſuch were the Jews that would not believe on Chriſt, but depended on the prerogative of their birth and legal performances.) And this is in the caſe of Pharaoh, Exod. 9. 10. when after the fixth judgment, Pharaoh having hardned his own heart ſo long, and over and above fruſtrated Moſes's ſpecial laſt warning, Exod.

Exod. 8. 29. and hardned his heart that time alſo, v. 32. (anſwerable to which was the Jews reſiſting of Chriſt alſo after all the reſt of the Prophets, ſtoning the ſon after the ſervants, in the parable, and moreover reſiſting of the Apoſtles preaching through all their cities, after Chriſt's reſurrection, upon which God gave them up to obduration, and the Apoſtles departed to the Gentiles,) God takes Pharaoh in hand, and ſaith he will harden his heart (v. 12.) this time, though not before v. 14. and adds that he had or would have cut them off with the peſtilence (ſee note i.) and utterly deſtroyed him from the earth, ſee v. 15. in the præter, not future tenſe, but that he preſerved him alive beyond his time, raiſed him out of that great danger, or peſtilential diſeaſe, that had been upon the land, for no other end, but to make the divine power more illuſtriouſly viſible in him, and make all the earth hear of the exemplary puniſhments of God, in this life, upon one that had thus often hardned his heart againſt God.

18. * Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he i hardneth.] * So then ἄρα οὖν.

dent, that as God in ſhewing mercy is not bound to render any reaſon of it beyond his own will, v. 15. ſo when he delivers up an obdurate ſinner to the obduration of his heart, this he may juſtly do if he pleaſe, eſpecially when all that is done in this, is not by infuſing any quality into him, but by leaving him now to himſelf, who had ſo often held out againſt God, and by inflicting that judgment on him on earth, which had otherwiſe been at this time his portion in hell; and this for ends formerly mentioned, v. 17. Whereas to many others, not ſo far advanced in obduration, he continueth his admonitions and chaſtiſements, and by that means brings them to reformation. (And as this was moſt viſibly true on one ſide in Pharaoh, and on many other men on the other ſide; to whom God ſhews himſelf thus merciful, infinitely beyond their merit, of which no account can be given by us, but only God's free mercy; ſo in the caſe in hand of the Jews and Gentiles, 'tis moſt obſervable, God's free undeſerved grace is his only motive to ſhew mercy to the Gentiles, to call them to the Goſpel, and his free pleaſure to deal thus with the incredulous obdurate Jews, to leave them at laſt to themſelves (upon their hardning themſelves ſo oft, deſpiſing the prophets, crucifying the Son of God, and at laſt rejecting the Apoſtles, and in them the holy Ghoſt coming to them, fortified with that great teſtimony, (as of Jonas out of the whale's belly, which converted ſinful Ninive) the reſurrection of Chriſt from the dead, and ſo by hiding from their eyes the things that belong to their peace, by withdrawing the Goſpel from them, to harden their hearts, Mat. 13. 14. Mar. 4. 12. Luke 8. 10. John 21. 40. Acts 28. 26. Rom. 11. 8.)

19. But upon this paſſage of Pharaoh 'tis, or may be objected, If God after the ſixth Judgment hardned Pharaoh's heart, why doth he then expoſtulate or chide with him after that, as 'tis clear he doth, Exod. 9. 17, [As yet exalteſt thou thy ſelf?] for then God might be ſaid to will his obduration, which he had inflicted on him as a puniſhment; and then what poſſibility was there for him to reſiſt his will, that God ſhould ſtill find fault? (Parallel to this it may perhaps be objected in reſpect of the Jews, who after God's delivering up the Jews to that obduration foretold Mat. 13. 14. and intimated (though not yet, at the ſpeaking of thoſe words, come to paſs) Luke 19 42. that after the Apoſtles departing from them, and preaching to the Gentiles, Acts 13. 46. he yet by himſelf and his Apoſtles reproves and chides them, when now the prediction of their ſubverſion and total deſtruction is irreverſibly gone out againſt them, Luke 23. 44.) To this objection moſt clearly and punctually propoſed (as it concerns Pharaoh at that time of his life, when God ſaid [As yet exalteſt thou thy ſelf?] and by intimation and analogy, as it concerns the Jews, his parallel) and indeed to the whole matter before ſet down, the Apoſtle anſwers 1. by way of indignation againſt the objecter, to repel the force of his argument, thus,

20. In matters that thus belong to the wiſdom of God, and his diſpenſations, what man ſhall dare object any thing againſt his proceedings? ſhall the creature diſpute with the Creator, or queſtion him, to what end he hath thus and thus dealt with him? Is there any reaſon to find fault with God (or ſo much as to make any reply to him) for asking that queſtion of Pharaoh after that time, or doing any thing proportionable to that, to the Jews after judgment was gone out againſt them? In matters of juſt and equal God is willing to appeal to and to be judged by us, Iſa. 5. 3. Ezech. 18. 25. but in matters of wiſdom, whether he hath done wiſely or no, in expoſtulating with Pharaoh and the Jews, when he hath deſerted and delivered them up irreverſibly to the hardneſs of their own hearts, there is no reaſon in the world, that what God hath done ſhould be diſputed againſt by us, or that he ſhould be bound to render, or we be ſuppoſed to diſcern a reaſon of it.

20. Nay but, O man, who art thou that replieſt * againſt God? ſhall the thing formed ſay to him him that formed it, Why haſt thou made me thus?] * To God, τῷ Θεῷ.

21. Nay we give that liberty to an ordinary tradeſman, a potter by name (God uſing that reſemblance in this matter, Jer. 18. 3.) of the ſame lump of clay to make one veſſel for an honourable uſe, to be employed at the table, &c. and while the wheel runs, or the ſtuff grows worſe, or miſcarries in the hand of the potter, Jer. 18. 4. and ſo proves unfit for ſo good an employment, to make another for an inferior, leſs honourable uſe, as it ſeems good to him; and why may we not give God leave to have mercy upon one, who according to the condition of things laid down in the Goſpel, is capable of mercy, and ſo to bring ſome Jews (a tithe of them, Iſa. 16. 14.) and a multitude of heathens to Chriſtianity, and to life, by their performance of thoſe conditions on which God hath promiſed reception, and on the other ſide to reject all obſtinate contemners of them, to leave them in their obduration, nay to deal with them as he did with Pharaoh, by withdrawing all grace, by hiding from their eyes the things that belonged to their peace, after they have ſo long ſhut their eyes wilfully and reſolvedly againſt the Goſpel, to harden them irreverſibly, to make another kind of veſſel of them, to ſome though not an honourable uſe, Jer. 18. 4. and ſo to fulfil that propheſie, Iſa. 6. 10. Make their hearts fat, &c. and that till their land be utterly deſolate, v. 11. and all this upon their former obdurating their own hearts, Mat. 13. 15. which is meant by the veſſels miſcarrying in the hand of the potter, that is, while he was doing that toward them which belonged to their peace? This being premiſed for the repelling of the diſputer, he now proceeds to a more punctual, clear, ſatisfactory anſwer, by way of queſtion alſo or interrogation, which may be eaſily diſſolved into this poſitive concluſion.

21. Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the ſame lump to make one veſſel to honour, and another unto diſhonour?

22. God on purpoſe to expreſs his wrath viſibly in this life upon Pharaoh (and in like manner on the rebellious Jews) and to make other nations to take notice what God is able to do in the puniſhing of ſinners (an effect of which you may ſee clearly in the Philiſtines, who took warning by the ſtory of Pharaoh, 1 Sam. 6. 6.) ſuffered this man to live, when he was fit for nothing but hell (having filled up the meaſure of his iniquities) by his continuing alive, to ſhew ſome exemplary judgments upon him: Wherein yet there was longanimity expreſs'd, and mercy to him, this eſtate on earth being more tolerable than it had been to have been thrown into hell preſently; as alſo to the Jews it was, in not cutting them off preſently upon their direful rebellions (as moſt juſtly he might,) but ſuffering them to continue a people ſome time after the crucifying of Chriſt, and the Apoſtles preaching his reſurrection to them, nay ſending them ſtill to preach over every city of Jewry, as Moſes was ſent to Pharaoh after God's hardning his heart. All which being an act of long-ſuffering to them, was deſigned by God to this end of magnifying his judgments on thoſe who ſhould perſiſt in their obſtinacy, and ſhewing forth his power moſt illuſtriouſly in their deſtruction. Well then, this on Pharaoh and on the Jews was done firſt to ſhew God's wrath in puniſhing of obdurate ſinners, but that is not all.

22. † What if God, willing to ſhew his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much long-ſuffering the veſſels of wrath fitted to deſtruction?] † But if, εἰ δὲ

23. There was another more remote end of it, (ſee ch. 11. 11, 12.) by this means of diſcernible ſeverity on them, to illuſtrate and ſet forth more notably his abundant goodneſs to others, to afford the Goſpel, and the benefits of the coming of Chriſt, and his preſence here on earth (for that ſeems to be the meaning of the word [glory] as that notes the preſence of God among the Jews, ſee note c. and on John 1. c.) on ſome others, whom he had prepared and fitted before-hand for theſe more honourable purpoſes, believing in Chriſt here, and reigning with him hereafter. (And thus that is true alſo, which was ſaid in the other part of v. 18. He decreed to ſhew mercy on the Gentiles and others believing in Chriſt, as he hardned the veſſels of wrath, the obdurate contumacious Jews.)

23. And that he might make known the riches of his glory on the veſſels of mercy which he had afore prepared unto glory?]

24. Even us, to whom God hath vouchſafed this favour of revealing Chriſt to us, ſome of us Jews, but the far greater number of the Gentiles, who have made uſe of that mercy of his, and obey'd his call.

24. Even us, whom he hath called, not of the Jews only, but alſo of the Gentiles.]

25. According to that prediction in Hoſea, ch. 2. 23. where God ſaith, I will ſay unto them which were not my people, Ye are my people; and I will have mercy on her which had not obtained mercy, which notes God's receiving the Gentiles into the Church, which was an act meerly of God's mercy (at which the Jewiſh believers were aſtoniſhed, Acts 10. 45.) utterly undeſerved.

25. As he ſaith alſo in O ſee, I will call them my people which were not my people; and her beloved, which was not beloved:]

26. And it ſhall come to paſs, that in the place where it was ſaid unto them, Ye are not my people, there ſhall they be called the children of the living God.]

26. And according to that other ſaying of Hoſea, c. 1. 10. which is thus to be rendred out of the original; and it ſhall come to paſs inſtead of that which was ſaid to them, Ye are not my people, it ſhall be ſaid to them, Ye are the Sons of the living God; which place ſeems to belong to the Jews (not Gentiles) thoſe of them that ſhould believe at the preaching of the Goſpel, (for ſo the next verſe Hoſ. 1. 11. ſeems to import, and the place which here follows of Iſaiah) now after they had been carried captive ſo oft, and ſo ſeverely puniſhed by God for their ſins.

27. Eſaias alſo cryeth concerning Iſrael, Tho' the number of the children of Iſrael be as the ſand of the ſea, a remnant ſhall † be ſaved.]

† eſcape; σωθήσεται

27. Whereupon Iſaiah alſo prophecies and proclaims concerning the Jews, Iſa. 10. 22,23. thus, Though the number of the people of the Jews be as the ſand of the ſea, the number of carnal Iſraelites never ſo great, yet a very few of them ſhall believe in Chriſt (ſee Acts 2. 47.) or, as it is in the original, return, that is, convert from their rebellions to Chriſt.

28. k For * he will finiſh the work, and cut it ſhort in righteouſneſs, becauſe a ſhort work will the Lord make upon the Earth.]

* perfecting and cutting off the account in juſtice, the Lord ſhall even make a ſummary account on the land, or, the Lord ſhall make an account on the land, perfecting and cutting ſhort,

28. For the Lord ſhall deal in juſtice with, or upon the land of Judea (the people of the Jews) as one that perfects or makes up an Account, and caſts off, that is, which in making up an account of a ſtewardſhip, having ballanced the diſburſements with the receipts, leaves ſome ſmall ſum behind; be there never ſo many of that people, there ſhall but few be left, the far greater part being involved in infidelity firſt, and then in deſtruction. k.

29. And as Eſaias ſaid before, Except the Lord of Sabbath had left us a ſeed, we had been as Sodom, and been made like unto Gomorrha.]

† Say we then, c 6. 1.

29. And as Iſaiah ſaith again, c. 1. g. of the ſame people, unleſs the Lord of the hoſts of Angels and Stars in heaven, and of the whole frame of the world, had left to us Jews a ſeed, (in which, as other things when they are dead uſe to revive, ſo that people, almoſt utterly deſtroyed, might have ſome poſſibility of ſprinking up again) or, as the original in Iſaiah hath it, a very ſmall remnant, we had been as utterly deſtroyed, as Sodom and Gomorrah were.

30. What † ſhall we ſay then? that the Gentiles which followed not after righteouſneſs, have l attained to righteouſneſs, even the righteouſneſs which is of faith.]

30. To conclude therefore, that which all this while hath been a proving (and to the proving of which all that hath been ſaid in this chapter muſt be referred, as premiſes to infer this concluſion and no other) is this, That the Gentiles that ſtrove not for juſtification, that did not ſo zealouſly pretend that they were the favourites of God, did attain to it by receiving the faith of Chriſt, upon which, tho' they had formerly been Idolaters, they were juſtified. l.

31. But Iſrael, which followed after the Law of righteouſneſs, * hath not attained to the Law of righteouſneſs.]

* came not foremoſt. εἰς ἔφθασε

31. But the Jews that did moſt diligently contend to be juſtified by the Law, did not yet outrun the Gentiles, attain the goal, or get juſtification before them, but on the contrary, the Gentiles have gotten the advantage of them very much.

32. Wherefore? becauſe they ſought it not by faith, but, as it were, by the works of the Law: for they ſtumbled at † that ſtumbling-ſtone,]

† the τῷ

32. And why not? why, becauſe they ſought it not by Chriſt, or by the Evangelical way, nay could not endure that, when it was revealed to them, but only by the privileges of being Jews, and performance of external, legal obſervances, and ſo fell down in the midſt of their race, being not patient to believe that their Law ſhould be aboliſhed (or that Chriſt that was born, lived, and dyed in a mean condition, ſhould be the Meſſias of the world, 1 Cor. 1. 23.) but upon that one prejudice, caſting off all Chriſtianity.

33. As it is written, Behold I lay in Sion * a ſtumbling ſtone, and a rock of offence: and whoſoever believeth on him, m ſhall not be aſhamed.]

* a ſtone of offence and a ſtone of ſcandal, λίθον προσκόμματος καὶ πέτραν σκανδάλου, 33. According to that which is written, Iſa. 28. 16. Behold I lay in Sion a ſtone tryed and precious (ſee note on Mat. 10. b.) but ſuch an one as the Jews ſhould ſtumble at, thinking it contrary to the Moſaical way, and ſo falling off from, and perſecuting Chriſtianity; which notwithſtanding, the true orthodox faithful Chriſtian will ſtill adhere to, and hold faſt, and never forſake or deny Chriſt (ſee c. 10, 11. and 1 Pet. 2. 6.) nor conſequently ſhall he ever be denied, or forſaken by him. m.

The ſum then of this whole chapter will be reduced to theſe five heads: firſt, the privileges of the Jews, and among them eſpecially Chriſt's being born of that ſtock; ſecondly, that thoſe of them which reſiſted and believed not in Chriſt, were delivered up to obduration by God, and the Gentiles taken in their ſtead; thirdly, that 'twas was moſt juſt in God to deal thus with them; fourthly, that ſome of the Jews at that time believed in Chriſt; fifthly, that the cauſe that the reſt believed not, was, that after a Phariſaical manner they ſought juſtification by the works of the Law, circumciſion, &c. deſpiſing the faith and doctrine of Chriſt, and that Evangelical way of juſtification, and ſo ſtumbled at the Chriſtian doctrine which they ſhould have believed, were the worſe for him and the preaching of the Apoſtles, by whom they ſhould have been ſo much the better.

Annotations on Chap. IX.

a. ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ

V. 1. In the holy Ghoſt] This ſpecial expreſſion of God in, or by, the holy Ghoſt, which inſtead of ὁ θεὸς God, c. 1. 9. is uſed in this and ſome other places, doth denote the ſpecial office and prerogative of that holy Spirit, as to plant purity and ſincerity in the heart, contrary to all kind of pollution and mixture, eſpecially that of deceit and hypocriſy, ſo to be privy to the ſecrets, to take notice of the motions of the heart. And this in proportion with the ſpirit of a man, of which as Solomon ſaith, that it is the candle of the Lord, ſearching the inner parts of the belly, ſo ſaith the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 2. 11. The ſpirit of a man knoweth the things of a man, ſo as no no man elſe knows them: by analogy to which he infers, that there is no other way of knowing the things of God, but by his Spirits revealing them to us; for the Spirit ſearcheth all things, even the depth of God, v. 10. in which reſpect the ſpirit of the world, v. 12. is ſet to denote the means which the world hath to inſtruct us in any thing, the wiſdom of the world, v. 13. which is there ſet oppoſite to the ſpirit of God. Thus Acts 5. Ananias, that had in heart and reſolution conſecrated his eſtate to the ſervice of Chriſt, and broke this reſolution, or promiſe of his heart, is ſaid to ly to, or to have deceived the holy Ghoſt peculiarly, v. 3. becauſe he had done contrary to the vow of his heart, (which (tho' not under man's, yet) was under the Holy Ghoſt's privity. And ſo here beſide the witneſs of the conſcience, the Holy Ghoſt is appealed to, as he that knows the inmoſt ſecrecies, and conſequently, that that is the teſtimony of his conſcience, which he pretends to be ſo.

b. Ἀνάθεμα εἶναι

V. 3. Accurſed] The phraſe ἀνάθεμα εἶναι, to be a curſe, in this place, is capable of many ſignifications, each of which may be applyable to the matter in hand, to expreſs the Apoſtles fervent affection towards his country-men. Firſt, it may ſignify, to be excommunicate and caſt out of the Church: Ἀνάθεμα. ἀκοινώνητος, it ſignifies excommunicate, ſaith Heſychius. Thus ἤτω ἀνάθεμα, 1 Cor. 16. 22. Let him be Anathema, is, let him be removed from the Chriſtian aſſemblies, deprived of thoſe priviledges of Chriſtians, which there are afforded afforded them; and ſo Gal. 1. 8, 9. ἀνάθεμα ἔστω, let him be excommunicated, turned out with the greateſt averſation out of the Church of God, avoided, ſeparated from, whoſoever ſhall teach any other doctrine, tho' he were an Apoſtle, or an Angel of God, that did it.

[a] Tom. 6. p. 441. l. 13. So in St. Chryſoſtom, ἀνάθεμα ἐκκλησίας ποιήσαντες ἄνθρωπον, they that excommunicate any man, or make him anathema from the Church. If this be the notion, then ἀπὸ Χριστοῦ, from Chriſt muſt ſignify from the body of Chriſt, as by a ſynecdoche the word Chriſt is uſed, 1 Cor. 12. 12. Gal. 3. 27. or as it is manifeſt, that Chriſt being the head of the Church, he that is cut off from the body, may truly be ſaid to be cut off from Chriſt. And then he that was by the Jews accuſed and perſecuted for having made a defection and departure from the Moſaical Law, and ſetting up Chriſtian aſſemblies, in oppoſition to their Judaical ſervice, may here fitly expreſs his kindneſs to them, (and how little pleaſure he took in departing from them) in wiſhing himſelf ejected from the participation of thoſe moſt valuable priviledges, on condition they might be made capable of them. Secondly, it is known that in thoſe Primitive times this anathematizing or excommunicating, was attended with the delivering up to Satan, and that with the ὀλεθρῳ σαρκὸς, very ſharp, ſevere inflictions on the fleſh, diſeaſes, afflictions, &c. And therefore Anathema in this notion, may be taken with this improvement, and ſo contain all temporal calamities that he was willing to endure, or undergo for their good. That this is the meaning of the place, may ſeem probable by comparing it with a like phraſe of Ignatius the holy Martyr in his Epiſtle to the Romans, where, in an expreſſion of his zeal to Chriſt he hath this phraſe, Κόλασις τοῦ διαβόλου ἐπ' ἐμὲ ἐρχέσθω, μόνον, ἵνα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐπιτύχω, Let the puniſhment of the devil come upon me, only that I may obtain Chriſt: where the puniſhment of the devil cannot be the puniſhments of hell, which are no way ordinable to the obtaining of Chriſt, but any the greateſt torments or inflictions in this life, or even death it ſelf, that ὀλεθρῳ σαρκὸς, the deſtruction of the fleſh. As when Moſes in an expreſſion of the like zeal and kindneſs to his brethren, wiſheth that God would blot him out of his book, that is, I ſuppoſe, out of the book of the living, in the Pſalmiſt phraſe, ſo as not to be written among the righteous, in that roll wherein the names of all the people of God are ſuppoſed to be inſcribed; and to be capable of being blotted out, not noting the ſtate of life and bliſs in heaven, for out of that there is no poſſibility of blotting, but that which belongs to this life, that is, either life ſimply, or living among the people of God, (anſwerable to excommunication before mention'd.) And accordingly the Arabick tranſlation is, that my body were מחרמא an anathema from Chriſt. And it is an ordinary form of ſpeech among the Jews, אני כפרתו may I be his expiation; ſee Aruch, and Cod Sanhedrin, c. 2. אנו נפרחך by we thy expiation, which, ſaith Maimonides, is uſed to expreſs רוב אהבותו the exceſs of love or kindneſs to any. The other notions of the phraſe, of which it is capable, and have therefore been mentioned in the paraphraſe, may be ſeen at large in Photius, Epiſt. 216.

V. 4. The glory] That the Ark of God, where he was pleaſed to exhibit himſelf, is the thing expreſſed by ἡ δόξα, the glory, is clear by that known place in the Old Teſtament, The glory is departed from Iſrael, for the ark of God is taken. And the reaſon of the appellation is as clear, becauſe the Cherubims being placed in the Ark on the ἱλαστήριον, or covering, God was ſaid to be preſent there in the ſame manner as on Mount Sinai (that is, by the viſible apparition of Angels there) Acts 7. 53. Gal. 3. 19. Heb. 2. 2. And this preſence of his by Angels is ordinarily called δόξα, glory in the New Teſtament, anſwerable to שכינה among the Rabbins (from Exod. 24. 16. the glory of the Lord ישכן dwelt, or abode upon the Mount, to which the Apoſtle refers, 2 Cor. 3. 9. where the giving of the Law was ſaid to be δόξα, glory) as may appear by many places. Thus when Iſa. 6. 1. we read, after the Lord's ſitting on the Throne, that his train filled the Temple, the Septuagint have πλήρης ὁ οἶκος δόξης αὐτοῦ, the houſe was full of his glory; and then follows immediately, οἱ Σεραφὶμ ἱστήκεισαν κύκλῳ αὐτοῦ, the Seraphim ſtood about him: and St. John retains the Septuagint reading, John 12. 41. theſe things ſpake Iſaiah, when he ſaw his glory, (ſee Note on John 1. c. and Matth. 3. k.) ſo Mat. 16. 27. where ἔρχεσθαι ἐν δόξῃ τοῦ πατρὸς, to come in the glory of the father, is explained preſently by μετ' ἀγγέλων αὐτοῦ, with his Angels; and ſo Mat. 25. 31. in his glory, and all his Angels with him; and ſo Mark 8. 38. the glory of the father with his holy Angels, and c. 13. 26. where his coming in the clouds (which belongs to the appearance of Angels, which was wont to be in a bright ſhining cloud, which we ordinary call a glory) is ſaid to be in power and great glory; and it follows immediately, v. 27. and then ſhall he ſend his Angels: and ſo Luke 21. 27. So Luke 2. 9. the Angel of the Lord appeared, and the glory ſhone round about. So John 1. 19. when he had ſaid of Chriſt incarnate, ἐσκήνωσε, he dwelt among us, (that Greek word being of the ſame Hebrew origination with the שכינה) it follows, and he beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the father, viz. in the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt (with that ſatellitium of Angels) upon him after his Baptiſm; the like to which, 2 Pet. 1. 17. is called a voice from heaven, from the excellent glory. See alſo 2 Pet. 1. 3. and 1 Pet. 4. f. So Acts 7. 55. when 'tis ſaid of Stephen, that he ſaw the glory of God, that is, ſure, the guard of Angels about God; ſo theſe very Angels in the Ark are called the Cherubims of glory, Heb. 9. 5. Agreeable to this is the ναὸς κατασκηνώσεως τῆς ὑλίσης, John 1. 5. the temple of the inhabitation, or שכינא appearance, or glory, of the moſt high; and ſo 2 Cor. 12. 9. ἵνα ἐπισκηνώσῃ ἐπ' ἐμὲ ἡ δύναμις τοῦ Χριστοῦ, that the power of Chriſt may inhabit upon me, refers to the uſe of the word σκηνόω from שכן to this ſenſe, that the power of Chriſt ſhould ſo ſhew it ſelf upon him, as God was wont to exhibit himſelf in the שכינה or glorious appearance in the Ark. And thus in the Gemara Babylonica, ſpeaking of the High-prieſt, when he enquires any thing of the Urim & Thummim, פנו כלפי שכינה he turns his face toward Schechinah, that is, toward the Ark, where God is ſaid to inhabit.

[d] V. 5. God bleſſed for ever] This place is ſo clear a proof of the Divinity of Chriſt, that Proclus de fide, p. 53. ſaith of it, that it convinces all the Hereſies concerning Chriſt, ᾗ παρεῖσδυσιν συκοφαντίας ἀποτειχίζει τοῖς φιλολοιδόροις, and it ſhuts and walls up all paſſages for calumny from them that love contumely, or railing at Chriſt. So Theophylact, Καὶ ἐντεῦθεν ἡ καταισχύνεται Ἄρειος, ἅτε τοῦ Παύλου τὸν Χριστὸν ἐπὶ πάντων θεὸν ἀναπηγύοντος, From hence is Arius confuted and put to ſhame, S. Paul proclaiming Chriſt to be God over all. This will more appear, if it be remembred that it was a cuſtom among the Jews ſolemnly obſerved, that whenever the Prieſt in the Sanctuary delivered the name of God, the people uſed ſome words of bleſſing or praiſing him, ſuch as theſe, ברוך שם חבוד מלכותו לעולם ועד, benedictum ſit nomen gloriæ regni ejus in ſecula ſeculorum, bleſſed be the name of the glory of his kingdom for ever and ever. So in Gemara Babylonica, Rabbi ſaid כי שם ה' אקרא &c. when I call on the name of Jehovah, do you magnify our Lord; ſo ſaid Moſes to Iſrael, Deut. 32. 3. when I mention the name of the bleſſed God, do you magnify. So ſaith Solomon Jarchi, on Deut. 32. 3. From that command of Moſes it is, that after the benediction in the Sanctuary the people anſwer ברוך שם, &c Bleſſed be the glorious name of his kingdom. To theſe forms were after added the words לעולם ועד for ever and ever, or, to age and age, that is, εἰς αἰῶνας, to ages, here, becauſe (ſay the Rabbins) of the Hereſy of the Sadducees, who ſaid there was but one age. So Cod. Berachoth, c. 9. In all the concluſions of the ברכות benedictions, benedictions, which were in the ſanctuary, they ſaid מן העולם from age, but after that the ſadduces had perverted that, and ſaid there was but one age, they decreed that they ſhould ſay, from age to age. Many evidences of this cuſtom there are in the Old Teſtament, eſpecially in the Pſalms. And the abbreviate of all theſe forms was (the words uſed Rom. 1. 25.) ὃς ἐστιν εὐλογητὸς εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, Ἀμήν, Who is bleſſed for ever; Amen; and here ſomewhat more largely, ὁ ὢν ἐπὶ πάντων Θεὸς, &c. Who is above all, God bleſſed for ever and ever, Amen. Parallel to this are thoſe other, the Doxology at the end of the Lord's Prayer, *Mat.*6. and in this Epiſtle αὐτῷ ἡ δόξα εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, Ἀμήν, to him be glory for ever, Amen. c. 11. 36. and c. 16. 7. and Gal. 1. 5. and Eph 3. 21. Phil. 4. 20. 1 Tim. 1. 17. 2 Tim. 4. 18. and Heb. 13. 21. 1 Pet. 4. 11. and 5. 11. and 2 Pet. 3. 18. Jude 25. Rev. 1. 6. & 7. 12. In all which places this giving of glory being an acknowledgment of the eternal God, and in ſeveral of them being applyed peculiarly to Chriſt, (who is diſtinctly called God, Acts 20. 28. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Tit. 2. 13.) is here, and Heb. 13. 21. and in all the places in St. Peter, and Rev. 1. 6. this is a moſt convincing proof of the Godhead of Chriſt teſtified in all theſe places. And of this cuſtom of the Jews applyed to Chriſt, the Chriſtian Church hath continued two imitations, one in bowing at the name of Jeſus, that other in the Eulogy, Glory be to thee, O Lord, when the Goſpel of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt is named.

e. Κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον

V. 9. At this time] What is meant by κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον, according to this ſeaſon, will beſt appear by Gen. 17. 21. and 18. 10. in the former of which 'tis rendred in the Greek εἰς τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον ἐν τῷ ἐνιαυτῷ ἑτέρῳ, according to this time in another year; in the latter, κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον εἰς ὥρας, according to this ſeaſon for times, which, I ſuppoſe, is corruptly ſet out for τῆς ὥρας, of time, ὥρα being a ſeaſon, or time of year, and ſo the meaning will be, according to this time of the year. The Hebrew reads it, c. 17. למועד הזה literally κατὰ καιρὸν τοῦτον, according to this ſeaſon, the word rendred καιρὸς ſignifying indifferently time, (though coming from a root that ſignifies conſtituit, it be ordinarily rendred appointed time) and in c. 18. 'tis כעת הזה, we render it, according to the time of life, the Jeruſalem Targum, quaſi hoc tempore quo vos vivitis, as it were at this time wherein ye live, (unleſs perhaps that be capable of an emendation and ſhould be הזה or הואת according to this time; for ſo Rabbi Solomon, כעת הואת, &c. ſecundum hoc tempus anni futuri, according to this time of the future year, and Aben Ezra כעת הואת juxta tempus hoc in anno ſequenti, cum Sarah erit viva, about this time in the year following, when Sarah ſhall be alive, taking in the reading of הזה alſo.) All this ſeems to denote, not that time twelve month, but the next year at the time of childbirth, reckoning from that time wherein the promiſe was made (ſee Paulus Fagius in Collat.) And ſo 2 Kings 4. 16. the like phraſe, about this ſeaſon according to the time of life thou ſhalt embrace a ſon, is by the Hebrews interpreted, after the time wherein the fruit ſhall be quickned in the womb, and come to a perfect firmneſs of parts, and ſo come to birth, thou ſhalt embrace, or have, a ſon. So that according to the time of life may moſt fitly ſignify according to the manner, or courſe, of children's being formed in the womb, quickened and born.

f. Ἐξ ἑνὸς.

V. 10. By one] Some other ways of rendring theſe words ἐξ ἑνὸς of one, have been thought of by learned men, which it will not be unfit to mention; as that ἑνὸς ſhould be all one with μονογενοῦς, for ſo יחיד unigenitus was the title of Iſaac among the Jews, Gen. 22. 2. Heb. 11. 17. and from thence ἸΣΑΑΚ in Philo Biblius by the Tyrian dialect, for Ἰσαάκ, and then the ſenſe will be, Rebecca having conceived by the only-begotten, to wit Iſaac, our father, or, by Iſaac the only begotten of our father. But ἐξ ἑνὸς ſeems rather to be taken Adverbially to ſignify at once, (there being no priority in their conception on which to ground any favour to one above another) and beſt agrees with the deſign or argument which that is brought to confirm here. As for κοίτην ἔχειν, that is but a modeſt circumlocution to expreſs that which is not wont to be plainly ſpoken, as we find κοίτη a bed, uſed c. 13. 13. & Heb. 13. 4. Κοίτην ἔχειν

g.

V. 11. Election] the Hebrew בחר ſignifies both to chuſe, and to prefer, and is therefore rendred not only ἐκλέγειν, to chuſe, but alſo προαιρεῖσθαι, to prefer, Deut. 7. 6. and 10. 15. Prov. 1. 29. and agreeable to that ἐκλογὴ election here ſignifies prelation, and ἡ κατ' ἐκλογὴν Θεοῦ προθεσις is God's purpoſe in reſpect of this (or for the) preferring one before the other. See note on 1 Pet. 2. c. Ἐκλογὴ

h. Ἐξεγείρειν

V. 17. Raiſed] The word ἐξεγείρειν ſignifies not here the raiſing up, as that notes bringing into the world, but the raiſing out of ſome low condition; yet not the grave neither, (tho' to that the word may properly be applied, where the matter requires it) but diſeaſe or danger, as it is often uſed, but eſpecially Jam. 5. 15. the prayer of faith ſhall ſave, that is, deliver, recover, the ſick, and the Lord ſhall raiſe him up, that is, reſtore him from that ſickneſs. For the notion of it here, it will appear by the Hebrew word, Exod. 9. 16 העמדתיך, I have made thee ſtand, which the Chaldee renders קימתך raiſed thee (from the danger before ſpoken of, the peſtilential diſeaſe, or murrain that had lately been upon the land) and the ancient Latin, ſuſtentavi te, I have ſuſtained thee; but the Septuagint expreſly, διετηρήθης, thou wert kept, guarded, not ſuffered to fall into it, preſerved and kept alive; ſo Iſa. 49. 8. to raiſe up, or make ſtand, (the word uſed there) is an expreſſion of preſerving, reſcuing from danger, delivering. See Note on Matth. 22. d.) And ſo this ſpeech muſt neceſſarily belong to that part of Pharaoh's life peculiarly, wherein the Murrain fell on Egypt, Exod. 9. 3. at which time he, for his many repeated obdurations of his own heart, was fit to have been delivered up to inſtant ruin, had not God for the illuſtrating of his glory in this veſſel of wrath, (thus fitted by himſelf for deſtruction) kept him alive a little longer. Theophylact renders it a little otherwiſe, εἰς μέσον σε ἤγαγον, I have ſet thee in the midſt, brought thee out as a perſon to be exemplarily puniſhed.

i. Σκληρύνειν

V. 18. Hardneth] God's hardning of Pharaoh's heart in this place, is that which befel Pharaoh, Exod. 10. 1. when God ſaith of him, I have hardned his heart. This was indeed foretold by God from the firſt of his ſending Moſes to him, c. 4. 21. Do all the wonders before Pharaoh, which I have put into thine hand, but I will harden his heart, that he ſhall not let the people go; and again, chap. 7. 3. I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply my ſigns, and, &c. But this foretelling it ſo early, is no argument that it was immediately done, but on the contrary, his own hardning his own heart is alſo foretold, Exod. 3. 19. I am ſure that the king of Egypt will not let you go, no not by a mighty hand. And accordingly ſo the ſtory proceeds, God ſhews miracles and ſigns before Pharaoh, Exod. 7. 10. and becauſe the Magicians of Egypt did the like with their inchantments, it follows, Pharaoh's heart was hardned (not he (as if it were God) hardned Pharaoh's heart, but ויחזק לב פרעה Pharaoh's heart waxed hard, or ſtrong, was hardned, or, by an ordinary acception of Kal for Hithpahel, Pharaoh's heart hardned it ſelf. And ſo it follows, v. 14. the Lord ſaid unto Moſes, Pharaoh's heart is waxen hard, he refuſeth, &c. (and ſo the very ſame words are rendred by our Engliſh, c. 7. 22. and c. 8. 19. was hardned, in the paſſive, or, hardned its ſelf in the Reciprocal (not actively, he hardned) and hearkned not unto them.) After this hardning his heart thus againſt this firſt ſign and command, God proceeds to a judgment of turning their water into blood, Ex. 7. 16, 17. and this as a ſufficient conviction to Pharaoh, for ſo ſaith God, Hitherto thou wouldſt not hear, but in this thou ſhalt know that I am the Lord, behold I will ſmite, &c. And yet after this, Pharaoh's heart was hardned, or hardned it ſelf, v. 22. neither did he ſet his heart to this alſo, v. 23. becauſe the Magicians did the ſame things alſo by their enchantments. Then comes the plague of the Frogs on him, Exod. 8. 4. and into the King's chamber, ſaith the Pſalmiſt; and to deliver him from them he calls for Moſes, and promiſes fair, ver. 8. and Moſes to work ſome good upon him bids him chooſe his time when, ver. 9. and it ſhould be done for him, that thou mayeſt know that there is none like unto the Lord our God, ver. 10. But this had no effect on him neither, for when he ſaw there was reſpite, not yet diſcerning God's purpoſe of vengeance on him for his contumacy, he hardned his heart. Whereupon ſaith * Kimchi, that God hardens hearts by concealing his counſels of judgment from them, as in Pharaoh and Sihon; and it is *S. Baſil's obſervation, that Θεοῦ μακροθυμία σκληροκαρδίας αἰτία, God's long-ſuffering, giving him reſpite, was the cauſe, or occaſion, of his obduration of heart, He hardned his heart, and harkned not, v. 15. And this was a third wilful act of his own obduration, agreeable to what God had foretold of him, c. 3.19. as the Lord had ſaid. Then comes the plague of Lice, v. 17. and the Magicians are poſed with that, and confeſs the finger of God; and yet for all this his heart was hardned, or hardned its ſelf, ver. 19. and he harkned not, as the Lord had ſaid. Then, Fifthly, comes a ſwarm of flies, and with it a ſign, as well as a miraculous puniſhment, no flies ſwarming in Goſhen, but in all the land of Egypt beſides, by the diviſion and particularity of the puniſhment, to make him ſenſible of his ſin, to the end that he might know, v. 22. on purpoſe to ſoften his heart. By this Pharaoh was wrought on a little, and gives leave firſt, that they ſhould ſacrifice, then that they ſhould go into the wilderneſs, only not very far away, Exod. 10. 28. and upon this promiſe Moſes will intreat for him, v. 29. But ſeeing Pharaoh had already hardned his heart four times, and at one of thoſe times over and above dealt falſly, promiſed fair, ch. 8. 8. and brake his promiſe, therefore now after this fifth judgment, tho' Moſes promiſe, to pray upon his promiſe to mend, yet he doth it with a particular admonition or warning, more then any time before, But let not Pharaoh deal deceitfully any more, v. 29. intimating that if he did, it would be worſe with him then before; and yet v. 32. as ſoon as the judgment was removed, Pharaoh hardned his heart, בפעם הזאת, this turn, this time alſo. Upon this God ſends the ſixth plague, that of Murrain upon all the Cattle of Egypt, c. 9. 6. and the heart of Pharaoh was hardned, v. 7. and ſo ſtill, all this while, for theſe ſix judgments together, tho' Pharaoh were obdurate, yet this was not God's hardning his heart, but Pharaoh hardens his own heart, and will not let Iſrael go, as the Lord commanded. Upon this God ſends another judgment, that of Boils and Blanes, v. 10. and then 'tis ſaid in a new ſtyle, The Lord hardned Pharaoh's heart, v. 12. which as it was the very time at firſt referred to by the prediction of God to Moſes, ch. 4.21. ſo was it the judgment implicitly threatned in that ſpecial warning, c. 8. 29. and this God never did till then; and therefore as after that warning 'twas ſaid, that Pharaoh hardned his heart this time alſo, ſo 'tis here ſaid, v. 14. that this time, this turn, now, tho' not before, God would pour out all his plagues upon his heart, viz. this obduration, or the effects of it. Upon which follows that paſſage wherein our common tranſlation hath ſo much miſtaken, ch. 9. 14, 15. not, as we read, For now I will ſtretch out my hand, that I may ſmite thee and thy people with the peſtilence, for the event proves there was no ſuch matter, Pharaoh was not ſmitten with the Peſtilence, nor cut off by that means, but drowned in the Red-ſea, ſome time after; but thus, And, or, For now I had ſent, or ſtretched out my hand, and I had ſmitten thee and thy people with the peſtilence, and thou hadſt been cut off from the earth. It is שלחתי in the preter tenſe, ſent, or had ſent, as Mr. Aynſworth confeſſes, and the learned Paulus Fagius out of the Chaldee Paraphraſe, Nunc prope erat coram me, ut miſiſſem plagam, & percuſſiſſem te, & deletus eſſes, I was near ſtretching out my hand to have ſent the plague, and have ſtruck thee, and thou hadſt been blotted out, referring probably to the plague of the Murrain at the beginning of the chapter (called דבר both here, and v. 3. and that falling on the cattel might have fallen on him and the people alſo) or elſe to the Boyls, v. 12. which might be plague-ſwellings, and ſo proper enough to have cut him off: But (not, And) in very deed for this cauſe I have made thee ſtand, kept thee alive, to ſhew, or make to be ſeen, (ſo הראתך literally ſignifies) my power in thee, as when, ſaith * Chryſoſtom, a man condemned to death is cut up, and anatomized alive, that others may be inſtructed and benefited by that diſſection. By this then 'tis viſible, what was the point of time wherein 'tis truly ſaid of God, that he hardned Pharaoh's heart; then when 'tis ſaid he kept him alive, that is, after the ſixth judgment, and a ſpecial warning before that, both contemned by Pharaoh, when he had filled up the meaſure of his obduration, and in ordinary courſe was to be cut off by death: and ſo 'tis here added in reference to this example of Pharaoh, v. 22. God willing to ſhew his wrath, and make his power to be known (to other men that might ſee or hear of this) endured with much long-ſuffering the veſſels of wrath fitted to deſtruction; which notes that he was by himſelf fitted to deſtruction, when God thus reprieved him, at which time alſo 'tis ſaid that he, that is, God hardned his heart. By this obſervation of the time when God hardned Pharaoh, not till after his hardning his own heart ſix times againſt God's ſigns and judgments, will appear what this hardning ſignifies, the total withdrawing of Gods grace of repentance from him, in the ſame manner, as when one is caſt into hell, which Pharaoh at that time had been, had it not been more for God's glory to continue him alive a while, in that deſperate irreverſible condition, which ſure was no whit worſe to him, but ſomewhat better and more deſirable, then to have been adjudged to thoſe flames all that time. To this may be added what the Greek Fathers obſerves, that God's giving him reſpite, removing his puniſhments, was all that God poſitively did toward the hardning of him (as ſaith Theophylact, when a Maſter forbears to puniſh a wicked ſervant, παροξύτερον αὐτὸν ἐργάζεται, he makes him much more wicked) as on the other ſide the great mercy of reforming ſinners lives, is moſt effectually wrought by chaſtiſements. See Origen Philocal. c. 26. This was a notable, and withal (as far as we find in Scripture) a ſingular example of God's dealing with an impenitent, that had filled up his meaſure, keeping him alive, but without all grace, and conſequent poſſibility of amending. And by this example appears, how juſtly God might now do the like to the Jews of that age (if ſo he pleaſed) thoſe who, contrary to all his mercies and long ſuffering, continued obſtinate, reſiſted all God's Methods by Prophets, by Chriſt himſelf, by the Apoſtles, teſtifying the Reſurrection (and giving them a ſpecial warning what would befal them if they now continued obſtinate, Acts 28. 28.) and now are juſtly left to themſelves, the Goſpel taken from them, and preached to the Gentiles, and this upon ends of infinite Wiſdom; Firſt, in Mercy to them (above the proportion of that to Pharaoh) that the Gentiles coming in might ſtir them up to Emulation, and ſo, if 'twere poſſible, work upon them; and Secondly, That if this alſo prevailed not, God might be Glorified in their Deſtruction, that as Pharaoh by purſuing the Iſraelites after this, came to that moſt remarkable, illuſtrious Deſtruction in the Red Sea, ſo theſe hardned Jews (perſecuting the Orthodox Chriſtians) and all the falſe impious Profeſſors joyning with them herein, might be involved in one common Deſtruction, viz. that by Titus and the Roman Ea-

k. Λόγον Συντελῶν γὰρ Συντέμνων

V. 28. For he will finiſh —] This verſe is cited out of Iſaiah, c. 10. 22. where the Greek reads it juſt as 'tis in the ordinary Copies here, only leaving out the γὰρ for, and inſtead of ὅτι τὴν γῆς, on the land, ἐν τῇ οἰκουμένῃ ὅλῃ, on the whole world. As for the γὰρ that is here, it cannot well accord with the ὅτι following, unleſs the ὅτι be taken in another ſenſe, for an Expletive, or ſcilicet, not a cauſal. But the truth is, the ordinary reading here, beginning with λόγον γὰρ, ſeems to be the true one ſo far, but in the proceſs of it to have ſome words put in out of the Septuagint, viz. ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ ὅτι λόγον Συντετμημένον. For without thoſe the King's MS. reads it perſpicuouſly thus, λόγον γὰρ Συντελῶν καὶ Συντέμνων ποιήσει Κύριος ἐπὶ τὴν γῆς, For the Lord ſhall do upon the land, perfecting and cutting ſhort the account (that is, ſhall perfect and cut ſhort) or, the Lord ſhall make up an account, perfecting and cutting it ſhort upon the Land. Where the uſe of λόγος for an account, is agreeable to what was obſerved, c. 3. l. and Συντελεῖν and Συντέμνειν λόγον is upon the ballancing of accounts, (receits on one ſide, and expences on the other) to cut off one from the other, and to ſet down the remainder, which is ordinarily (in a ſteward's account) a very contemptible low ſum; and ſo is it, that the Prophets call שריד a remnant, ἐγκατάλειμμα, that which remains of a far greater ſum, and ſo is fit to denote that ſmall number of the Jews which received the faith of Chriſt (at the preaching of the Goſpel then unto them) in proportion to, and compariſon with the far greater number that ſtood out againſt it. So c. 11. 4. out of 1 Kings 19. 18. κατέλιπον ἐμαυτῷ, I have left, or reſerved, to my ſelf 7000 men, &c. And accordingly here, v. 27. they that thus believe are called κατάλειμμα, a remainder, and generally in the Prophets are expreſs'd by that and the like words, fetch'd from this Metaphor of accounts.

Ἐγκατάλειμμα

l. 30. Attained to] Three words there are here together, διώκειν, καταλαμβάνειν, φθάνειν, to follow after, to attain, to be foremoſt, which are all agoniſtical, referring to the cuſtoms of the Grecian exerciſes in their Olympian, Nemæan, Iſthmian, Pythian Games, which are often alluded to in theſe Epiſtles. Five of theſe Games there were, Cuffing, Wreſtling, Running, Coiting, and Leaping. That of running, δρόμος or ποδωκεία (in reference to which in Homer Achilles, is ſo conſtantly called πόδας ὠκὺς, ſwift-footed, to denote his excellence above all in that kind of exerciſe) is here ſpecified by διώκειν, purſuing, or ſtriving to overtake, as any did in that exerciſe, when he was behind another. In this, as in the other, there was an ἆθλον or βραβεῖον, a reward or prize propoſed to the Racers, which he that came firſt to the goale was by the βραβευτὴς or judge adjudged to have, and it was ordinarily a Crown of leaves, called therefore στέφανος φθαρτὸς, a fading crown, 1 Cor. 9. 25. and this generally ſet over the goal, that he that came thither foremoſt might catch it off, and carry it away with him, but ſo, as that the judgment of the Ἑλλανοδίκαι, Judges of the Game did firſt intervene: For ſo ſaith Ælian, Var. Hiſt. l. 9. c. 31. of the Conqueror, ἀπιὼν πρὸς τοὺς Ἑλλανοδίκας ἵνα λάβῃ τὸ στέφανον, going to the judges of the game that he might receive the crown. And this is called here καταλαμβάνειν, to attain, 1 Tim. 2. 12. ἐπιλαμβάνειν, and λαμβάνειν to apprehend and receive, 1 Cor. 9. 24. which Plutarch calls καθελεῖν τὸ στέφανον κρεμάμενον, to catch the crown that hangs over the goale, from whence the Conquerors are called ἀθλοφόροι, that bear away the reward. Then for φθάνειν, to be foremoſt, that is, to conquer in this race, to come foremoſt thither, according to that of Plutarch, τὸ νικᾶν τοῦ φθάσαι ἐστὶ, the victory is his that comes firſt. So is the word uſed Phil. 1. 16. and is to get before other men, ſo that (as to the Victory) the prize ſhall belong to him. Juſtification then, the approbation and mercy of God, was the prize or βραβεῖον that all ran for, Jews and Gentiles, ver. 30. 31. but the Jews running for it, or purſuing it by a wrong rule, or νόμος, viz. by that of the external, legal performances, did not get foremoſt thither, nor conſequently had the Reward, but the Gentiles had the advantage of them, and ſo got it. Where of the Jews 'tis ſaid particularly, that they met with a block in the way, ſtumbled and fell at that, as racers ſometimes do, and by that means utterly miſcarried.

V. 33. Shall not be aſhamed] The Hebrew in Iſa. 28. 16. read יחיש, make haſte, but the Greek are thought to have read יבוש; which ſignifies moſt obviouſly erubuerunt. So Capellus citeth it as the opinion of a learned man, and ſo Grotius's Notes have it. But Mr. Pocock ſeems to have hit upon the right (and then there is no need of that conjecture) that the Hebrew חוש had anciently three ſignifications of ſome affinity one with another; which are all retained in the Arabick Hauſh and Hiſh which anſwers it; 1. to make haſte, 2. to fear, 3. to be aſhamed: and it may well be here uſed in that ſenſe that comprehends all three; for he that is in a fright or conſternation turns this way and that way haſtily, and is in confuſion of face or ſhame. In the firſt of theſe ſenſes the Syriack Interpreter, and Chaldee Paraphraſt underſtood it; the former read לא נרחל he ſhall not fear, the latter לא יורעעון they ſhall not be troubled, or in commotion; in the ſecond the Vulgar, non feſtinet, ſhall not make haſte; in the third the Greek (as alſo the Arabick) οὐ καταισχυνθῇ, he ſhall not be aſhamed: and this laſt is here made uſe of by the Apoſtle, οὐ καταισχυνθήσεται, and ſo 1 Pet. 2. 6. where the Syriack and Arabick, and Vulgar are all to the ſame purpoſe. And this is capable of a double ſenſe, either as ſhame ſignifies baſhfulneſs, inconfidence, which keeps us from confeſſing of Chriſt, and ſo οὐ καταισχυνθήσεται is, he will never be cowardly, or baſhful, he will boldly and confidently confeſs Chriſt; or elſe it may ſignify being put to ſhame, as any man is that finds himſelf deceived, that hath miſcarried in a matter on which he hath depended, and ſo it belongs to Chriſt's not forſaking him, οὐ καταισχυνθήσεται, he ſhall never be deſtituted by Chriſt, never miſcarry or be diſappointed in that hope which he hath repoſed in him: and ſo it will moſt fitly be rendred in all the three places, here in oppoſition to the fate of unbelievers, they ſhall bruiſe themſelves at this ſtone, be the worſe for Chriſt, but the believers ſhall be ſure never to be fruſtrated in his expectation of all good from him. So c. 10. 11. as a proof that a man is juſtified by faith, ver. 10. this teſtimony is produced, he that believeth ſhall not be aſhamed. And ſo the word ſignifies, c. 5. 5. Hope maketh not aſhamed, the Chriſtian's hope will never miſcarry; he ſhall never be in danger to fail in his truſt repoſed in Chriſt; and ſo in St. Peter, it is as a demonſtration of the preciouſneſs of that ſtone, that whoſoever depends on it, it will never fail him; he ſhall never miſcarry that lays all his weight on that foundation.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. X.

1. And as before c. 9. 1. ſo now again I muſt confeſs to you, (my brethren, the Chriſtian Jews) that whatever the Jews believe of me, as though I were their enemy, there is none more paſſionately and tenderly affected to them, then I am. From this it is, and nothing elſe, that I do ſo heartily deſire and pray to God for all that people, that they may timely believe and turn unto Chriſt, that ſo they may be delivered at this time and eſcape, (and not be involved in the fatal deſtruction that attends that people) and withal be ſaved eternally by ſo doing.

a. 1 BRethren, * My heart's deſire and prayer to God for Iſrael is, that they might † be [a] ſaved.]

* the good pleaſure of my heart, ἡ εὐδοκία τῆς ἐμῆς καρδίας † eſcape

2. For I muſt teſtify this of them, that they are, very many of them, great zelots for their law, as that which is commanded them by God, and ſo in their way zealous to have God obeyed; but for want of true knowledge, which the Goſpel offers them, and they will not receive, they are miſtaken in their zeal, are not ſuch zelots as they ought to be.

2. For I bear them record, that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.]

3. For they being not ſatisfied in the truth of what we teach them, particularly of God's way of juſtifying men under the Goſpel, and deſiring and intending to be juſtified by the Law, their external legal obſervances, they will not part with them, and thereupon have refuſed that Evangelical way of juſtification, which is ſo much better then that.

3. For they being ignorant of God's righteouſneſs, and going about to eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſs, have not ſubmitted themſelves unto the righteouſneſs of God.]

4. For Chriſt hath conſummated and reformed the Law of Moſes, requiring internal inſtead of external obediences, and thoſe that believe and obey him, tho' they do not perform the Law.

4. For Chriſt is the end of the Law for righteouſneſs to every one that believeth.]

5. For Lev. 18. 5. the way of being juſtified under the Law is ſet down by Moſes, to be a task of ſtrict performances required of us, that he that will be juſtified by that, muſt never offend againſt any part of it, for upon thoſe terms only juſtification is promiſed there, and he that offends once is guilty of all, (that is, hath loſt all pretence of juſtification by that) and this every man doth, and ſo this is not ſo excellent and happy a courſe, that ye ſhould be ſo fond of it, and withal it conſiſteth of a great burthen of ceremonies and external performances, all required to juſtify a Jew, before the coming of Chriſt; and Chriſt that requires the ſubſtantial duties requir'd by thoſe ſhadows, hath done you no injury to free you from them.

5. For Moſes deſcribeth the righteouſneſs which is of the Law, that the man which [b] doth thoſe things ſhall live by them.]

6,7. But that juſtification which is to be had by the Goſpel is not on ſuch ſtrict difficult terms, above the reach of our knowledge or our ſtrength; that deſcription of the perſpicuity and intelligibleneſs of Gods commands (given then by Moſes to the people, and ſetting life and death before them) Deut. 30. 12. being very fitly appliable to the Goſpel, viz. that it is neither obſcure, nor ſuch as depends on any difficult performances of ours, but on that which Chriſt hath done for us: The Chriſt by which we are to be juſtified, is not by any pains of ours to be fetched down from heaven, he came down himſelf and dyed for us; nor is he to be fetched out of the abyſs by us, he is riſen again of himſelf for our juſtification (to obtain pardon for our paſt ſins, upon our reformation for the future, and to give us grace to do ſo:) and theſe two being the two main parts of our faith, ſignify this truth, that all that is required of us, is by him made very plain to be known, and poſſible to be performed, all the difficult part is performed by himſelf, and the eaſie required of us.

c. 6. But the righteouſneſs which is of faith ſpeaketh on this wiſe. Say not in thine heart, Who ſhall aſcend into heaven? that is to [c] bring Chriſt down from above:

7. Or, Who ſhall deſcend into the deep? that is, to bring up Chriſt again from the dead.]

8. But thus the Evangelical juſtification is deſcribed, That which is required of us toward it is within the reach of any ordinary underſtanding to conceive, being proclaimed by us to all that will believe, and within the compaſs of a Chriſtian to perform thro' Chriſt that ſtrengthens him. A ſort of precepts ſo agreeable to humane nature, and ſo familiar to our knowledge, that thou mayeſt without much pains learn them thy ſelf, and teach them others, and (for thy practice) with pleaſure and felicity perform them; which character cannot ſo fitly belong to any thing as to the way of faith and new obedience ſet down in the Goſpel, which we now preach unto you in oppoſition to that other of legal performances, which had ſo much of unprofitable weight, and even impoſſibility in it.

d. 8. But what ſaith it? [d] The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that is the word of faith which we preach:]

9. And this but of two parts, as it were, one for thy mouth, the other for thy heart, v. 8. For thy mouth, that if in ſpight of all perſecution and danger, that ſhall attend the profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith, thou ſhall yet venture all, and make profeſſion of it; and in thine heart, as the principle of Chriſtian practice, believe the reſurrection of Chriſt; and conform thy practice to that belief in forſaking of ſin, and ariſing to new life, in imitation of Chriſt's riſing from the grave; thou ſhalt eſcape this huge judgment impendent on the Jews, and withal be juſtified and ſaved eternally.

9. That if thou ſhalt confeſs with thy mouth the Lord Jeſus, and ſhalt believe in thine heart that God hath raiſed him from the dead, thou ſhalt be ſaved.]

10. For the juſtifying faith is only that practical of the heart, which muſt have confeſſion of the mouth go along with it, and that ſhall give you your part in that great delivery (ſee v. 13) and in that eternal reſt hereafter.

10. For with the heart man believeth unto righteouſneſs, and with the mouth confeſſion is made unto ſalvation.]

11. For to that is appliable that of Iſa. 28. 16. made uſe of here, ch. 9. 33. and 1 Pet. 2. that whoſoever believeth on him ſhall be certainly owned and ſaved by him. See note on ch. 9. m.

11. For the Scripture ſaith, Whoſoever believeth on him ſhall not be aſhamed.]

12. And in this 'tis not being circumciſed, or of the ſtock of Abraham, that will do any man any good, or the wanting of it, that will hurt any: There is no difference of Jew or Greek, ſo that one ſhould be more acceptable to God then the other, for he is the common Lord and father of both, abundantly merciful unto all, both Jew and Gentile, that give up their names unto Chriſt ſincerely, live obediently and faithfully in his family.

12. For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek, for * the ſame Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him.]

* he is the ſame Lord of all, rich αὐτὸς κύριος πάντων, πλουτῶν

13. For to theſe times peculiarly belongs that promiſe in Joel 2. 32. (ſee Acts 2. 21.) that when the great calamity befals the Jewiſh nation, and all other confidences fail and prove treacherous, they that ſhould conſtantly confeſs, pray, and adhere to Chriſt, ſhould be delivered from it, and this as a pledge of eternal deliverance, or ſalvation.

13. For whoſoever ſhall call upon the name of the Lord ſhall be ſaved.]

14, 15. But here the Chriſtian Jew objects againſt St. Paul in the name of the unbelievers, that be the condition of Evangelical juſtification never ſo eaſy (but the acknowledging of Chriſt, giving up their names to him) yet how is that believing poſſible for thoſe that hear not of him, which 'tis clear they cannot do, except they be preached to? and when the Apoſtles have left the Jews and gone to the Gentiles, and yet there is no preaching to be had, but by them, either perſonally, or by ſome ſent by them, how now ſhall the Jews do? how is it poſſible for them to believe? or well done of the Apoſtles thus to leave them?

14. How then ſhall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how ſhall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how ſhall they hear without a preacher?

15. And how ſhall they preach, except they be ſent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the Goſpel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things?]

16. But

16. But they have not all obeyed the Goſpel: for Eſaias ſaith, Lord, who hath believed our report?]

16. This objection may eaſily be anſwered, that if all to whom the Goſpel hath been preached, had received and obeyed it, there would have been no place for this objection of the Jews. For the Goſpel hath been preached thro' all the cities of Jewry before the Apoſtles left them, but the only fault is, they have not believed it, nay not any conſiderable number of them; and that was foretold by Iſaiah, that when the Jews ſhould have the Goſpel preached to them, they ſhould generally give no heed to it.

17. * So then, faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.

* Faith indeed, Αρα μεν πιστις

18. But I ſay, Have they not heard? yes verily. e Their † ſound went out into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world.]

† voice is gone out into all the land

17, 18. And therefore altho' it be moſt willingly granted, that preaching is neceſſary to receive the faith, and that none can preach but he that is ſent and appointed by God, (ſee Note on John 10. 34.) that mediately or immediately hath received commiſſion from heaven; yet this objection is of no force, for the Jews, through all their cities have certainly had the Goſpel preached to them by the Apoſtles, according to Chriſt's command, that they ſhould go go over all the cities of Jewry, Acts 1. 8. before they went to the Gentiles: and to this may be accommodated that of Pſ. 19. 4. as if by that were foretold, firſt, that their preaching ſhould be afforded to all the land of Judea, and then, that they ſhould proceed and preach alſo to the whole world beſide.

19. But I ſay, Did not Iſrael know? Firſt Moſes ſaith, I will provoke you to jealouſy by them that are no people, and by a fooliſh nation will I anger you.]

19. On the other ſide can the Jews be ignorant, that upon their provoking God, God will caſt them off, and prefer even the heathen before them? 'Tis impoſſible they ſhould be ignorant, if Moſes or the Prophets writings be heeded by them: For of them firſt Moſes ſaith, Deut. 32. 21. by way of prediction of theſe (as ſtory of thoſe) times, they have moved me to jealouſy with that which is not God, angred and provoked me by preferring Idols before me, and I will make them jealous with a no-nation, give the Philiſtine victory over them then, and now take the Gentiles, and prefer them before them, and make them angry, (as now they are) to ſee them taken in their ſtead, more favoured by God then they.

20. But Iſaias is very bold, and ſaith, I was found of them that ſought me not: I was made manifeſt to them that f * asked not after me.]

* inquired not of me

20. Then by Iſaiah 65. 1. who ſaith in plain words that the heathen world, that was far from thinking of ſuch a dignity, ſhould have the Goſpel preached to them, and receive it.

f.

21. But to Iſrael he ſaith, All day long I have ſtretched forth my hands unto a diſobedient and gain-ſaying people.]

21. Whereas v. 2. he ſaith to the Jews, that tho' he ſhall moſt diligently have called and ſent Apoſtles unto them, never giving over, till their meaſure of iniquities being filled up, their deſtruction was now at the door, as a night at the end of a long day, yet they will continue refractory, and not believe the Goſpel of Chriſt; which ſure is a teſtimony both that the Jews have had, and rejected it, and that this dealing of the Apoſtles was in all reaſon to be expected by them.

Annotations on Chap. X.

a. Σωτηρία

V. 1. Saved] According to the notion of σώζεσθαι, to be ſaved, or delivered, Luke 13. 23. Note b. σωτηρία may here moſt probably ſignify, the Jews converting to the faith of Chriſt, eſcaping out of that deluge of unbelief and obduration which had overwhelmed that people; for ſo it ſeems to be interpreted, v. 3. by the contrary of not ſubmitting to the righteouſneſs of Chriſt. So c. 11. 11. ἡ σωτηρία τοῖς ἔθνεσι, ſalvation to the Gentiles, is the Gentiles coming in and believing on Chriſt, as σώζειν v. 14. So καταρτίζεσθαι σωτηρίαν, Phil. 2. 12. is to complete, or perfect their Chriſtian courſe, in reſolving, and acting accordingly (proportionably to God's giving them to will and to do, v. 13.) So Rom. 1. 16. where the Goſpel is ſaid to be the power of God unto ſalvation, to Jew and Gentile, and that proved by that ſaying of Habakkuk, the juſt ſhall live by faith, that is, return from captivity, and live peaceably, and that as an emblem of his returning from ſin and living an holy life, it will be moſt reaſonable ſo to interpret ſalvation, as may beſt agree with that notion of life, that is, for repentance and reformation. So perhaps μετάνοια εἰς σωτηρίαν, 2 Cor. 7. 10. will denote ſuch a repentance or change that proceeds to eſcaping out of, and forſaking the ſins of the former life. So 2 Pet. 3. 15. where he bids them count that the longanimity of God is σωτηρία, ſalvation, that is, that God's deferring the puniſhment of the Jews ſo long after the crucifying of Chriſt was on purpoſe that by the preaching of the Apoſtles over all the cities of Jewry, they might yet timely return, and repent, and believe on him, & ſo eſcape in that great approaching deſtruction. Yet this ſtill not excluding but including alſo the reward of our faith, the eternal bliſs in heaven. Of another acception of σωτηρία, ſee Note on c. 13. c.

b. Ποιήσας αὐτὰ

V. 5. Doth theſe things] Theſe things ſignify the ſeveral branches of the Judaical Law, which being required by Moſes under ſevere penalties of exciſion to thoſe that contemned or deſpiſed them, & all the promiſes of long life in Canaan, depending on the obſervance of them, and the Law affording no place of repentance or pardon for any preſumptuous ſin committed againſt that Law, it is from thence conſequent, that he that lives not in all thoſe commands to do them, could not have life by them, even that temporal life, or whatever elſe were typically contained or included in that: And accordingly St. Paul concludes, Gal. 3. 10. that here was no life to be had by the Law, and indeed nothing but a curſe; for that it was alſo written, Deut. 27. 26. Curſed is every one that continues not in all things that are written in the book of the Law to do them; and only he that doth them ſhall live in them, v. 12. All this while ſuppoſing that no man did all his life thus do, or continue, ſo as not to incur this curſe. And herein doth the difference of the Law and the Goſpel conſiſt, that the Law promiſes life only upon doing all that was required of them to do, and pronounced a curſe to them that did not continue in all; he that wilfully offended in one, was guilty of all, that is, was involved as irreverſibly under the curſe for that one breach, according to that covenant, as if he had broken all, & repentance or reformation would not relieve him: But now under the Goſpel the condition was changed; firſt, many things were not required at all now, which were then enacted under the higheſt penalty, as Circumciſion, &c. only the inward purity is now called for, which had always been typified by that; 2*ly*, place was allowed for repentance, & by the ſatisfaction of Chriſt, ſure mercy and pardon for the ſinner, whatſoever his ſins were, upon his return to new life; and for frailties and weakneſſes, for which only there were ſacrifices admitted under the Law, now there was without thoſe ſacrifices free pardon to be had for all thoſe that ſincerely obey'd Chriſt, and laid hold on his ſacrifice for their expiation. And ſo faith is ſaid to be the condition of our juſtification, and not the doing theſe things; the law of faith, not of works, that by which the Chriſtian muſt live.

V. 6. Bring Chriſt down] The two phraſes here uſed of going up to heaven, or deſcending into the deep, or abyſs, are certainly proverbial phraſes to ſignify the doing, or attempting to do, ſome hard, impoſſible thing; and conſequently to ſay in the heart, Who ſhall do this? is to be preſcribed ſome hard impoſſible task, that neither by our ſelves, nor by any body elſe we know how to ſet about, as they that are at their wits end, (know not which way to turn themſelves) are wont to cry out, or ſay within themſelves, Who ſhall do it for them? Theſe phraſes had been of old uſed by Moſes in this ſenſe, Deut. 30. 12. For this commandment which I command thee this day is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off. Is it not in heaven, that thou ſhouldſt ſay, Who ſhall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may ſee it and do it? Neither is it beyond the ſea, that thou ſhouldſt ſay, Who ſhall go over the ſea

c. Ἀναβήσεται τις εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν ἢ κ.τ.λ.

for

for us, and bring it unto us, &c. Which words being uſed by Moſes to expreſs the eaſineſs and readineſs of the way which the Jews had to know their duty, and to perform it, are here by the Apoſtle accommodated to expreſs the eaſineſs of the Goſpel condi. on above that of the Moſaical Law. The righteouſneſs which is of faith ſaith thus, that is, this is the ſtyle or language of the Evangelical Law, the law of faith, v. 8. Say not in thy heart, that is, the Chriſtian hath no need to ſay, or think within himſelf Who ſhall go up to heaven? that is, that he hath any weighty, impoſſible condition required of him. This part of the words of Moſes, the Apoſtle, as in a parentheſis, applies to one of the moſt difficult things on which our ſalvation depends, viz. Chriſt coming down from heaven to earth. This indeed if it were required of us to contribute any thing toward it, would be a weighty task for us; but when Chriſt hath himſelf done it for us without any contribution of ours, this is an evidence, of the eaſineſs of the Chriſtians task. As for the ſecond part of the words in Moſes, the Apoſtle reads them with ſome change, not πέραν τ θαλάσσης, over the ſea, as the Septuagint now reads it, but τίς καταβήσεται εἰς τὸν ἄβυσσον, who ſhall go down into the abyſs? which variety of readings may poſſibly be reconciled by the various ſignification, and uſe of the Hebrew prepoſitions. And accordingly that which is here uſed by S. Paul, will be found to agree to the paraphraſe which we have in the Jeruſalem Targum, in theſe words, Utinam eſſet nobis aliquis Propheta, Jone ſimilis, qui in profundum maris magni deſcenderet, Would we had ſome Prophet, like Jonas, that might deſcend into the deep of the great ſea, and bring it up to us. And this ſeems to be the ground of St. Paul's application, which here follows, that is, to bring Chriſt from the dead, that deſcending of Jonah into the deep (being devoured firſt, and then vomited up by the whale on drie land) being by Chriſt himſelf made the preſignification of his death and reſurrection. And ſo this again will be the meaning of the ſecond part of the ſpeech, the ſtyle, or language of the Goſpel, the reſurrection of Chriſt from the dead, the great ingredient in our Chriſtian religion, and which tends ſo much to our juſtification, c. 4. 25. is that to which we contributed nothing our ſelves, but was wrought for us by the power of Chriſt: And as it follows here v. 9. our believing it now it is done, and abundantly teſtified to us, is the great fundamental act of faith required of us, and that is no very weighty task to be required of us.

Καταγαγεῖν Χριστὸν

Ἀναγαγεῖν Χριστὸν

V. 8. The word is nigh thee] The word ἐγγὺς nigh, is beſt to be underſtood by the oppoſition of it to hidden, and far off, Deut. 3. 11. Where the Hebrew for hidden is by the Septuagint rendred βαρύοχθον overweighty and heavy, and in other places ἀδύνατον impoſſible. So Gen. 18. 14. (and from thence tranſcribed, Luke 1. 37.) οὐκ ἀδυνατήσει πᾶν ῥῆμα, no word, or thing, ſhall be impoſſible, this word is uſed in the original. This is there farther expreſſed by thoſe proverbial ſpeeches of being in heaven, or (beyond) or in the bottom of the ſea, and being fetch'd from thence, all noting ſome ſpecial difficulty, or impoſſibility, above our knowledge, far off, removed out of our reach; and ſo the ἐγγὺς nigh muſt be feaſible and eaſy, to be known firſt, and then to be practiſed, in thy mouth, and in thy heart (the Septuagint adds καὶ ἐν χερσί σου, and in thine hands) that thou mayeſt do it.

d. Ἐγγύς σου τὸ ῥῆμα

V. 18. Their ſound] This place is cited out of the Pſalmiſt, Pſ. 19. 4. but ſo as it lies in the Greek tranſlation, not as in the Original; for inſtead of their voice here, 'tis rendred out of the Hebrew their line, or rule, or direction, for ſo the word קוים there ſignifies. The Pſalmiſt there ſpeaks of the heavens, v. 1. The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament ſheweth his handy work, and ſo on v. 2, 3. and then v. 4. their line is gone out through the land, and their words unto the end of the world, that is, in a poetical ſtyle, (wherein the Pſalms are written) tho' the heavens ſtand in one place keeping one conſtant motion, equidiſtant from the earth, yet the commands and words thereof are heard every where, that is, their vertue and efficacy are underſtood and admired by all. Here the Septuagint ſeem to have read קולם their voice, for קים their line, and ſo render it ὁ φθόγγος αὐτῶν nothing different from the meaning of it, as appears by the τὰ ῥήματα αὐτῶν their words, that immediately follow, for by that 'tis plain that קים ſignifies commands (as it were) or rule, or direction delivered by them, ſuch as may agree with words, and that is all one with קולם their voice. Others rather think that the Septuagint, reſpecting the ſenſe and not the word, did thus render it paraphraſtically. But Mr. Pocock conceives from the Arabick uſe of the word, that the very קוה was antiently uſed by the Hebrews for vociferation. See his Miſcellan. p. 48. And St. Paul according to his manner, writing to thoſe that uſed the Greek Bible in their aſſemblies, recites it as he finds it there, and applies it by accommodation (frequent in theſe writers) to the Goſpel that voice, or doctrine, of heaven, that is, of God himſelf; and when he ſaith it was gone out εἰς πᾶσαν γῆν, into all the land, that ſeems (as frequently it doth) to belong to the land of Judea, as the τὰ πέρατα τ γῆς, the bounds, or extreme parts of the earth may well be the Gentile world; and this to convince the Jews (and repel their objection, ſuppoſed v. 14. and now anſwered) that the Goſpel was amply revealed to the Jews, both within and without Judea, whereſoever they were in the Gentile cities: for being by the Apoſtles preached not only in Jeruſalem, and over all the cities of Jewry, but alſo in Cæſarea, Joppa, Antioch, Epheſus, Corinth, Philippi, Theſſalonica, Galatia, Laodicea, and Rome it ſelf, and firſt to the Jews in every of thoſe places, it muſt needs, as the influences of the heavens, to which the compariſon is here made, be dilated and extended to all other parts, wherever the Jews were diſperſed; ſo that the Apoſtle may (as he doth) appeal to their own conſciences (but I ſay, Have they not heard?) whether they did not believe that the Jews had univerſally heard of it, and conſequently did out of obſtinacy reject, and not remain ignorant of it, which was a full anſwer to their objection of, how ſhall they hear without a preacher? and an account of the reaſonableneſs of the Apoſtles dealings in forſaking of them that had been thus obdurate. But withal it may denote, that having begun, and ſo fully performed their duty to them, it is now by conſequence to be expected from them, that they ſhould lift up their voices to the Gentile people themſelves, and preach the Goſpel to them alſo over all the world.

V. 20. Asked not after me] That ἐπεζητοῦσι muſt here be rendred enquiring of, not after, making God the terminus, or perſon to whom the addreſs is made, and not the matter of their queſtion, whom they asked, not concerning whom, appeareth 1. by the nature of the word, which literally denotes it: and 2. by the uſe of it in all other places; ſo Mat. 12. 10. ἐπηρώτησαν αὐτὸν, They asked him, ſaying, Is it lawful, &c. c. 16. 1. ἐπηρώτησαν αὐτὸν σημεῖον, they asked him a ſign, and Mark 11. 29. ἐπερωτήσω ὑμᾶς, I will ask you a queſtion, and ἐπερωτηθεὶς, being asked, Luke 17. 20. and John 18. 21. Τί με ἐρωτᾷς; ἐπερώτησον τοὺς ἀκηκοότας, Why askeſt thou me? ask them that heard: and alſo 3*ly*, by the Hebrew, which from Iſa. 65. 1. is rendred by it, for that is הנדרשתי from דרש quæſivit, conſuluit, as when one conſulteth the Oracle, asks counſel of God. Agreeable to which is that of Heſychius, Ἐξωτησόμεθα, πυθόμεθα, rendring it by that word which is ordinarily uſed for conſulting the oracle, & from which Apollo, that gave the oracles, is called Pytho. For ſo the place belonged in that Prophet to thoſe that were delivered out of Antiochus's hands, at a time when they deſpaired, and hoped not for ſuch a mercy; and that deſpairing, or not hoping of theirs, is there expreſs'd by not ſeeking of God, nor conſulting him, nor applying themſelves to him at all for that purpoſe. So Hoſ. 4. 12. where we read, my people ask counſel of their ſtocks, the Greek hath ἐν συμβόλοις αὐτῶν ἐπηρώτων, they asked at their images. By this, I concive, may be diſcerned diſcerned the meaning of that phraſe, 1 Pet. 3. 21. where Baptiſm is ſaid to be ἡ ἀγαθῆς συνειδήσεως ἐπερώτημα εἰς Θεὸν, which is ordinarily rendred, the anſwer of a good conſcience toward God, and otherwiſe, a promiſe, or ſtipulation, or bargain, becauſe thoſe conſiſted, ſaith Theophilus, ἐξ ἐπερωτήσεως καὶ συμφώνε ὑποκείσεως, of a queſtion, and an agreeable anſwer, and were wont to be made in this form by way of anſwer to a queſtion, thus, Spondes? Spondeo, Dabis? Dabo. Doſt thou promiſe? I do promiſe. Wilt thou give? I will: and ſo the Catechumenus, Doſt thou forſake the devil, &c? I do forſake, Πιστεύεις; Πιστεύω, Doſt thou believe? I do believe. This interpretation of ſome learned men depends upon a preſumption, that ἐπερώτημα is an anſwer, not a queſtion; the pretence of which is, becauſe Ἐπερωτῶμαι is rendred by the Gloſſary, promitto, ſpondeo, and Ἐπερωτῶ, ſtipulor, which indeed will reaſonably be admitted by a Metonymie, as in Seneca de beneficiis, interrogatio is uſed for ſtipulatio; and ſo it may be appliable here, becauſe he that thus comes to God or any to deſire directions or counſel from him, is preſumed to promiſe on his part to perform what ſhall be required of him. But then ſtill this ſponſio is not an anſwer, but rather a queſtion, the anſwer being reſponſio a return to this ſponſio, that is, an agreement between parties, σύμφωνος ὑποκείσις in Theophilus; whereas ἐρώτημα and ἐπερώτημα is generally the queſtion, and it is not any more according to Analogy, that it ſhould be the anſwer, then that the Latin inquiro or interrogo ſhould be the anſwering of a queſtion, which we know is only the asking of it. It may, I ſuppoſe, more regularly be rendred, the queſtion, or addreſs of a good conſcience to God, as enquiring ſignifies, in our preſent notion, conſulting with, ſeeking to, asking counſel of God, (as in Dorotheus, διδασκαλ. ε'. οὐδέποτε συνεχώρων λογισμῷ πείθειν ἐμαυτῷ ἀνὰ ἐπερώτησιν, I never permitted my own conceit to perſwade me, without asking ſome others counſel; and ἀπιθάνατε ἐπερωτᾶν ἀδελφοὺς, τὸ μὴ στοιχεῖν ἑαυτοῖς, be careful to ask others counſel, and not to be directed by your ſelves) when the true penitent believer comes to God, as to the oracle, to enquire of him for the whole future life, with a Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? or, Good maſter, what ſhall I do to inherit eternal life? applying himſelf to God for his directions of all his future actions, and that with a ſincere, upright conſcience, reſolving firmly to do what is there required of him; which reſolution of univerſal ſincere obedience is that which is there ſet oppoſite to the βάπτισμα σαρκὸς, the waſhing of the fleſh, ἀπόθεσις ῥύπε, the rinſing of ſullages with the water, which is but the ceremony that ſignified that other, and was not to be thought to avail any, but thoſe that performed what was ſignified by it, any more than the circumciſion of a Jew, without the inward purity. According to this it is, that as Tertullian calls Baptiſm, ſponſio ſalutis, an undertaking of ſalvation, that is, of the way laid down by God to it, l. de Bapt. and l. de Reſur. Carnis, Anima non lavatione ſed reſponſione (I ſuppoſe again it ſhould be read ſponſione) ſancitur, the ſoul receives its ſanction, not by waſhing, but by undertaking (for that is the meaning of ſponſio, and accordingly ſponſores and ſuſceptores are all one; (ſo Cyprian expreſly calls it interrogatio Baptiſmi, Ep. 76, and 80. the asking, or inquiring of Baptiſm. And this is indeed the peculiar nature of Baptiſm, the ceremony of the Chriſtians Proſelytiſm (his initiation and admiſſion into Chriſt's family) which is (according to the nature of the word μαθητεύω) his coming unto God as a diſciple, and accordingly it is μαθητεύσατε βαπτίζοντες, Mat. 28. 19. make diſciples baptizing: Baptiſm is the ceremony of their entrance on diſcipleſhip.

CHAP. XI. Paraphraſe.

1. I Say then, Hath God caſt away his people? God forbid. For I alſo am an Iſraelite of the ſeed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin.]

1. Here it will be objected again, that by this it ſeems to be concluded, that then God hath utterly caſt off the Jews his ancient people, having caſt them off from the preaching of the the Goſpel. To this I anſwer that the objection is utterly cauſleſs and groundleſs, for that the Jews are not utterly caſt off, I my ſelf am a viſible example, who had not only the Goſpel revealed to me from heaven by Chriſt, but am employed as an Apoſtle to preach to others, who yet am an Iſraelite, as lineally diſcended from Abraham by Benjamin, as any can be ſuppoſed to be.

2. God hath not caſt away his people, which he foreknew. Wot ye not what the Scripture ſaith of Elias? how he [a] * maketh interceſſion to God againſt Iſrael, ſaying,

2. God hath according to his threats, Deut. 29. 28. caſt off the rebellious Iſraelites; but thoſe whom he did foreſee to be ſuch, whom he might according to the rules which in the Goſpel he hath preſcribed, approve and love, his honeſt faithful ſervants that have any kind of probity in them, thoſe ſheep that hear his voice he hath not now caſt off, or paſs'd any decree againſt them: of which kind, though they ſeem but few, yet are there not ſo few. In like manner as in the ſtory of Elias, 1 King. 19. 10. when he comes to God and complains of the wickedneſs of that people, their murthering God's prophets, and throwing down his altars (then built by pious men of the ten Tribes to ſerve God with, when they were not permitted to go to Jeruſalem, in which caſe the prohibition of building private altars is by the learned Jews ſaid to have ceaſed, and doing it in ſo univerſal a ſtyle, as if he were the one only pious man left in the land, and that that was the reaſon that they now plotted and attempted to kill him alſo.

4. But what ſaith the anſwer of God unto him? I have reſerved to my ſelf ſeven thouſand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal.]

4. To this complaint he receives anſwer by the voice from heaven, 1 King. 19. 12. in theſe words, I have reſerved, or left for my ſelf out of that deluge of ſin, wherein the ten tribes are involved, or (as the Hebrew may be rendred) I will reſerve a remnant of ſeven thouſand men, which have not, or ſhall not bow the knee to Baal, (as there were ſome that obſerved the Law, and ſo were exempt from the deſtruction wrought on the Jews by Nebuchadnezzar, Ezek. 9. 4.)

5. Even ſo then at this preſent time alſo there * is a remnant according to the election of grace.]

5. So at this ſeaſon ſome, though a few in proportion, have been preſerved, ſuch as, according to the rules of the Goſpel, God hath determined to receive, humble, obedient ſervants of his, which have readily received the faith of Chriſt (anſwerable to thoſe v. 4. that bowed not the knee to Baal) and from their former ſins did now, on Chriſt's call, turn to him, and ſo were capable of that juſtification brought in by Chriſt, which conſiſting in pardon of ſins to all penitent believers, and not in rewarding of works, belongs to thoſe which thus return to him. See note on 1 Pet. 2. 6.

6. And if by grace, then it is no more of works; otherwiſe grace is no more grace:] * But if it be of works, then it is no more grace; otherwiſe work is no more work.

6. And if this means of reſerving of them, and of their eſcaping out of that deluge, were by the mercies of God in Chriſt and their embracing the Goſpel, the only condition required on their part to make them capable of it, then ſure is it not by adhering to the Moſaical performances, nor by ſpecial merit of their own, imputable to themſelves, for then the Goſpel were not the Goſpel.

7. What then? Iſrael hath not obtained that which he ſeeketh for, but the election hath obtained it, and the reſt were blinded.

8. According as it is written, God hath given them the ſpirit * of [b] ſlumber; eyes that they ſhould not ſee, and ears that they ſhould not hear until this day.]

7, 8. The ſhort then is, that the generality of that people have not attained that juſtification that God will crown, but the election, the remnant (ſee note on Luke 13. b. and 1 Pet. 2. c.) that being called by Chriſt did not neglect to make uſe of it, theſe have attained it; but all the reſt, that made not uſe of that grace (reſiſted Chriſt when he was preached to them) theſe have grown obſtinately obſtinately blind, and in them is performed what Iſaiah ch. 29. 10. ſpoke of thoſe who had firſt hardned their hearts againſt God, God gave them up to abſolute obduration, and blindneſs and deafneſs, and ſo they continue unto this day.

that were for their good, their very neceſſary food and refreſhment, ſhould turn to their miſchief; ſo doth the preaching of the Goſpel now to their obduration. As he ſaid that they ſhould be blinded and go ſtooping, not able to look up to heaven; the like is now fallen on the Jews, the preaching of the Goſpel hath been their obduration, they are the worſe, not the better for it, they are blinded and able to ſee nothing of heavenly things.

c 11. But here 'tis again objected, that this doctrine of ours concludes us to think that the Jews are utterly caſt off, by this their not receiving the Goſpel, and that now they are paſt all hope of recovering. To this I anſwer again that this is not our doctrine, or duly concluded from it, but this only, that as by their obſtinacy the Gentiles have received an huge advantage, the Goſpel preached to them by us, when we were driven away by the Jews; ſo the Gentiles receiving the Goſpel hath been made uſe of by the infinite wiſdom of God, to make the Jews jealous and emulous, and troubled to ſee themſelves ſo out-ſtrip'd by thoſe whom they ſo contemned, ſo to make that emulation an inſtrument to bring them in to Chriſt alſo.

12. And if by thus puniſhing of their unbelief and obduration, ſo much advantage have accrued to the Gentiles, and ſo the multitude of the Jewiſh unbelievers hath been the means of converting many heathens; how much more ſhall the addition of the multitude of Jewiſh believers, if they ſhall yet repent and come in, be matter of confirmation of the faith to the Gentiles, and a means to bring them all to receive it, to convert the Gentiles over all the world?

the Jews, and bring ſome of them to repentance and belief in Chriſt.

means of ſending and ſpreading the Goſpel to the Gentiles, and ſo of bringing them into the Church, and obtaining pardon for them upon their repentance, what a miracle of mercy will it be for theſe Jews now to repent, and to be actually re-aſſumed into God's favour, and to receive the faith of Chriſt? Even as great a miracle, as fit to work upon the Gentiles (both to make them all believe on Chriſt, when his crucifiers do ſo, and rejoice at this happy turn) as if they ſhould ſee them raiſed from the dead again.

16. And ſure they are not yet ſo totally rejected, the them that have received the faith, but ſtand zealouſly for their ceremonies of the Moſaical Law, do not thou deſpiſe or reject them for that; or, if thou be apt to do ſo, then for thy humiliation, remember that Abraham being the root from which the Jews naturally ſpring, and the Gentiles only graffed in, you being now but branches at moſt, and not the natural ſeed of Abraham, muſt not think higher of your ſelves than of Abraham, and that natural ſeed of his, all Chriſtian Jews, that lineally deſcend from him, and by being believers partake of his faith alſo as well as of his fleſh. See c. 14. 1.

19. Or if thou that art a Gentile ſhalt, for the magnifying thy ſelf, and deſpiſing the Jew, think fit to pretend that the Jews were rejected on purpoſe that the Gentiles might be taken in their ſtead.

there is little matter of ſecurity or boaſting for them, for 'twas their pride, and contumacy, and infidelity that provoked God (v. 21.) to break them off, and 'tis thy faith, by which thou wert received, and ſtill continueſt in; and if thou become guilty of the ſame ſins, thou art to expect the like fate with them, and therefore art not to boaſt of thy condition (which is quite contrary to the nature of juſtification by faith, for that is not founded in any merit of thine, but only upon the promiſe of God through Chriſt, to accept thee upon thy repentance and ſincere reformation, and practice of Chriſtian virtues, of which humility and charity are the chief, and thoſe moſt contrary to boaſting over, and deſpiſing of other men) but with all humility to work out thine own ſalvation.

ye are in reaſon to expect no leſs ſeverity to you Gentiles, if ye do not obey the Goſpel, and live regularly, according to the dictates of Chriſt.

22. Two things then there are in this matter moſt viſible and remarkable, the abundant kindneſs of God, and withal his ſeverity; ſeverity on the Jews that ſtand out contumaciouſly againſt the faith of Chriſt, but infinite mercy on the Gentiles, if they make that uſe of his mercy afforded them, which is fit, if having received they obey the Goſpel, and walk worthy of it, for otherwiſe they muſt expect ſeverity alſo.

this ſtate of rejection or exciſion, but their wilful continuing in unbelief, which when they break off, God can, and certainly will, receive them in again.

24. For if thou wert * cut out of the Olive-tree, which is wild by nature, and wert graffed † contrary to nature, into a good Olive-tree; how much more ſhall * theſe, which be the natural branches, be graffed into their own Olive-tree?]

24. For if ye Gentiles, which were a kind of wild Olive-branch, were taken off from the wildneſs natural to you, and ingraffed into the ſtock of Abraham, received into the Church, graffed into the ſtock of a good Olive-tree, from which the Jews were cut off, which is not only againſt the cuſtom (ſee note on 1 Cor. 11. f.) of the Jews, grounded on Lev. 19. 19. who uſe not to graff one tree upon another of another kind, but more generally againſt what could be expected in reaſon, and againſt all laws of graffing (for, Firſt, the good Olive being the fatteſt of trees, admits no ingrafting, graffs will not proſper in any fat tree or ſtock, no Olive-graff proſpers, unleſs it be in a hungry ſtock; Secondly, no graff converts into the nature or quality of the ſtock, but ſtill retains its own; and therefore, Thirdly, men always graff a good fruit into a wild, an apple into a crab, &c. they never graff a wild fruit into a good one,) how much more ſhall the Jews, which are branches of this ſtock, and of the ſame kind, branches of that very tree into which you Gentiles are now ingraffed, be now, if they ſhall yet believe, graffed it alſo, according to that cuſtom of graffing moſt ordinary among the Jews, to graff one tree upon another of the ſame kind.

25. For I would not, brethren, that ye ſhould be ignorant of this miſtery (leſt ye ſhould be wiſe in your own conceits) that † blindneſs in part is happned to Iſrael, * until the fulneſs of the Gentiles be come in.]

25. For I ſhall declare this myſtery to you, this great ſecret of God's providence, (which may keep the Gentiles from being proud, v. 18, 20.) viz. that a great part of the people of the Jews are now at this preſent become blind, and that that is made uſe of by God, that, by occaſion of that, the Goſpel may (by departing a while from them) be preached to and received by the generality of the Gentiles, and they compacted into Chriſtian Churches (and this in very mercy to thoſe Jews, that they by ſeeing the Gentiles believe might at length be provoked to do ſo too, by way of emulation, v. 11, and 31.)

† Obduration is in part befallen, πώρωσις ἀπὸ μέρους γέγονεν * So long till the fulneſs of the Gentiles do come in, ἄχρις οὗ εἰσέλθῃ.

26. And ſo all Iſrael ſhall * be ſaved, as it is written, There ſhall come out of Sion the deliverer, and ſhall turn away ungodlineſs from Jacob.]

26. And ſo all the true children of Abraham, Jews and heathens both, but particularly the remnant of the Jews, ſhall come in, and repent; and believe in Chriſt: and this agreeably to that prophecy, Iſa. 59. 20. There ſhall come to Sion a redeemer, ſome powerful means ſhall be uſed; to bring the Jews to repentance, and reformation of their impieties; or a deliverer to them that turn from iniquities in Jacob, who ſhall reſcue all the penitent believing Jews from the approaching evils. e.

* Eſcape, σωθήσεται.

27. * For this is my covenant unto them, when I ſhall take away their ſins.]

27. And ſo by this means God's Covenant ſhall be made good to them, in bringing them to reformation and amendment, and then accepting and pardoning as many as ſhall come in, after all this.

* And, Καὶ

28. As concerning the Goſpel, they are enemies for your ſakes; but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers ſakes.]

28. 'Tis true indeed, and obſervable to you Gentiles, that in reſpect of the preſent preaching of the Goſpel, they are now laid aſide as perſons utterly rejected, on purpoſe that ye may receive the benefit of it. The Apoſtles having preached throughout all their Cities, and ſucceeded ſo ill among them, are now departed to you Gentiles, and have given them over; but yet for as many of them as any means will bring in, in reſpect of the promiſes made to that people for Abraham's ſake (ſee note on 1 Pet. 2. b.) and the ſpecial favour of God to them, they are ſtill ſo far loved by God, that if they will come in, and be capable, they ſhall be received by him, and to that end this diſpenſation of mercy and providence, the calling and converting the Gentiles, is now made uſe of, as the laſt and only probable means to work on the Jews, v. 11. 14.

29. For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.]

29. For God's ſpecial favours allowed to this people, and his promiſes made to their fathers are ſuch, that he will never change, or repent of them, v. 1. and conſequently will ſtill make them good to them upon their repentance, and to that end doth, in his providence, uſe a moſt excellent way to bring the obdurate Jews to repentance, by ſhewing them the iſſue of the Goſpel among the Gentiles, that that may provoke them by way of emulation, not to fall ſhort of ſuch heathens whom they have ſo long deſpiſed.

30. For as ye * in times paſt have not believed God, yet have now obtained mercy through their unbelief;]

30. For as ye Gentiles having gone on in a long courſe of Idolatry, have now, upon the Jews rejecting the Goſpel, had the Goſpel preach'd to you.

* Formerly were diſobedient, ποτὲ ἀπειθήσαντε.

31. Even ſo have theſe alſo now not believed, † that through your mercy they alſo might attain mercy.]

31. So the Jews of this age having been contumacious, and from whoſe diſobedience it is that this mercy hath come to the Gentiles, ſhall by this very means (this mercy upon you in ſuffering the Goſpel to be preach'd to you) reap ſome conſiderable benefit alſo; viz. be ſtirr'd by emulation to look after the Goſpel, thus believed on by the Gentiles, and count it a ſhame to them, a people ſo favoured by God, if they be not as wiſe or pious as the Gentiles, which from their Idolatry they now behold to come in, and believe on God.

† To the ſhewing mercy upon you, that they alſo, τῷ ὑμετέρῳ ἐλέει, ἵνα καὶ αὐτοὶ.

32. For God hath concluded them all under unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all.]

32. All this ſerves to illuſtrate the grace and mercy of God both to Jews and Gentiles, that both may attain ſalvation by his grace, without which neither of them can be ſaved. For God hath permitted the Gentiles firſt, and now the Jews, and all ſorts of men, to wallow in diſobedience and contumacy, that by that means he might reduce both. The Gentiles being Idolaters had Chriſt preached to them, which was occaſion'd by the Jews rejecting of him, for thereupon the Apoſtles left them, and preached to the Gentiles: The Jews thus contumacious ſee the Gentiles believe in Chriſt, and receive the Holy Ghoſt, Acts 10. and are in any reaſon by that means to be ſtirr'd up to emulation, nor to be behind them in piety; that ſo, many of them may come in, and believe on Chriſt: and ſo (by this means thus wiſely diſpoſed by God) God hath fulfill'd his great counſel of goodneſs toward all, in ſhewing undeſerved mercy upon each of them, Jews as well as Gentiles.

33. O the depth of the riches both of the wiſdom and knowledge of God! how unſearchable are his judgments and his ways * paſt finding out!]

33. O the depth of the abundant goodneſs of God, (in bearing the contumacy of the Gentiles firſt, and then of the Jews) and of his wiſdom, in making the deſertion of the Jews a means of calling the Gentiles, and of his knowledge, in knowing how (probably) to work upon the moſt obſtinate Jews, viz. by envy and emulation toward the Gentiles (as alſo by thoſe heavy calamities that according to Chriſt's prediction fell upon them, ſee note e.) how unſearchable are his determinations, and how admirable his ways of bringing them to paſs!

* Not to be traced, ἀνεξιχνίαστοι.

34. For who hath known the mind of the Lord, or who hath been his counſellor?

34. According to that of Iſa. 40. 13. that his ways are in wiſdom ſo much above ours, that no thoughts of ours are fit in any degree to be taken into counſel with him. It is impoſſible all the men upon earth could have foreſeen theſe methods, or ever have thought to have adviſed them.

35. Or who hath firſt given to him, and it ſhall be recompenſed to him again?]

35. And the juſtice is ſuch alſo, that no man can ſpeak any thing againſt the equality of his proceedings herein: for firſt, 'tis a matter of meer bounty and goodneſs, and every man may with his own do what he liſts, no man can claim any thing that hath not been allow'd him, and therefore there can be nothing of injuſtice objected to him, if others have been more bountifully treated; and yet farther ſecondly, the Jews themſelves thus deſerted of God, have their ways of mercy alſo, if they do obſerve it.

36. For of him and through him and to him are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen.]

36. For the whole diſpenſation of grace, calling, and ſalvation both of Jews and Gentiles, is to be imputed to God's free undeſerved mercy, the mercy of the call is from him, all good is received by him, and the honour of all belongs unto him; and therefore to him be aſcribed all the glory of this and all other things for ever and ever. Amen.

The ſum then of this Chapter being the ſetting forth the great mercy and wiſdom of God toward Jews and Gentiles, but particularly toward the Jews, (who though for their crucifying of Chriſt, and contumacy againſt the Spirit in the preaching of the Apoſtles, they were ſo far forſaken, as that, leaving them, the Apoſtles departed to the Gentiles, yet were by way of rebound benefitted by this preaching to the Gentiles, provoked to emulation by the multitude of the converted Gentiles, and ſo themſelves brought to believe alſo, great multitudes of them) is ſaid to be a great myſtery v. 25. and ſo intimated again v. 33. &c. and ſeems to be the very doctrine to which S. Peter refers, 2 Pet. 3. 15. concerning God's longanimity, deferring and delaying his execution on his enemies (foretold Mat. 24.) on purpoſe, that as many Jews as poſſibly might, ſhould before that be brought in to believe, and ſo eſcape their parts in that judgment. This is the plain meaning of what S. Peter expreſſes by [account the long ſuffering of our Lord, deliverance:] to which he ſaith that Paul had written parallel in many places, and withal tells us that what he had written on that ſubject, was much miſtaken, and wreſted to very diſtant doctrines in thoſe firſt times, and ſo hath been ever ſince, as to that of the Millenaries of both ſorts, and ſome other matters.

Annotations on Chap. XI.

a. Ver. 2. Maketh interceſſion.] Ἐντυγχάνειν κατά τινος is to commence an accuſation againſt any man, 1 Mac. 8. 32. and chap. 10. 61, 63. and chap. 11. 31.

Ἐντυγχάνειν κατά τινος καλὲ.

b. V. 8. Slumber.] The Hebrew רדם ſignifies to nod, as that is an effect either of ſleepineſs, or of old age, or again of ſtupor, lethargy, ſenſleſneſs, and is accordingly rendred κατανύξις, deep ſleep, Iſa. 29. 10. (from whence this place is cited) ſo Pſ. 60. 3. οἶνος κατανύξεως is the ſtupifying wine uſed to be given to them that were to be put to death. And ſo in Marcus Eremita ψυχωφ. p. 948. A. ſpeaking of οἰνοποσίαι, drinking of wine, he adds, πόνον τὴ κατανύξεως ἐξ αὐτῆς, the pain of ſtupidity, or intoxication, from it: but otherwhere it ſignifies not only a deep ſleep (deeper than that which is noted by שנה) and from thence alſo, ſtupor, lethargy, among the Rabbines, but alſo aſtoniſhment, and is by the Septuagint rendred ὕπνος φόβου 1 Sam. 26. 12. (where yet it ſhould be a deep ſleep, and ſo the Targum reads שנא תקיפא a ſtrong ſleep) and again a trance or extaſie, and ſo Gen. 2. 21. 'tis rendred ἔκστασις, extaſie, and ſo Acts 10. 10. ἔκστασις, extaſy, is ſet for a deep ſleep or trance, wherein viſions are received; Aquila renders it in Iſaiah καλαφορὰ, tranſportation, Theodoſion extaſie, ἔκστασις, Pſal. 68. 29. the Septuagint have θάμβος, amazement. By all which it appears, that the word in its latitude ſignifies ſuch a ſupine habit of mind as is uſual in the ſtate of lethargy or ſtupidity, a ſtate of ſenſleſneſs, a ſpirit of ſtupidity ſaith the Syriack, however acquired, whether from a ſleepy lethargick humour (and ſo it follows here, Eyes that ſee not, &c.) or elſe from a trance. Of which ſecond notion ſee Note on Acts 10. d. The word, ſaith Theophylact, properly ſignifies ἐμπήγνυσθαι καὶ προσηλῶσθαι, being nailed and faſten'd to any thing, and ſo denotes ἀνίατον τὴ γνώμης καὶ ἀμεταθέτον, an incurableneſs and immutableneſs of mind. But this refers to the Attical notion of the word as 'tis rendred compunction, which is not it which the Helleniſts underſtood, or uſed it in.

Κατάνυξις

c. V. 11. Fall.] The Hebrew נפל, which is rendred by πίπτω, to fall, often ſignifies to lie along in the poſture of one that is fallen, and accordingly Exod. 21. 18. is rendred καλαχλίνεσθαι, to lie along; and ſo Verbs are often taken in a ſenſe noting continuance or duration, as to be born of God, is to live a regenerate or new life. And ſo the Context here inclines it, where it cannot be denied that they did fall, and that that was the effect (he ſpeaks not of the intention or deſign) of their ſtumbling. All that can be denied therefore is, that this fall of theirs is to continue for ever, and accordingly he adds that this their ſtumbling and falling was, if made uſe of, a very proper means as yet to recover them; for the Gentiles being preached to by this means, might very fitly move the Jews to emulation, and ſo recover them from their fall: and this God foreſaw, and had that, among other reaſons, in his wiſdom, why he did permit them to deny Chriſt, and reject the Goſpel.

Πίπτειν.

d. V. 12. Fulneſs.] The word πλήρωμα, fulneſs, is a known famous word, uſed by the ancients for the whole body of the congregation or Church compacted together, in oppoſition to Schiſms and breaches in it. So in * Meletius, ἄρχοντες καὶ ἱερεῖς σὺν τῷ Χριστωνύμῳ πληρώματι, the Governors and prieſts with all the fulneſs, that is, Church, that bears the name of Chriſt. So in * Dionyſius Alexandrinus, πᾶν τὸ πλήρωμα τῆς συναγωγῆς, all the fulneſs of the congregation of Iſrael, from Exod. 12. where the Septuagint read πλῆθος multitude. So in S. Baſil's Liturgy, p. 43. d. τὸ πλήρωμα τῆς ἐκκλησίας φύλαξον, preſerve the fulneſs of the Church. And accordingly being admitted into the Church is by S. Baſil, Ep. 197. ad Diodor. and the fathers expreſs'd by εἰς ἐκκλησιαστικὸν πλήρωμα διαθέσθαι, to be received into the Eccleſiaſtick fulneſs; either according to the Hebrew idiome, which uſes מלא (from מלא to be filled) for collecting and congregating, or perhaps according as Mat. 9. 16. πλήρωμα is the piece that being put into the garment, the garment, which was before torn, is made whole again. In this ſenſe, I conceive, the word is here to be taken, for the Jews being added to the Church, their coming in, or being gathered, and laying hold on the faith (being provoked thereto by ſeeing the Gentiles believe) and ſo filling up the vacuity, as it were, which was formerly in the Church, by their ſtanding out impenitently. That this ſhould now ſtill belong to any (yet future) return of the Jews in a viſible remarkable manner, is no way neceſſary, the circumſtances of the Context applying it to thoſe firſt times, wherein the Epiſtle was written: and therefore Origen againſt Celſus, ſpeaking of the Jews, ſaith diſtinctly, θαῤῥοῦντες δ' ἐροῦμεν, ὅτι οὐδ' ἀποκατασήσονται, We affirm confidently that they ſhall not be reſtored. And S. Chryſoſtome, in his diſcourſe againſt the Jews, denies that they ſhall ever be returned to their countrey; and cites Joſephus for that opinion, that their ἐρήμωσις or deſolation ſhall be perpetual. And ſo Cæſarius, Gregory Nazianzen's brother, being asked of the ἀνάκλησις, revocation of the Jews about the end of the world, anſwers reſolutely, * οὐδέποτε πεισθήσομαι Ἰουδαίους ἀνακληθήσεσθαι, &c. I will never be perſwaded that the Jews ſhall be recalled, nor indeed doth the Apoſtle teach any ſuch thing in the words that are well and truly delivered by him, but not rightly underſtood or applyed by others. And all this ſeems to have foundation in the expreſs words of Daniel, ch. 9. 27. he ſhall make it deſolate even to the conſummation. And the Jewiſh writing called Seder Olam, affirms the ſame, viz. that after their ſecond ejection out of Canaan, the Jews ſhall never return thither again. Others indeed have been of another opinion, that there ſhall be a viſible calling of the Jews, and ſome of the ancients have joyned thereto the thouſand years reign of Chriſt upon the earth, and pretended Apoſtolical tradition for it, but have not by the Church of God been judged to have any juſt plea to it, undoubtedly cannot deduce it from this place, any farther than this, that if they ſhall repent and believe in Chriſt, they ſhall yet be received into mercy. And as πλήρωμα Ἰουδαίων, the Jews fulneſs, is their coming in to the faith, or the Church of Chriſt, ſo likewiſe πλήρωμα τῶν ἐθνῶν, the fulneſs of the Gentiles, v. 25. is the Gentiles coming in to the Church, receiving the faith, they then becoming one part of the body of the viſible Church, as the Jews another. See Note on Luke 21. c. And ſo Eph. 1. 23. the Church, as the body of Chriſt, is called τὸ πλήρωμα, his fulneſs, in the ſame kind as ἴδιον μέγεθος or ἴδιον σωμάτιον, the Churches greatneſs and body, is uſed by Ignatius in Epiſt. ad Smyrnenſes, of the reſtoring the aſſemblies of the Church, by a calm which had befaln the Chriſtians in Syria.

e. V. 26. Turn away ungodlineſs.] The Hebrew, Iſa. 59. 20. read לשבי, that is, and to them that turn, or even to them, the ו being often Expletive, or noting Apoſition.

ℵ Αποστρέψει ἀσεβείας poſition. Inſtead of this the Septuagint read, it ſeems, וישוב, and ſo render it ℵ ἀποστρέψει ἀσεβείας ἀπὸ Ἰακώβ, and ſhall turn iniquities from Jacob, and S. Paul, as his manner is, cites the words of their tranſlation, wherein they have a ſenſe very commodious, and moſt agreeable to the context here, that many of the Jews ſhall by God's grace and wiſe methods uſed toward them, be reformed and converted. But beſide this it will be moſt reaſonable to enlarge them alſo, and interpret them according to the original notation of the Hebrew, that God will take care for the delivering of them that thus return and repent. As for the truth of that which is here concluded from this citation, that as yet many more Jews ſhould repent, and receive the Goſpel, that hath been demonſtrated by the event, 1. when the Jews ſaw Chriſt's predictions, Mat. 24. manifeſtly fulfilled in the Roman Army's ſitting down before the city; for then many turned Chriſtians, and went out of the city, and were delivered from the following evils: and 2ly, after that, when the Temple and the City were deſtroyed, and they brought in ſubjection by the Romans, then many were humbled and turned Chriſtians: and 3dly, after that alſo in Juſtin Martyr's days, γινώσκων ἔτι καθ' ἡμέραν τινὰς μαθητευομένους εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Χριστοῦ, every day there were ſome that came in to be Chriſt's diſciples, which is the cauſe of the ſealing ſo many of every tribe, Revel. 7. 4. (ſee Notes on that Chap. c. d. e.) anſwerable to Ezec. 9. 4. and is the meaning of their eſcaping here.

CHAP. XII.

Paraphraſe.

1. I Beſeech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye preſent your bodies a living ſacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your a reaſonable ſervice.]

* I exhort you— by the compaſſions, Παρακαλῶ ὑμᾶς διὰ τῶν οἰκτιρμῶν.

1. Seeing then the Goſpel, without any addition of legal performances, is the only way to ſalvation (which is the thing on the proving of which all the former part of the Epiſtle was ſpent) and that the Goſpel is the ſpiritualizing and perfecting of the Law, (which he ſhews by going ethically through the ſeveral parts of it, the ritual or ceremonial in this chapter, the judicial, chap. 13. 1. the moral v. 8. &c.) I do therefore exhort you, brethren, by the bowels or exceeding great mercies of God, that (inſtead of the impure Gnoſtick practices that are ſo rife among you, and which pretend to be grounded on their myſtical underſtanding of the Law and Scriptures of the Old Teſtament,) you preſerve your ſelves in all purity and holineſs, and ſo offer up unto God (as a kind of heave-offering) your bodies (the work-houſes and ſhops of action and practice) a living ſacrifice (in oppoſition to their dead ones under the Law) an holy pure one (in oppoſition to thoſe external, carnal, legal ones, which had no kind of intrinſical goodneſs in them, but only as they were commanded them for a time by God) acceptable to God (whereas the others were not ſo, whenſoever they were not joyned with holy life, nor are now any longer ſo, having been aboliſhed by Chriſt) your rational worſhip of him, (in oppoſition to that wherein the irrational creatures, the cattel, &c. were offered up to God in his worſhip.)

2. And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, that acceptable and perfect will of God.]

2. And ſuffer not your ſelves to be enſnared with the filthy ſenſual practices, of the Gnoſticks of this age, that by joyning with the Jews againſt the orthodox Chriſtians, avoid perſecution themſelves, and bring it upon others, and by that means ſeduce many; but by undertaking the Chriſtian faith, and that renovation of mind and actions, wherein repentance (required of you at your baptiſm) conſiſts, let your Chriſtianity appear in the new form and ſhape of your lives, that ye may be able to diſcern and approve and practiſe (ſee note on ch. 2. f.) what 'tis that God now commands us Chriſtians, even thoſe Evangelical commands of his, which are good (as all the judaical law cannot be ſaid to be, there being many things permitted for the hardneſs of their hearts, which muſt not be permitted now) and well-pleaſing (as now their ceremonial performances, ſacrifice, &c. are not, nor ever were, but when joyned with good lives) and perfect (as even the moral part as it was underſtood by the Jews, was not, till it was enlarged, or at leaſt interpreted by Chriſt, Mat. 5. and as the practices of the Gnoſticks certainly are not, which yet pretend to the higheſt perfection.)

3. For I ſay, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himſelf more highly than he ought to think, but to think ſoberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the meaſure of faith.]

3. For I, in reſpect of that Apoſtolical authority which by the favour and commiſſion of Chriſt, is given unto me, take upon me to admoniſh every perſon among you, that he do not exalt himſelf above that which belongs to him, (as the Gnoſticks do, who pretends to ſuch heights of knowledge and perfection, as to deſpiſe the Governors of the Church, (ſee Jude 8. d.) and conſequently run into ſuch extravagancies) but every man in ſobriety to poſſeſs the graces which God hath given him, to the benefit of the Church, and not the deſpiſing of others, eſpecially thoſe that are placed over him by Chriſt.

4. For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the ſame office;]

4. For as in the body of man, where there are many members, they have not all offices or places of the ſame eſteem or dignity, which ſome have.

5. So we being many, are one body in Chriſt, and every one members one of another.]

5. So all we Chriſtians make up one body of which Chriſt is the head, and are fellow-members in reſpect of one another, but ye have ſeveral functions and offices in his Church.

6. Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether propheſie, let us propheſie according to the proportion of faith:]

6. And having ſuch peculiar functions to which we are deſigned, differing one from another, according to our ſeveral deſignations, let us exerciſe them to the edification of one another: If a man be deſigned to the office of expounding the Scripture, let him take care that he do it according to that form of faith, or wholeſome doctrine, by which every man, which is ſent out to preach the Goſpel, is appointed to regulate his preaching according to thoſe heads and principles of faith and good life, which are known among you.

7. Or miniſtery, let us wait on our miniſtring: or he that teacheth, on teaching:]

7. If to the office of a Deacon, one deſigned to do ſome inferior ſervices in the Church, let him ſet himſelf to the diſcharge of that: the Doctor, of he that teacheth the Doctrine of the Goſpel where it is already planted, let him buſie himſelf about that.

8. Or he that exhorteth, on exhortation: he that giveth, let him do it with * ſimplicity: he that ruleth, with diligence: he that ſheweth mercy, with cheerfulneſs.]

* Liberality, ἐν ἁπλότητι, ſee Mat. 6. k.

8. He that, when the doctrine of the Goſpel is taught and planted, is appointed to preach to them the practical uſe of it, and exhort them to live accordingly, let him employ himſelf thus: he that diſtributes his goods, or perhaps the goods of the Church, to the poor, let him do it liberally: he that is to govern in the Church, let him be very careful and diligent in government: he that gives alms (which is the duty of every private Chriſtian that is able) let him do it merrily, not fearing or doubting that he ſhall impoveriſh himſelf or his poſterity by that means.

9. Let love be without diſſimulation. Abhor that which is evil, cleave to that which is good.]

9. Let your love of God appear to be ſincere, and ſuch as will abide the trial, Epheſ. 1. 4. Luke 1. 6. and ſo alſo your love to one another let it be unfeigned, deteſting and flying from every impious practice, ſuch as are obſervable among the Gnoſticks, and for the true chriſtian courſe both toward God and men, cleave faſt and zealouſly to it.

10. Be kindly affectioned one to another in brotherly love, in honour preferring one another.]

† In reſpect of diligence not ſlothful: τῇ σπουδῇ μὴ ὀκνηροί.

10. Made up of nothing but perfect kindneſs to one another, contrary to the envying, &c. ch. 1. 29. in the Gnoſticks; humble, contrary to their faſtidiouſneſs and pride, ch. 1. 30.

11. † Not ſlothful in buſineſs; fervent in ſpirit; * b ſerving the Lord;]

* Or, ſerving the ſeaſon, ſo other copies read.

11. Induſtrious and nimble to do any thing that belongs to your calling, and having that earneſt affection to God's ſervice that ſhall inflame and ſet you moſt ardently about it, and accordinly doing thoſe things that in reſpect of the circumſtances of time and place, wherein now you are, may moſt tend to the honour of God, and building up of the Church.

12. In the midſt of thoſe afflictions that now fall upon you, rejoicing in reſpect of that bliſs which we hope for in another world, and conſequently never renouncing the faith (as the Gnoſticks profeſs to do) in time of perſecution, but perſevering conſtant to the end, and in order to that obſerving your ſet times of prayer with all zeal and importunity.

12. Rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation; continuing inſtant in prayer;]

13. Shewing liberality to all that want, as earneſt in it as in any thing that brings in moſt advantage to your ſelves, or inſtead of purſuing others, v. 14. doing them as much kindneſs as you can.

13. Diſtributing to the neceſſity of ſaints; † given to hoſpitality.]

† Purſuing διώκοντες.

14. Repay nothing to contumelies, but friendly and kind uſage.

14. Bleſs them which perſecute you; bleſs, and curſe not.]

15. Comply with the condition and ſtate of other men, affected with all the good and evil that belongs to them.

c. 15. c Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep.]

16. Very affectionate and compaſſionate in your kindneſs one to another, pretending not to myſterious knowledge, as the Gnoſticks do, but behaving your ſelves as the modeſteſt ſort of Chriſtians do, not perſwading or conceiting your ſelves that you are wiſer than the reſt of your brethren.

16. Be of the ſame mind one towards another. Mind not high things, but * condeſcend to men of low eſtate. Be not wiſe in your own conceits.]

* Following along with the lowly, τοῖς ταπεινοῖς συναπαγόμενοι.

17. Never acting any revenges upon them which you think have done you injuries; taking care before-hand that whatſoever you do, it be that which is fit for you to do before the heathens, and which may not diſgrace the Chriſtian profeſſion before them, or aliene them from it, by ſeeing your lives and actions vile.

17. Recompence to no man evil for evil. Provide things honeſt in the ſight of all men.]

18. And particularly (as far as lyeth in you, and is poſſible for you by all actions of meekneſs and charity to procure) living peaceably among them.

18. If it be poſſible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men.]

19. To that end (as ver. 17. ſo again) not taking the matter of avenging the injuries done to you into your own hands, but referring it to the puniſhment of God, or the magiſtrate under him, to whom, as he himſelf ſaith, Deut 32. 25. it belongs to puniſh offences.

19. Dearly beloved, avenge not your ſelves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine, I will repay, ſaith the Lord.]

20. It being the Chriſtian's duty, and his only prudent method of overcoming enemies, to do them all acts of kindneſs and charity, whereby thou ſhalt melt them at length, be they never ſo hard-hearted (as when an artificer that deals in metals cannot melt any metal by putting fire under it, he pours live coals on the top of it, and by that means melts any thing that is hardeſt to melt. This figure muſt be made uſe of to interpret this place, which if it were literally underſtood, might ſeem to command that foul crime of wiſhing miſchief, ſaith S. Auguſtine de Doct. Chriſt. l. 3. c. 6.)

20. Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirſt, give him drink: for in ſo doing thou ſhalt heap coals of fire upon his head.]

21. Let not another man's injuſtice to thee bring thee to that vileneſs of doing the like to him, for then hath he conquered the moſt divine precious part of thee, enſlaved thy ſoul to ſo vile a ſin; but let thy way be (that which of all others is moſt likely to thrive) by doing good to him, by fair words and deeds to overcome him.

21. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.]

Annotations on Chap. XII.

a. Λογικὴ λατρεία.

V. 1. Reaſonable ſervice.] What notion of λογικὴ λατρεία, which we have rendred rational ſervice, is here to be faſtned on, is not eaſie to determine. It may poſſibly be ſuch as will be agreeable to the notion of ὁ λόγος, the word, as it ſignifies Chriſt, and then 'tis the Chriſtian ſervice. It may be as λόγος ſignifies the word or ſcripture, and then 'twill be that worſhip which is preſcribed us in the Scripture; and ſo the Syriack ſeems to underſtand it, ſetting down for λογικὴ לפי דבר ſecundùm os verbi, according to the mouth of the word, that is, ſuch as the word preſcribes. It may be alſo as λόγος word is oppoſed to νόμος law, and then 'twill be the evangelical worſhip. And once more, it may note ſuch a worſhip of God as is moſt agreeable to reaſon, and ſuch as a rational man will reſolve to be moſt agreeable to ſo excellent and pure a Deity. But the circumſtances of the place, and oppoſition to the ſacrifices of the Law, the beaſt that were offered there, ſeem to reſtrain it to the vulgar and ordinary notion of λογικὴ rational, in oppoſition to the irrational ſacrifices under the Law, as ζῶσα living, before, to the dead bodies among them. Thus is the Table of Chriſt called by Theodoret λογικὴ τράπεζα, rationalis menſa, Serm. 6. de Provid. that is, the table, or altar, where we offer up our ſelves, our ſouls and bodies, to be a reaſonable, holy, and lively ſacrifice unto God, inſtead of thoſe tables or altars on which the beaſt were offered. Thus in Hermes in Pæmandro, in the Hymn or εὐλόγιον which cloſes the book, this prayer is to be found, Δέξαι λογικὰς θυσίας, receive theſe rational ſacrifices. Thus I conceive, may λογικὸν γάλα, rational milk, 1 Pet. 2. 2. be rendred alſo, not that milk of cattel, which mens bodies are wont to be fed with, but this rational milk by which mens ſouls are improved, to wit inſtruction, or Chriſtian doctrine. And thus the ancient Latin tranſlation hath rendred it in both places.

b. Καιρῷ δι. λάβετε.

V. 11. Serving the Lord.] The authority of thoſe copies is great which read καιρῷ δουλεύοντες in this place, ſerving the time, or the ſeaſon, which being written ſhort thus, κῳ might eaſily be miſtaken for κυίῳ. One argument that it is here to be retain'd is Ignatius's Epiſtle to Polycarp, where he joins two precepts together, πλέον σπουδαῖος γίνου ὧν εἶ, τοὺς καιροὺς κατανόησον, Become more diligent than thou art, obſerve, or conſider, the ſeaſons, or times: that is, the times being times of great corruption firſt, and then of perſecution alſo (both mention'd in the former part of the period, ἑτεροδιδασκαλοῦντες μή σε κατατροπώσωσιν, let not the heterodox, or falſe teachers, move thee, or terrifie thee, σὺ δὲ ἑδραῖος, ſtand firm, and μάλιστα ὃ ἕνεκεν θεοῦ πάντα ὑπομένειν ἡμᾶς δεῖ, we muſt beyond all perſevere and endure all for God's ſake) he muſt not be ſlothful, but very diligent to defend his flock againſt all falſe infuſions, and ſuſtain them conſtant in ſufferings. And this is exactly agreeable and parallel to this exhortation here thus ſet, and may well ſeem an imitation of it. In reſpect of diligence, not ſlothful; zealous in ſpirit, ſerving the time, or ſeaſon, which was in like manner a ſeaſon of great corruption from the Gnoſticks, and of perſecution alſo from the Jews, with whom theſe Gnoſticks comply'd, and ſtir'd them up againſt the Orthodox Chriſtians. See Note on Eph. 5. d.

c. Χαίρειν μετὰ χαιρόντων.

V. 15. Rejoice with them that do——] This verſe ſeems to refer to the two gates of the Temple, one called the gate of the bridegroom, and the other, of the mourners, into which two ſorts of men all kinds of perſons are divided: under the firſt are contained all thoſe that continue unblemiſh'd members of the Church, under no kind of cenſure; under the other are the excommunicate of any the loweſt kind, thoſe under Nidui, which though they might come into the Temple, yet were to come in at that door of mourners, with ſome difference upon them, and diſcrimination from other men, that they that ſaw them might pray for them in this form, Qui inhabitat domum hanc conſoletur te, indátque animo tuo ut obtempere, He that dwells in this houſe comfort thee, and give thee a heart to obey. See 1 Cor. 5. 2. Note c. and 7. 30. 2 Cor. 2. 1. and 7. 8. and 12. 21. And accordingly the exhortation is to have affections Chriſtianly diſpoſed toward all men, to be very much afflicted, which 2 Cor. 12. 21. is called πενθεῖν, mourning, or bewailing ſuch as are (for their faults) juſtly fallen under the cenſures of the Church, and to do the utmoſt we can toward their recovery; and on the other ſide to rejoice at the ſpiritual good and proficiency of all others.

to

CHAP. XIII.

Paraphraſe.

* Supreme. † From, ἀπὸ. ‡ By ὑπὸ.

1. LEt every ſoul be ſubject unto thee * a higher powers: for there is no power but † of God. The powers that be are ordained ‡ of God.]

a. 1. Then for the judicial laws, that great ſupreme one ought to be taken into ſpecial care of all Chriſtians, that of obedience to the ſupreme powers rightly eſtabliſhed and conſtituted, although they be not Jews but Romans. Nothing in Chriſtianity ought to be pretended or made uſe of, to give any man immunity from obedience, which from all ſubjects, of what quality ſoever, Apoſtles, teachers, &c. is due to thoſe to whom allegiance belongs, (contrary to the Gnoſticks doctrine and practice, Jude 8.) but on the contrary, every perſon under government, of what rank ſoever he be, is to yield ſubjection to the ſupreme governor legally placed in that kingdom, as to him which hath commiſſion from God, as every ſupreme magiſtrate muſt be reſolved to have, though he be an heathen.

b. 2. Whoſoever therefore reſiſteth the power, reſiſteth the ordinance of God; and they that reſiſt, ſhall receive to themſelves b damnation.]

2. From which divine commiſſion it is directly conſequent, that he that makes any violent reſiſtance or oppoſition to the ſupreme magiſtrate, oppoſes that violence to God's commiſſion, and ſhall accordingly receive that puniſhment which belongs to ſo ſacrilegious a contumacy, the wrath and judgment of God belongs to him.

† From it is ἐξ αὐτῆς.

3. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou ſhalt have praiſe † of the ſame.]

3. And certainly if thou haſt not ſome wicked purpoſes in thine heart, thou will never be tempted to do this, for they that do not deſign any ill, have little reaſon to be afraid of magiſtrates; or conſequently to deſire to prevent their ill uſage of them by taking up arms againſt them. For though it be poſſible Governors may be tyrants, yet this poſſible fear is not in any reaſon to move any to certain ſin; but on the other ſide every one is to look on the magiſtrate as God's officer, and to truſt himſelf in God's protection, and count that Princes do not uſe to puniſh men for doing well, but for doing ill, for ſeditions, conſpiracies, &c. and therefore if thou wouldeſt make a prudent proviſion for thy ſelf, if thou doſt deſire to be ſecure from being puniſhed by the magiſtrate, do not offend againſt his laws, and thou ſhalt, in all probability, receive nothing but reward for it from him.

* For wrath εἰς ὀργὴν.

4. For he is the miniſter of God to thee for good: but if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the ſword in vain: for he is the miniſter of God, a revenger * to execute wrath on him that doth evil.]

4. For that is as conſiderable a part of the magiſtrate's office (to which he is deſigned by God, and for which thou art to count thy ſelf happy in him, to aſſiſt, and not reſiſt him) that God hath ſet him over thee, to ſecure and defend thee, and help thee to a peaceable poſſeſſion of all God's other benefits, which are all worth nothing to thee, if thou mayſt not enjoy them peaceably. And that is a reaſonable conſideration to move thee to adventure the hazard of being injured by magiſtrates, and not to caſt off their yoke on every remoter fear of it, but to take the poſſible dangers and certain benefits together, and from thence to conclude, that 'tis for the ſubjects good, that Princes are ſet over them. And generally 'tis our own fault if there be any thing formidable in them. In that caſe indeed the Magiſtrate hath a ſword put in his hands by God, and 'tis his office to be God's executioner of puniſhment on malefactors, and he is obliged to do ſo by conſcience toward God, whoſe officer and commiſſioner he is.

† Ought to be δεῖ.

5. Wherefore ye † muſt needs be ſubject, not only for wrath, but alſo for conſcience ſake.]

5. And conſequently our obedience is due to him, not only for fear of puniſhment from the magiſtrate, for 'tis poſſible a cunning or a proſperous offender or rebel may avoid that, but in obedience to the conſtitution of God, whoſe officer he is, and to the command of honouring and paying ſubjection, &c. to him.

6. For, for this cauſe pay you tribute alſo: for they are God's miniſters attending continually upon this very thing.]

6. For this is the diſtinct reaſon why tributes and cuſtoms are paid to Kings, viz. becauſe they are commiſſioners ſent from God; who having full power over all we have, as the free donor of all, may aſſign his Commiſſioners what proportion he pleaſe, and that a liberal one, as he did the double portion to the elder brother; and this but very reaſonable, ſeeing, in the diſcharge of their office, they ſpend themſelves with an unwearied paried patience and conſtancy, attending on it, as the hardeſt and heavieſt task that any man in a kingdom undergoes, and is therefore in proportion the moſt richly to be rewarded of any.

7. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute, to whom tribute is due; cuſtom, to whom cuſtom; fear, to whom fear, honour, to whom honour.]

7. This therefore lays all obligation on you to render to Princes (as a debt due from ſubjects) all extraordinary or ordinary payments, as alſo that reverence and honour which by the Law of God belongs to them, as well as obedience and diligent ſubjection, v. 1.

* Filled up, πεπλήρωκε.

8. Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath * fulfilled the Law.]

8. For ye Chriſtians muſt not think that your Chriſtian liberty will free or diſoblige you from the diſcharge of any debt or duty to any man, inferior or ſuperior, that is, either of juſtice to ordinary men, or ſubjection to thoſe whom God hath ſet over you: One debt only ye muſt owe all (and yet pay that too, as oft as occaſions are preſented) that of charity, which muſt be ſo paid that it be always owing; and if this be diſcharged as Chriſt requires, not only to friends, but to all, even thoſe that have behaved themſelves as enemies to us, the perſecuting heathen Emperors, &c. this is that perfection of the Law which Chriſt requires, Mat. 5. 48.

9. For this, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery, Thou ſhalt not kill, Thou ſhalt not ſteal, Thou ſhalt not bear falſe witneſs, thou ſhalt not covet; and if there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this ſaying, namely, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf.]

9. For all the ſix commandments of the ſecond table, the five here named, and the ſixth that hath all this while been inſiſted on, that of Honour thy Parents, Kings, &c. v. 1. all theſe, I ſay, are but parts of that great Duty of charity, or loving thy neighbour, &c. ſo ſtrictly now commanded by Chriſt, and ſo far from being now evacuated or abrogated, that it is rather heightened in each branch, and improved by the Goſpel, and conſequently every of thoſe ſix, and particularly that of duty to Kings, is ſtill required under Chriſtianity, let the Gnoſticks advocates, and patrons of liberty (or rather licentiouſneſs) under that pretence, teach what they pleaſe to the contrary.

† Filling up, πλήρωμα.

10. Love worketh no ill to his neighbour, therefore love is the † fulfilling of the Law.]

10. That Charity that is required of us Chriſtians, is ſo far from depriving any other of his right, that it gives rules of all abundance of mercy and goodneſs to all, for in that conſiſts that perfection of the Law which Chriſt requires, Mat. 5. ſee Note on Mat. 12. e.

* This, knowing the ſeaſon, τοῦτο, εἰδότες τὸν καιρὸν. † deliverance.

11. And * that knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of ſleep: for now is our † c ſalvation nearer than when we believed.]

c. 11. And that exhortation to keep cloſe to all Chriſt's precepts, to diſcharge to all men that duty which Chriſt requires by preſcribing us charity, v. 18. is now the rather to be preſs'd, becauſe of the particularity of time, which ſhould make us watchful to the performance of all duties, the time of our deliverance, or eſcaping, by Chriſt promiſed, and by us ſo long expected (ſee note on Mat. 10. 9. and 24. 13. 1 Pet. 1. 5. and 2 Pet. 1. 3.) being now nigher at hand (which may encourage us to be diligent and perſevere to the end) then it was when we firſt received the faith.

* Paſt, πεφθακεν.

12. The night is * far ſpent, d the day is at hand: let us therefore caſt off the works of darkneſs, and let us put on the armour of light.]

d. 12. The preſent dark ſtate of perſecution of the pure Chriſtians by the unbelieving Jews and the Gnoſticks among you, is now well over, and the more joyful lightſome ſtate of quiet and calm is now, as the day, approaching, (ſee 2 Pet. 1. 19. 1 John 2. 8.) which is a mighty obligation to us to perform the deeds of the day, all actions of Chriſtian purity, caſting off the doctrines and practices of the Gnoſticks, and all the corruptions crept in among you.

13. Let

e. 13. And particularly let chaſtity and all manner of purity, contrary to the night-works or deeds of darkneſs and ſecrecy, be moſt carefully preſerved in all kinds; and think it not tolerable to go on (as they would have you, and tell you it may lawfully be done by you) either in revelings and purſuits of luſts, or in ſins of luxury and exceſs, apt to hinder your watchfulneſs (ſee Luke 21. 34.) or in venery, men with women in unlawful embraces, or in laſciviouſneſs againſt the laws and difference of ſexes, (ſee note on 1 Pet. 4. d.) or any of thoſe other ſins ſo familiar among the Gnoſticks, or finally in factions, diviſions, contentions, hating and perſecuting your fellow Chriſtians, as the Gnoſticks and Judaizers do.

13. Let us walk † honeſtly as in the day; not in e rioting and drunkenneſs, not in * chambering and wantonneſs, not in ſtrife and envying.]

† Modeſtly, εὐσχημόνως. * Uncleanneſſes and filthineſſes κοίταις (note on c. 9. e.) καὶ ἀσελγείαις

14. But ſet your ſelves to the practice of all Chriſtian purity, and do not entertain your ſelves with carnal, ſenſual deſigns, ſuch as the divinity of the Gnoſticks is too full of, which tends to the advancing of luſts of all kinds, and nothing elſe.*

14. But put ye on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and make no proviſion † for the fleſh, to fulfil the luſts thereof.]

† Of the fleſh for luſts, τῆς σαρκὸς εἰς ἐπιθυμίας.

Annotations on Chap. XIII.

a. Ἐξουσία.

V. 1 Higher powers.] What ἐξουσία, power, here ſignifies will appear ſufficiently by the οἱ γὰρ ἄρχοντες, for the rulers, &c. v. 3. for the γὰρ for being a rational or cauſal particle, applies the ſpeech to that which had gone before, and ſo expreſſes the ἐξουσίαι, powers, v. 1. to be the ἄρχοντες, rulers, v. 3. and ſo again the annexing of ἐξουσίαν, power, v. 3. doth confirm the ſame. Nor indeed can the power, abſtracted from the perſon of the magiſtrate, be able to do what is here ſaid of ἐξουσία, viz. commend, or encourage, v. 3 avenge and puniſh v. 4. And the matter is clear, for v. 3. φοβεῖσθαι ἐξουσίαν, the powers being feared, is all one with ἄρχοντες εἰσι φόβος, the rulers are a fear, or terror, in the beginning of the verſe, and v. 4. immediately upon the mention of the power and the praiſe which they that do well ſhall have ἐξ αὐτῆς, v. 3. from the power, it is added, Θεοῦ γὰρ διάκονός ἐστί σοι, For he (that muſt needs be the perſon of the magiſtrate) is a miniſter of God to thee for good; and, He bears not the ſword in vain, or, for no end, for he is the miniſter of God, an avenger of wrath, &c. Thus is ἐξουσίαι and ἀρχαὶ uſed Luke 12. 11. when the diſciples are ſaid to be brought before principalities and powers, that is, without queſtion, princes and men in authority, and ſo are κυριότητες, dominions, 2 Pet. 2. 10. all that are in authority; and ſo in this Epiſt. c. 8. 38. ἀρχαὶ and ἐξουσίαι, principalities and powers, are certainly perſons (heathen magiſtrates) who perſecute Chriſtians; and ſo Epheſ. 3. 11. ἀρχαὶ and ἐξουσίαι are perſons to whom ſomewhat was to be made known. And ſo Col. 1. 16. and 2. 15, 22. where ἐξουσίαι and δυνάμεις are joyned with Angels, and all ſaid to be made ſubject to Chriſt. And that it may not ſeem ſtrange that the word ἐξουσία, power, ſhould be ſet to note a perſon, it will be worth obſerving, not only that the Latin, magiſtratus, which ſignifies magiſtracy, ſignifies the perſon of the magiſtrate alſo, and is moſt commonly ſo uſed, not for the power, but for the perſon inveſted with that power; but which is punctually for the point in hand, that the Latin Poteſtas, which is directly anſwerable to the Greek ἐξουσία, ſignifies a Ruler or Governor in good and ancient authors, as in Juvenal Sat. 10. ſpeaking of the unfortunate end of Sejanus, after all his greatneſs, he asks,

Hujus, qui trahitur, prætextam ſumere mavis,
An Fidenorum Gabiorúmque eſſe poteſtas? U. 100.

which had you rather chuſe? to ſucceed Sejanus, that was thus uſed, that is, have that great preferment and dignity of his (aſſumed by the Emperor of Rome into the participation of his ſupremacy) and pay ſo dear for it, or elſe to be quietly and peaceably the power, that is, ruler or governor, of thoſe mean people, the Fideni or Gabii? Then for the word which is here added to ἐξουσίαι, ὑπερέχουσαι, that that is to be rendred the ſupreme (not the higher) powers, will appear, not only by comparing it with 1 Pet. 2. 13. where the Βασιλεύς, King, or Emperor, is the ὑπερέχων, ſupreme, and all others ſaid to be ſent by him, he having his commiſſion from God (as here alſo 'tis ſaid in the end of this, v. 1.) and all others are not from God immediately, but from him; but alſo by the nature and uſe of the word; the nature of it confining it to thoſe that are over, and not under others: and ſo in Simplicius upon Epictetus, p. 2. 14. αἴτια πρῶτα καὶ ὑπερέχοντα, the firſt cauſes and ὑπερέχοντα, which muſt therefore be rendred ſupreme, or joyned together, and ſaid to be all one with ἐξηρημένα αἴτια, the exempt, abſolute, independent principles, viz. the gods, ſaith he, or, in his ſtile, the κρείττονες, to whom worſhip is due; and ſo in proportion ſpeaking here of men, it muſt belong to the ſupreme in any kingdom, who, as he is πρῶτος firſt, ſo he is ἐξηρημένος exempt, and ἀνεύθυνος not accountable to any man or men upon earth: and for the uſe of it, beſide that which hath already been ſaid, it may be obſerved, that Gen. 49. 3. in the deſcription of that condition which had belonged to Reuben, (if he had not forfeited it) by his primogeniture, viz. that he ſhould have been the King (as, upon his ſin, Judah was) it is ſaid of him, that he was יתר שאת ויתר עז the excellence of principality, and the excellence of power, that is, the excellent principality and excellent power; which ſeems to me to be the very phraſe here uſed, of ὑπερέχουσα ἐξουσία, and is there ſpoken perſonally of that elder brother.

a. Ἀρχαὶ.

Κυριότητες.

ὑπερέχουσαι.

b. Κρῖμα.

V. 2. Damnation.] The word κρῖμα, according to its literal importance, ſignifies judgment, and no more, and is applied to humane judgments ſometimes, either going to law, contentiones in foro, 1 Cor. 6. 7. or elſe ſentences of temporal puniſhments on malefactors. So Luke 23. 40. where one thief ſaith to the other, οὐδὲ ἐν αὐτῷ κρίματι εἶ, thou art in the ſame judgment, or ſentence of death, capital puniſhment, called κρῖμα θανάτου, c. 24. 20. judgment of death temporal. Otherwhere it as clearly ſignifies divine, and that eternal puniſhment; as Acts 24. 25. τοῦ κρίματος τοῦ μέλλοντος ἔσεσθαι, judgment to come, that is, certainly at the end of the world, at the day of doom; and ſo Rom. 2. 2. κρῖμα τοῦ Θεοῦ, the judgment of God, and ſo again v. 3. which v. 5. is explained to be wrath, or puniſhment, againſt the day of wrath; ſo Heb. 6. 2. αἰώνιον κρῖμα eternal judgment joyned with the reſurrection of the dead. So Mat. 23. 14. and Mark 12. 40. Luke 20. 47. περισσότερον κρῖμα, more abundant judgment, which they ſhould receive in another world (when this world affords none) for their Hypocriſies; and Rom. 3. 8. ὧν τὸ κρίμα ἔνδικόν ἐστιν, whoſe judgment (or puniſhment eternal) is juſt; and 2 Pet. 2. 3. οἷς τὸ κρῖμα ἔκπαλαι οὐκ ἀργεῖ, whoſe judgment, that is, deſtruction, (temporal here by the hand of God, preparatory and procœmial to) eternal lingereth not, as appears by the next words, whoſe deſtruction ſleepeth not. So 1 Tim. 3. 6. κρῖμα διαβόλου the condemnation of the devil, that ſentence that befel Luciſer for his pride preſently after his creation, and ſo may befal the novice lifted up with pride there. And therefore Heſychius, from the more general uſage, renders it, ἀνταπόδοσις Θεοῦ, God's retribution, or payment, or rendring according to works, which is ſure his eternal puniſhment. Three places there are, which belong certainly to this ſenſe, which yet have been queſtion'd by ſome men, and denied to do ſo. Firſt this in this place, They that reſiſt, that is, by force or violence oppoſe the ſupreme power, ἑαυτοῖς κρῖμα λήψονται, ſhall receive judgment to themſelves. That this ſignifies temporal puniſhment, which the magiſtrate may inflict, and no more, they think appears by the following words, for rulers are a terror to evil works. But if that argument were of force, it would conclude alſo, that no more but temporal puniſhment belonged to any other crime which was puniſhable by the magiſtrate; for of him it is ſaid, that he is Θεοῦ διάκονος ἔκδικος εἰς ὀργὴν τῷ τὸ κακὸν πράσσοντι, the miniſter, or officer, of God, his executioner for wrath, that is, puniſhment temporal, to him indefinitly that doth evil, that is, every viſible malefactor. And ſo if this would conclude for the reſiſter or rebel, it would alſo be privilege or protection to all other ſins, which the magiſtrate is wont to puniſh, the thief, the murtherer, &c. he that were hanged ſhould not for that be damned, whatever his crime were. And 2*ly*, If that reſiſter ſhould eſcape the hand of juſtice here, by flight, &c. or if he ſhould proſper in his rebellion, ſo that the magiſtrate ſhould not be able to puniſh him, or yet farther, ſo as to get into the throne, what judgment or puniſhment is that man likely to receive, if the κρῖμα or judgment here ſignify none but the magiſtrates wrath or puniſhment? 3*ly*, 'Tis here v. 5. concluded from hence, Wherefore ye muſt be ſubject, not only for wrath, but alſo for conſcience ſake: where wrath ſignifying temporal puniſhment, v. 4. if that were all that were meant by κρῖμα, then could it not be true, much leſs concluded from hence, that men muſt be ſubject not only for wrath. Certainly he that reſiſts is not ſubject (ἀντιτάσσων is one with ἀντιτάσσεσθαι and both directly contrary to ὑποτάσσεσθαι, being ſubject, v. 3, 5.) and therefore if we muſt be ſubject, not only for wrath, as that ſignifies temporal puniſhment, then he that reſiſts ſhall receive more then wrath, as that ſignifies temporal puniſhment, viz. κρῖμα, eternal judgment, or condemnation, which muſt be the importance of ἀλλὰ καὶ διὰ συνείδησιν, but alſo for conſcience ſake, viz. that if he do it not, it will be ſin to him, wound his conſcience, and ſo bind over to that puniſhment that belongs to an accuſing conſcience, or the breach of that divine law (which is the rule of conſcience) the command of obedience, v. 1. to a damning ſin, if it be not timely repented of. The ſecond place thus doubted of is, 1 Cor. 11. 29. He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh κρῖμα judgment to himſelf. That it doth not there ſignify damnation, is attempted to be proved by three arguments: 1. by that which follows, v. 30. For this cauſe many are weak and ſickly among you, and many ſleep; which belonging only to temporal puniſhment, is conceived to be the peripbraſis of κρῖμα judgment, precedent, and conſequently that that is ſo alſo. 2*ly*, Becauſe the Apoſtle ſpeaks there of any one ſingle act of this ſin, which being not an habit or cuſtom, the objectors conceive not to be actually damning under the ſecond covenant. 3*ly*, becauſe v. 32. 'tis ſaid, When we are judged, we are chaſtned of the Lord, that we ſhould not be condemned, &c. To the firſt of theſe the anſwer is clear, 1. that ſickneſs and death, tho' they be temporal puniſhments, are yet divine, inflicted by the hand of God, not of the magiſtrate, and 'tis acknowledged that it doth ſeldom ſignify eternal puniſhment, excluſively to God's temporal puniſhments, but eternal, and ſometimes temporal too (as was ſaid of 2 Pet. 2. 3.) or eternal if he repent not, and perhaps temporal if he do, or to bring him to repentance: 2*ly*, that theſe temporal do not exclude eternal puniſhments; they may be ſick, and die, and be damned alſo, or elſe ſome being reformed by theſe temporal chaſtiſements, others may be damned alſo that do not reform; and that this is juſt with God, and the meaning of κρῖμα the, appears v. 27. which is parallel to v. 29. whoſoever ſhall eat or drink unworthily, ſhall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, that is, ſhall be thought guilty of the greateſt violation of Chriſt, to profane and tread under feet his body and blood. To the ſecond, it need not here be diſputed whether one act of mortal or wilful ſin bring damnation, it being as much to the preſent purpoſe, that cuſtomary or frequent ſinning doth; for whatever mercy may belong to him that commits only one act, yet if he that cuſtomarily or frequently doth it, incur damnation, this will be the Apoſtles meaning by κρῖμα there, who ſpeaks indefinitely of the ſin (as when he ſaith, the drunkard, or adulterer ſhall not inherit the kingdom of God) and deſcends not to that minuter conſideration, what 'tis that contracts the guilt of that ſin. As for the third objection, 'tis an evident confirmation of this rendring; for if thoſe that were ſick, &c. were chaſtned of the Lord, that they ſhould not be condemned, then ſure, if they had not been ſo chaſtned, or not reformed by that chaſtning, they ſhould have been condemned with the world, which is no argument that eternal judgments are not due to them on their impenitence, but an evident intimation that they are. The third place thus doubted of (and brought to countenance the former interpretations of theſe two) is 1 Pet. 4. 17. Ὁ καιρὸς τοῦ ἄρξασθαι τὸ κρῖμα ἀπὸ τοῦ οἴκου τοῦ Θεοῦ, It is the ſeaſon of judgments beginning from the houſe of God, where that that befals the houſe of God cannot be condemnation. To which I anſwer by granting the objection, and conſequently that κρῖμα in its latitude muſt not there be applied to the houſe of God, but only one part of it. For if κρῖμα in that verſe there are ſpecified two parts, τὸ πρῶτον and τὸ τέλος, the firſt part, and the end, or laſt part of it. The firſt part of God's revenge on ſin may be in this life, and befal the godly, who hath ſin to be puniſhed alſo, and ſo μόλις σώζεται, hardly eſcapes, v. 18. or (as that phraſe is in the original, Prov. 11. 31.) is recompenſed on the earth; but the ſecond ſadder part is τῶν ἀπειθούντων of the contumacious, that obey not the Goſpel of Chriſt, and it ſeizeth on them here, and ſweeps them away, and then continues to them eternally; and ſo ſtill κρῖμα is ἀνταπόδοσις Θεοῦ, God's puniſhment, and retribution to ſin, where-ever it is, both here and in another world.

V. 7. Salvation] What σωτηρία ſalvation or deliverance here ſignifies (ſomewhat different from the notion of it, ch. 10. a.) may be gueſſed by what hath been oft mention'd of the word σῳζόμενοι and σώζεσθαι in the Goſpels, Mat. 10. h. Luke 13. b. &c. and the deliverance of the believing Jews or Chriſtians out of perſecutions, which (after the example of Chriſt) befel them in the firſt age, and from which they were delivered partly by the great act of vengeance from Chriſt upon the Jews the crucifiers of him, and perſecutors of his followers (ſee Luke 21. 28.) and partly by their departing generally out of Judea, before that deſtruction befel the Jews (ſee Rev. 7. d. e.) and partly by the Halcyonian days, which under Veſpatian were allowed the Chriſtians after this time in all places. The approaching of this is every where uſed, as an antidote or cordial conſideration, to arm them in time of affliction; and ſo here the conſidering that this is now nearer then when they firſt embraced the faith, and that therefore now 'twere unreaſonable to fall off, and loſe all their paſt faith and ſufferings, when now a little while more will land them ſafe at their expected haven, the deliverance ſo promiſed. This probably is the meaning of the phraſe, 1 Pet. 1. 5. σωτηρία ἑτοίμην ἀποκαλυφθῆναι ἐν καιρῷ ἐσχάτῳ, deliverance ready to be revealed in the laſt time, and perhaps σωτηρία ψυχῶν v. 9. the ſaving of their lives (antecedent to that of their ſouls) the delivering them from thoſe imminent dangers that the Chriſtians were under from the Jews, till that their deſtruction (for that that is the meaning of σώζειν ψυχὴν, Mat. 16. 15. Mar. 8. 35. Luke 9. 24. ſaving, or finding his life, ſee thoſe places, and Note on 2 Pet. 1. e.) That 'tis there to be thus underſtood may be probable by v. 10. where ſaith he, the prophets enquired concerning this, σωτηρία ſalvation, or deliverance, what time it was likely to come v. 11. which ſeems to confine it to ſome eminent event or paſſage in this world, and that, it ſeems, now ready to fall out in that preſent age, v. 12. So 2 Pet. 3. 15. where he bids 'em count the longanimity of God (that is, his ſparing or deferring the puniſhment of the Jews ſo long) σωτηρίαν deliverance, viz. that the Jews might come in to the faith, and all the believing Jews might have time to go out of Hieruſalem (ſee Note on Mat. 24. g.) and ſo be reſcued out of that common deſtruction. To this, I conceive, belong theſe words in the Epiſtle of Barnabas, p. 227. ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ αὐτοῦ ἡμέραι πονηραὶ ἔσονται καὶ σκάνδαλα ἐν αἷς ἡμεῖς σωθησόμεθα, In his (that is, Chriſt's) kingdom, there ſhall be evil and foul days, in which we ſhall be ſaved, or eſcape; and that which follows follows, ὧδε ἡμῖν ἡ ἐπιοῦσα ἐναίσιος ἔσται, to us there shall be a lightsome, that is, a clear day. This is set down most plainly, 2 Pet. 2. 6, 7, 9. by the example of Sodom and Lot; Sodom destroyed, and Lot and his family preserved; and so also of the old world, v. 5. when Noah, and seven more were preserved, where σώζειν is all one with σώζεσθαι. And 'tis observable that this very word σώζω is used in this story in Genesis, when the Angel bids Lot escape and flie for his life, or save and deliver his life, σῶσον ψυχήν. And because this is the prime matter of St. Jude's Epistle, as well as of that of St. Peter's to the dispersed Jews, that also may probably be the meaning of κοινὴ σωτηρία, common salvation, or deliverance, Jude 3. that deliverance that the believers should generally meet with. This use of this word how agreeable it is to the Scripture style, may yet farther appear by the notion of a Saviour in the Old Testament, for a deliverer, such as Joshua was said to be, of whom there is a notable place to this purpose, Ecclesiasticus 40. 1. Jesus, &c. according to his name was made great, εἰς σωτηρίαν ἐκλεκτῶν, for the saving, or delivering, the elect of God, and taking vengeance on the enemies, &c. And so Obad. 21. the Saviours shall come to judge the mount of Esau, the kingdom, &c. and so all those others, of whom 'tis said in general, Thou hast sent us Saviours, that is, the Judges which were sent or raised up by God to fight the battels of God's people against their enemies; in which two respects, first of avenging them on their enemies, secondly, of delivering them, those two titles of Judges and Saviours are bestow'd on them. And agreeable to this, this act of Christs so remarkable on the Jews is called both the kingdom of God, and σωτηρία deliverance, or salvation: kingdom in both respects, as a King is an avenger and protector both, and deliverance in the second only. Other like words we find to the same sense. See Note on Acts 3. b.

C. Σωτηρία

Σωτηρία ἐν τοίμη ἀποκαλυφθῆναι. Σωτηρία ψυχῶν

σώζειν

Κοινὴ σωτηρία

d. ἡ ἡμέρα ἤγγικεν

V. 12. The day is at hand] Ἡ ἡμέρα ἤγγικεν, the day draweth nigh, is all one with ἐγγίζουσαν τὴν ἡμέραν, the day approaching, Heb. 10. 25. and shall there be explained, which that it may belong to the destruction of the Jews, and whatever inseperable attendants of that, may appear, Ezek. 7. 10. Behold the day, behold it is come, the morning is gone forth; which is clearly the approaching of this day (and so other of the phrases, used in the New Testament for that destruction, are to be met with in that chapter, An end, the end, &c. v. 2, 3, 6.) and yet more perfectly v. 12. The time is come, the day draweth near, and these spoken clearly (as that whole Chapter) of the final destruction of that whole people. The approach of which being here mention'd as a motive to encourage the Christian Jews to hold out, and not to fall off to the Gnosticks impure courses (who, by helping them to escape persecutions, corrupted and inveigled many) this phrase is here by way of accommodation applied to that time, as a time of light, unfit for the works of darkness. See Heb. 10. a. and Luke 21. 34.

V. 13. Rioting] What κῶμος signifies, is not so commonly observed. Theophylact defines it, τὰ μετὰ μέθης καὶ ὕβρεως ᾄσματα, songs with drunkenness and contumely. In which definition, as the word ὕβρεις contumely is oft used in an impure sense, to denote unlawful loves, and pursuits, so in all probability doth it there, for the night-amorous revels are they that are peculiarly signified by κῶμοι. So Wisd. 14. 23. where speaking of the heathen κρύφια μυστήρια, secret mysteries, he joyns with them ἐμμανεῖς κῶμοι, mad-revels, and as the effects thereof adds, οὔτε βίους, οὔτε γάμους καθαροὺς φυλάσσουσι, they keep neither lives nor marriages pure. So 2 Mac. 6. 4. when he saith the Temple was filled ἀσωτίας καὶ κώμων, he adds ῥαδυμούντων μετ' ἑταίρων, dallying with harlots, γυναιξὶ πλησιαζόντων——And he that doth this, is in Theocritus κωμαστής. So say the Scholiasts on that Poet, κωμάζειν λέγεται ὁπὸ τῶν καθ' ὑπνον εἰς ἐρωμένας ἀπερχομένων, the word is used for those that go by night to their sweet-hearts. This they used to do with torches and fiddles, singing amorous ballads at the doors of their beloved, (from thence called κρουσίθυρα, and θυροκοπικὰ) a pattern of which is set down in Plautus Curcul. Act 1. Scen. 2.

Quid si adeam ad fores, atque occentem?
Pessuli, heus pessuli, vos saluto lubens.——

To this belongs that of Aristophanes in Pluto,

Ἔοικε δ' ὅτι κῶμον βαδίζειν,
Στέφανον γάρτοι καὶ δᾷδ' ἔχων πορεύεται,

He looks as if he were going to a revel, having his crown and his torch; and more fully in the right reading of the verse in * Plautus, Tute tibi præis lotis, luces cereum.

You go before your self with the fiddle, you are your own torch-bearer: some body else it seems they were wont to have, to perform these offices for them; so saith the Commentator of Hermogenes, Πυθαγόρας μέσῳ νύκτων ἀστρονομούμενος νεανίαν τινὰ σὺν αὐλητρίδι κωμάζοντα μετὰ λαμπάδος καὶ αὐλητρίδος—— Pythagoras studying the stars at midnight, saw a young man with a fidler revelling with a torch—Agreeably the word is here to be interpreted, the night-revels, or pursuits of their unclean designs; and so it is, Gal. 5. 21. and 1 Pet. 4. 3. Comissationes, which some have mistaken for Comessationes, as if it were from comedo, and so render it surfetings, whereas the Latin word is but a light derivation from the Greek κῶμος, and κωμάζειν.

CHAP. XIV.

Paraphrase.

a. 1. And for the preserving of that Christian charity among all, mentioned solemnly, c. 13. 8, 9, 10. I shall enlarge to give these rules. Great dissentions and divisions are already gotten into the Church of Jewish believers (not only against the Gentiles, but) among themselves, some Jewish converts discerning their Christian liberty and freedom from the Judaical yoke, others conceiving themselves still to be under that obligation. The latter of these is zealous for the Mosaical Law, and observances of circumcision and meats, &c. and condemns all others as breakers of Gods Law, that do not observe all these. On the other side they that are instructed in the knowledge of their Christian liberty, seeing others stand on such things as these, that had never any real goodness or vertue in them, and now are abrogated by Christ, are apt to despise and contemn them that continue under that yoke, and resolving to maintain that liberty which they have purchased by Christ, freedom from such obligations, are apt to separate from the Judaizers, ch. 12. 18. and so betwixt one and the other, the communion is likely to be broken. To both these therefore I apply my self at this time. Those of you that do not think your selves obliged to keep the Law, do not ye reject the scrupulous or erroneous Judaizer, that thinks himself bound to observe those Laws, of abstaining from many meats, &c. but receive him to your Communion; yet not so, that he thereby think himself encouraged or authorized to quarrel with other mens Resolutions for the directing their own lives, what is lawful or unlawful for them, and to condemn others that do not think themselves so obliged.

1 HIM that is weak in the faith, * receive ye; but not † to doubtful a disputations.]

* receive to you, προσλαμβάνεσθε

† to be judging of thoughts

2. He that is sufficiently instructed in his liberty, makes no scruple of eating any thing, thinks not himself obliged to be circumcised, &c. makes use of his Christian liberty to that purpose: but the Judaizer being not sufficiently instructed in the nature of the liberty allow'd him by Christ, and remaining in that error concerning the obligingness of the Mosaical Law, abstaineth from all flesh perhaps, (for so some did, saith Theophylact, that they might not be taken notice of to abstain peculiarly from swines flesh) or else from some sort of meats, as unclean and forbidden.

2. For one believeth that he may eat all things; another who is weak eateth herbs.]

3. Now to begin with the latter first (see note on Mat. 7. b.) The Jewish believer, that discerns his liberty and eateth all meats indifferently, must not despise the scrupulous erroneous, which is also a Jewish believer: And on the other side the scrupulous Judaizer must not reject and cast out of his communion that other, who being instructed in the nature of his Christian liberty, doth not think himself obliged to abstain from all those meats, from which a Jew under Moses religiously and judaically abstains; for God hath admitted him into the Church (without laying that yoke upon him) as a servant into his family, and he is not to be excluded by the Judaizer for such things as these.

3. Let not him that eateth, *despise him that eateth not: and let not him which eateth not, judge him that eateth; for God hath received him.]

* set at nought, ἐξουθενείτω

4. What commission hast thou, O Jewish Christian, to judge Gods servant, receiv'd and own'd by him, v. 3. to exclude him out of the Church? (see c. 2. 1. & n. a.) To his own Lord he stands or falls,

4. Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth: yea, he shall be holden up, for God is able to make him stand.]

falls, that is, he, by his (not thy) ſentence or judgment, is either cleared (judged to have done nothing amiſs) or condemn'd. But he certainly ſhall be cleared, for God is able to clear him, if he pleaſe, and he certainly will, having, by receiving him into his family, giving him this liberty.

† preferreth one day before another, another approveth every day

5. One man † b eſteemeth one day above another: another eſteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully perſwaded * in his own mind.]

5. The Judaizing Chriſtian obſerveth ſome ſpecial days appointed by Moſes his Law, the ſabbath or other Jewiſh feſtivals, but the other which is no Judaizer, but knows his own liberty, makes not that difference of days that Moſes requires: and in ſuch things every man muſt act by his own, not by another man's judgment or conſcience (ſee Note on Luke 1. a.) what he is verily perſwaded he ought to do (and therefore unity and charity ought not to be broken by you for ſuch things.

* by, for the K's MS. reads ἐπὶ ἰδίῳ without ἐν

6. He that regardeth a day, regardeth it unto the Lord: and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks: and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks.

6,7. He that makes a difference betwixt days, thinks it is God's will he ſhould do ſo; and he that doth not make that difference, thinks it God's pleaſure now under

7. For none of us liveth to himſelf, and no man dieth to himſelf.]

Chriſt that he ſhould not make any difference. He that makes no difference of meats, thinks it acceptable to God that he ſhould do ſo, and in teſtimony that he thinks ſo, conſtantly bleſſeth God, when he eats, for giving him that food, to the eating of which he conceives God hath alſo given him liberty; and the Jewiſh Chriſtian thinks it obligation of conſcience to abſtain, and for that command of reſtraint, and for the grace of doing ſuch an act of ſelf-denial, he giveth God thanks alſo. And this ſure is well done on both ſides, for no man of us is to do what he himſelf likes beſt, but what he thinks is moſt acceptable to God.

8. For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lords.]

8. For our life and death are very unconſiderable, but as by them we may ſerve God; and therefore much more all other things.

9. For to this end Chriſt both died, and roſe, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living.]

9. And all the fruit of Chriſt's death, and ſuffering, and reſurrection, which accrues to him, is only this, that he may have power and dominion over us, to command or give what liberty he pleaſeth.

† be ſet, παρεστησόμεθα

10. But why doſt thou judge thy brother? or why doſt thou ſet at naught thy brother? we ſhall all † ſtand before the judgment-ſeat of Chriſt.]

10. But why doſt thou that obſerveſt the Law, condemn thy fellow Chriſtian? or exclude him from thy Communion, becauſe he uſes his Chriſtian liberty, &c. or thou that uſeſt thy liberty, why doſt thou think it a piece of ſenſleſs ſtupidity in the Jew to abſtain, and thereupon deſpiſe v. 3. and vilify him, which is alſo a kind of judging him? whereas indeed neither of you is to be the judge of the other, but Chriſt of you both, (ſee note a. on Jam. 3.) being by his Father ſent and commiſſionated to that office.

11. For it is written, As I live, ſaith the Lord, every knee ſhall bow to me, and every tongue ſhall confeſs to God.

11,12. According to that of the Prophet, Iſa. 45. 23. I have ſworn by my ſelf that unto me every knee ſhall bow; which being a prediction of ſomewhat then future, was to have a completion in Chriſt incarnate (ſee Phil. 2. 9, 10, 11.) who is now conſtituted the one ſupreme judge of all, to whoſe judicature every one muſt ſubmit and give account for his own actions, and conſequently 'tis moſt unreaſonable that any man, but he to whom Chriſt this ſupreme judge hath delegated and committed that power, the Apoſtles and Governours of the Church, endowed with the power of the Keys and Cenſures, ſhould thus cenſure, and reject others from their communion.

12. So then every one of us ſhall give account of himſelf to God.]

* a ſcandal, σκάνδαλον

13. Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a ſtumbling block, or * an occaſion to fall, in his brothers way.]

13. And therefore let this fault be mended by you, do not any longer cenſure and ſeparate from one another's communion, for ſuch things as theſe, only be careful that you do not ſcandalize any Chriſtian brother, that is, put in his way a ſtumbling-block to hinder his coming to Chriſtianity, or a gall-trap in his progreſs to wound him and make him go back, as the Judaizer is in danger to do, when he ſees thoſe liberties uſed among Chriſtians which he deems utterly unlawful.

† in, ἐν

14. I know and am perſwaded † by the Lord Jeſus, that there is nothing unclean of it ſelf; but to him that eſteemeth any thing unclean, to him it is unclean.]

14. I am confident, and make no queſtion, but that Chriſt hath ſo remov'd that yoke of the Moſaical law, that to a Chriſtian Jew no kind of meat is unlawful to be eaten; but yet for all that, it is unlawful to him that eſteems it to be ſtill prohibited; the perſwaſion of it's being forbidden him is, as long as he is ſo perſwaded, ſufficient to make it to him unlawful to uſe that liberty, which otherwiſe were lawful.

* but if becauſe of meat εἰ δὲ διὰ βρῶμα

15. * But if thy brother be c grieved with thy meat, now walkeſt thou not charitably: deſtroy not him with thy meat for whom Chriſt died.]

15. But if for a matter of this nature, his not daring to eat what thou eateſt, thou deſpiſe and caſt off thy fellow Chriſtian that knows not his liberty, and by ſo doing diſcourage or aliene him from going on in Chriſtianity, v. 13. ſure this is contrary to the rule of Chriſtian Charity, of drawing all to piety, and driving none away, Mat. 18. 6. and it will be a great fault in thee, for ſo light a thing as meat is, to drive from Chriſtianity, and conſequently to deſtroy him for the ſaving of whom Chriſt was content to lay down his life, ſee v. 20.

c.

16. Let not your good be evil ſpoken of.]

16. Ye may uſe your Chriſtian liberty, but ſhall not do well ſo to uſe it, as that it may tend to others hurt, for that will be the defaming of that which is in it ſelf indifferent or innocent.

17. For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteouſneſs, and peace, and d joy in the holy Ghoſt.]

17. For Chriſtianity conſiſts not in ſuch external matters, eating or not eating ſuch or ſuch meats, but in the practice of Chriſtian vertues, ſuch are mercifulneſs and peaceableneſs and delight to do good one to another, to build up and advance one another in piety, not dividing and hating, and excommunicating one another, v. 19. or delight to do good, or that joy which reſults from unanimity, ſaith Theophylact.

d.

18. For he that in theſe things ſerveth Chriſt, is acceptable to God, and approved of men.]

18. Theſe indeed are acts of obedience to Chriſt, that are ſure to be accepted by God (without Judaical performances) and to be of good report among all men.

19. Let us therefore follow after the things that make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another.]

19. And therefore let us moſt zealouſly attend to thoſe things which may thus preſerve peace between all ſorts of Chriſtians, tho' of different perſwaſions, Judaizers or thoſe that are inſtructed in their liberty, and which tend to the drawing men to Chriſtianity, not aliening them from it.

* diſſolve, καλάλυε † but the evil is to κακὸν πῆ

20. For meat * deſtroy not the work of God: all things indeed are pure; † but it is evil for that man who eateth with offence.]

20. Do not thou for ſo unconſiderable a matter as eating is, or becauſe another will not, or dares not make uſe of that Chriſtian liberty which thou doſt moſt innocently uſe, diſturb that peace, that unity, which God hath wrought among believers of different perſwaſions about indifferent things. 'Tis true, a man may eat any thing ſimply conſidered; but if by eating he aliene others from the Goſpel, by deſpiſing and avoiding them, v. 3. that dare not do ſo, this is a ſin in him.

* ſcandalized or, is ſick, Σκανδαλίζεται ἢ ἀσθενεῖ

21. It is good neither to eat fleſh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother ſtumbleth, or is * offended, or is made weak.]

21. 'Tis not charitable to make uſe of any part of Chriſtian liberty, when by thy ſo doing any other man is kept from receiving the faith, and ſo falls by ſome occaſion of thine, or is gall'd, and diſcouraged, and driven from the profeſſion, (as the Jewiſh believer is by ſeeing others caſt off the Moſaical yoke, whom they think obliged by it) or any way wounded or hurt, that is, brought to any kind of ſin (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 8. b.)

22. If thou haſt a clear underſtanding of thy Chriſtian liberty, it is well for thee, and thou mayeſt uſe it betwixt God and thy ſelf, but not always before men, as when it may be in danger to hurt them, and when 'tis not neceſſary to reveal thy practice in ſuch matters. He is an happy man that, when he knows a thing lawful, doth ſo manage the practice of it, the uſe of his liberty, that he hath therein no reaſon to accuſe or condemn himſelf: ſee note on c. 2. f.

22. Haſt thou faith? Have it † to thy ſelf before God. Happy is he that * condemneth not himſelf in that thing which he alloweth.]

† by thy ſelf κατὰ σεαυτὸν
* judgeth not himſelf in that which he approves, μὴ κρίνων ἑαυτὸν ἐν ᾧ δοκιμάζει † it is not of faith, οὐκ ἐκ πίστεως

23. And indeed for the ſcrupulous Judaizer there is little reaſon he ſhould be ſo ill uſed for his not daring to eat, when he thinks himſelf otherwiſe obliged; for it were a damning ſin, for which his own conſcience already condemns him, ſhould he eat, or do any indifferent thing, as long as he thinks in conſcience that it is not ſo, becauſe it is contrary to perſwaſion or aſſurance of the lawfulneſs of his action: and whoſoever doth any thing without that perſwaſion (called faith here, and knowledge, 1 Cor. 8. 7.) ſo far at leaſt as to judge that which he doth lawful for him, he certainly ſins in ſo doing.

23. And he that doubteth is damned if he eat, becauſe † he eateth not of faith; for whatſoever is not of faith, e is ſin.]

Annotations on Chap. XIV.

a. διαλογισμὸς

V. 1. Diſputations] Διαλογισμὸς here ſeems to ſignify the arguings, or reaſonings, and conſequently reſolutions of men concerning themſelves, to the managing their whole courſe of life, what is lawful or unlawful for them, and particularly here (as the Context inforceth it) the reaſonings and reſolutions of thoſe, that from the liberty of diſuſing the Moſaical Law given by Chriſt, conclude the lawfulneſs of eating any thing, v. 2. A fuller inſtance or example of this notion of the word I have not met with, then in Epicurus's his Epiſtle to Idomeneus, ſpeaking of the torments he was then under ready to die, as great as were imaginable, Ἀντιπαρετάττετο δὲ πᾶσι τούτοις τὸ καλὸ ψυχῶν χαῖρον διὰ τῆν τῶν γεγονότων ἡμῖν διαλογισμῶν μνήμην, The joy that he had in his mind, upon the remembrance of the reaſonings which he had in his life-time, ſtood in battle array againſt all thoſe torments of the ſtrangury, &c. what thoſe διαλογισμοὶ or reaſonings of Epicurus were, appears in his Epiſtle to Menæceus in Diog. Laert. wherein, as in an apology for himſelf, and a declaration of the truth of his opinions, he confeſſes 'tis not eating or drinking, or any other of the ſenſualities of the world put together that beget a pleaſant life, ἀλλὰ νήφων λογισμὸς, καὶ τὰς αἰτίας ἐξερευνῶν πάσης αἱρέσεως καὶ φυγῆς, καὶ τὰς δόξας ἐξελαύνων, ἀφ' ὧν πλεῖστος τὰς ψυχὰς καταλαμβάνει θόρυβος, but a ſober diſcourſe, or reaſoning, and ſuch as ſearches out the cauſes of all choice or averſation, and drives away thoſe falſe opinions, from which the greateſt perturbation, that ſeizeth on our mind, doth proceed. This νήφων λογισμὸς, &c. this ſober reaſoning what are the true cauſes of choice and averſation, that is, what is to be choſen or rejected upon true rational grounds, done or not done, was Epicurus's διαλογισμὸς, the remembrance of which brought him ſo much inward pleaſure in the midſt of his torments. This * St. Ambroſe (reciting part of that Epiſtle of his) renders ſobria diſputatio, a ſober diſputing, and by and by repeating the ſame again, continens vita, a continent life, and in * another place, ſobrietas mentis, ſobriety of mind. And Cicero Tuſc. Quæſt. l. 5. mentioning his cheerfulneſs at his death, tranſlates this διαλογισμῶν μνήμη, Inventorum ſuorum memoria & recordatio, the remembrance of the moral rules which he invented. So that the λογισμὸς and διαλογισμὸς ſignifies there, (and ſo moſt probably here alſo) that reaſoning of mens hearts by which they reſolve and determine what they may and may not do, and accordingly regulate the actions of their lives; that ſpecial act of their judicium practicum, which hath the governing of their practice, and conſequently διάκρισις διαλογισμῶν, is, the judging, or condemning, of other mens courſes. Which practice was not to be approved of, or encouraged in the Judaizer on one ſide, as on the other ſide he that made uſe of his Chriſtian liberty was not to reject, but receive him to his communion, tho' he were erroneouſly and unneceſſarily ſcrupulous in point of the Moſaical obſervances. And ſo this firſt verſe is the breviate of the whole chapter, which is all on theſe two heads, that the Jewiſh Chriſtian that underſtood his own liberty muſt not deſpiſe and reject the Judaizing ſcrupulous believer, and that the Judaizer muſt not judge or condemn the other, ſee v. 3. &c. and c. 2. 1. b. κρίνει

V. 5. Eſteemeth] What κρίνειν here ſignifies, muſt be reſolv'd by the ſpecial, not vulgar uſe of the word among authors. It is uſed ſometimes for approving, giving the ſuffrage in a competition; ſo * S. Chryſoſtom uſeth together ταύτῃ τίθεται τὰς ψήφους καὶ τὰς κρίσεις, he gives his ſuffrage, and his ſentence, or judgment, to this. So in Xenophon, Κύρ. παιδ. l. 8. τοὺς μὴ ἑαυτὸν κρίνοντας ἐμίσει he hated them that did not adjudge the victory to him. So Ariſtotle, l. 1. de An. c. 11. πάντα τὰ στοιχεῖα κρίτων εἴληφε πλὴν τῆς γῆς, every of the elements but the earth, had ſome Philoſopher or other that gave his ſuffrage to it, that it was the ſoul, or principal of all things. So Plato in Philebo, εἴ τινα πρὸ αὐτῆς ἄλλην κρίνομεν, if we preſer any before it. So when of Epicurus 'tis ſaid κρίνει ἡδονὴν, he defends, or gives his vote to, pleaſure that it is the ſummum bonum. And in the Epigram,

Οὐδὲ γὰρ ἡ ψυχὴ τὸ φαγεῖν κρίνουσα γέγηθεν,

For the ſoul rejoyceth not as preferring eating before all things. And ſo here, ὃς μὲν κρίνει ἡμέραν παρ' ἡμέραν, one prefers one day before another, but another approves every day, that is, prefers not any before any.

V. 15. Grieved] Λυπεῖσθαι here ſignifies to be grieved, as that notes being wounded or galled in his courſe, & by that means driven off from the profeſſion of Chriſtianity. That it ſignifies ſo, appears by the Context, comparing this verſe with v. 13. where the brothers having a ſcandal, that is, gall-trap (ſee Note on Mat. 11. c.) put in his way, is all one with the λυπεῖται being grieved here, anſwerable to both which together is, σκανδαλίζεται καὶ ἀσθενεῖ, is ſcandalized, (or galled) and made weak, or ſick, or faint, or wounded, v. 21. For it is to be obſerved that λύπη grief or ſorrow, is oft taken for the cauſe of ſorrow, diſeaſe, or wound, or gall, as ὀδύνη ψυχῆς, Eccl. 30. 12. is one that cauſeth grief to the ſoul; and as πένθος mourning, is by Heſychius rendred συμφορὰ calamity, which is the cauſe of mourning; and as φόβος fear ſignifies (the cauſe of fear) danger; according to an Hebraiſm obſervable in theſe writers, where for want of the conjugation Hiphil which in Hebrew ſignifies to cauſe to do any thing, the Greek language is fain to uſe the active to do. So the Hebrew רוה, which ſignifies infirm or ſick, Lam. 1. 22. is by the Greek rendred λυπεῖν, where we read, is faint, as Iſa. 1. 15. πᾶσα καρδία πεφὸς λύπην, the whole heart is faint, that is, very ſick, which is the cauſe of grief; and therefore the ſame word is in other places rendred ὀδύνη and νόσος, Deut. 7. 15. pain or diſeaſe. So אבד which ſignifies deſtruction, and is frequently rendred ἀπώλεια, is Prov. 31. 6. rendred λύπη, οἱ ἐν λύπαις, men in ſorrow, for which our Engliſh have, ready to periſh, agreeably to which S. Paul here joyns (as the interpretation of grieving the brother) deſtroying him. This is far diſtant from that notion which is ordinarily had of this phraſe, as if it ſignified ſorrow, or trouble, or grief for the other man, or rather anger or diſpleaſure againſt him; which being (in this matter) without cauſe (for 'tis ſaid, v. 14. that that which the brother eats is not unclean in its ſelf, and therefore he may lawfully eat it in that reſpect) is wholly to be charged on him that is ſo cauſleſly diſpleaſed or angry, and would not devolve that guilt of ſcandal on him that eats, that here lies on him by the brothers being grieved or wounded.

c. Λυπεῖται

V. 17. Joy] That χαρὰ joy, Gal. 5. 22. ſignifies not the natural paſſion, but the Chriſtian vertue, and that again moſt probably that which is exerciſed toward our brethren. appears by the ἀγάπη charity before and εἰρήνη, peace, &c. after it, and therefore it muſt be underſtood in that notion which ſhall be agreeable thereto,

d. χαρὰ

to, either to ſignify the rejoicing at any good that befals another, but eſpecially at the virtuous actions performed by him (which 1 Cor. 13. 6. is rejoycing in the truth, that is, integrity and ſincerity of another, oppoſite to his ἀδικία doing amiſs precedent) or elſe the deſire or delight of doing good to others, which as a thing very pleaſant to him that hath it, and as the cauſe of joy to them that receive benefit from it, may perhaps be called joy. And tho' the former of theſe notions is the more eaſie and promp, yet that this latter is the more proper to that place may appear probable, by comparing it with the like phraſe here, χαρὰ ἐν πνεύματι ἁγίῳ, joy in the holy Ghoſt, which is here alſo join'd with righteouſneſs and peace, (and all of them, by the matter in hand, the care of not offending the weak brother, appear to be branches of duty to the neighbour) and ſeems contrary to the grieving and wounding the brother, v. 15. that is, the betraying him to any ſin; and is expounded v. 19. by τὰ τῆς οἰκοδομῆς τὰ εἰς ἀλλήλους διώκειν, purſuing thoſe things that belong to edification toward one another, that is, building up in piety, bettering one another, which is here joined with purſuing τὰ τῆς εἰρήνης, the things that belong to peace (as there the joy is with peace it ſelf) and c. 15. 2. by τῷ πλησίον ἀρέσκειν εἰς τὸ ἀγαθὸν πρὸς οἰκοδομήν, pleaſing the neighbour to his good for edification, that is, gratifying or cauſing joy and pleaſure to him in improving his ſpiritual weale, and ſo 1 Cor. 10. the not giving ſcandal to others, v. 32. is exemplified by his pleaſing of all men in all things, not ſeeking his own profit, but the profit of many, v. 33. and ſo not to ſeek his own but that which is another's, v. 24. as it is ſaid of charity, that it ſeeketh not her own, 1 Cor. 13. 5. that is, takes care of others ſafety, not only of her own, doth nothing that may ſcandalize another, and rather then do ſo, abſtains from that which the man himſelf approves of. By all which it ſeems probable that χαρὰ, joy, and joy in the holy Ghoſt, that grace of the Chriſtian, flowing from the ſanctifying Spirit of God, or which is according to the will of God, a holy Chriſtian joy (as rejoicing in the Lord, Phil. 4. is rejoicing in thoſe things (afflictions there) which God would have us rejoice in) is the ſeeking and advancing the ſpiritual weal and good of others, as the grieving of them is the contrary, the wounding of their conſciences, and occaſioning their ſin. 'Tis true, the joy of the holy Ghoſt, 1 Theſ. 1. 6. is the rejoicing in afflictions, contrary to the joy of the world, and ſo rejoycing in hope, Rom. 12. 12. but that hinders not but theſe phraſes, being otherwiſe enclin'd by the context, may ſignify otherwiſe.

Τῷ δὲ δυναμένῳ

V. 23. Is ſin] In this place, 'tis certain the ancient Copies generally added that Benediction which we now find, c. 16. 25. Τῷ δὲ δυναμένῳ ὑμᾶς στηρίξαι κατὰ τὸ εὐαγγέλιόν μου, &c. Now to him that is able to eſtabliſh you according to my Goſpel, and ſo on to the end. Thus we find it in St. Chryſoſtom and Theophylact, &c. And from thence the Poſthumous Notes under Grotius's name infer that the Apoſtle firſt deſigned to end his Epiſtle there. But there is no ground for ſuch conjectural inference. 'Tis certain, Doxologies may be ſeaſonable in other places, and not only by way of concluſion; and ſo we find in the like ſtyle, Τῷ δὲ δυναμένῳ, Now to him that is able, &c. Eph. 3. 20, 21. in the middle of the Epiſtle; and ſo incidently ᾧ ἡ δόξα, to whom be glory, Gal. 1. 5. and more ſolemnly, Τῷ δὲ βασιλεῖ τῶν αἰώνων ἀφθάρτῳ, Now to the incorruptible King of Ages, &c. 1 Tim. 1. 17. almoſt in the beginning. And it is S. Chryſoſtom's Note, Ἔθος δὲι τῷ Παύλῳ εἰς εὐχὰς καὶ δοξολογίας καλαλύειν τὰ παραίνεσιν, it is cuſtomary with St. Paul to conclude an exhortation with prayers and praiſes. And Theophylact, μετὰ τὰ παραίνεσιν εἴωθεν δὲι εὔχεσθαι, After an exhortation he always uſeth to pray. The petitory part of this Doxology is contained in the δυναμένῳ ὑμᾶς στηρίξαι, which is a praying that God who alone is able, will ſtabliſh them; and this ſo proper to the whole buſineſs of the precedent chapter, that it cannot without great injuſtice be taken from it; and therefore without examining the reaſon of its removal (for which we have only probable conjecture) it is all reaſon that it ſhould be fetch'd back from c. 16. 25. and placed here, as it ought to be.

CHAP. XV.

1 WE then that are ſtrong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to pleaſe our ſelves.]

1. They that know the nature & extent of Chriſtian liberty, ought to help and relieve thoſe that do not underſtand it, to be watchful to keep them from falling into ſin, and not pleaſe themſelves too much in reflection on their own ſtrength and knowledge, and neglect or deſpiſe others that have not ſo much.

2. Let every one of us pleaſe his neighbour for his good to edification.

3. For even Chriſt pleaſed not himſelf, but as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me.]

2, 3. Let us rather do what good we can to the edification of other men, after Chriſt's example, who did not conſider the pleaſing of himſelf, but had the ſame common concernments, with the Father, that whatſoever befel God, fell on him, was as tender of God's honour, as if it were done to himſelf. Pſal. 69. 9. ſee John 2. 17.

4. For whatſoever things were written afore-time, were written for our learning; that we thro' patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope.]

4. And if ye think or pretend that thoſe words ſpoken by the Pſalmiſt belong not to you, ye muſt know, that generally ſuch ſayings in the old Teſtament were meant to be our inſtructions and documents; and one principal uſe of them is, that by the examples which we find there of the patience of pious men, and of God's relieving and comforting thoſe that want relief, we might be confident that God will relieve us alſo in due time.

* mind the ſame thing among one another, τὸ αὐτὸ φρονεῖν ἐν ἀλλήλοις

5. Now the God of patience and conſolation grant you to * be like-minded one towards another, according to Chriſt Jeſus,]

5. And that God, for whom we ought to ſuffer, and who will give you that relief, give you alſo the grace of unity and charity, ſuch as Chriſt commanded and expects from you.

† the God and Father, ὁ Θεὸν καὶ πατέρα

6. That ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify † God, even the father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

6. That ye may joyn unanimouſly, Jews and Gentiles, into one, and aſſembling together worſhip and ſerve the Lord, who is both the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, (Eph. 1. 3, 17.) in all unity of affections and form of words.

7. Wherefore receive ye one another, as Chriſt alſo received us to the glory of God.]

7. Wherefore in all humility of condeſcenſion and kindneſs, embrace and ſuccour one another, help them up when they are fallen, inſtead of deſpiſing and driving them from your communion, after the example of Chriſt's uſage toward men, who came from heaven, and laid down his life to relieve us, and there is nothing by which God is more glorified then this.

8. Now I ſay that Jeſus Chriſt was a miniſter of the circumciſion for the truth of God, to confirm the promiſes made unto the fathers:]

8. And that ye may not think fit to deſpiſe the Jewiſh believers, let me tell you, that Chriſt came to them, was by God conſtituted a means or inſtrument of good to the Jews in preaching to them the truth of God, calling them to repentance, and ſo exhibiting and making good to them the promiſes made of old to that people beyond all others.

9. And that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy, as it is written, For this cauſe I will confeſs to thee among the Gentiles, and ſing unto thy name.]

9. And on the other ſide, that the Jew may not condemn and reject the Gentile Chriſtian, or him that makes uſe of his lawful liberty, let him know, that God hath been moſt wonderfully merciful to the Gentiles, and made Chriſt alſo an inſtrument of this mercy to them, after that the Jews had rejected him, and

ſo

ſo hath given them occaſion to magnify his name, according to that of Pſal. 18. 49. I will praiſe thee, and ſing unto thee among the Gentiles, ſignifying thereby, that the Gentiles have cauſe to gives thanks and praiſe him.

10. And ſo Deut. 32.43. 10. And again he ſaith, Rejoice ye Gentiles, with his people.]
the Gentiles are bid to joyn with the Jews in rejoycing and praiſing God.

11. And ſo Pſal. 117. 1. 11. And again, Praiſe the Lord all ye Gentiles, and laud him all ye people.]
all the nations and all the people of the world are called upon to praiſe God.

12. And Iſaiah propheſying of Chriſt, ch. 11. 10. 12. And again Eſaias ſaith, There ſhall be a root of Jeſſe, and he that ſhall riſe to [a] reign over the Gentiles, in him ſhall the Gentiles truſt.]
a. that ſhould come from David's family (under the type of Hezekiah a king of Judah literally deſcending from David) ſaith that he ſhall be for a ſtandard to the Gentiles, to whom they may and ſhall come, and truſt and rely on him.

13. Now that God, in whom all our truſt is repos'd, and from whom all good things are to be received, beſtow on you that cheerful quiet (inſtead of the contentions that have been among you) and that union and concord in the Chriſtian faith, (or without any receding from it) that thereby ye may have that hope, (which the Goſpel beſtows on you on condition of charity, &c.) encreaſed unto you into all abundance, thro' the working of the holy Ghoſt in you. 13. Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope through the power of the holy Ghoſt.]

14. And tho' I doubt not but ye, that are full of virtue and charity, and perfectly know what your Chriſtian Duty is, are alſo without my help able to adviſe one another to do what I now ſay, that is, to abſtain from contemning and condemning one another. 14. And I my ſelf alſo am perſwaded of you, my brethren, that ye alſo are full of goodneſs, filled with all knowledge, able alſo to admoniſh one another.

15. Yet I have thought good to write freely to you, to ſtir you up to the practice of that which you know already, this being a branch of my office and authority Apoſtolical, as well as that of making known the Goſpel. 15. Nevertheleſs, brethren, I have written the more boldly unto you, in ſome ſort, as putting you in mind, becauſe of the grace that is given to me of God,

16. That office, I ſay, to which I was ſent by Chriſt, Acts 9.15. to preach the Goſpel to the Gentiles as well as the Jews, that the Gentiles might be preſented and offered up unto God, as a ſacrifice moſt acceptable unto him, ſanctified, not as other ſacrifices, by any prieſt on earth, but even by the holy Ghoſt, that is, that they might be brought to obey the Goſpel. 16. That I ſhould be the miniſter of Jeſus Chriſt to the Gentiles, miniſtring the Goſpel of God, * that the offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt.]
* that there might be an offering of the Gentiles accept, ἵνα γένηται ἡ προσφορὰ τῶν ἐθνῶν εὐπρόσδ.

17. And for my ſucceſs herein I have ground or matter of great rejoycing, not in my ſelf, but in order to God the author of this ſucceſs. 17. I have therefore * whereof I may glory through Jeſus Chriſt in thoſe things which pertain to God.]
* glorying in Jeſus Chriſt as belonging to God, καύχησιν ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ τὰ πρὸς Θεόν

18. And herein I ſhall not need to be ſo vain as to mention any thing that can be queſtionable, wherein, as an inſtrument in Chriſt's hands, I have wrought, and had this ſucceſs to my work, in bringing the Gentiles to receive and obey the Goſpel; a work which hath been done by miracles, and preaching. 18. For I will not dare to ſpeak of any of thoſe things which Chriſt hath not wrought by me, † to make the Gentiles obedient by word and deed,]
† towards the obedience of the Gentiles, εἰς ὑπακοὴν ἐθνῶν

19. Proving and manifeſting my commiſſion, & the truth of what I ſhould ſay by greater evidences then any prophet of old, by doing all kinds of miracles, as alſo by ſpeaking ſtrange languages, 1 Cor. 14. 18. and receiving and making known revelations from heaven, 2 Cor. 12. 3. And after this manner beginning at Jeruſalem, and taking a circuit thro' Phenice, and Syria, and Arabia, Acts 19. 20. &c. I have diſcharged this my office, and preach'd the Goſpel to the Macedonians which join upon Illyricum. 19. * Through mighty ſigns and wonders by the power of the Spirit of God, ſo that from Jeruſalem, and round about unto Illyricum, I have † fully preached the Goſpel of Chriſt.]
* by the power of ſigns, Ἐν δυνάμει σημείων † fulfilled πεπληρωκέναι

20. By which courſe it appears that I have not only been careful not to preach where ſome other had been before me, upon which it might be ſaid that I did only ſuperſtruct where others had laid the foundation, but I had a kind of ambition in it to make known the Goſpel to them that had never heard of Chriſt. 20. * Yea, ſo have I ſtrived to preach the Goſpel, not where Chriſt was named, leſt I ſhould build upon another man's foundation;]
* And ſuch an ambition have I had to Οὕτω δὲ φιλοτιμούμενον ἐυαγ.

To fulfil that glorious prophecy, Iſa. 52. 15. that they ſhould be brought home to God, that were never preached to before, as the event of Jeremies prophecies ſhould be made good to them to whom the prophecies had not come. 21. But as it is written, To whom he was not ſpoken of, they ſhall ſee; and they that have not heard, ſhall underſtand.]

22. By this means of preaching to ſome new people or other, I have been hindred unexpectedly from coming to you, when I have ſeveral times deſigned it. 22. For which cauſe alſo I have been much hindred from coming to you.]

23. But now having no more occaſion to detain me in theſe parts, that I yet foreſee, and having for many years had an earneſt deſire to viſit you. 23 But now having no more place in theſe parts, and having a great deſire theſe many years to come unto you,]

24. In my journey to Spain I am reſolved to do it, taking you in my paſſage, and expecting that you will accompany me ſome part of my way thither, after I have ſtayed a while, and ſatisfied my ſelf with the pleaſure of being among you. 24. Whenſoever I take my journey into Spain, I will come to you, for I truſt to ſee you in my journey, and to be brought on my way thitherward by you, † if firſt I be ſomewhat filled with your company.]
† if I may firſt in ſome meaſure have my fill of you, ἐὰν ὑμῶν πρῶτον ἀπὸ μέρους ἐμπλησθῶ

* poor of the ſaints, πτωχοὺς τῶν ἁγίων

27. This they have done, and 'twas but due from 'em: for conſidering that theſe Gentile Provinces have been beholden in an higher reſpect to the Jews, have received the Goſpel from them, as indeed from Judea it was that 'twas firſt preached to Macedonia and Achaia, 'tis but reaſonable they ſhould make them thoſe poor returns, contribution to their wants. 27. It hath pleaſed them verily, and their debtors they are: for if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their ſpiritual things, their duty is alſo to miniſter unto them in carnal things.]

28. When therefore this buſineſs is diſpatch'd, and I have delivered to them ſafely this fruit of the Gentiles liberality, I intend then to begin my journey to Spain, and take you in my way thither. 28. When therefore I have performed this, and have ſealed to them this fruit, I will come by you into Spain.]

29. And I am confident, when I come, I ſhall give you ſuch evidences of the great mercy and glorious diſpenſations of God, and the good ſucceſſes which I have had, that you will be much confirmed in the Chriſtian faith by my coming and telling you what I have been able to do, and conſequently that I ſhall bring as much bleſſedneſs to you, and be cauſe of as much Chriſtian joy as is poſſible. 29. And I am ſure that when I come unto you, I ſhall come in the fulneſs of the † bleſſing of the Goſpel of Chriſt.]
† or bleſſing of Chriſt, for the K's MS. reads εὐλογίας Χριστοῦ, and ſo Origen, and Ambroſe, and the Latin.

30. And now I beſeech you for our Lord Chriſt Jeſus ſake, and upon that obligation of Chriſtian love, which he requires, and his Spirit works in your hearts, that you will with great earneſtneſs and intention joyn your prayers with mine to beſeech God. 30. Now I beſeech you, brethren, for the Lord Jeſus Chriſt's ſake, and for the love of the ſpirit, that ye ſtrive together with me in your prayers to God for me,]

32. And

31. That I may be delivered from them that do not believe in Judea, and that my ſervice which I have for Jeruſalem, may be accepted of the ſaints,] 31. That I may be deliver'd from that danger I foreſee in Judea, from ſome refractory men, that tho' they have received the faith, are violently bent againſt me, as an oppoſer of the Moſaical Law, and that the relief which I bring to the poor Chriſtians at Hieruſalem and Judea, may be taken by them in good part, tho' it come from thoſe Gentile provinces.

32. That I may come unto you with joy by the will of God, and may with you be refreſhed.] 32. This would be a means to make me come cheerfully to you, if it pleaſe God to grant it to our prayers, and to have a cheerful being with you.

33. Now the God of peace be with you all. Amen. 33. And the God of all unity and concord bleſs you, and preſerve unity among you all. Amen.

22. I Tertius, who wrote this Epiſtle, ſalute you in the Lord.

23. One that hath uſed great liberality to me and all the Chriſtians.

23. Gaius [mine hoſt, and of the whole Church] ſaluteth you. Eraſtus the † chamberlain of the city ſaluteth you, and Quartus a brother. † ſteward, οἰκονόμος.

24. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you all. Amen.

25, 26. Now to him that is able to keep you from falling into any noxious error, and to eſtabliſh you in the conſtant practice of all that I have preached to you, the ſame that was the preaching or doctrine of Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, when he was here on earth, according to that which we now ſee revealed, and diſcern to be that which was foretold in the Old Teſtament, but not till now taken notice of by men, viz. that the Gentiles ſhould have the Goſpel preach'd to them, which ſecret and all other Chriſtian truths, which have been in the purpoſe of God from all eternity, are now made known or revealed to the Gentiles, that they might believe the Goſpel.

25. Now to him that is of power to eſtabliſh you according to my Goſpel, and the preaching of Jeſus Chriſt, according to the revelation of the myſtery which was kept ſecret ſince the world began,

26. But now is made manifeſt, and by the ſcriptures of the prophets, according to the commandment of the everlaſting God, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith,]

27. To him, I ſay, who is the only wiſe diſpoſer of all this, and who hath managed all by his ſon Jeſus Chriſt's aſſuming of our nature, &c. be all honour and praiſe thro' the ſame Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. Amen.

27. To God only wiſe, be glory thro' Jeſus Chriſt for ever. Amen.]

Annotations on Chap. XVI.

V. 1. Servant of the Church] What διακονῦν, to miniſter, ſignifies in the New Teſtament, hath formerly been noted at large (ſee Luke 8. a.) viz. to relieve the poor, either out of the ſtock of the Church, as adminiſtrators and diſpenſers of others liberality and alms, or, as hoſpitable charitable perſons, out of their own ſubſtance. So the women that adminiſtred to Chriſt, ἐξ ὑπαρχόντων αὐτῶν, out of their own eſtates, and ſo Phœbe here, who is therefore called προστάτις πολλῶν, a reliever, or patroneſs of many, ſee Luke 8. a. and of Paul himſelf, v. 2. and in all probability is the γυνὴ ἀγελφὴ, 1 Cor. 9. 5. the ſiſter, or believing Chriſtian woman, which either did, or, if Paul would have accepted it, would have helped him and Barnabas to eat and drink, v. 4. without labouring with their hands, v. 6. Such as ſhe accompanying the Apoſtles in their journies to preach the Goſpel (as of her it appears by St. Paul's ſending this Epiſtle from Corinth to Rome by her, as 'tis in the ſubſcription) and furniſhing them with all things which they wanted, from whence they are ſaid κοπιᾶν ἐν κυρίῳ, to labour in the Lord, v. 6. & 12. whereupon ſaith the Scholiaſt, that the Apoſtles carried about with them ſome matrons of good report, εἰς τὰς ἀναγκαίας αὐτῶν χρείας χορηγούσας, that made proviſion for their neceſſary uſes, ὡς αὐτοὺς λοιπὸν ὄντας σὺν τούτοις ἀμεριμνους μόνῳ τῷ κηρύγματι ἀπαχολεῖσθαι, That the Apoſtles being free from thoſe cares might be at leiſure for preaching only; and Theophylact, αἱ ἔυποροι γυναῖκες ἠκολούθουν τοῖς ἀποστόλοις χορηγοῦσαι αὐτοῖς τὰ ἀναγκαῖα, καὶ πᾶσαν ἀμεριμνίαν ὂτι τούτοις σπουδάζωσι, rich women followed the Apoſtles, and provided them neceſſaries, and eaſed them of all that care, &c. V. 7. Apoſtles] Ἀπόστολος Apoſtle ſignifies primarily that office whereunto the Twelve were ſet apart by Chriſt immediately, and ſo that of S. Paul and Barnabas, ſent immediately by appointment of the H. Ghoſt, Acts 13. 2. Secondarily it belongs to ſome others after, that received the like Commiſſion from the Twelve, or from S. Paul; thus is James the Biſhop of Hieruſalem often called an Apoſtle. And ſo ſaith Theodoret of thoſe firſt times, that thoſe which were after called Biſhops, were then called Apoſtles. So, ſaith he, Epaphroditus is called Apoſtle of the Philippians, Phil. 2. 5. becauſe he was their Biſhop. So Clemens Romanus is by Clem. Alexandrinus, Str. l. 4. called Ἀπόστολος Κλήμης, Clemens the Apoſtle. So is Ignatius is by S. Chryſoſtom called ἀπόστολος καὶ ἐπίσκοπος, Apoſtle and Biſhop. So of Timothy, ὁ ἀπόστολος Τιμόθεος, The Apoſtle Timotheus was made Biſhop of Epheſus, ſaith an anonymous writer in * Photius. So that Thaddæus, that was ſent by Thomas to the King of Edeſſa, is ſtyled in Euſebius, l. 1. c. ιβ'. ἀπόστολος Θαδδαῖος, the Apoſtle Thaddæus. So Mark in Epiphanius, Hær. 51. and in Euſebius, l. 2. c. κδ'. So Luke alſo by Epiphanius, Hær. 51. And if it be he which is mention'd 2 Cor. 8. 18. in the ſtyle of who is praiſed for the Goſpel, or for preaching thro' all the Churches (as Ignatius affirms, Ep. to the Epheſ. and tho' Baronius affirm it to be Silas, and * Theodoret, Barnabas, yet Titus Boſtrenſis on Luke 1. p. 763. C. and S. Jerom. on 2 Cor. 8. and from him others have generally conceived to be he, being a conſtant companion of S. Paul in all his travels, as far as the book of the Acts reaches, and therefore is ſaid by * Euſebius to have written the Goſpel from other men's teſtimonies, but the Acts αὐτόπτης, from his own ſight) and not only ſo, but, as it follows, v. 19. ordained by the Churches συνέκδημος ἡμῶν, Paul's fellow traveller; then there will be little queſtion, but that title might belong to him, and that he was one of thoſe which are called there, v. 23. Ἀπόστολοι ἐκκλησιῶν, Apoſtles of the Churches. Whether this ſenſe do belong to the word in this place, it will be yet uncertain, becauſe tho' it be granted that in thoſe other places the ſecondary Apoſtles were certainly meant (and beſide this there is no other un-named, but thoſe which confeſſedly belong to the twelve Apoſtles, &c.) yet 'tis poſſible that theſe here, Andronicus and Junias, may not be called Apoſtles, but only ἐπίσημοι, noted, known men ἐν Ἀποστόλοις, among the Apoſtles, that is, among the twelve Apoſtles, as well they might be, having been Chriſtians more anciently then S. Paul, and ſo converted either by the Apoſtles probably, or by Chriſt himſelf. 'Tis true after all this, that in the Conſtitutions of the Emperors we find Apoſtoli Synagogarum, Apoſtles of the Synagogues, whoſe office it was among the Jews to gather up the dues of the Patriarch that lived in Paleſtine. And proportionably to thoſe the word Apoſtles might ſignify no more then meſſengers of the Churches, ſent about Eccleſiaſtick affairs, ſuch as are in Ignatius his Epiſtles, called θεοδρόμοι or ἱεροπρεσβευταὶ ſacred or divine officers, or meſſengers. But it appears not, that in any place of the New Teſtament, the word is uſed in this ſenſe. See Note on Luke 6. c. and on John 20. 21.

V. 16. Holy kiſs] The cloſe of all the Chriſtians prayers was wont to be in form of benediction, and that Benediction, the wiſhing all charity and unity among them, after the example of the love of God toward them in the known form, The grace, or charity of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the love of God, and the communication, or bounty of the holy Ghoſt, be with, or among you, always, that is, be continued among you, as it is from every perſon of the Trinity toward you. And this being the form of diſmiſſing the aſſembly, it was ceremoniouſly obſerved among them to part with the kiſſing one another. So ſaith Juſtin Martyr, Apol. 2. deſcribing the Church-meetings, ἀλλήλους φιλήματι ἀσπαζόμεθα πανομένων τῶν εὐχῶν, when we make an end of prayers, we ſalute one another with a kiſs, which is therefore called the kiſs of peace: and Tertullian de Orat. Oſculum pacis eſt ſignaculum orationis, the kiſs of peace is the ſeal of prayer. This therefore is here called the holy kiſs, and S. Paul's bidding them ſalute one another with it, is in effect all one as his pronouncing that Benediction which was wont to be attended with it.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE [a] CORINTHIANS.

a. Κορίνθιοι

OF the Epiſtles to the Corinthians, theſe few things may be fit to be premiſed.

1. That this city being in it ſelf an eminent city, grown rich and populous by trade and merchandice, and luxurious and libidinous to a proverb, was the place where the Proconſul of Achaia fix'd his ſeat, and after its converſion to the faith, the metropolis or mother city of all Achaia or Greece, and ſo is not, in the inſcription of this Epiſtle, to be look'd on as the Church in that one City, but as containing under it all the Chriſtians of all Achaia, which having been firſt converted by S. Paul, this Epiſtle is now addreſs'd to them all, under their Govetnours, or Biſhops through that whole region. This is diſtinctly ſet down 2 Cor. 1. 1. where to the Church of God which is at Corinth is added, and to all the Saints which are in all Achaia; and that probably is the importance of the phraſe, 1 Cor. 1. 2. to all that have the name of Chriſt called on them, (that is, to all Chriſtians) ἐν παντὶ τόπῳ in every place, that is, in all that region, and not only in that one city, but ἐν πᾶσι χώραις τῆς Ἀχαΐας in all the Coaſts of Achaia. Accordingly what S. Paul ſaith to them of Apollos, that he water'd them, 1 Cor. 3. 6. is in the ſtory affirm'd of all Achaia, as well as of that city, Act. 18. 27. when he was willing to paſs into Achaia, the brethren wrote to the diſciples (through all Achaia, not only at Corinth) that they ſhould receive him, and when he came, (that is, whither he purpoſed to paſs, into Achaia) he contributed much aſſiſtance to the believers there. So when he ſpeaks of the forwardneſs of their, (that is, the Corinthians) liberality, 2 Cor. 9. 2. Achaia, ſaith he, was ready a year ago; and ſo Rom. 15. 26. Macedonia and Achaia thought good to make a collection, &c. and ſo it appears again by another paſſage, 2 Cor. 11. 9. 10. And hence it is that Rom. 16. 16. he tells them that the Churches of Chriſt (in the plural) ſalute them, and v. 1. mentions the Church in Cenchrea a maritime city in Achaia, from whence S. Paul took ſhipping, Act. 18. 18. when he departed from thence to Syria.

ἅγιοι ἐν ὅλῃ Ἀχαΐᾳ

ἐν Παντὶ τόπῳ

2dly, For the time and manner of planting Chriſtianity among theſe Corinthians, and the reſt of Achaia or Greece, the ſtory in the Acts may be conſulted, ch. 18. 1. where about the fiftieth year of Chriſt, Paul comes from Athens to Corinth, and meets Aquila and Priſcilla there, ſoon after Claudius his baniſhing the Jews from Rome; with them Paul wrought in his trade of tent-making, and at the ſame time he preach'd the Goſpel to them through that region, to which he oft refers in theſe Epiſtles, telling them how freely, (without making gain of them, or putting them to any charge) he had preach'd the Goſpel to them. Soon after Silvanus and Timotheus came to him out of Macedonia, and for the ſpace of eighteen months he abode in thoſe parts, wrought many miracles, 2 Cor. 12. 12. and converted many, though, as it appears, he was oppoſed by the incredulous Jews, and brought before Gallio, Proconſul of Achaia, and accuſed by them, Act 18. When Paul went from thence, he left Priſcilla and Aquila by the way at Epheſus, Act. 18. 19. and they meeting with Apollos there, and inſtructing him more perfectly in the doctrine of the Goſpel, fitted him for his journey to Achaia, whither he ſoon went, and confirm'd them in the faith which Paul had planted among them, being much too hard for the Jews, who were his chief oppoſers there, Act. 18. 28.

3dly, For the time of writing this firſt Epiſtle, two circumſtances will aſſiſt us to diſcern it. Firſt, c. 15. 32. there is a touch or intimation of his danger at Epheſus, fighting with the beaſts there, which will appear, (ſee Note on ch. 15. c.) to be that which was occaſioned by Demetrius, Act. 19. This therefore was now paſt at the writing of this Epiſtle; and though the next thing which in the Acts is mention'd after that, is his departing to Macedonia, Act. 20. 1. yet by the date of it from Epheſus, which we find in many copies of the ſubſcription of the Epiſtle, we have reaſon to believe, that his remove was not ſo ſudden, but that this Epiſtle was written firſt, and ſent from thence. And accordingly we may interpret his words, ch. 16. 8. (which contain a ſecond circumſtance) that he will tarry at Epheſus till Pentecoſt, that is, till the time of his going up to Jeruſalem, which he had determined to do that year at Pentecoſt. For that after this he ſhould come again to Epheſus, or to any other part of Aſia, and write from thence, (as by the ſalutations of the Aſiaticks 'tis apparent he did, ch. 16. 18.) before his going to Jeruſalem, is not reconcileable with the paſſages in the Acts, ſet down ch. 20. where in his journey from Epheſus v. 1. we find him at Eaſter at Philippi, and after that at Troas, and though he paſs through Aſia, yet his haſte was ſo great, to reach Jeruſalem before Pentecoſt, that he could not put in at Epheſus, v. 16. but was fain to tranſact that buſineſs at Miletus, that would have call'd him to Epheſus, v. 17. If this be thus rightly concluded for the place of writing this Epiſtle, then the time will be concluded alſo, at the end of his three years ſtay in Aſia, Act. 20. 31. that is, Anno Chriſti 54. Before which time, through the Gnoſticks and Judaizers, great ſchiſms and diviſions had broken out at Corinth, and in other cities of that Province, and many other foul corruptions had crept in (by falſe, heretical teachers, and even the denying of the reſurrection by ſome of the Chriſtians there) which cauſed the writing of this Epiſtle. And upon the ſame occaſions and ſubjects was Clement's Epiſtle, ſome years after, written unto them, which as it uſes all arguments to reproach the unreaſonableneſs of their ſchiſm and commotion againſt their preſent Governours, ſo it inſiſts at large on the proving the Reſurrection.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. [* a called Apoſtle κλητὸς Ἀπόστολος † the brother ὁ ἀδελφὸς * the called ſaints κλητοῖς ἁγίοις † are call'd by the name * both of them and of us, αὐτῶν τε καὶ ἡμῶν] PAul [* called to be an Apoſtle] of Jeſus Chriſt, through the will of God, and Soſthenes † our brother,]

1. See Rom. 1. 1. and note on Mat. 10. c.

2. Unto the Church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are ſanctified in Chriſt Jeſus, * called to be ſaints, with all that in every place † [a] call upon the name of Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, * both theirs and ours,]

2. To the Church of God at Corinth, to thoſe that through the faith of Chriſt have been ſanctified to the ſpecial ſaints (Rom. 1. 7.) both Jews and Gentiles.

that are in that city, together with all other Chriſtians in every place within the regions of Achaia,

3. Grace be to you and peace from God our father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

4. for the great mercy afforded you in the preaching the Goſpel to you, and

4. I thank my God always on your behalf, [for the grace of God which is given you † by Jeſus Chriſt,] all the graces ſo viſible among you, conſequent to that.

† in ἐν

b. c. d. 5, 6, 7. For in all things belonging to Chriſt ye have been very plentifully furniſh'd, either in all ability of inſtructing others, and in underſtanding of myſteries, or elſe in having the Goſpel firſt preached, and then farther explained to you; the one at the firſt planting of the faith among you by me, the other by the watering of Apollos; ſo that now there is no need of any addition to be made, but only that you perſevere in what you have, expecting this coming of Chriſt to the deliverance of the faithful, and remarkable deſtruction of all other, his enemies and crucifiers;

5. * That in every thing † ye are enriched by him, in all * [b] utterance, and in all knowledge.

6. Even as the teſtimony of Chriſt † was [d] confirm'd in you.

7. So that he come behind in no gift, waiting for * the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt;]

c * For ὅτι † ye have been enriched, ἐπλουτίσθητε * word † hath been eſtabliſhed among you * revelation ἀποκάλυ. ψιν

8. Which Chriſt will, I doubt not, give you grace to hold out till this time comes, and to be found ſincere Chriſtians at that time, when all others ſhall be deſtroyed.

8. Who ſhall alſo confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameleſs in the day of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

9. For of this be confident, that God will make good his promiſe, and having called you to the knowledge of the Goſpel, and participation of the graces reach'd out to you therein, will never fail you in any thing elſe that is needful for you, if you do not fail your ſelves.

9. God is faithful, by whom we were called unto the † fellowſhip of his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.]

† communication or participation, κοινωνίαν, ſee Act. 2. c.

10. That therefore which I firſt exhort you to, and that with all earneſtneſs poſſible, (as the prime addition to thoſe gifts and graces that are among you) is this, that ye all teach the ſame doctrine, and nouriſh charity and unity, that there be no diviſions in your Churches, but that ye be compacted and united, as members of the ſame body, in the ſame belief and affections.

10. Now I * beſeech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that ye all ſpeak the ſame thing, and that there be † no diviſion among you: but that ye be perfectly joined together in the ſame mind, and in the ſame Judgment.]

* exhort παρακαλῶ † not ſchiſms, μὴ σχίσμα. τα

11. This Exhortation, I ſuppoſe, ye have need of, having had information by thoſe of Chloe's family, (ſee ch. 16. 17.) that there are ſchiſms among you.

11. For it hath been declared unto me of you, my brethren, by them which are of the houſe of Chloe, that there are contentions among you.]

12. My meaning is, that ſome pretend their doctrine was taught them peculiarly by Paul, and differs from what others teach; others that they have theirs from Apollos, or from Peter, or from Chriſt himſelf.

12. Now this I ſay, that every one of you ſaith, I am of Paul and I of Apollos, and I of Cephas, and I of Chriſt.]

13. Now ye muſt know that the doctrine of Chriſt muſt not differ from it ſelf; and therefore if Paul preach any thing contrary to what Chriſt taught, Paul muſt not be heeded in compariſon with Chriſt, the foundation of your faith being, not Paul, but Chriſt.

13. Is Chriſt divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized * in the name of Paul?]

* into εἰς

14, 15, 16. For my part, I am ſo far from pretending any ſuch matter, from having baptized you into the faith of Paul, that I never did baptize above two of you, Criſpus and Gaius, and the houſhould of Stephanas, as I remember.

14. I thank God that I baptized none of you, but Criſpus and Gaius, 15. Leſt any ſhould ſay † that I had baptized in mine own name.

16. And I baptized alſo the houſhold of Stephanas; beſides I know not whether I baptized any other.]

† or, that ye were baptized (for the King's MS. reads ἐβαπτίσθη ſε) into my name εἰς τὸ ἐμὸν ὄνομα

17. For Chriſt did not principally ſend me to baptize, which others may do as well, but to publiſh the Goſpel to them that never heard it; yet not this, that I am more eloquent then others, and ſo fitter for the work, for this is not my way of publiſhing it, to attract men to the faith by any perſwaſion of humane eloquence, but only by doing as Chriſt hath done before me, by venturing my life in doing it. This was the great means by which Chriſt meant to obtain belief, ſealing his doctrine with his blood, and if I ſhould let eloquence endeavour to ſupply that place, I ſhould diſparage Chriſt's way.

17. For Chriſt ſent me not to baptize, but to preach the Goſpel: not with wiſdom of words, leſt the croſs of Chriſt ſhould be made of none effect.]

18. For the preaching a crucified Saviour, requiring belief to him, obedience to him who was ſhamefully put to death, and believing on whom may probably bring the ſame on us, may ſeem a ridiculous thing to impenitent unbelievers: but to us which have come in to Chriſt by repentance and faith, 'tis the moſt glorious evidence of the power of God.

18. For the † preaching of the croſs is to them that periſh fooliſhneſs: but unto us which are ſaved it is the power of God.]

† word λόγ&

e. 19. And thereby is fulfilled that ſaying of Iſaiah ch. 29. 14. that God will diſpoſe of things quite contrary to what the wiſe men of the world would expect.

19. For it is written, I will deſtroy the [e] wiſdom of the wiſe, and will bring to nothing the underſtanding of the prudent.]

f. 20. Let all the Philoſophers and learned or ſearching men, the Jewiſh interpreters of Scripture, ſhew me ſo many men brought to reformation and virtuous living by their precepts, as we have done by this ridiculous way, as 'tis believed, of preaching the crucified Saviour, or the doctrine of that Chriſt which was put to death by the Jews. Doth it not appear, that all the deep wiſdom of the world is become abſolute folly in compariſon with it?

20. Where is the wiſe? where is the ſcribe? where is the [f] * diſputer of this world? Hath not God made fooliſh the wiſdom of this world?]

* ſearcher

21. For when the heathen world with all their ſtudy of Philoſophy, which is the conſideration of God's infinite wiſdom in the creation and government of the world, did not come to the true knowledge of God, and when the Jewiſh world, depending on their knowledge of the Moſaical Law, did not diſcern or acknowledge God in the miracles and ſufferings and doctrines of Chriſt, God was then pleaſed to ſend us Apoſtles to preach (without any flouriſh of rhetorick) this Goſpel of Chriſt, ſo ſcorned by the wiſe men of the world, and by that means to reduce and reſcue out of the ways of the wicked, all thoſe that will believe and embrace it.

21. † For after that, in the wiſdom of God, the World by wiſdom knew not God, it pleaſed God by the fooliſhneſs of preaching to ſave them that believe.]

† For when or, ſeeing that, Ἐπειδὴ γὰρ

22. For as the Jews require ſome ſign or prodigy from heaven to be ſhewed them, to perſwade them the truth of the Goſpel, ſo the Greeks look for profound philoſophy in the Goſpel, and ſcorn it becauſe they think they find not that there.

of

22. For the Jews require a ſign, and the Greeks ſeek after wiſdom.]

23. And yet are not we diſcouraged from going on in our courſe, profeſſing him, in whom we believe, to have been crucified, and knowing that that is a mighty determent and diſcouragement to the Jews, who looked for a victorious Meſſias, that ſhould reſcue them out of their enemies power, and to the Gentiles a ridiculous thing, who are gratified with nothing but eloquence, or profound knowledge:

23. But we preach Chriſt crucified, unto the Jews a * ſtumbling-block, and unto the † Greeks fooliſhneſs:]

* ſcandal Σκάνδαλον † or Gentiles, for the King's MS. reads ἔθνεσι

24. But to the believers (ſee note on Mat. 20. c.) both Jews and Gentiles, matter of greateſt admiration, there being more divine power and wiſdom expreſs'd in this ordering of things ſo, that the Meſſias ſhould be crucified, then in any thing that the Jews or Gentiles could have thought on.

24. But * unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Chriſt the power of God, and the wiſdom of God.]

* to them the called αὐτοῖς τοῖς κλητοῖς

25. For of the actions and diſpoſitions of God's counſels, that which in man's opinion hath leaſt wiſdom in it, is infinitely to be preferred before all that men deem wiſeſt; and that which men think hath nothing of ſtrength or virtue, hath much more of power in it than any thing elſe, it being much a more glorious act of power to raiſe Chriſt from the dead, then not to have permitted him to die, as it was a more likely way to bring any piouſly diſpoſed perſon to receive the doctrine of Chriſt, when he laid down his life for it, then if he had been the moſt proſperous in this world.

25. † Becauſe the fooliſhneſs of God is wiſer then men, and the * weakneſs of God ſtronger then men.

† For the fooliſh part, Ὅτι τὸ μωρὸν * weak part, τὸ ἀσθενὲς

26. For

†look upon Εἰσὶν

26. For † ye ſee your calling, brethren, how that not many wiſe men after the fleſh, nor many mighty, nor many noble are called.] 26. According ye may obſerve who the men are among you that are wrought on, or converted by the Goſpel, not principally the learned politicians, the great or noble families,

27. But God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the world, to confound the wiſe: and God hath choſen the weak things of the world, to confound the things which are mighty.] 27. But the courſe which God hath choſen to take now in Chriſt is that that the world will count fooliſh, and this on purpoſe, that by the ſucceſs of that, the wiſe men of the world may be put to ſhame; 'tis that which the world counts weak, that it may appear how much more power there is in that which the world counts weakeſt in God, then in all their own ſtrength.

28. And baſe things of the world, and things which are deſpiſed, hath God choſen, yea and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are.] 28. And thoſe methods and courſes hath God pitch'd on, which are by the nobles and the potentates look'd on as moſt deſpicable, and empty, and abject, that it may appear how empty are all thoſe things that are moſt valued in the world, when theſe which they ſo much deſpiſe ſhall appear more effectual then they.

29. That no fleſh ſhould glory in his preſence.] 29. That no man may have any reaſon to boaſt of his wiſdom, &c. in God's preſence.

30. But of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us wiſdom, and righteouſneſs, and ſanctification, and redemption:] 30. But of God's ſpecial bounty it is that ye believe, and thereby are ingraffed into Chriſt, who is made by God to us the author of all true knowledge, the cauſe of our juſtification, our ſanctification, and will be alſo of deliverance and reſcue from all calamities that this life is ſubject to, yea and from death it ſelf by raiſing us again; ſee Rom. 8. note l.

31. That, according as it is written, He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.] 31. That all our good may be acknowledg'd to come from God and none elſe.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Ἐπικαλεῖσθαι ὄνομα Ἰησοῦ

V. 2. Call upon the name of Jeſus Chriſt] Ἐπικαλεῖσθαι. ſignifies to be ſurnamed, Mat. 10. 3. Lu. 22. 3. Act. 1. 23 and 4. 36. and 7. 59. and in many other places, and ſo in a paſſive not active ſignification. Agreeable to this ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ is to be called by the name of Jeſus Chriſt, as an agnomen or ſupernomination, which notes the ſpecial relation we have to him; as the ſpouſe of that husband, whoſe name is called upon her, Iſa. 4. 1. (which is the direct literal notation of ὀνομαλεῖσθαι here) or as the ſervant to that maſter, by whoſe name he is called alſo; and ſo ὀνομαλήμψοι ὄνομα Χριστοῦ is but a periphraſis of Chriſtians, and no more. In this ſenſe will it be moſt proper to interpret the like phraſe, Act. 2. 21. and 9. 14, 21. Rom. 10. 12, 13, 14. and generally in the New Teſtament, but when it ſignifies to appeal to, or the like.

b. λόγῳ

V. 5. Utterance] The notion of λόγῳ in this place is ſomewhat uncertain, both becauſe it, and the knowledge following, may either be the matter wherein the Corinthians are ſaid to be enriched, or elſe ſomewhat in the Apoſtles, the means by which they were enriched in Chriſt. If it be taken the firſt way, then it will denote ſpeech or utterance, ability in inſtructing others, and muſt be applied only to them that had ſuch gifts in the Church, and not to the whole Church of Corinth; and thus it ſeems to be uſed, 2 Cor. 8. 7. As ye abound in every thing, in faith, and word, and knowledge: Where as faith, ſo the other two are gifts and graces in them, ſuch are σπουδὴ and ἀγάπη, diligence and love, that are after mention'd. And the other parts of that verſe ἐν παντὶ περισσεύετε ye abound in every thing, agreeing ſo well with ἐν παντὶ ἐπλουτίσθητε here, ye were enriched in all, 'tis moſt reaſonable to determine, that this ſame is the meaning of ἐν λόγῳ in word or ſpeech here alſo. But becauſe there is ſome difference betwixt abounding and being made rich, and the latter of them referrs peculiarly to the gaining of the riches, and ſo to the means of acquiring them, it is therefore poſſible, that it may there be that which, as a gift, was inherent in them, and ſo be agreeable to the reſt of the graces mention'd there, and yet here be the means by which they were enriched; and if ſo, then it will ſignifie the preaching of the word, the doctrine of the Goſpel as it is firſt preach'd and made known to men that had not before received it, as when we read of preaching the word, that notes the doctrine of Chriſt, as it was taught by him, or the articles that were to be believed of him, his death and reſurrection, &c. This is wont to be ſet oppoſite to διδασκαλία doctrine, (ſee 1 Tim. 5. 17.) which is the farther inſtructing of them that have formerly received the faith, and accordingly it may be ſo taken here, where 'tis ſet oppoſite to γνῶσις knowledge, which is the explication and unfolding of the myſteries of religion, and may well be here the watering of Apollos, which was ſuperadded to the planting of Paul, and both of them together make up that which follows, v. 6. the teſtimony of Chriſt confirmed in you, the teſtimony of Chriſt being the Goſpel, c. 2. 1. as 'tis firſt preached, (ſo Joh. 21. 24. where 'tis diſtinguiſhed from the very writing of it, and ſo 1 Joh. 1. 2. but eſpecially Rev. 1. 2.) and the confirming of it, is the farther declaring, and proving, and explaining of it; the firſt being pre-required to the baptizing of any, the ſecond uſeful for the fitting them for that impoſition of hands which we ordinarily call Confirmation.

c. Γνῶσις

1b. Knowledge] That the word γνῶσις here ſignifies the farther explication of the Chriſtian doctrine, may appear, not only by the uſe of it in other places, (ſee Note on 2 Pet. 1. c.) λόγῳ γνώσεως, the word of knowledge, c. 12. 8. that is, being able to explain myſteries, (as λόγῳ σοφίας the word of wiſdom there, it being able to ſpeak parables, or to uſe other ſuch ways of veiling wiſe conceptions) but eſpecially by the circumſtances of the Context here, the Goſpels being confirmed in them, v. 6. And this of γνῶσις being here ſet down as a χάρισμα a ſpecial gift, and the being made rich in every thing, (particularly in word and knowledge) being all one with coming behind, or being wanting (ὑστερεῖσθαι) in no gift, v. 7. this is again according to what we ſee, ch. 12. 8. where γνῶσις is one of the gifts of the Spirit. Thus 2 Cor. 11. 6. where Paul's γνῶσις is preferred above his ſpeech, 'tis his skill in explaining the myſteries of the Scripture, which is ſhewn in his writings in a greater height, then in his ſpeech (when he was preſent with them) was obſervable. Thus Epheſ. 1. 17. πνεῦμα ἀποκαλύψεως, the Spirit of revelation, ἐν ἐπιγνώσει αὐτοῦ, in diſcerning and acknowledging of Chriſt, the underſtanding of Prophecies, and diſcerning Chriſt in them, is there joined with the Spirit of wiſdom, as 1 Cor. 12. 5. γνῶσις had been, and 1 Tim. 4. 13. ἀναγνώσει, part of Biſhop Timothy's task, ſeems to be expounding, not ſimply reading of Scriptures, to which is joined exhortation and doctrine. Thus is γνῶσις uſed in this Epiſtle, c. 8. 1. where this gift of explaining myſteries is look'd on as apt to puff men up, and ſo indeed ſome Hereticks of that time were ſo exalted and puffed up with it, that taking upon them εἶναί τι v. 2. to know ſomewhat, that is, ſome extraordinary matter above other men, (as he that thinks himſelf to be ſomething, that is, ſome extraordinary perſon, all one with πρὸς μέγαν ſome great one, Act. 8. 9.) they call'd themſelves γνωστικοὶ, from γνῶσις, knowing men, from this ſort of ſublime knowledge and explication of difficulties, (as alſo πνευματικοὶ the ſpiritual, from this extraordinary gift) and ſo are referred to in that chapter, under the word γνῶσις, v. 10, 11. and ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις, knowledge ſo called, but not truly ſo, from a falſe, not true Spirit, 1 Tim. 6. 20.

Εἶναί τι

Πνευματικοὶ

Ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις

d. Βεβαιοῦν

V. 6. Confirmed] The word βεβαιοῦν to eſtabliſh, applied here to μαρτύριον teſtimony, may perhaps literally refer to the forinſick cuſtoms among the Jews, where there being three parts of their judicial proceſs, firſt מבוא ריב, the entring of the cauſe, ſecondly, מכונת ריב, ſtabilitio litis, the eſtabliſhment of the matter in diſpute, thirdly, דקר ריב, Job. 29. 16. the ſearching into the cauſe, the ſecond of theſe may be here literally rendred βεβαίωσις, confirmation or eſtabliſhment. For that ſecond conſiſted in the interpoſing of an oath on one ſide, which is therefore called ἀντιλογίας πέρας, Heb. 6. 16. the end of contradiction, that is, of that affirming and denying, which was formerly lawful betwixt the actors, till the oath on one ſide had given the Judge ſome reaſon to incline that way, and that is ſaid to be εἰς βεβαίωσιν in that place, for the ſettling, or eſtabliſhing the cauſe, in that ſenſe wherein the Roman law ſaith, Ὁρκῳ διαφερόμῳ ἀμφισβήτησιν τίμνει, (Pſellus συνοψ. νομ. v. 1243.) an oath takes off the Judge from that dubiouſneſs that before he was in, one affirming and the other denying the ſame thing. By analogy to this, the preaching of the Goſpel by the Apoſtles being called μαρτύριον a teſtimony or witneſs, viz. that which the Apoſtles gave in to the teſtifying the truth of the Goſpel, (being eye-witneſſes thereof) this teſtimony may be ſaid to be eſtabliſhed or confirmed, when beſide the firſt preaching of it, more light, and knowledge, and evidences have been afforded to the removing of all ignorance or doubt from mens minds. And ſo the meaning of the phraſe here τῷ Χριστῷ ἐβεβαιώθη will be clearly this, that the Goſpel which we firſt preach'd, the teſtimony which we gave of Chriſt, hath ſince by ſufficient probation been made good among you, to encline you to conſent to the truth of it.

e. σύνεσις V. 19. Wiſdom] The word σύνεσις ſignifies three things in theſe books: ſometimes the mind, or intellectual faculty, Mar. 12. 33. where God is to be loved with all thy mind, (ſee Note on Rom. 1. l.) ſecondly, an habit of ſcience, or prudence, as here; thirdly, perſpicacity, Epheſ. 3. 4. 2 Tim. 2. 7.

f. Συζητητὴς Αἰῶνος τούτου V. 20. Diſputer] What is the meaning of συζητητὴς in this place is not eaſie to determine, becauſe, as the word it ſelf, ſo the adjunct αἰῶνος τούτου is very capable of a double notion; for if αἰῶνος τούτου be rendred, of this world, then it will ſeem to ſignifie the Heathen world, and ſo σοφὸς, and γραμματεὺς, and συζητητὴς, all be interpreted accordingly, σοφὸς the wiſe moraliſt, as the ſeven wiſe men of Greece and Socrates after, who for the moral learning was by the Oracle proclaimed the wiſeſt man in the world, and γραμματεὺς, the learned philologer, literator, as Tertullian renders it, and συζητητὴς, the ſearcher, or indagator, into the nature of things, which the Hebrews call חוקר העולם this world, the philoſopher, or natural magician. And ſo the next words would encline one to underſtand the place, the wiſdom of the world, v. 20. and the world which by wiſdom knew not God, v. 21. looking moſt directly upon the heathen philoſophers, who are by Baruch deſcribed in theſe words, ch. 3. 23. οἱ ἐκζητοῦντες τὴν σύνεσιν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, they that ſeek out, or ſearch wiſdom on the earth. But then if αἰῶνος τούτου be rendred, of this age, then it may more probably refer to the Jews; as ἄρχοντες τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου, chap. 2. 6. muſt ſignifie the chief of the Jews of that age, which crucified Chriſt, v. 8. that is, cauſed him to be crucified, and there is mention of thoſe, v. 22. and 23. and then σοφὸς may belong to the Jew, and denote their חכמי המרקד, naturalliſts, that undertook to know every work of the creation; and ſo likewiſe γραμματεὺς will belong to the Jew, and ſignifie him that is skill'd in their laws, and which interpreted them to the people according to the literal ſenſe, their Doctors; and then συζητητὴς will have a peculiar notion among them alſo: For it was the cuſtom of the Jews, for many of the learned among them to ſit in the Synagogue, and to ſpeak all of them by way of diſcuſſion, or debate to the ſame matter, (as to find out the true ſenſe of a piece of Scripture) and to that cuſtom, 1 Cor. 14. 29. ſeems to refer, Let the prophets ſpeak, two or three, &c. whence it is that this Synagogue, where they did this, is called בית החרוש, the houſe of ſearching, or inquiſition; and to that cuſtom perhaps refers that which is ſaid of Chriſt, Luke 2. 46. that in the midſt of the Doctors he heard and asked queſtions. So he that interprets the Scripture myſtically and allegorically is call'd בעל המרדש the maſter of enquiry, or myſtical diſquiſition, and abſolutely הדרשן a ſearcher, or enquirer, that is literally συζητητὴς, and that myſtical or allegorical ſenſe דדש דרך, the way of enquiry, and מדרש, συζήτησις, and ſo מדרש תהלים, inquiſitio Pſalmorum, the ſearching of the Pſalms; ſee Elias Levita in the word מדרש. And then the συζητηταὶ αἰῶνος τούτου will be the Jewiſh Doctors which among themſelves enquired into the truth of Scriptures, (which Chriſt ſeems to call ἐρευνᾶν τὰς γραφὰς, ſearching the Scriptures, Joh. 5. 39.) but found not Chriſt there, as they might have done, believed him not. Thus is the word uſed, Act. 6. 9. where ſeveral men are ſaid to riſe up συζητοῦντες τῷ Στεφάνῳ, talking with Stephen, as the Jewiſh Doctors uſed to do one with another, about the ſenſe of Scripture, and Act. 9. 29. 'tis ſaid of Paul, that ἐλάλει καὶ συνεζήτει πρὸς τοὺς Ἑλληνιστὰς, he talked and debated with them about the ſenſe of Scriptures concerning the Meſſias. This cuſtom of the Jews ſeems to be referred to by this word, but yet whether the other circumſtances of the place, which refer it rather to the Heathens, may not ſo far prevail, as that it may be fit to pitch upon a middle interpretation of the word, and to apply this cuſtom of the Jews to ſecular enquiries in the heathen ſchools, I ſhall leave it to be conſidered, and only add, that the making of this place to agree with that of the Prophet, Iſa. 33. 18 ſeems to be a matter of ſome difficulty, the Tex there looking another way, viz. by way of admiration, how the taxes, that were exacted in the time of the ſiege, were ſo ſuddenly ceaſed. For that is the meaning of, Where is the γραμματεὺς; that is, he that even now kept the book of taxes; for γραμματεὺς was the name of them that ſet down the publick acts, as alſo the cuſtoms, and taxes, and revenues of the Kings; and ſo, Where is the שוחל the weigher? that is, the receiver of money; for ſo they received it by weight: and laſtly, where is the numberer of towers? he that reckons and aſſeſſes the ſeveral houſes of the city, every one according to their bigneſs, which was in order again to the exacting of taxes. From this matter that of this text is diſtant enough, and yet may that be ſo far here accommodated, as to expreſs an admiration here, as it was there, at a ſtrange ſudden change wrought among them, although the matter of the change was very different. And yet for the words alſo they thus far agree, that as there was, Where is the ſcribe? ſo here, though in another ſenſe, Where is the ſcribe? that is, doctor or learned man; there the Scribe to regiſter the taxes, the notary, here the learned man or doctor of the law; as there שוחל the weigher, ſo here, with the change but of a letter, without any of the ſound, שוקל the intelligent, or wiſe; and laſtly, as there the numberer of towers, ſo here the enquirer, diſquiſitor of this world, that ſpeaks his ſenſe among others by way of debate or diſcuſſion to find out the truth, as there in the making an aſſeſſment they debated the rate or value of every houſe, to proportion it accordingly. And ſuch applications as theſe by way of accommodating places to very diſtant ſenſes, (eſpecially when the words in the Greek tranſlation will bear them, though the Hebrew will not ſo well) is no extraordinary or ſtrange thing in the New Teſtament; that of Chriſt's going with his parents to Nazareth, that the ſaying might be fulfilled, He ſhall be called a Nazarite, that is, the title of נצר a branch belongs to him, will appear to any as ſtrange and far off as this.

Περιῆτε δυὸ ἢ τρεῖς λαλείτωσαν Ἀκούων καὶ ἐπιρωτῶν

Paraphraſe. CHAP. II.

1. I ſaid I preach'd not the Goſpel to you in any eloquent words, c. 1. 17. (from whence to this place all hath been brought in, on that occaſion, by way of parentheſis) and now I reſume it again, becauſe it is a thing laid to my charge by ſome of you, that I am too plain and mean in preaching the Goſpel to you. An accuſation, or charge, which I am moſt ready to confeſs.

1. AND I, brethren, when I came to you, came not * with excellency of ſpeech, or of wiſdom, declaring unto you the † teſtimony of God.]

* according to height κατ' ὑπεροχὴν

† or myſtery, for the King's MS. reads μυστήριον

2. For I thought it not any way proper for me to go about to mend God's method, and when he had determined the ſum of our doctrine to be the doctrine of Chriſt, which he taught in his life time, together with the confirmation of it by his death (through which alſo we have many precious advantages, as pardon of ſins through his ſatisfaction, &c.) not excluding alſo, but taking in, in an eminent manner, his reſurrection, it had been unreaſonable to think of preaching any thing to you but this doctrine thus confirm'd: ſee chap. 1. 17

2. For I * determined not to know any thing among you, ſave Jeſus Chriſt, and him crucified.]

* thought it not fit, οὐκ ἔκρινα

3. And accordingly when I was among you, I was (in the like manner as Chriſt when he was here on earth) very ill uſed, (ſee note on Rom. 8. m. and Gal. 4. a.) perſecuted for my preaching, and in continual fear of the utmoſt dangers, Act. 18. and this was the method fitteſt for me to uſe to aſſure you of the truth of what I preached.

3. And I was with you in weakneſs, and † in fear, and in much trembling.]

† in much fear and trembling, ἐν φόβῳ καὶ ἐν τρόμῳ πολλῷ

4. And

4. And my * ſpeech and my preaching was not with † enticing words of mans wiſdom, but in [a] demonſtration of the Spirit and of power.]

4. And as for powerful ſpeaking, that which I uſed did not conſiſt in rhetorical proofs or probable arguments of the truth of what I ſaid, ſuch as humane writings are content with, but in plain demonſtration from the prophecies of the old Bible, or the voice of the Spirit ſince, and the miracles done by Chriſt under the Goſpel. a.

5. That your faith * ſhould not ſtand in the wiſdom of men, but in the power of God]

5. That the ground of your faith may not be humane eloquence, &c. but the arguments of perſwaſion, which God hath thought fit to make uſe of.

6. Howbeit we ſpeak wiſdom among them that are perfect: yet not the wiſdom of this † world, nor of the princes of this world, that * come to nought.]

6. Mean while the things which we teach, are (to thoſe men which are arrived to the higheſt pitch of wiſdom) divine and perfect wiſdom, not that which this age boaſts of, or depends on, or in which the rulers of the Jews v. 8. do excell, for all theſe are now a periſhing, their learning and they ready to come to nought. who

7. But we ſpeak the wiſdom of God in a myſtery, † even the hidden wiſdom which God ordained before the world unto our glory.]

7. But that wiſe diſpenſation of God's in giving us his Son, which was hidden under the Jewiſh types, and only darkly ſpoken of by the Prophets, but by God determined from the beginning to be now revealed to us, to the very great honour of us to whom it is ſo revealed.

8. Which none of the * princes of this world knew; for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory]

8. A thing which is not to be imagined, that the chief men among the Jews (v. 6. ſee note on ch. 1. c.) underſtood any thing of, for if they had, they would ſure never have put him to death, appearing by the voice from heaven, and his miracles (as well as by their own prophecies) to be God himſelf, come down from heaven.

9. But as it is written, † Eye hath not ſeen, nor ear heard, neither have entred into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.]

9. To this belongs that of Iſaiah, c. 64. 4. at leaſt it may fitly be accommodated to this purpoſe, that God prepares for them that depend on him, all faithful pious men, ſuch things as they never imagine, or hope for, ſuch is the revelation of his merciful deſigns toward us in the Goſpel. a

10. But God hath revealed them to us by his Spirit; for the Spirit ſearcheth all things, yea, the * deep things of God]

10. And theſe hath God made known to us, not by any fallible deceivable way, but by ſending down his Spirit unto the Apoſtles, which leading them into all truth, teaching them all things, reveals even theſe deep myſteries unto us, which, be they never ſo ſecret in God, muſt needs be known by his Spirit, which knows all the ſecrets of God as perfectly as our own ſpirit knows our ſecrets. who

11. For what man knoweth the things of a man, ſave the ſpirit of a man which is in him? Even ſo the things of God knoweth † no man, but the Spirit of God.]

11. For, as among men, the thoughts, and great concernments, and deſigns of a man, though none elſe knoweth them, yet his own ſpirit doth; ſo theſe divine matters, though none elſe can reveal them to us, yet his Spirit can.

12. Now we have received, not the ſpirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are * freely given to us of God.]

12. And this is that Spirit which we have received, the very Spirit of God, (not the Spirit which ſuggeſts wordly things to us, that inſtructs us in thoſe) to the end that we may reveal to you the infinite mercies of God toward you, which being beſtowed on you, ſhould not in any reaſon be concealed from you.

13. Which things alſo we ſpeak, not in the words which mans wiſdom teacheth, but which the holy Ghoſt teacheth, * comparing ſpiritual things with ſpiritual.]

13. And as the matter of our preaching is divine, and ſuch as was kept ſecret in God, till his Spirit revealed it to us; ſo we proportionably preach it to you, not in an humane, but divine manner, not by uſing ordinary humane means of perſwaſion, but by ſuch arguments as the Spirit of God, in the prophecies of the old Bible, and in his deſcent upon Chriſt, Mat. 3. and by coming down upon his Apoſtles, hath directed, adapting ſpiritual divine arguments to the proving of divine matters.

14. But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are fooliſhneſs unto him: neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned.]

14. But ſuch things as theſe, they that are led only by the light of humane reaſon, the learned philoſophers, &c. do abſolutely deſpiſe, and ſo hearken not after the doctrine of the Goſpel, (ſee note on 1 Tim. 1. c.) for it ſeems folly to them, c. 1. 23. nor can they by any ſtudy of their own come to the knowledge of them, for they are only to be had by underſtanding the prophecies of Scripture, and other ſuch means which depend on divine revelation, the voice from heaven, deſcent of the holy Ghoſt, miracles, &c.

15. But he that is ſpiritual † judgeth all things, yet he himſelf is * judged of no man.]

15. But he that hath made uſe of all theſe afforded him by the Spirit of God, viz. prophecies and voices from heaven, and ſuch other evidences of divine revelation, v. 13. he will be able to underſtand all theſe ſecrets perfectly, and being not himſelf perſwaded by any other arguments, but only by thoſe that he hath thus received from the Spirit of God, he cannot reaſonably be refuted by any other ſort of arguments taken from humane reaſon, or wordly wiſdom.

16. [b] For who hath known the mind of the Lord, † that he may inſtruct him? But we have the mind of Chriſt]

16. For who can be imagined to know more of God's mind then he doth who is informed by the Spirit, that ſo he ſhould teach him God's mind? Certainly no body. And conſequently no body can teach you more of the truth of God then we (to whom Chriſt hath revealed his whole will as far as concerns any man to know) have, or are able to do. b.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Πνεῦμα καὶ δύναμις

V. 4. Demonſtration of the Spirit and power] That πνεῦμα καὶ δύναμις, ſpirit and power may here ſignifie the ſame thing, (as 'tis ordinary for two words or phraſes to be conjoin'd, the one only to explain the other) may ſeem probable from the next verſe, where one only of them is mention'd, δύναμις Θεοῦ, the power of God. But there is no neceſſity that we ſhould ſo interpret it, becauſe the power of God in the fifth verſe being ſet oppoſite to the wiſdom of men, (that is, the humane ways of perſwaſion or eloquence) muſt ſignifie God's powerful ways of perſwading the belief of the Goſpel, and ſignifying ſo, will contain under it the Spirit and power, with the ſeveral notions that may well belong to them; as firſt, taking the ſpirit for the prophecies of the old Bible inſpired by the Spirit of God, and Power for the miracles done by Chriſt. Thus hath Origen expreſs'd the meaning of them, the demonſtration of the Spirit] that is, ſaith he, τὰς προφητείας ἱκανὰς παρεσκεύασε τὸν ἐντυγχάνοντα εἰς τὴν περὶ Χριστοῦ, the prophecies which were ſufficient to give the reader aſſurance of the truth of the things that belong to Chriſt: And of power] that is, πεφασίας δυνάμεις, ὧν ἴχνη ἔτι σώζεται, the miraculous ſtupendious actions, of which the footſteps yet remain, Cont. Celſ. p. 5. But beſide this notion of the Spirit, ſome others it is very capable of; as firſt, that it ſignifies the deſcent of the Spirit of God on Chriſt, joined with that voice from heaven, Mat. 3. This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleaſed, and after, This is my beloved Son, hear him. This may here fitly be called ἀπόδειξις πνεύματος, the demonſtration of the Spirit, an evidence afforded by God immediately from heaven of the truth of the Goſpel, which being joined with the power of Chriſt, both in reſpect of his doctrine and his miracles, were two heads moſt fit to be inſiſted on by S. Paul, for the confirming the truth of the Goſpel. But it may yet farther be applied not to Chriſt perſonally, but to the Apoſtles after him, and then the Spirit will be the deſcent of the Spirit upon them, and by their impoſition of hands, the holy Ghoſt's coming down upon others alſo, Act. 8. 18. and this together with their power of doing miracles may well be their ἀπόδειξις, or demonſtration of the truth of the Goſpel, and be the thing that is meant here. Ἀπόδειξις πνεύματος.

V. 16. For who hath known the——] That this is a citation from Iſa. 40. 13. there is no queſtion, as alſo that the firſt words, Τίς γὰρ ἔγνω νοῦν Κυρίου; for who hath known the mind of the Lord? are ſet down, after this Apoſtle's manner Τίς ἔγνω νοῦν Κυρίου manner, out of the Septuagint. Now the ſame Apoſtle citeth that place again, Rom. 11. 34. and there in the latter part alſo ſets down the Septuagint's words, τίς ἀυτῦ σύμβυλ☉ ἐγένετο; and who hath been his counſellor? which words being not here read, but to τίς γὰρ ἔγνω τὸν νῦν τῦ Κυρίυ, theſe other immediately ſubjoined, ὃς συμβιβάσει ἀυτόν who ſhall inſtruct him? there will be no reaſon to think theſe latter words to be another rendring of that ſecond part of the verſe in Iſaiah. For when the Septuagint had tranſlated it truly out of the Hebrew, why ſhould the Apoſtle, who conſtantly uſeth the Septuagint's tranſlation, and that ſometimes when that varies from the Hebrew, here uſe a new rendring of his own, and for τίς ἀυτῦ σύμβυλ☉ ἐγένετο; who hath been his Counſellor? ſet only ὃς συμβιβάσει ἀυτόν; who ſhall inſtruct him? For this there is no probable reaſon to be given, and therefore it muſt be reſolved, that no more then the firſt words are taken out of that place of Iſaiah, and that the latter words are the Apoſtle's own, to bring them to his preſent purpoſe, Who hath known the mind of the Lord, which ſhall inſtruct him? that is, who doth know the Lord's mind ſo well as to be fit to inform and inſtruct the ſpiritual man? v. 15. for that ἀυτὸν him ſhould ſignifie the Lord, (as they conclude, that make theſe words all one with the latter part of the verſe in Iſaiah) would be very ſtrange, not only becauſe it would be far different from v. 15. of which it is brought for a proof, but alſo becauſe knowing the mind of God, although it be a fit preparative to inſtructing of others, yet is it not ſo for the inſtructing of God himſelf.

CHAP III.

1. And I, brethren, although I was furniſh'd with all manner of ſpiritual gifts, and was able to have revealed to you the higheſt myſteries; yet when I was among you, I could not think fit to treat ſo with you, the greateſt part of you being then but very ſlender proficients in the Goſpel, ſo far from ſpiritual men, (as ſome of you, the Gnoſticks, are wont to ſtyle themſelves) from men inſtructed by the Spirit of Chriſt, that you were gotten no higher then the imperfections and paſſions and ſins of men, meer beginners in Chriſtianity.

1. AND I, brethren, could not ſpeak unto you as unto ſpiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Chriſt.]

2. This was the reaſon that I gave you ſuch tender food, proceeded not to reveal the myſteries of Chriſtianity to you, for you were not fit for any higher diet, nor indeed yet are ye.

2. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat, for * hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able.]

* ye were not then able ἔτι οὐ δυνασθε

3. For ye are not yet raiſed to any pitch of ſpiritual or Chriſtian temper, as may appear by the ſchiſms and factions that are among you, which being ſo contrary to the commands of Chriſt, which are all for peace and charity, as long as they are among you, ye are advanced but little above the pitch of meer men, thoſe which have nothing of Spirit in them.

3. For ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envying, and ſtriſe, and diviſions, are ye not † carnal, and walk * as men?]

† or men, for the King's MS. reads ἄνθρωποι

* according to man, κατ' ἄνθρωπον who

4. And herein your carnality conſiſts: one pretends to follow the doctrine of Paul, another of Apollos, in oppoſition to all other Chriſtians, and they that hold with one, hold againſt the other. And what is this uncharitableneſs but carnality?

4. For while one ſaith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?]

5. Where firſt it ought to be conſidered, that Paul or Apollos are not the authors of our faith, but only inſtruments of conveying the doctrine of Chriſt to us, (and conſequently muſt not be conceived to teach diverſe doctrine) according to the different commiſſions given them by the holy Ghoſt.

5. Who then is Paul? and who is Apollos? but miniſters by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man.]

6. And ſo though I have taught you the doctrine of Chriſtianity, and made you believers, of heathens, and † Apollos baptized you, when you had been thus brought to the faith by me, (I being ſent by Chriſt, not to baptize, but to preach the Goſpel, chap. 1. 14, 17.) yet the ſucceſs of all the whole work, in making either my preaching or his baptizing effectual, was from God, not from us.

6. I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increaſe.]

† Ego de Pò gam catechumenum feci, Apollo catechumenum baptizavit. Optat.

7. And therefore there is no great matter imputable either to one or other, as that either of us ſhould be deemed the author of your faith, but God only, who hath made our endeavours ſo effectual to you.

7. So then, neither is he that planteth any thing, neither is he that watereth; but God that giveth the increaſe.]

8. But then, ſecondly, the doctrine of both of us is but one, both of us have had the ſame deſign and purpoſe of ſettling men in the doctrine of Chriſt, though, according to the labour that either of us have taken in the work, we may have different degrees of reward. And conſequently, though one labourer may deſerve more honour then another, yet ought not this to be an occaſion of diviſion or ſchiſm among you, becauſe our deſign and doctrine being the ſame, your faith ought to be the ſame alſo.

8. Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one: * and every man ſhall receive his own reward according to his own labour.]

9. We indeed that preach, and they that baptize, are both ſervants or Officers of God, and co-operate one with another in that great work of dreſſing and building up of ſouls, which when 'tis wrought, muſt not yet be attributed to us the inſtruments, but only to God, the author and perfecter of all.

9. For we are † labourers together with God; ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building.]

† fellow-labourers of God, Θεοῦ συνεργοὶ

10. God gave me abilities and commiſſion to plant and preach the Goſpel, to do as the maſter-workman doth, to lay the foundation; and accordingly I have done, preached the faith, laid the foundation, Jeſus Chriſt and him crucified, c. 2. 2. and ſome others that came after me to this Church which I had planted, v. 6. (I mean not Apollos, for he only watered what I had planted, baptized and farther inſtructed whom I had converted, c. 1. 5, 6, 7. but) ſome others, I ſay, which I hear have come in, have ſuperſtructed on my foundation ſomewhat which I never deſign'd. But let them take heed what they do; for if they have ſuperſtructed any other, but that one pure precious doctrine of Chriſt crucified, and conſtant confeſſion of him in time of perſecution, if from the Gnoſticks they receive any infuſions contrary to theſe, let them look to it.

11. For the faith of Chriſt being the foundation which I have laid, and that indeed the only one which can poſſibly be laid;

11. For other foundation can no man lay then that is laid, which is Jeſus Chriſt.]

12, 13, 14. That which is regularly to be built thereon, is conſtant confeſſion of Chriſt, in deſpight of afflictions, which like gold and ſilver, &c. is but refined and purified, but not conſumed in the fire. But for any doctrine of wordly wiſdom, v. 18. (ſee note a) of prudential compliances with the perſecutors, Jews or Gentiles, if any ſuch earthy material be brought in in ſtead of it, it ſhall be brought ſuddenly to the trial; for that judgment of Chriſt which ſhall ſhortly paſs upon them, for the deſtroying all corrupt believers on one ſide, and delivering and owning all true believers, (ſee Rom. 13. d. and Heb. 10. a.) on the other, ſhall deal with them, as fire doth with that which is put in it to be tried, (preſerving and refining what is true and good metal, and making it more illuſtrious, but burning up all that is combuſtible) burn up and conſume all this worldly wiſdom, and burniſh the conſtancy of others like Gold in the fire, (ſee Rev. 3. 18.) and preſerve ſuch, whilſt all others are involved in their own ſubtilities, v. 19. And ſo all that adhere ſincerely to Chriſt, they ſhall be ſure not to miſs their reward, preſervation here in this world, beſides that other that expects them eternally.

12. Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, ſilver, precious ſtones, wood, hay, ſtubble.

13. Every man's work ſhall be made manifeſt: for the day ſhall declare it, † becauſe it ſhall be revealed by fire; and the fire ſhall try every man's work, of what ſort it is.

15. But if it prove combuſtible matter, if the doctrine or practice ſhall upon examination prove falſe and unchriſtian, and ſo will not bear that trial, (ſuch are the Gnoſtick's doctrines of denying Chriſt, when perſecuted) it ſhall then be ſo far from helping him to any advantage, as the Gnoſtick com-plier hopes it will, that it ſhall bring the greateſt danger upon him: and if upon timely repentance, or by his not having actually denied Chriſt (for all his ſuperſtructing of ſome erronious doctrines) he be more mercifully dealt with by Chriſt, and freed from having his portion with unbelievers, yet it ſhall go hard with him, as with one that is involved in a common fire, and hardly eſcapes out of it.

16. Know ye not that ye are the Temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwel†among you, ἐν ὑμῖν leth † in you?]

16. By this that I ſay, you cannot but diſcern what care you are obliged to take to beware of theſe falſe ſeducing teachers that creep in among you: You are a Church of God's plantation, built as the Temple among the Jews, God's direction given for every part of it; ye have had the Spirit of God to teach you all true doctrine and pure practices, by your Apoſtolical plantation, and ſo to dwell and continue among you, and oblige you to all purity.

17. If any man * defile the Temple of God, him ſhall God deſtroy: for the Temple *corrupt φθείρει
†as many of you as there are εἶτινες ἐστε ὑμεῖς of God is holy, † which temple ye are.]

17. And therefore, if any falſe teacher ſhall bring in any unclean heretical doctrine into ſuch a Church of God's planting, a place of God's reſidence, and ſo pollute or defile God's dwelling-place, (as when Nadab and Abihu offered ſtrange fire on God's altar) then, as they were devoured by fire from heaven, ſo he muſt expect ſevere puniſhment. For all ye that are Chriſtians make up this one temple of God's, and that being a conſecrated Society, muſt not be profaned or polluted with ſuch impure doctrines as the Gnoſticks every where infuſe.

18. Let no man deceive himſelf: if any man among you ſeemeth to be wiſe in this *age αἰῶνι world, let him become a fool, that he may be wiſe.]

18. And for that other conceit of theirs, by which they get ſo many proſelytes, that of the lawfulneſs of denying Chriſt in time of perſecution, by which they promiſe themſelves ſecurity from all the preſent evils, let no man cheat himſelf with this perſwaſion; any man that thus thinks to be more provident than other men, and by this means to ſecure himſelf, let him know that this will not thrive with him, he will find himſelf deceived at laſt (ſee v. 15. and Rev. 3. 18.) there is no ſuch prudent way for him to ſecure himſelf, as to lay aſide this worldly wiſdom, and conſtantly and cheerfully to adhere to Chriſt, when in the eye of the world it ſeems moſt fooliſh to do ſo.

19. For the wiſdom of this world is but fooliſhneſs with God; for it is written, He taketh the wiſe in their own craftineſs.]

19. For God is wont to take off, and preſerve the plain ſimple Perſon that avowedly adheres to him, and to out-wit the ſubtile deſigner; and it will ſoon befal thoſe pretenders, according to that of Job 5. 13. they that think to be wiſer than other men, are by ſo much verier fools than others, and ſo are diſcerned to be.

† machinations διαλογισμοὺς
20. And again, The Lord knoweth the † thoughts of the wiſe, that they are vain.]

20. And to the ſame purpoſe is that of Pſal. 94. 11. that all the ſubtile contrivances of crafty worldly-minded men prove vain and improſperous.

*all are πάντα ὑμῶν
21. Therefore let no man glory in men, for * all things are yours.]

21. Let no man therefore factiouſly or ſchiſmatically divide from the unity of the Church, following ſuch or ſuch a maſter or inſtructer, and ſo quarelling or contending with others, v. 4. For all the gifts that are in the Church were given for your uſe, and whatſoever any man can boaſt of, it is not peculiar to him, but belongs as well to every other perſon in the Church.

† inſtant ἐνεστῶτα, ſee Rom. 8. 38.
22. Wherefore Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things
† preſent, or things to come, all are yours,]

22. He that planted the faith among you, and he that baptized you, and he that ſuperſtructed upon this foundation, are all ſubſervient to your uſes, and not to be maſters of your faith, much leſs any of them to be ſet up againſt the other, to make diviſions and rents among you; and ſo is likewiſe all humane wiſdom, or knowledge of natural things, ſo is God's mercy to us in keeping us alive, ſecuring ſome of us from the malice of our enemies, and delivering up others of us to death, for the teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt, the condition now inſtantly approaching, preſſures for the name of Chriſt, or that which is not quite ſo near, the yet future coming of Chriſt (called the day, v. 13.) for the deſtroying of the falſe, and rewarding the conſtant Chriſtians; all theſe are by God deſigned in common to you all, as inſtrumental for your good.

23. And ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is Gods.]

23. And the concluſion from hence is this, that you give not up your faith to any but to Chriſt, that you reſolve firmly to obey him and adhere to him uniformly, as he reſigned himſelf up to the will of God, to do and to ſuffer whatſoever he appointed him, in the great office of being our mediator and redeemer.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Ζημωθήσεται eth

V. 15. He ſhall ſuffer loſs] Of the word ζημιωθήσεται here it may firſt be enquired, whether it belong to the man, or to his work, both immediately precedent, εἴτινος τὸ ἔργον, if any mans work. That which inclines it to ſignifie the work, is the ἀυτὸς ϛ that follows, but himſelf ſhall be ſaved, which ſeems to oppoſe himſelf to his work, that the one ſhall be loſt, but the other ſaved. But this is well enough avoided, by ſetting the oppoſition betwixt the ſaving of him, and the burning of his work, precedent to the ζημιωθήσεται and then the conſideration of that, as it anſwers the former probability, ſo it inclines more ſtrongly to render it the other way, that the man, not the work, ζημιωθήσεται ſhall be mulcted. For that this word ſignifies not to be loſt, but to ſuffer loſs, hath been ſaid, Note on Mat. 16. Which cannot be here ſaid of the work, of which it had before been ſaid, it ſhall be burnt: For what is ſo, doth not ſuffer a mulct, or fine, or loſs, (which according to all laws muſt be ſalvo contenemento, without utter ruine) but is loſt, and utterly deſtroyed. It remains then that it be ſpoken of the man, whether falſe teacher, or any follower of ſuch, that takes up any ſuch falſe doctrine from him, and ſo upon the doctrine of Chriſt, (profeſſing ſtill, or not denying of Chriſt) ἐποικοδομεῖ, ſuperſtructs ſome falſe doctrines, and erroneous practices. And of him it is here ſaid, that he ſhall ſuffer loſs, ſo as the metal that goes into the fire with droſs or embaſement mix'd with it, is ſeparated from all that mixture, and comes out a great deal leſs than it went in, loſeth all that droſs in that trial of fire. Now how is this to be particularly underſtood of this ſuperſtructure of hay or ſtubble here, muſt be collected from the conſideration of the day which is here mentioned, ver. 13. that it ſhall declare, or reveal. That the word Day in all languages ſignifies judgment, and that the day Emphatically, or the day of Chriſt, the day of the Lord, ſignified an approaching ſeaſon of judgment then expected on unbelieeers and misbelievers, Jews and Gnoſticks, all the world over, in the Chriſtian plantations, ſee Rom. 13. Note d. and Heb. 10. Note a. And that this is the day or judgment that is here referred to, may appear, 1st, by the excluſion of all other days: The only two ſenſes that can come in competition, are either, 1. That it ſignifie the final day of judgment; or, 2. The audience, and judicature, and ſentence of the Apoſtle, when he comes to examine this doctrine. For the firſt, that cannot be underſtood here, becauſe the office of the day here is δηλῶσαι, to make manifeſt, and ἀποκαλυπτόμενον, to reveal, v. 13. And therefore ſuppoſing there were ſuch a day of conflagration, which they that maintain look on as a purging fire to burn up all the ill works of the Chriſtian, and fit him for heaven, yet the circumſtances of the Text here do not belong to that, but to another quality of the fire, the trying, revealing, and diſcriminating one from another, as appears by all the phraſes here uſed, Every mans work ſhall be made manifeſt, the day ſhall declare, it ſhall be revealed by the fire, the fire ſhall try what kind of work every mans is, and if any mans work remain, that is, abides the trial, be ſhall be rewarded. As for that of the Apoſtles coming to judge and cenſure, it is not probably here meant, becauſe theſe hereticks and their followers did not acknowledge the Apoſtles power, but reſiſted and rejected them, as appears in divers other places, (and oft lays a neceſſity on the Apoſtles to vindicate their Authority.) And 2dly, there is no reaſon to conceive that the Apoſtle ſhould call his own ſentence by the name of the Fire, or ſpeak of giving men rewards, v. 14. which are to be expected from God. But then, 2dly, that it be applied to this of the Puniſhment of God now approaching the Gnoſticks, will appear not only by the mention of the wood, hay, ſtubble, built on the foundation, which evidently denoted heretical ſuperſtructures, (and it is known that theſe were the great hereticks of thoſe times) and ſuch as will be ſure to periſh when he comes, but alſo by the conſequents here to the end of the Chapter, which make up the known Character of the Gnoſticks. For that conſiſted siſted ſpecially of two things, 1st, Their doctrines of Uncleanneſs; 2dly, Their arts of worldly Wiſdom to ſecure themſelves from perſecutions by complying with the perſecutors. And both theſe are here noted, that of Uncleanneſs, v. 16, 17. by the defiling the Temple of God, that is, themſelves, who as Chriſtians are obliged to be holy, but by the Gnoſtick infuſions were in danger of all pollutions; and thoſe that were immers'd in them, the Apoſtle foretells that they ſhall be deſtroyed by this day, him ſhall God deſtroy, v. 17. And ſo that of worldly Wiſdom, v. 18. If any man among you ſeemeth to be wiſe in this world, that is, prudent for the ſaving or ſecuring himſelf from perſecutions and dangers here. And of this the Apoſtle gives warning, that this wiſdom is the greateſt folly, and that the contrary thereto is the only wiſdom even for this life, the conſtant adhering to Chriſt, the ſureſt means to deliver him from the dangers which here he fears, whereas theſe wiſe and prudential worldlings are likely to be taken in their own craft, v. 19. by their arts of ſecuring, to deſtroy themſelves, and ſo will appear vain and ridiculous in all their wiſe contrivances, ver. 20. according to that of Chriſt, Mat. 16. 25. He that will ſave his life ſhall loſe it. And therefore the form of advice here uſed is, Let no man deceive himſelf. This practice of the Gnoſticks in order to the ſecuring themſelves was a great miſtake, the way to bring all deſtruction upon them, when the day of the Lord, the vengeance of Chriſt upon the crucifiers and perſecutors of Chriſtians, ſhould come ſuddenly upon them, and ſweep away the Gnoſticks among them. And ſo, the whole paſſage belonging clearly to theſe, the full importance of the ζημιωθήσεται will be, that they which being not ſo high in that hereſie as to deny the foundation, the faith of Chriſt, (which many did, and are elſewhere called Apoſtates and Antichriſts, and they that denied Chriſt to be come in the fleſh) and yet had received ſome of theſe Gnoſticks infuſions, that particularly of worldly prudence and compliance with the Jews, ſhould (contrary to their expectation of gaining by this means) ſuffer loſs, be in great hazard to be deſtroyed among them, and if they eſcaped, it ſhould be very narrowly, the conſtant, faithful, Orthodox Chriſtian being the only one that ſhould be perfectly ſafe when that fiery day came, when the unfaithful and the cowardly ſhould either utterly periſh, or run an horrible hazard in that day. And to this purpoſe is it that the doctrines of theſe Gnoſticks are expreſs'd by wood, hay, ſtubble, earthy materials (and ſo notes of falſe doctrines, unfit to be built on this divine foundation) and thoſe (of all things) the moſt combuſtible and ſure to be deſtroyed, when a fiery trial comes, and that in two reſpects; firſt, that when perſecution for Chriſt comes, ſuch a kind of Chriſtianity as this is ſure to be burnt up, the Gnoſticks will not then hold out, and confeſs Chriſt; and ſecondly, in reſpect of Chriſt's coming to viſit and judge, to reward the conſtant and deſtroy the unfaithful, then theſe prudential ways of theirs will be ſure to ſtand them in no ſtead, but bring them into greater danger, as he that means to ſecure himſelf againſt fire by wood, hay, ſtubble, ſhall be ſure to have all burnt, and to encreaſe, not leſſen the flame; whereas the truly wiſe way (and that which Chriſt counſels the Church of Laodicea to, in oppoſition to theſe Gnoſticks, Rev. 3. 8.) is to build gold, ſilver, &c. which having been tried in the fire, (and ſo denoting conſtancy in perſecutions) are ſure to hold out, and endure the teſt, whatſoever the day of viſitation be, be the fire never ſo ſcorching, theſe will be the likelieſt to be preſerved in it.

1b. Saved, yet ſo as by fire] That σώζεσθαι ſignifies to eſcape hath been often noted, but what σώζεσθαι διὰ to eſcape by here ſignifies, is the only difficulty, and that will be beſt explained by comparing it with other places of the ſame kind. Thus 1 Pet. 3. 20. διεσώθησαν δι' ὕδατος, they were ſaved out of, or through, the water, the præpoſition διὰ perhaps (as other præpoſitions oft are in the New Teſtament) being taken looſly for ἐκ or ἀπὸ, out or from, or elſe as the neceſſity of the matter imports, an eſcaping through water, implying conſequently an eſcaping out of it alſo; and ſo the ſenſe will be, that though there were a great flood ready to drown all the earth, yet for all this, by the help of the Ark they did eſcape that danger. And ſo here σωθήσεται ὡς διὰ πυρός, he ſhall eſcape as one eſcapes out of the fire, that is, as Chryſoſtome expreſſes it, as one that, when in the midnight his houſe is ſet on fire, wakes and leaps out of the bed, and runs naked out of dores, οὐδὲν τῶν ἔνδον λαβὼν taking nothing that is within along with him, taking care only (as he adds) ὅπως τὸ σῶμα τὸ ἑαυτοῦ περιεξαρπάζῃ τῆς φλογὸς, that he may ſnatch his own body out of the flame. And it is a common *obſervation, that ὡς διὰ πυρὸς σώζεσθαι is a proverbial ſpeech for thoſe that get hardly out of a great danger; ſo ὡς δαλὸς ἐξηρπασμένον ἐκ πυρὸς, as a brand ſnatch'd out of the fire, Amos 4.11. and ſo Jude 23. ἐν φόβῳ σώζετε, ἁρπάζοντες, ſave them by ſnatching them out of the fire in time of danger, for ſo ἐν φόβῳ ſignifies, ἐν κινδύνῳ in preſence of any thing that men are afraid of. By this means that of 1 Pet. 4. 18. will be explained alſo, for this will be the meaning of μόλις σώζεται, (for which the Hebrew, Prov. 11. 31. reads יִשָּׁלֵם, ſhall be recompenſed) he ſhall not eſcape without many loſſes and afflictions in that πύρωσις or combuſtion. So as in *Julian, ἡ νὺξ ὀλίγους ἀπίσωσι μόλις, the night did hardly, or with great difficulty, reſcue a few; and in Agathias, who having ſpoken of ſome that πυρπολεῖσθαι ἔμελλον, were ready to be fired and burnt, adds, μόλις ἐνδίνδι διακπαίοντες κατεφέυγασι, they hardly eſcape out of it.

7. For

7. For who maketh thee to differ from another? and what haſt thou that thou didſt not receive? Now if thou didſt receive it, why doſt thou glory, as if thou hadſt not received it?]

7. For this can be no matter of boaſting to any of you, for by it is no man dignified before another, for by whomſoever you received the faith, it is clear that you received it; 'tis no acquiſition of your own wit or parts, but meerly a mercy of God's, that ſent us to preach to you, and therefore cannot in any reaſon be matter of boaſting to you.

8. * Now ye are full, † now ye are rich, ye have reigned as kings without us, and I would to God ye did reign, that we alſo might reign with you.

9. For I think that God hath ſet forth us the Apoſtles laſt, as it were men appointed to death: for we are made a ſpectacle unto the world, and to Angels, and to men.]

8. 9. You, forſooth, are ſo full and rich, ſo furniſhed with all kind of knowledge and wiſdom, (ſuch the Gnoſticks bragg'd of) that you deſpiſe your Apoſtles and ſpiritual fathers that firſt converted you to the faith; Since we parted from you, you have in your own conceits been in great tranquility and ſecurity, had happy Halcionian days, (ſee note on Rev. 1. 6.) And I wiſh it were ſo with you as you phanſie it to be, that the tranquility which the Gnoſticks (with their compliances with the perſecutors, whether Jews or heathens) promiſe you, were a true Chriſtian tranquility, that we which are ſo ſharply perſecuted, might come to you as to a refuge, and enjoy ſome part of that great privilege with you; for certainly we have need of it: For we are ſo far from any ſecurity, that we are expoſed to all the miſeries, perſecutions, and dangers in the world, we Apoſtles being as it were the forlorn party, ſent out laſt, without any reſerve behind us to relieve us, and ſo given up unto certain ſlaughter, or as the gladiators upon a ſtage, thoſe that come out firſt fighting in jeſt, as it were, but they that come laſt never giving over, 'till one lay down the other dead upon the place. For we are become as thoſe that being condemned to death have wild beaſts let looſe on them upon the theatre, which certainly rend them to pieces, ch. 15. 32. And like thoſe combatants on the theatre, we are ſet forth for a ſpectacle to the heathen world, to angels, to men to look upon.

10. We are fools for Chriſt's ſake, but ye are wiſe in Chriſt: we are weak, but ye are ſtrong: ye are * honourable, but we are deſpiſed.]

10. We are vile and deſpiſed for the doing our duty, the exerciſe of our Apoſtolical office, but you, forſooth, are very wiſe men, deeply learned in the doctrine of Chriſt; we weak contemptible mean perſons, but you ſtrong and gallant.

11. Even unto this preſent hour we both hunger, and thirſt, and are naked, and are buffeted, and † have no certain dwelling place,]

11. As I was when I was with you (ſee ch. 2 3.) ſo I am ſtill, in a condition of continual want and perſecution, and tranſitory mutable eſtate.

12. And * labour, working with our own hands: being reviled, we bleſs: being perſecuted, we † ſuffer it:]

12. Taking exceſſive pains that I may preach the Goſpel, and get mine own living by my labour, that I might not put you to any charges, (ſee Act. 18. 3.) and when, inſtead of thanks, I meet with nothing but reviling for all this, I have no return to make them, but that of my prayers for them, nay, when perſecuted, I entertain no thought of revenge toward them.

13. Being defamed, we intreat; we are made as * the [b] filth of the world, and are the † off-ſcouring of all things unto this day.]

13. When calumniated and falſly accuſed, I pray to God for them by whom it is done, and this is no news to me: for we Apoſtles of Chriſt are looked on and uſed as the unworthieſt creatures of the world, and ſo continue until this time.

14. I write not theſe things to ſhame you, but as my beloved ſons I warn you.]

14. and though I have thus been uſed by ſome of you, ſince theſe ſchiſmes have come in among you, yet I ſay it not to reproach or bring ſhame upon you for ſo doing, but out of the affections of a father, I adviſe and admoniſh you to behave your ſelves more like Children, then ye have yet done.

15. For * though you have ten thouſand inſtructers in Chriſt, yet have ye not many fathers; for in Chriſt Jeſus I have begotten you through the Goſpel.]

15. For though others may have taught you ſince, yet 'tis only I that planted the Goſpel firſt among you, and therefore there can be no occaſion of Schiſmes and diviſions among you, (by one's making one Apoſtle the maſter of his faith, another another,) any more then that children of the ſame father ſhould contend and divide about their life, or coming into the world, one profeſſing to owe it to one, another to another.

16. Wherefore, I beſeech you, be ye followers of me.]

16. And therefore I beſeech you, let the form of doctrine which I left you be retained among you, without any new inſertions by any other.

17. For this cauſe have I ſent unto you Timotheus, who is my beloved ſon and faithful in the Lord, who ſhall bring you into remembrance of my ways which be in Chriſt, as I teach every where in every Church.]

17. For this purpoſe I have ſent unto you Timothy, whom I converted to the faith, and one that hath long aſſociated with me, and done faithful ſervice to me in the propagating of the Goſpel, who therefore exactly knowing my whole courſe of Chriſtian doctrine, may be your remembrancer, and tell you what my doctrine and practice is in every Church, where I come to confirm them.

18. Now ſome † are puffed up, * as though I would not come to you.]

18. And ſince, by my not coming to you my ſelf perſonally, ſome among you have taken occaſion to deſpiſe me that am abſent.

19. But I will come to you † ſhortly, if the Lord will, and will know, not the ſpeech of them which are puffed up, but the power.]

19. I am therefore reſolved by God's help my ſelf to come among you ſpeedily, and to examine what grounds they have for what they do, and not much heeding the ſpeech or talk of them, to ſee whether this be any ſolid knowledge in them, upon ſtrength of which they ſhould diſpiſe others.

20. For the kingdom of God is not in * word, but in power.]

20. For Chriſtianity conſiſts not in ſpeaking, but in doing, (according to a proverbial ſpeech of the Jews, Speech is not a foundation, but work. Pirke Avoth p. 15.) and ſo all other perfections of men muſt be judged of, not by their boaſts of themſelves, but by the reality of their performances.

21. What will ye? ſhall I come unto you with [c] a rod, or in love, and in the ſpirit of meekneſs?]

21. And now I talk of coming to you, I pray conſider, which will you chuſe? As you behave your ſelves, ſo at my coming will I exerciſe either my power of inflicting puniſhments, or the milder way of kindneſs toward you; and therefore according as you like beſt, ſo prepare your ſelves for my coming.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

V. 2. To think.] What φρονεῖν ſignifies in this place will beſt be gheſt by φυσιῶσθε, puft up, which follows on purpoſe to explain it. That ſignifying elation of mind to the deſpiſing of others, φρονεῖν muſt in all reaſon do ſo alſo. Thus the Scholiaſt on Thucydides, l. 1. ſaith of ὑπερφρονεῖν, that it is τὸ μέγα φρονεῖν, ἢ λίαν ὑπερηφανεῖν, where φρονεῖν muſt be a degree of pride, as the other a great or high degree of it. So in St. Chryſoſtome, Tom. 3. p. 177. l. 4. τί δὲ ἔπαθεν δοῦβῆ ἢ ταραττῃ ἢ εἰς μωρίαν ἐκπίπτῃ τῷ φρονεῖν; why art thou diſturbed and abuſeſt thy opinion of thy ſelf, thy pride to folly? and l. 6. διὰ φρονήσεως γενέσθαι μωρὸν, is by election of mind, by pride, to become a fool, contrary to ἀπὸ φύσεως γενέσθαι μωρὸν, natural folly. So Rom. 12. 3. it moſt literally ſignifies (not to be wiſe, but) to opinionate, to think great matters of himſelf. So in Demoſthenes, φρονῶν ἐν ἑαυτῷ πλείονων ἄξιον εἶναι, one that thinks as high of himſelf as he is fit. Only here the notion of the word ſeems a little to be reſtrained by the εἷς τὸν ἕνα, for one in the latter part of the verſe, and ſo to denote not ſo much pride of their own gifts, as Rom. 12. as pride and high opinion of their teachers, boaſting of them to the diſparagement of others.

V. 13. Filth.] Περικαθάρματα ſignifies thoſe things that are uſed in the luſtrating of a city among the Gentiles. * Suidas hath deſcribed the cuſtom in theſe words, Τὸν ἐν καθαρμῷ πόλεως εἰσπραττόμενον πρὸ ἀνδρὸς καθάρμα, For the purging and luſtrating of a city they cloathed a man (in foul and filthy garments, ſay others) and put him to death, and he was called a luſtration or expiation: thus ſaith Euſtathius, κάθαρμα is a luſtration for which the vileſt perſons were wont to be uſed, οἱ ῥυπαροὶ καὶ ἀπόβλητοι, ſordid, refuſe people. For thus it was, when the city was under any plague or other great calamity, they chose out one of the nastiest persons in the city, and brought him to a certain place, with cheese, and dry figs, and a cake in his hand, and then beat him with rods about the secret parts, and then burnt him and the rods together in a ditch, and cast the ashes into the sea (τῷ Ποσειδῶνι θυσίαν ἀποτίνυντες, paying a sacrifice to Neptune, saith Suidas) with these words, γίνου περίψημα, γίνου κάθαρμα, Be thou a lustration for us. This person was called κάθαρμα and περίψημα, and by Lycophron, and before him by Hipponax, φάρμακον a medicament, and by Philostratus (saith Sardus de ritib. l. 3. c. 19.) ἀποτρόπαιον a cure, or averter of judgment from the city. (But this is a mistake in Sardus; all that Philostratus saith being only this, that in the Theatre, τοῦτο ἀποτρόπαιόν ἱδρυϑ, that is, the statue of the deity that averteth judgment, plagues, &c. was set up.) By this it appears also, what is meant by περίψημα πάντων, the refuse of all in the next words, to wit, the very same thing in another expression, the vilest, refuse creature in a city, such as used to be the expiation in a publick calamity. So saith Suidas, Περίψημα, κάθαρμα, which, I conceive, is a corruption from κάθαρμα, which differs but little from it; and Hesychius, Περίψημα, ἀποκάθαρμα (for ἀποκάθαρμα I conceive) ἀντίλυτρα, ἀντίψυχα, ἢ τὸ αὐτὸ τὸ ἔσχατον πάντων, the two words are of the same signification, and denote those that are pay'd for others ransoms, or put to death in others stead, or else any thing that is most vile, trodden under feet by all men. Thus Tob. 5. 24. we have this phrase, περίψημα τῆ παιδὶ γένοιτο, for, Let it be despised, a refuse, in respect of, or comparison to my son, this heathen custom, whence all this comes, being in a manner but a transcript of the Azazel among the Jews, the scape-goat, that was sent into the wilderness with all the sins of the people upon him, which was therefore called ἀποπομπαῖος, rejectaneus, or refuse.

Περίψημα

V. 21. A Rod.] The ῥάβδος or rod here is the power of inflicting punishments in the Apostles, of death it self, as on Ananias, of diseases, as on Elymas, and so the Hebrew word מטה for ῥάβδος is rendred πληγὴ a stripe, Isa. 10. 24. and is all one with μάστιξ scourge, Mar. 3. 10. and contrary to this is the spirit of meekness that follows here, mercifulness in not inflicting that sharpness on them, upon sight of their speedy reformation, which by threatning here he desires and hopes to produce, before his coming to them personally. c. Ῥάβδος

CHAP. V.

Paraphrase.

[a] Fornication is generally reported among you, † or, is not among; for ὀνομαζέσθω named, is left out by the Kings MS.

1. It is a great shame and reproach that lies upon you, that sins of unnatural uncleanness, and marriages within prohibited degrees are so frequently to be found among you, and those of such a pitch in one offender, as civil nations, (though not Christian) and even the unconverted Corinthians would abhor to be guilty of, a son to take in marriage (or otherwise to live in that sin with) his father's wife.

1. [*IT is reported commonly, that there is [a] fornication among you, and such fornication, a. as † is [b] not so much as named among the Gentiles, that one should have his father's wife.] b.

2. And this so freely that ye do not look on it as a crime fit to be censured in him, ye are not at all humbled with it, nor mourn for it (see 2 Cor. 12. 21.) either out of an opinion of the person that hath done it, (who is one of the Doctors of your Church, say Chrysostome and Theodoret) or out of an opinion infused now by some heretical teachers into you (which your former condition of life makes you apt enough to believe) that fornication is an indifferent thing (see c. 6. 13.) whereas in any reason you ought to have mourned over him, as over a great sinner, and expressed your sorrow in complaining of him, and using means that he might be excommunicated, see c. 12. 21.

2. And ye are [c] puffed up, and have not rather mourned, that he that hath done this deed may be taken away from among you.] c.

[d] or, being absent, for the Kings MS. leaves out ὡς as † him that hath so ἀνδρα τοῦτον

3. For I, though I am not present among you, yet by that authority that belongs to me, (and being sufficiently assured of the truth of the fact) have already passed sentence on him that hath thus offended.

3. For I verily * as absent in body, but present in spirit, have [d] judged already, as though I were present, † concerning him that hath so done this deed:] d.

4. 5. That in a publick assembly gathered in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, in which you are to suppose me virtually present among you by the authority of Christ committed to me and you, ye proceed to excommunicate and deliver him up into the power of Satan, who may inflict some disease upon him, that may be a means to bring him to a sight of his sin and reformation, and so to salvation also.

4. In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, when ye are gathered together, and my spirit, with the power of our Lord Jesus Christ,

5. To [e] deliver such an one unto Satan for the [f] destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.] e. f.

e

6. Such a teacher as this is not fit for you to follow or favour, for as a little sour dough gives a tast to all the bread, so will such a sin as this, permitted in the Church, have an influence on you all, both by discrediting that Church where this is permitted, and by corrupting the company by the example.

6. Your glorying is not good: know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?]

[g] for as much as you are ἐστε. † naughtiness κακίας * purity εἰλικρινείας

7. As therefore it was the manner of the Jews on the day of the Passeover (that being the day of preparation, or the Eve to the feast of unleavened bread) most diligently and sollicitously to enquire if there were any crum of leavened bread left in their houses, and to remove it all, (see note on Mar. 14. c.) so do ye at this time deal with that heathen or Gnostick perswasion (among you) of the lawfulness of fornication, most contrary to the Laws of Christianity that you have undertaken, and whereby you have obliged your selves to have none of that sour unchristian doctrine among you, but on the contrary to fit your selves to celebrate a Christian Passeover, which (as the Judaical was a sign of their deliverance out of Ægypt) must be kept with our departure out of sin.

7. Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, * as ye are unleavened: for even Christ our passeover is sacrificed for us.]

8. Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of † malice and wickedness: but with the unleavened bread of * sincerity and truth.]

[h] I have written to you by Epistle, ἔγραψα ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ ἐπιστολῇ † Not, for in the King's MS. ἐν is wanting

8. Do ye therefore consecrate your selves to the service of Christ, by reforming all your former sinful courses, particularly that of uncleanness and villany (see v. 13.) and by the practice of all Christian purity, and holding fast the truth which hath been delivered to you.

9. [h] *I wrote unto you in an Epistle, not to [i] company with fornicators. g. h.

9, 10. What in this Epistle v. 2. I have written of not communicating with fornicators, and not conversing familiarly with them, I mean not of the heathens among you, which have not given up their names unto Christ, nor in like manner of those heathens that are guilty of those other sins of unnatural lusts (see note on Rom. 1. i.) and violence, or those filthinesses which are ordinary among Idolaters, and are used as parts and rites of their religion; for these are so ordinary among them, that if ye abstain from the company of all those heathens that are so guilty, ye must depart out of their cities.

10. † Yet not altogether with the fornicators of this world, or with the * covetous, † or [k] extortioners, or with [l] idolaters: for then must ye needs go out of the world.] i.

[i] inordinate lusters πλεονέκτας † the violent, or forcers * one of inordinate lusts v. 10. † contumelious person * violent, or forcer, see note k.

11. But the purpose of my writing is only to interdict you that face encouraging converse with Christian professors, that are guilty of retaining any of these sensual heathen sins, used by Idolaters, and to command that with such an one you do not enter any friendly commerce, so much as to eat with him, (see note g.) much less to admit him to the Sacrament, or the feast that attends that, until he doth reform.

11. But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or * covetous, or an idolater, or a † [k] railer, or a drunkard, or * an extortioner, with such an one no not to eat.] k.

12, 13. What have mine or the Churches censures to do with them that are not members of the Church? Ye know 'tis the practice among you to inflict censures on Church-members only, leaving all others to God's tribunal) And by doing thus ye shall remove the accursed thing from among you, free your selves from those punishments, that the neglect of your duty, permitting such offenders to go unpunished and unreformed, may bring upon you.

12. [l] For what have I to do to judge them also that are without? do not ye judge them that are within?

13. But them that are without God judgeth. *Therefore put away from among you that wicked person.] l

[m] And ye shall put away the evil from among you, for it is ἐξαρεῖτε, not ἀρεῖ, and the ancients read ἐξαροῦντε τὸ πονηρὸν

a. Πορνεία

V. 1. Fornication] Πορνεία, Fornication in this place is a general word to comprehend all unlawful desires of the flesh, acts of whatsoever prohibited carnality, under it. For it is observable that the precept given by God's positive command to the sons of Adam and Noah, and so to all mankind, which is styled by the Jews עֶרְוַת נִלּוּי עַל, of discloſing nakedneſſes, under which style all the marriages within prohibited degrees, Lev. 18. and all the unnatural sins are contain'd, is Act. 15. expres'd by abstaining ἀπὸ πορνείας, from fornication. And that by the infusions of the Gnosticks, and remainders of their heathen customs, there was an Epidemical guilt of this sin of many sorts among them, is the meaning of ὅλως ἀκούεται ἐν ὑμῖν πορνεία, fornication is universally heard, that is, found, among you: for the word ὅλως seems to be all one with καθόλου in universum, and so perhaps it is to be rendred, c. 6. 7. ὅλως ἥττημα ἐν ὑμῖν ὅτι, there is a defect generally among you, and being here joined with ἀκούεται ἐν ὑμῖν, is heard among you, may signifie that 'tis an universal guilt of theirs; or else being joined with πορνεία, it will sound thus, fornication altogether, or fornication in gross, (containing the several branches of it) is heard, that is, found or met with, among you, and of the many sorts thereof, one that had not been practised, or endured to be thought or spoke of among civil heathens, or the unconverted Corinthians at that time, that of having the father's wife. This, saith Chrysostome, was done by a Doctor, that is, I suppose, a Bishop in some Church of Achaia, ὁ μόνον θείων μυστηρίων ἠξίωτο, ἀλλὰ καὶ διδασκαλικῆ ἐπιτετύχει χαρίσματος, He was, saith he, not only vouchsafed the divine mysteries, partaker of them, but had obtained the dignity of a Doctor. And so Theodoret also.

Ὅλως ἀκούεται.

b. Οὐδὲ ὀνομάζεται ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν.

Ib. Not so much as named among the Gentiles] What is here said not to be named among the Gentiles, is not so to be understood, that no nation ever used it, but that civil, (though not Christian) nations have counted it abominable and nefarious, no way lawful or tolerable, or that at this time the unconverted Corinthians were not guilty of it. Among the ancient Arabians it was used, and the custom so describ'd by Al Mostratraf, Ebnol Arbir, &c. that when a woman was left a widow, or put away by the husband, the eldest son should take her by inheritance, and cast his garment over her, as a sign of it; or if he would not, then the next heir: and so the son, they say, succeeded to the father's bed, as well as wealth, by inheritance. This being formerly in use was by the Alcoran forbidden, O vos qui creditis, non permissum est vobis fœminas hæreditatis jure accipere. Believers, (that is, they that receive Mahomet's law) must not take the fathers' wives by right of inheritance. So Al Sharestanius, Turpissimum eorum quæ faciebant (Arabes tempore ignorantiæ) erat hoc, quòd vir duas sorores duceret, & patris sui uxorem velut successor assumeret, quod qui faceret appellatur Al Daizan, quo nomine insectatus est Aus Ebn Haiar quosdam è tribu Banikais, quorum tres ex ordine patris sui uxorem duxerant. Mos autem erat apud Arabes, ut cùm ab uxore, morte aut repudio, separaretur aliquis, filiorum ipsius natu maximus, si eâ opus haberet, vestem suam ei injiceret; quòd si ille opus eâ non haberet, ducerat ipsam è fratribus aliquis dotis novæ interventu. The foulest thing that the old Arabs did in time of ignorance was this, that a man married two sisters, and took his father's wife as his successor, which he that did was called Al Daizan, and such there were of the tribe of Banikais, who three of them one after another had married the father's wife. Now it was a custom among the Arabians, that when any man was separated from his wife by death or divorce, his eldest son, if he wanted her, cast his garment upon her, that is, took her to wife; or if he wanted her not, one of his brothers married her.

c. Πενθεῖν

V 2. Puffed up, and not rather mourned] The word πενθεῖν here to mourn, lament, wail, refers to the customary solemnity of putting on mourning habits, and wailing over them that were to be Excommunicate, as over them that were dead, ὡς νεκροὺς πενθοῦσι, saith Origen Cont. Celf. l. 3. just as Pythagoras when any forsook his school, had a κενοτάφιον or empty hearse carried about, and mourned for him· Μετὰ λύπης καὶ πένθους ἀνιάτως ἔχοντα τὸ ἐκκλησίας ἀποπίμπτειν, him that is incurable, or not otherwise like to be cured, turn out of the Church with grief and mourning, saith Clem. Constit 2. And so Origen l. 3. Cont. Celf. See Note on Rom. 12. c. And accordingly here follows ἐξαρεῖτε ἐκ μέσου, let him be taken from amongst you, noting the censure of Excommunication; and so 2 Cor 12. 21. καὶ πενθήσω πολλοὺς τῶν προημαρτηκότων, καὶ μὴ μετανοησάντων, where bewailing of impenitent sinners is censuring them. And thus the word λύπη seems to signifie, (being all one with πένθος) 2 Cor. 2. 1. ἐλθεῖν ἐν λύπῃ, to come with intention to censure and punish, the very same as (ch. 12. 21. before the bewailing them) is expressed by πάλιν ἐλθόντα με ταπεινώσῃ ὁ Θεός μου πρὸς ὑμᾶς, where God's humbling him towards them is giving him occasion to exercise his censures or Church-discipline on them, at his coming among them, (contrary to the φυσιοῦσθε, 1 Cor. 5. 2) as appears by ch. 13. 2. when I come again I will not spare, and v. 10. ἵνα μὴ ἀποτόμως χρήσωμαι, that when I come, I may not use severity; so 2 Cor. 2. 3. λύπην ἔχω signifies to be constrain'd to use severity of censures, to which this mourning or sorrow belongs, and λυπεῖσθαι, v. 4. to be under those censures, and v. 5. λυπεῖν, to offend and commit that which S. Paul was constrain'd to punish with the censures of the Church; so ch. 7. 8. εἰ καὶ ἐλύπησα ὑμᾶς is, If I inflicted the censures of the Church upon you, and in the end of the verse, I see that that Epistle, though written for that season, ἐλύπησεν ὑμᾶς, brought the censures of the Church upon you, v. 9. and οὐχ ὅτι ἐλυπήθητε, not that you were put under the censures, ἀλλ' ὅτι ἐλυπήθητε εἰς μετάνοιαν, but those censures produced that effectual change in you, ἐλυπήθητε γὰρ κατὰ Θεὸν, for ye were dealt with according to the discipline ordained by God, or Christ, in the Church: and so in all probability that is λύπη κατὰ Θεὸν, v. 10. which brings μετάνοιαν, a change or newness of life, as the censures and punishments of the world bring death. And so κατὰ Θεὸν λυπηθῶσιν ὑμᾶς, to be mourned or sorrowed, v. 11. that is, censured, according to God's appointment.

λύπη

Ταπεινώσῃ ὁ Θεός

λύπη κατὰ Θεόν

d. Κρίνειν

V. 3. Judged] Κρίνειν in this place is the pronouncing, or giving sentence against the offender: so 'tis used, v. 12. What have I to do, τοὺς ἔξω κρίνειν, to judge them, inflict censures on them that are without? heathens, that were not in the Church, or Gnosticks, that divided from it, those he leaves to God's censures and punishments, as not belonging to his Apostolical judicature; so v. 13. οὐχὶ τοὺς ἔσω ὑμεῖς κρίνετε; Do ye not judge them that are within? that is, all that live within your Church, and yet fall into any such carnal sins, ye, the Governours of each Church of Achaia, ought to endeavour to reduce, by inflicting the censures of the Church on them; and accordingly follows there, what here precedes, ἐξαρεῖτε τὸν πονηρὸν ἐξ ὑμῶν αὐτῶν, Remove the wicked person, (perhaps τὸν πόρνον, the fornicator or incestuous, v. 1.) from among you. And agreeably so it must be here, κέκρικα τὸν οὕτω τοῦτο κατεργασάμενον, I have judged, sentenced, him that hath thus done this; and what the sentence is appears by the 4th and 5th verses, the 4th containing the solemnity wherewith it was to be inflicted, in the publick assembly of the Church, to have power of the keys exercised on him, according to his Apostolical office, παραδοῦναι τὸν τοιοῦτον τῷ Σατανᾷ, to deliver up such an one to Satan, v. 5. that is, to excommunicate him. See Note e.

Ἐξαρεῖτε τὸν πονηρὸν

e. Παραδοῦναι τῷ Σατανᾷ

V. 5. Deliver such an one unto Satan] Παραδοῦναι τῷ Σατανᾷ, to deliver to Satan here, and 1 Tim. 1. 20. is answerable to חרם among the Jews, called in Greek ἀνάθεμα, execration, the second species of Excommunication among them, and in which, for the greater solemnity of it, there were curses out of the law of Moses, and such like execrations added to it, (an essay of which we have, Act. 8. 20. thy money be to thee to destruction, &c.) This was inflicted on him who had first been under the first species, that of the נִדּוּי ἀφορισμὸς, remotion or separation, first for thirty days, and then being allow'd thirty days more, (which they called the doubling of the נִדּוּי) still continued in that contumacy; for then, say the Jews, מחרימין אותו, they anathematize him without defining any limited time, as in niddui they did. This in the Christian Church is called delivering to Satan, for two reasons. 1. Because it was the depriving the offender of those daily means which are in Christianity afforded, and ordinarily useful to eject Satan and the power of his kingdom out of the heart, such are 1. the prayers of the Church, 2dly, the publick use of the word or doctrine of Christianity, (for he that is under Cherem, nec docet, nec docetur; neither teaches, nor is taught, say the Jews; and in the ancient Christian Church, they that were upon repentance received in again, were first among the ἀκροώμενοι, hearers in the porch, ἵνα ἀκούσῃ γεγραφῶν, to hear the holy Scriptures, ſaith Zonaras, which argues that they were before excluded from it) 3dly, the ſacrament of the Lord's Supper, in which reſpect ſcandalous ſinners Συνδωχεύοντοι feaſting with them, are by S. Jude v. 12. called σπιλάδες, ſpots in their feaſts or agapæ, (which being annex'd to the Lord's ſupper denoted the whole action) that is, unfit, as blemiſh'd ſacrifices, to be rereceived there. And the uſe of all theſe means being in the œconomy of the Goſpel deſign'd to ſo much advantage to the ſoul, for the caſting Satan out of it, the depriving men of the uſe of thoſe means is properly ſtiled the delivering to Satan, as the Catechiſt, that inſtructed men and made them fit for Baptiſm, or entrance into the Church, was wont to be called ἐξορκιστὴς, the exorciſt that caſt Satan out. But then 2dly, in the Apoſtles times there was a ſad conſequent of this Excommunication, proportionable to the execrations in the Jewiſh Cherem, (which, ſay they, ſeldom wanted their effect) viz. corporal power and poſſeſſion, and inflictions of Satan on thoſe who were delivered up to him, in like manner as we read beſel Saul, after his defection from God, when the evil ſpirit came upon him, 1 Sam. 16. 14. For about Chriſt's time, and a little after, 'twas ordinary with the Devil to tyrannize over the bodies of men, laying all kinds of diſeaſes upon them, (as appears in the Goſpel) which is called Satan's buffeting, κολαφίζειν, 2 Cor. 12. 7. Κολαφίζην Β βαπτίζης βασανίζειν tormenting, Mat. 8. 6. ποικίλοις νόσοις καὶ βασάνοις Συνέχειν, taking or holding them with divers diſeaſes and torments, Mat. 4. 24. δῆσαι binding, Lu. 11. 16. (the word that is uſed for Excommunication) and ſo here the delivering to Satan is εἰς ὄλεθρον σαρκὸς, to the deſtruction of the fleſh, to the inflicting bodily diſeaſes on him. This Ignatius in his Epiſtle to the Romans calls κόλασις διαβόλου, the puniſhment of the devil, for he wiſhes there that it were on himſelf, μόνον ἵνα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐπιτύχω, only that by that means he may come to enjoy Jeſus Chriſt, which cannot be ſaid of the puniſhments in hell, for thoſe would not be reconcileable with that end, (ſee Rom. 9. Note b.) And ſo as among the Eſſeni of the Jews ſaith Joſephus, τοὺς ἐπ' ἀξιοχρέοις ἁμαρτήμασιν ἀλόντας ἐκβάλλουσιν ἐκ τοῦ τάγματος, ὁ δὲ ἐκπεσὼν οἰκτίστῳ πολλοῖς μόρῳ διαφθείρεται, thoſe that are found in any conſiderable ſin they caſt out from their congregation, and they that are caſt out commonly come to miſerable deaths; and as Heliodorus, 2 Mac. 3. in his ſacrilegious enterprize was ſcourged by two Angels in the ſhape of young men, v. 26. and hardly came off with life; ſo the Apoſtolical Excommunication or anathema was attended with diſeaſes and torments on the body, to lay a neceſſity on them of reforming. And this is the Ῥάβδος rod; ſee Note on c. 4 b. Now for the word Παραδοῦναι παραδοῦναι delivering, that ſeems to have an elegant notation in it, for it is a relative to asking or demanding, and implies that truth which otherwiſe appears from Scripture, thus; Satan is our adverſary before God, (and therefore called ὁ ἐχθρὸς Ἐχθρὸς enemy, ἀντικείμενος ſet againſt us) this he expreſſes by accuſing, (to which Rev. 12. 11. refers) or impleading, and thence he is called ἀντίδικος Ἀντίδικος an adverſary, ἐν δίκῃ in court of judicature, 1 Pet. 5. 8. This he doth falſly ſometimes, as in the caſe of Job, c. 1. 9, 11. (in which reſpect he is called διάβολος, a calumniator, by which the Septuagint oft render שָׂטָן) but ſometimes truly, upon the real commiſſion of ſome ſin, to which purpoſe he is ſaid, as an explorator or ſearcher for faults, to go up and down to and fro upon the earth, Job 1. 7. when he hath any ſuch accuſation againſt any ἀδελφὸς, brother, Chriſtian profeſſor, or pious perſon, then, as perhaps it was in the caſe of Peter, (ſee Lu. 22. 31.) he is ſaid ἐξαιτεῖσθαι Ἐξαιτήσα- σθαι to require him of God, demands to have him delivered up to him, as to a lictor or executioner, σπεκέρα to ſift and ſhake him terribly; and that perhaps is the meaning of his ζητῶν τινα καταπιεῖν Ζητῶν τινα καταπιεῖν ſeeking whom he may devour, 1 Pet. 5. 8. and if God think fit to anſwer this requeſt of his, then God is ſaid to deliver up to Satan: and from that courſe of God's is that diſcipline of the Apoſtles tranſcribed and copied out in the cenſures of the Church, which therefore are thus expreſs'd.

f. Ib. Deſtruction of the fleſh] That Satan had (when he was permitted by God for ſin) power to inflict diſeaſes on men's bodies, appeareth by what hath been ſaid, Note e. and by moſt of Chriſt's cures of men poſſeſſed with devils, thoſe poſſeſſions being generally accompanied with ſome ordinary diſeaſe, diſcernible by the ſymptomes there mentioned, the Epilepſie, and the like. And to this purpoſe 'tis obſervable what we find in the Hieruſalem Targum on Gen. 2. 14. ſuppoſed to be ſaid to the ſerpent by God, Cùm filii mulieris præcepta legis deſeruerint, nec mandata obſervaverint, tu (that is, the ſerpent) firmus eris, & percutiens eos in calcaneo eorum agritudine effoies, When the children of the woman ſhall forſake the commandments of the law, thou ſhalt be ſtrong, and ſhalt ſtrike them on the heel, and inflict ſickneſs upon them.

V. 9. Company with fornicators] What is the meaning of μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι, whether only interdicting Eccleſiaſtical aſſemblies, or farther excluding from civil commerce, is a matter of ſome queſtion. In favour of the former of theſe, we may here obſerve one thing in the Context, that 'tis ſomewhat which the Apoſtle had before theſe words written to them about, ἔγραψα ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ ἐπιστολῇ, &c. I wrote to you in an Epiſtle; where there is no enforcing reaſon to conclude that the Apoſtle refers to ſome former Epiſtle of his, (not now extant, nor anciently mentioned by any) the words being very capable of this other rendring, that in this Epiſtle he had ſo written to them, and ſo he did v. 2. of this Chap. Juſt as Gal. 1. 9. As we have before ſaid, even now again I ſay, the word προειρήκαμεν, before ſaid, looking no farther off then to the eighth verſe immediately precedent, where that was ſaid that v. 9. is repeated by him. As for the νυνὶ δὲ ἔγραψα, but now I have writen, v. 11. which may ſeem to oppoſe this to ſome former Epiſtle, there is no force in that. For the νυνὶ now is not always a note of time, but, as 'tis ordinary amongſt us, of tranſition, thus; When I wrote to you not to converſe with fornicators, I meant not the heathen fornicators, but I wrote to you only in reference to the Chriſtian profeſſors guilty of thoſe ſins. But whether this be ſo or no, yet 'tis apparent that v. 11. which refers undoubtedly to this Epiſtle, the ſame phraſe is uſed, μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι, not to converſe with them, which will therefore make it reaſonable to explain this phraſe by that which is mention'd v. 2. ἐξαρθῇ ἐκ μέσου, removing the offender from among them, which is the ordinary phraſe for Excommunication, (ſee Note c.) and the brief of the ſentence ſet down v. 3, 4, 5. I have judged, &c. and then there will be no neceſſity of extending it any farther, then to not joining with ſuch an one in ſacred meetings, excommunicating, delivering up to Satan; and ſo 2 Theſſ. 3. 14. μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι, ἵνα ἐντραπῇ, have no fellowſhip with him, that he may be aſhamed, may refer to theſe cenſures of the Church inflicted on the ἀτάκτων, diſobedient, or refractory there. But then a ſecond circumſtance in the Context will be obſervable, that v. 11. where the μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι is repeated again, there is added to it, τούτῳ μηδὲ συνεσθίειν, nor to eat with ſuch an one. This is indeed more likely to belong to the interdicting all familiarity of civil commerce, and the rather, becauſe the Jews thought it unlawful to eat with the Samaritans, Publicans, and ſinners, (μὴ συγχεῶντες, they will have nothing to do with ſuch, and, Why eateth your Maſter with ſuch? ſay they to Chriſt's diſciples) and a ſpecial example we have of it, 3 Macc. where ſpeaking of the ἀποχωροῦντες ἐξ αὐτῶν, deſertors, apoſtates from their Law by any notorious breach, 'tis ſaid, ἐβδελύσσοντο, καὶ ὡς πολεμίους τὸ ἔθνος ἔκριναν, καὶ κοινῆς ἀναστροφῆς καὶ συγχύσεως ἐστέρουν, they expreſſed a deteſtation of them, judged them as enemies of the nation, and denied them the civility of common commerce and good uſage; and the ſame is called afterward in that place χωρισμὸς a ſeparating from them, ἀποστροφαὶ, (though it be corruptly and without ſenſe read καταστροφαὶ) averſation, and expreſſed by ἀπεχθεῖς ἐφαίνοντο, they appeared enemies to them. And 'tis certain that the Jewiſh נדוי or firſt degree of Excommunication, being a ſeparation or remotion ad quatuor paſſus, not ſuffering any man to come within four paces of him that was under that cenſure, was an interdiction of civil familiar converſe, or of eating with him. And for this there is one farther argument from v. 10. For if he had meant only Church-aſſemblies, the caution he there interpoſeth of not extending it to Heathens had been ſuperfluous, ſince they who never were within their communion could not be ejected out of it. And ſo again the reaſon he gives for their converſe with them, for elſe they muſt needs go out of the world, ſeems seems to denote a civil commerce, which is here interdicted. It is true indeed that the not-eating with the Fornicator may be also applied no farther then to sacred converse, (and accordingly the words may be thus read, μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι τοιούτῳ, μηδὲ συνεσθίειν, including what is between in a parentheſis, not to join nor eat with ſuch a man) for in thoſe they eat together, συνδωχέμενοι, ſaith S. Jude, v. 12. feaſting together in their agapæ, the common ſuppers that accompanied the Sacrament in this Epiſtle, chap. 11. 20. and when fornicators, &c. were received or admitted there, S. Jude calls them σπιλάδες ſpots in their feaſts, unfit to be preſent there, as blemiſhed ſacrifices to be offered to God. And if there be any more then this meant by the μηδὲ συνεσθίειν not eating with them, it muſt probably relate to the particular caſe of the Church of Corinth at that time, as being then torn aſunder with ſchiſms, ch. 3. 4. and ch. 11. 1, 8. in which caſe the cenſures of the Church being neglected, (ch. 11. 31. and ſo here v. 2.) the Apoſtle might think fit to preſcribe to private Chriſtians this method of ſhewing their diſlikes, by avoiding all civil commerce or familiarity with notorious offenders, and that the rather, in reſpect of the ſcandal of ſuch ſins, that being not practiſed by the Gentiles there, but deteſted by them, v. 1. could not be committed by Chriſtians among them, without bringing great reproach on Chriſtianity: And that would not be removed by excluſion from ſacred meetings, which could not be viſible to the Infidels, and therefore might fitly be provided for by this ſeparation from familiar converſe or ſociety, an expreſſion of a clear deteſtation of ſo foul facts. And ſo 'tis poſſible the Apoſtle might deſign his exhortation, Rom. 16. 17. to mark ſuch as cauſe diviſions, &c. among them, and avoid them, and 2 Theſſ. 3. 14. to note him that obeys not S. Paul's orders by Epiſtle, and have no company with him, as a direction not only for the publick cenſures in a quiet Church, where they may be ſeaſonably exerciſed, but alſo what private Chriſtians were to do for the diſcountenancing of offenders in caſe of ſchiſm, and of either the neglect or unefficaciouſneſs of the cenſures of the Church. And to that alſo may be applied that of Chriſt, Mat. 18. 17. Let him be to thee an heathen, and a publican; it being in this caſe reaſonable for private Chriſtians to reſtrain themſelves towards thoſe who reſiſt all fraternal methods of charity, and by outward behaviour to ſhew a diſlike of their contumacy and obduration, eſpecially when an Apoſtle at a diſtance ſhall paſs that judgement on any particular man, and the preſent ſtate of the Church leave no place for expectation of formal cenſures, the law of Charondas being not unreaſonable in this caſe, Ἀδίκῳ ἀνδρὶ ἢ γυναικὶ μὴ ὁμιλεῖν μηδένα ἢ ὀνειδίζεσθαι, ὡς ὅμοιον ὄντα, That no man converſe with a wicked man or woman, or bring a reproach on himſelf, as if he were like him. But this is not to be thought neceſſary, but when it is by the Governour of the Church, as 'twas here by S. Paul, preſcribed; nor prudent, but when by ſo doing we may hope to bring offenders to ſome ſenſe of their faults. And whenſoever it is done, it ought only to be deſign'd to charitable ends, and not to gratifie a man's own pride or wrath, to expreſs animoſities or revenges on any.

V. 10. Extortioners] What ἅρπαγες ſignifies here is ſomewhat uncertain. That which the other ſins with which 'tis mentioned encline it to, is, that it denote violence or rapes, forcing or raviſhing to uncleanneſs, the ἅλωσις 2 Pet. 2. 13. preying like vultures on all that come near them. The literal notation of the word from ἁρπάζω rapio, by which, as by ἁλόω, the Hebrew חרף is rendred. This was the ſin of Sodom, forcing of ſtrangers, and even of the Angels when they came into the city to deſtroy it. And this is it which ſeems to be meant by the earth's being full of violence, Gen. 6. 11. joined with the corruptneſs of it before God; for which two there joined together, (as 2 Pet. 2. 12. ἅλωσις and φθορὰ taking and corrupting) the word corrupt is uſed alone, v. 12. which, we know, in the New Teſtament ſignifies thoſe pollutions, (ſee Note on 2 Pet. 1. b. and 2. b.) which probably were the ſin of the old world, a conſequent of the ſons of God ſeeing and marrying with the daughters of men, v. 1. (the like as happen'd after on the like occaſion, Num. 25. 1.) and they are therefore joined with Sodom in this matter, 2 Pet. 2. 5, 6. For to that of Uncleanneſs it is that this whole Chapter belongs, on occaſion of πορνεία unlawful luſts and inceſt, at the beginning. And to that of violence or raviſhing, or uſing to unnatrual ſins, ἁρπάζειν and ἅρπαγες ordinarily belongs. Thus in Harmenopulus ἐξάβιβ. 5. πτ. ζ. (where τὰ τοῦ ἅρπαγος εἰς δημόσιον εἰσκομίζονται, the goods of the raviſher ſhall be carried and forfeit to the Exchequer) the word is uſed in this ſenſe. So in the ſecond book of the Sibylline Oracles (written, I ſuppoſe, by ſome ancient Chriſtian) with thoſe that had put off all ſhame, are joined ἁρπασιμάοι, forcers, violaters of chaſtity, and p. 216. with λεκτροκλόποι, εἰδωλολάτραι, and

* Αἰδοῖλιν ἀπολιπόντες, ἀναιδείλιν ποθέοντες, * p. 172.

Οἷς κακὸς ἐν στέρνοισιν ἔνι μεμαυηκὸς οἶστρος

(which is in effect all one with πλεονέκται and εἰδωλολάτραι here, inordinate luſters and idolaters) there is joined ——ἁρπάζοντες, ἀναίδεα θυμὸν ἔχοντες, violent forcers, and perſons of impudent luſts, and στόξοισι κρυφίοις ſecret loves and adulteries, to which the brimſtone, the portion of Sodom, ſhould be allotted,

——θείῳ ἀποβήσεται ὀδμή.

And thus, I conceive, it is that ἁρπαγὴ and ἀκρασία, violence and incontinence, are joined together, Mat. 23. 25. and oppoſed both to καθαρὸν and καθαρίζειν, pure and cleanſing, v. 26. where S. Luke, c. 11. 36. in ſtead of ἀκρασία incontinence, hath πονηρία villany or wickedneſs, as that is uſed here, v. 13. and in Geneſis, c. 6. 5. in this ſenſe for abominable luſts. The full deſcription of this will be beſt fetch'd from Strabo, l. 10. ſetting down the cuſtoms, and among them the amours of the Cretans, altogether after this manner, of force and rape, ὃ ποιοῦσι καταγράζοντα τὰς ἐρωμένους, ἀλλ' ἁρπαγῇ, they do not get their beloved youths by perſwaſion, but by force. The lover, ſaith he, ſome three days before tells the friends, that he means ἁρπαγὴν ποιεῖσθαι, to commit the rape, and they muſt not hide the youth or divert him from walking in his wonted way; for to do ſo is to confeſs that he is not worthy of ſuch a lover. The whole manner of it is there ſet down, not worthy to be here tranſcribed, by which 'tis plain that this of ἁρπαγὴ rape, was among them the ceremony of their Maſcula Venus, and very creditable and cuſtomary among them, and τοῖς καλοῖς τῶν ἐπάνω, ἢ εὐγενῶν ὀπφανῶν, ἐραστὴν μὴ τυχεῖν αἰσχρὸν νομίζεται, 'twas a ſhame to any handſome youth of good parentage not to have ſome ſuch lover, that ſhould take him by violence; which being the heathen cuſtom of this Iſland of Crete, may well be thought to have given occaſion to that direction of S. Paul, Tit. 1. 6. that he that were choſen to be Biſhop ſhould be ſuch an one who had faithful children, μὴ ἐν κατηγορίᾳ ἀσωτίας, not accuſed of riot, not guilty of having ſuffered any ſuch villany as this.

Ib. Idolaters] That εἰδωλολάτραι here is not to be reſtrained to the particular ſin of worſhipping pictures or images, will be probable by the reſt of the ſins which are joined with it, for which a Chriſtian profeſſor is to be excommunicated, v. 11. It ſeems rather to refer either to the joining in the Idol-feaſts, of which the Gnoſtick hereticks were guilty, or elſe to thoſe filthy practices ſo frequent and cuſtomary in their myſteries, as prime rites of the heathen falſe worſhips, and taken up in a moſt vile manner by the Gnoſticks alſo. That the word ſhould thus be uſed, will appear moſt reaſonable, 1. becauſe of the words uſed in the Old Teſtament to ſignifie an idol; גלול is one which ſignifies pollution, or filth, by which any man is contaminated, and which is ſometimes rendred βδέλυγμα abomination, and the falſe God or idol meant ſometimes when βδέλυγμα abomination is uſed, as Wiſd. 12. 23. referring to thoſe abominable ſins which thoſe idol-worſhips were commonly guilty of; and to the ſame purpoſe is it that the Hebrew שקץ, abomination or filthineſs, commonly rendred βδέλυγμα or μίασμα, abomination or pollution, is ſometimes εἴδωλον idol alſo. And ſo ſaith Lyra on Gen. 21. of the word שחק, that it ſignifies idolotrantem, and coeuntem or laſcivientem, idolatry, and any act of uncleanneſs or laſciviouſneſs. 2dly, Becauſe their heathen worſhips were ſo full of theſe foul ſins. Thus Wiſd. 14. after an enumeration of many other wickedneſſes in their φάρμακα and κρύφια μυστήρια, ſacrifices and ſecret myſteries, v. 23. (that Cereris arcanum, the ſecret of Ceres in Horace, ſecreta Ceres in Seneca, Hercul. Fur. and Cadmæa orgia condita ciſtis, in Oetem) he concludes with μιασμοὺς, γενέσεως ἐναλλαγὴν, γάμων ἀταξίαν, μοιχείαν καὶ ἀσέλγειαν, pollution, inverſion of nature, confuſion of marriages, adultery and ſhameleſs ſhameleſs uncleanneſs, v. 26. and concludes that the worſhip of nameleſs idols, or idols not to be named, is the beginning and cauſe and end of all evil, v. 27. So Jer. 44. 19. when they that dwelt in Ægypt juſtifie themſelves to Jeremy, that they did no harm in their ſacrifices to the Queen of heaven, becauſe they did it not ſecretly, without the privity of their husbands, 'tis clear that there were ſuch night ſacrifices uſed by women, and ſuſpected and diſliked by their husbands. Thus 1 Kin. 14. 24. after the mention of idols and groves, it follows that there were Sodomites in the land, doing according to the abomination of the heathens which the Lord had caſt out before the children of Iſrael; which withall notes the particularity of the ſin of the Amorites and other nations, for which they were rooted out, ſet down more fully, Lev. 18. 24, 25, 27, 28. and an expreſs threat from heaven, v. 29. that Whoſoever ſhall commit any of theſe abominations ſhall be cut off from among their people. To which purpoſe no doubt it was, that the ſign of God's covenant with his people was that of Circumciſion, σύμβολον ἡδονῶν ἐκλομῆς, a ſign of the exciſion of pleaſures, ſaith Philo, noting the caſting off that περιττεία κακίας ſuperfluity of naughtineſs, which had been practiſed among thoſe nations; and the ſame is more then intimated in our Baptiſme, the outward part of which is ἀπόθεσις ῥύπου σαρκὸς, the waſhing away the filth of the fleſh, and ſignifies the forſaking of all the ſinful luſts thereof. So 1 Kin. 15. 12. the Idols and the Sodomites are mention'd together, and 2 Kin. 23. 7. the houſes of the Sodomites are caſt down. Where there is alſo mention of the groves for thoſe dark purpoſes, by which, under the name of Aſhteroth, Aſtarte ſeems to be deſigned. So when the Babylonians made Succoth Benoth, that ſignifies the tents of Venus, in which the Virgins were ſolemnly proſtituted to the honour of that falſe Goddeſs, under the title of Mylitta; and ſo the proſtitution of their daughters for the honour of their Gods, which is mentioned not only by Herodotus, l. 1. and Strabo, l. 16. but in the Epiſtle of Jeremie, v. 43. where as the θυμιῶται πίτυρα, (from the Hebrew פמרה apertura) hath an unclean notation in it; ſo the cords there mention'd are the ſigns of their foul vows and obligation to pay their ſacrifices before they went. So Iſa. 57. 5. You that inflame your ſelves with idols under every green tree, noting that proſtitution of men and women in the groves about their Idol-Temples, in honour of their falſe gods. So 1 Mac. 5. 43. the Temple that was at Carnaim is expreſſed, 2 Mac. 12. 26. to be the Temple of Venus, for ſo Ἀπεργατεῖον ſignifies, אורעתא or ἀπάργατις being with the addition but of an א all one with ורעתא or Δερκατὼ, and with אתרה Athara, or ἡ ἀπείρωτος, the expreſſion of, and title for Venus. And 2 Mac. 6. 4. when the Heathens profaned the Temple of God, and transformed it into the Gentile worſhips, the firſt things that are mention'd is their ἀσωτία and κῶμοι, luxury and unclean night-meetings, (ſo the Scholiaſt on Theocritus explains κωμάζειν ὅτι τῇ νύκτα εἰς τὰς ἑορτὰς ἀπερχομένων) ῥᾳθυμούντων μεθ' ἑταίρων, καὶ ἐν ἱεροῖς βεβήλοις γυναιξὶ πλησιαζόντων, &c. committing all filthineſs in the precincts of the Temple. And ſo there is more then a trope or figure in it, that Idolatry in the ſcriptures of the old Teſtament is ſo oft expreſſed by fornication, having ſo much of the reality of that vice in it, Philo calling the πάθη τῆς ἡδονῆς, ſenſual inordinate pleaſures, εἴδωλα idols, and the heathen idols generally leading into thoſe heathen ſins alſo. Thus in the Sibylline Oracles ſpeaking of the Roman luſtrations, l. 3. p. 231 we find all the unnatural villanies mention'd, the ſame that Rom. 1. 26, &c.

Ἄρσην δ' ἄρσενι πησιάσει, σήσαί τε παῖδας
Αἰσχεῖς ἐν πήμασι, &c. And therefore in thoſe Oracles, p. 264. ſpeaking of the Chriſtian's giving over Idolatry, (ἀλλ' ἔργ' ἀνθρώπων χρύσια, &c.) 'tis added

Κ' ἀλλ' ἄρσενικὸς παῖδας μίγνυνται ἀνάγνως,
Ὀυαί τε Φοίνισσαι τ', &c. naming all the nations of the heathen world that were guilty of it; and p. 279. exhorting againſt Idolatry,

Φεύγετε λατρείας ἀδίκους· τῷ ζῶντι λάτρευε,
Μοιχείαν φύλαξο, καὶ ἄκριτον ἄρσενος εὐνάν.

Avoid unlawful worſhips, and ſerve the living God, keep from adultery and unnatural mixtures; and l. 4. p. 287. the true piety is ſet in oppoſition, as to the Idol-worſhip, ſo to Ἀλλοτρίης κοίτης πόθος αἰσχέος, and Ἄρσενος ὕβρεις ἀπεχθὴς τε συγχυσίη τε, all unlawful and abominable luſt; and p. 216. the heathens title is-- Λεκτροκλόπαι εἰδωλολάτραι, Idolaters that uſe ſtollen venery; and ſo p. 296. and 315.

Μοιχεῖαι δὲ καὶ, καὶ παίδων μίξεις ἄθεσμος, all to the ſame purpoſe, concerning the Roman's practice. And infinitely more in other Authors, of the Eleuſinia ſacra, Cybele's myſteries, Venus's and Flora's feaſts among the Græcians. By this may appear the notion of εἰδωλολάτρης Idolater and Idolatry in this place for all thoſe foul ſins ſo practiſed by the worſhippers of falſe Gods, and from them taken up and improved by the Gnoſticks. So Col. 3. 5. fornication, uncleanneſs, πάθος, evil concupiſcence and inordinate deſire, ἥτις ἐστὶν εἰδωλολατρεία, which is Idolatry, where S. Cyprian; Ep. 51. will have ἥτις refer to all the foregoing ſins, for which the wrath of God comes, &c. So Eph. 5. 5. Every fornicator, and unclean perſon, and πλεονέκτης inordinate luſter, who is an Idolater. To this may be referred that of Maimonides, More Neboch. l. 3. c. 37. ſpeaking of the unnatural ſins of the Gentiles, and inſtancing in one of them, Propter hoc, ſaith he, prohibitæ ſunt commixtiones, ſcilicet inſitio arborus in aliam ſpeciem, ut elongemur à cauſis Idololatriæ & fornicationum, making Fornication, in that notion of ſins againſt nature, to be all one with Idolatry, or that which Idolaters freely practiſed. This may be alſo the notation of Idolaters, when the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Cor. 10. 6. Be not ye idolaters, as were ſome of them, as it is written, they ſate down to eat and drink, and roſe to play, for the Greek παίζειν there rendred to play, may refer in that place to thoſe ſins of uncleanneſs; ſee Note on that place. But no queſtion, this is the meaning of ἀθέμιτοι εἰδωλολατρεῖαι abominable, nefarious idolatries, 1 Pet. 4. 3. as appears by the ἀσελγείαις juſt before, that is, the παρὰ φύσιν unnatural ſins of uncleanneſs, in Phavorinus, and the ἀναίδειαι ἀσωτίας, v. 4. confuſion of ſexes, and all kinds of villany not to be named, as thoſe words denote; ſee Note on that place. And ſo moſt manifeſtly in this Epiſtle, c. 6. 9. where fornicators, idolaters, adulterers, effeminate abuſers of themſelves with mankind, &c. are joined together in the ſame matter. And Gal. 5. 20. where among the works of the fleſh are in the front, adultery, fornication, uncleanneſs, laſciviouſneſs, idolatry, &c. all clearly of a making, if this notion of idolatry be accepted. And Rev. 21. 8. where among the ſeverals, to which fire and brimſtone belong, (the portion of Sodom) we have ἐβδελυγμένοι abominable, (in the ſenſe that c. 17. 4, and 7. βδελύγματα and ἀκάθαρτα τῆς πορνείας, abominations and uncleanneſs of fornication, are put together) fornicators, idolaters, &c. and c. 22. 15. fornicators, idolaters, &c. And this ſure was it that S. John referred to in his firſt Epiſtle, c. 5. 21. when he perſwades his little children, his new converts, to keep themſelves from idols, that is, from thoſe Gnoſtick practices, which had over-run all Aſia, as appears by the Epiſtles to the Churches there, Rev. 2. and 3. Thus in Polycarp's Epiſtle, He that abſtains not from unnatural luſts (under the name of πλεονεξία, which is there miſtranſlated covetouſneſs; ſee Note on Rom. 1. h.) ab Idolatria coinquinabitur, & tanquam inter Gentes judicabitur, ſhall be infected by Idolatry, and judged as among the Gentiles. And ſo when Bede on Mat. 5. 32. ſaith of fornication, that by that word is not only underſtood Adultery, but omnis concupiſcentia vel avaritia (for πλεονεξία again) vel Idolatria, every concupiſcence, inordinate luſt or idolatry. And all theſe uſes of the word Idolatry in the New Teſtament, diſtinctly referring to the Gnoſtick's practices, who, as they were content to be preſent at the idol-ſacrifices, making it an indifferent thing (rather then be perſecuted by the heathens) ſo they practiſed all theſe heathen villanies in the higheſt manner imaginable. I ſhall add but one teſtimony more to this purpoſe, that of the Illiberitane Councill. Can. 2. Flamines, qui poſt fidem lavacri & regenerationis ſacrificaverunt, eo quòd geminaverint ſcelera, accedente homicidio, vel triplicaverint facinus, cohærente mœchiâ, placuit, &c. The Prieſts that, after the receiving the faith, and being baptized, have ſacrificed, in reſpect that they have doubled their ſins by the acceſſion of homicide, (the bloodſhed in the Gladiator's prizes, which were ordinarily joined with their heathen ſacrifices) or trebled them by the adherence of adultery, or ſins of uncleanneſs, 'tis decreed, &c. where, it ſeems, theſe followers of the Gnoſticks, that, after the receiving of the Chriſtian faith, ſacrificed as heathen prieſts, undertook the office of their Flamens, lay under a treble guilt, λοίδορος

V. 11. Railer] That λοίδορος ſignifies a railer or opprobrious, contumelious ſpeaker, there is no doubt; but that it ſignifies reproachful actions, as well as words, there is as little queſtion, and therefore Heſychius that renders it ὑβριστὴς ἢ κακολογῶν in reference to words, renders it ὕβρεως ἢ a contumelious perſon, it may be, in reſpect of actions alſo. And then it may be here another notation of the heathen Gnoſtick's ſins of uncleanneſs, which in all languages have been civilly expreſs'd by words that note contumely, or reproach. So in the Sibylline Oracles,

Ἄρσενος ὕβρεις ἀπηχθὴς τε συγχέαι τε, the contumelious uſing of mankind, abominable and baſe. So when the Apoſtle calls them ἄτιμα πάθη, infamous, diſhonourable. So to abuſe or defame, in Engliſh, is ordinarily, taken for theſe ſins of uncleanneſs committed on any, and in the Hebrew dialect, to mock, (and παίζειν and ἐμπαίζειν; ſee Note on 1 Cor. 10. c.) as of Joſeph, He hath brought in an Hebrew to mock us, Gen. 39. 14. and ſo ſaith Lyra of צחק to mock, (mention'd Note h.) that it notes ludentem & coeuntem, mocking and defiling. And thus ſure it may ſignifie in this place; and ſo all that are mention'd here will be reducible to the ſame head, of ſins of Uncleanneſs or Incontinence, ſave only that of Drunkenneſs, which, as another heathen rite, and ſenſual ſin, is fitly joined with them. But if this be not it, it may then, according to the ordinary uſe of the word for reproachful ſpeeches, refer to the uncharitableneſs of the Gnoſticks in accuſing the Chriſtians, and ſo ſtirring up perſecutions againſt them.

V. 12. For what have I to do—] Some doubt there is of the reading and rendring the words from this place, to the end of the chapter. Theophylact tells us of ſome that ſet the point after οὐχί, and then began a new ſenſe without an interrogation. And then the reading muſt be, what have I to do to judge thoſe that are without? No, Judge ye thoſe that are within, adding as in a parentheſis, (but thoſe that are without God judgeth) and ye ſhall take away the evil from among you, which beſt agrees to the καὶ, (and, not therefore) in the Greek, and to the reading of Chryſoſtome and Theophylact, who read ἐξαρεῖτε τὸ πονηρὸν, ye ſhall remove the evil thing, (not ἐξαρεῖτε ὁ πονηρὸν, remove the evil or wicked perſon) from among you, referring, * ſay they, to the paſſage in the Old Teſtament, Deut. 13. 5. and 22. 21. And accordingly Theodoret and the vulgar read τὸ πονηρὸν the evil. For this latter part, that this reading and rendring is to be adhered to, there will be little doubt to any that conſiders how evidently theſe laſt words καὶ ἐξαρεῖτε——and ye ſhall remove the evil from among you, refer to the phraſe in the Old Teſtament, Deut. 22. 21. (though there the Rome Edition reads corruptly ὁ πονηρὸν) all the queſtion is of the former part, which depends on the pointing of the οὐχί, of which Theophylact adds, τινὲς δὲ συναπτῶς, καὶ ἐρωτηματικῶς, ſome read it conjoined with what follows, and by way of interrogation, as we do, and all the Copies that now we meet with. And that I prefer this reading, beſide the conſent of Copies, theſe are my reaſons. 1. Becauſe the Context agrees very well to it, the thing that the Apoſtle now hath in hand, being to diſclaim meddling with heathens, in the beginning of the verſe, upon which that which is here added, οὐχὶ τοὺς ἔσω ὑμεῖς κρίνετε, τοὺς δὲ ἔξω ὁ θεὸς κρίνει; if it be read all in one interrogation, Do not ye judge thoſe that are within, but thoſe that are without God judgeth? will follow, and cohere very commodiouſly; for thus it will lie. I have nothing to do to judge thoſe that are without, but as ye, that is, the Church, uſe to cenſure thoſe that are within, who belong to your cognizance, ſo for all others they muſt be referred and left to God's tribunal: (many ſpeeches of this kind are taken notice of, Note on Mat. 9. d.) 2dly, Becauſe in the former reading, οὐχὶ is made an anſwer to ἤ, which I believe to be without example, the queſtion by ἤ being ſo ſtrong and familiar a negative, that generally there is not any negation added to it, and if there were, οὐκ would be it moſt regularly. 3dly, Becauſe οὐχὶ is very frequently an interrogative form, and οὐκ and μὴ, οὐδαμῶς and μηδαμῶς, the forms of anſwering the queſtion, and that argues the neceſſity of retaining the ſecond reading. The only difficulty remaining is how καὶ ἐξαρεῖτε, and ye ſhall take away the evil from among you, ſhall fitly connect with this ſenſe. For that καὶ ſhould be rendred therefore is not very reaſonable, and that alſo which ſuppoſeth the right reading to be ἐξαρεῖτε ὁ πονηρὸν, take away the evil perſon, not ἐξαρεῖτε τὸ πονηρὸν, ye ſhall take away the evil thing, which we have already with great reaſon pitch'd on for the true. The probableſt way to ſalve this difficulty is, either to affix theſe laſt words of the Chapter, and of this matter, as a teſtimony out of the Old Teſtament, to conclude, and to belong to the whole buſineſs of this Chapter, that by their obeying his directions in it, they ſhould thus put away the evil from among them, and ſecure themſelves from the puniſhments which elſe might fall on them, among whom notorious ſinners were thus permitted to live impunè, as it had oft fallen out among the Jews: Or elſe to put the whole 12th verſe, and the beginning of the 13th, in a parentheſis, (and not the beginning of the 13th only) and then to read it in ſenſe thus, from v. 11. But now I have written to you not to accompany, or ſo much as to eat or uſe any familiar converſe with any unclean or drunken profeſſor, and by ſo doing ye ſhall put away the evil from among you: ſecure your ſelves from the judgments, which elſe you have reaſon to fear will come upon you, then adding the parentheſis in its due place, to give an account of his reſtraining theſe cenſures to profeſſors or Chriſtians only. And this ſeems the faireſt way of compoſing all difficulty.

CHAP. VI. Paraphraſe.

1. DAre any of you, having * a matter againſt another, go to Law before the unjuſt, and not before the Saints?]

1. When there is any matter of controverſie betwixt you, about your wordly goods, I hear that you implead one another, (ſee Rom. 3. note b.) before the heathen tribunals, and uſe not that method preſcribed by Chriſt to Chriſtians, Mat. 18. 15. How dareth any Chriſtian do thus?

2. Do ye not know that the Saints ſhall judge the world? and if the world ſhall be judged by you, are ye unworthy † [a] to judge the ſmalleſt matters?]

2. You cannot but know, that in the great final judgment of all the world, the Saints of God ſhall bear God company in judging the wicked: and if Chriſtians ſhall then by God be vouchſafed that honour, to have any thing to do in matters of ſo much higher importance, is there any reaſon they ſhould be deemed unworthy to be intruſted with the judging of worldly differences, which are much inferior to thoſe of adjudging of men's eternal being?

3. Know ye not that we ſhall judge angels? * how much more things that pertain to this life?]

3. 'Tis certain that God's children, when crowned by him, ſhall pronounce ſentence againſt the evil ſpirits; and ſhall they not be thought fit to decide a controverſie about an ordinary treſpaſs among men?

4. † If then ye have judgment of things pertaining to this life, * ſet them to judge who are leaſt eſteemed in the Church.]

4. If therefore there fall out betwixt you any matters of controverſie concerning the matters of common life, which are to be brought to Judicatures, or will not otherwiſe be compoſed, and if ye do deſpiſe the Governours of your Churches, (which, ſince theſe diſſenſions are come in, are quite out of eſteem among you) ſo far, that ye do not think fit to ſtand to their ſentences or deciſions, yet ſure ye have all reaſon to refer it to the ſimpleſt and meaneſt Chriſtians, or even to ſet them in the tribunal, rather then carry your controverſie before the Gentile Courts.

5. I ſpeak this to your ſhame; † Is it ſo that there is not a wiſe man amongſt you? no not one that ſhall be able to judge between his brethren?]

5. My mentioning the meaneſt and moſt deſpicable among you, is to make you aſhamed of your unreaſonableneſs in ſuppoſing, (as by going to heathen courts, ye muſt be interpreted to do) that there is no one Chriſtian fit for this employment, that is, that there is not one man of them that hath underſtanding enough to arbitrate an ordinary buſineſs between fellow-Chriſtians, whoſe inclinableneſs to peace is to be preſumed of, and then that muſt needs work ſomewhat toward the pacification.

6. But

6. But one Christian impleads his fellow-Christian,

6. But brother goeth to law with brother, and that before the unbelievers.] and that before Gentiles.

7. It is not so well, that you go to law at all; it were the part of a more excellent magnanimous Christian spirit, to be content to lose somewhat that were his own, to bear some injuries, rather then to go to law upon every trespass.

7. Now therefore, there is utterly * b a fault among you, † because ye go to law one with another. Why do ye not take wrong? * why do ye not rather suffer your selves to be defrauded?] • a defect † that, ὅτι • Why are ye not rather defrauded? Διατί οὐ μᾶλλον ἀποστερεῖσθε;

8. But some of you are so far from this excellent Christian temper, that you are ready to injure others, even your fellow-Christians, and, so ye may gain to your selves, care not how you deprive others.

8. Nay, you do wrong, and defraud, and that your brethren.]

9. This is absolutely unconsistent with the Christian's duty or reward; Never do you flatter your selves with a belief of the contrary, nor permit the false teachers that are crept in among you, to give you any hope of it: And as for matters of injustice, so for all your other Gnostick practices of uncleanness, (see notes on c. 5. a, h, i.) and unnatural lust.

9. Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? be not deceived; neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind,]

10. Neither they that are guilty of them, nor of any other injustice, shall, without reformation, ever be capable of inheriting the crown which is by Christ promised to Christians.

10. Nor theeves, nor † covetous, nor drunkards, nor * revilers, nor † extortioners shall inherit the kingdom of God.] † men of inordinate lusts πλεονέκται • contumelious persons, see note on c. 5. k. † the violent, see note on e. 5. h.

11. And such sins as these were ordinary among you in time of your heathen state: but now you have given up your names to Christianity, which denounceth judgment against all these; your baptism is a renouncing of them all, your sanctification by the Spirit directly contrary to it, your justification by what Christ hath suffered and done for you, (see note on Mat. 7. b.) utterly incompatible with such impurities and injustices, spoken of either in the last or this chapter.

11. And such were some of you: but * ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified † in the name of our Lord Jesus, and by the spirit of our God.] • ye have been washed ἀπελούσασθε † through ἐν

12. And whereas your teachers, to allure you to sensual practices, tell you first that all meat is freely to be eaten, and so sooth you up in luxury, and then proceed and perswade you that the use of venery is as necessary for your bodies, and so as lawful, as eating of meat is; I shall tell you first, that supposing them lawful, yet it will befit a Christian to abstain from many things that are not utterly unlawful; and secondly, that if indifferent things begin to get a dominion over any, if men, upon conceit that meats are lawful, come to be enslaved to their bellies, (as of the Gnosticks 'tis affirmed, that they serve their bellies, and that they are lovers of pleasures more then of God) this is then absolutely unlawful.

12. All things are lawful * unto me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any.] • for me, μοι

13. 'Tis true that meats are by God and nature appointed for the use of men, and that the body of man here in this life hath absolute necessity of them: And yet to take off our hearts from them, we may also consider that in the next life, which is a spiritual life, this eating and desiring of meat shall be taken away, and therefore even here we should keep the flesh in such a subordination to the spirit, that we may be able to deny our selves even lawful pleasures sometimes, especially when any occasion makes it more expedient, v. 12. But then for fornication, (whatsoever your former heathen principles, or present false teachers, the Gnosticks, teach you) that is no such lawful or indifferent thing, your bodies are to be consecrated to God, either in lawful wedlock, or in chaste single life, and by being kept pure here, must be made capable of rising to everlasting life with Christ hereafter. v. 14.

13. Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats; but God shall † destroy both it and them. * Now the body is not for fornication, but for the Lord, and the Lord for the body.] † take away, καταργήσει • But the τὸ δὲ

14. And then God, that raised up Christ's pure sinless body out of the grave, and hath made it a spiritual body, shall also do the same for us, though we lie down in the grave also.

14. And God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his own power.]

15. And this one consideration may have force on you. Your bodies expect to rise with Christ, as members with the head: ye must not then in any reason pollute a member of Christ, a devoted consecrated person, by such unclean embraces.

15. Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ? shall I then take the members of Christ, and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid.]

16. That which was said at the institution of marriage in paradise, that the man and the wife become one body, concludes, that the fornicator makes himself one body with a whore.

16. What, know ye not that he which † is joined to an harlot, is one body? for * two (saith he) shall be one flesh.] † cleaveth κολλώμενος • they two, οἱ δύο † cleaveth, v. 16.

17. As on the other side, he that keeps close to Christ's commandments, and so cleaves to him, Deut. 10. 20. hath a spiritual union with him, minds the same things that he minds, and so is very far from these carnal base joys, in which all the Gnostick's religion consists.

17. But he that † is joined unto the Lord, is one spirit.]

18. Be sure therefore that ye keep your selves far removed from that sin. Most other sins are committed against God, or the neighbour; but sins of uncleanness are against one's self, a defiling of his flesh, a polluting of that which by chastity and single life is set apart to be a temple of God, a place of sanctity and purity. v. 29.

18. Flee fornication. Every sin that a man doth, is without the body: but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body.]

19. Your bodies are, by your being Christians, consecrated to the service of the spirit, (and the Governours of the Church, of which sort the incestuous person is thought to be, (see c. 5. 2.) set apart in all purity to discharge that function, to which they are consecrated by receiving the holy Ghost.) This benefit of the spirit ye have received from God, and it is an engagement to you to think your own bodies are not now at your own disposal, to use them as you please, (as in your state of Gentilism, or without that engagement ye might be tempted to imagine.)

19. What, know ye not that your body is the Temple of the Holy Ghost which is * in you, which ye have † of God, and ye are not your own?] † from ἀπὸ you, hath given his son out of his bosom, and his very spirit, to this purpose, to purchase unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works, by this price making purchase of our bodies as well as our souls, and so engaging us to serve and glorifie him in both, and not leaving either of them at liberty for us to dispose of as we please.

Annotations on Chap. VI.

a. Κεῖνται

V. 2. To judge] That the word κεῖνται signifies not matters, but places of Judicature, appears by Hesychius, (Κεῖνται, ἀγορεύουσι) and Authors and Glossaries generally; and so in the sacred style, Susan. 49. where we read, the place of judgment. So Judg. 5. 10. sit in judgment, and Dan. 7. 10. the judgment was set, that is, the Court of Judges. And Jam. 2. 6. κεῖνται are distinctly and necessarily rendred Judgment-seats. And so here the Arabick interpreter renders it by words which are thus in Latin, Subsellia Judicii ad mundum pertinentia, seats of judgment belonging to the world.

b. Ἥττημα

V. 7. A fault] The word ἥττημα is used Rom. 11. 12. and is opposed to πλήρωμα fulness, noting there the great paucity of the Jewish converts to Christianity. Accordingly, though it be here applied to another matter, yet in the same notion it is a going less, or an inferiour degree, which in respect of that which is to be expected of the higher proficients in Christianity, is a defect or failing, a low pitch for any Christian, but not such as can absolutely and universally be counted a sin, as not being against any precept. Contending, or going to law, for light inconsiderable matters, is forbidden by Christ, Mat. 5. 40. but not absolutely, all contending for the recovering or defending ones own, when the matter is of of weight or importance. Only they that have gotten a ſuperiority and contempt of the world, they will go higher then that ſtrict precept, and rather endure conſiderable loſſes, then engage themſelves in ſuch diſquiets of mind and turmoils, as ſuch contentions uſe to bring with them: and to this is to be applied that which here follows in this place, why do ye not rather ſuffer injury and defraudation? that is, it is more Chriſtian and excellent to do ſo. And in this reſpect, or comparatively to this higher vertue, the going to law at all, though it be not a ſin, ἁμάρτημα or ἔγκλημα, yet it is ἥττημα a diminution, a leſs degree of Chriſtian perfection; and that is all that is meant in this place. As for the word ὅλως, although that be left out in the King's MS. which reads ἥττημα ὑμῖν ὅτι it is a diminution for you, yet it may be well retained, and note, that this defect was univerſal among them. See Note on c. 5. a.

obliges to this, other advantages there are worth conſidering; For it ſometimes hath come to paſs, and there is great reaſon to hope it, that the heathen husband may be converted by the Chriſtian wife living with him, and ſo the wife by the husband: and this one conſideration is the reaſon why the young children of Chriſtians are admitted to baptiſm before they come to knowledge, becauſe by their living in the family with Chriſtian parents, theſe children may be brought up in the faith, and kept from heathen pollutions, (and the Church requiring and receiving promiſe from the parents, doth conſequently preſume they will) and by the ſame reaſon it is that the children of the heathen are not ſo admitted.

But yet above all things, that which is moſt to be obſerved is, that the believing party do the utmoſt that is poſſible to keep peace and agreement with the other, not to fall out at all, or if they do, to repair the breach and be reconciled again; nay farther, not to marry again, as long as there remains any hope of returning or reconciliation.

19. Circumciſion is nothing, and uncircumciſion is nothing, but the keeping of the commandments of God.]

20, 21. In what condition of life soever a man is, when he is converted to Christianity, let him contentedly continue in it, and not think that Christian religion frees a man from any obligation that lay upon him before, for that is to make Christian liberty a pretence for covetousness, or lusts, or secular advantages, (see 1 Tim. 6. 5.) if either the being a Christian might manumit a servant, or free an husband or wife from former obligations. He therefore that being a bond-man is converted to Christianity, must not think it any disparagement to his Christianity, that he continues a servant still, nor be solicitous of changing his condition. Yet this is not so to be understood, but that if, by any fair regular means, he can obtain his freedom, he may then make use of them, and prefer liberty before servitude; for so he might have done if he had never been Christian.

20. Let every man abide in the ſame calling, wherein he was called.

22. For he that being in the condition of a servant is converted to Christianity, doth by his conversion become a freeman in respect of Christ; not that he ceaseth to be a servant to his former master, or reaps any secular advantages thereby, but his advantages are spiritual, to wit, that by being a Christian he is now delivered from many servitudes, that of sin, &c. that lie upon all others, and to live in Christ's family, as one of his freemen, though in respect of the world he continue as a servant; and so on the other side, he that is a freeman and turns Christian, becomes thereby a servant of Christ, undertaking obedience to his commands, though he lose not his liberty in the world by that means. (By which 'tis clear that Christ meddles not with the secular government of the world, nor changes any man's outward condition by his becoming Christian.)

25. For your other question concerning virgins marrying at such a time as this, or of those that are betrothed, whether they should be bound to consummate their marriage or no, I must say again, that I have no command of Christ to build my answer upon; yet I shall again give you my opinion in it, as an honest faithful man, with all uprightness.

25. Now concerning virgins, I have no commandment of the Lord; yet I give my * judgment, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithful.]

* opinion γνώμην

26. First, then my opinion is that 'tis best in respect of the distresses that are daily to be look'd for on Christians, I say that 'tis best for men and women, (supposing them not contracted) to continue unmarried.

26. † I suppoſe therefore that this is good for the preſent diſtreſs, I ſay that it is good for a man ſo to be.]

† I think this then to be good, because of the necessity approaching, to wit, good Νομίζω οὖν τοῦτο καλὸν ὑπάρχειν διὰ τὴν ἐνεστῶσαν ἀνάγκην, ὅτι καλόν. see note on Mat. 7. d.

27. But if thou art engaged or betrothed to a woman, this is no excuse for thee to seek to get loose again, (for that cannot be done so as to be free to marry another, as long as she lives.) All that I say is, that it is not now the prudentest way to think of marrying, if thou art not already engaged.

28. Yet not so, that if thou dost, 'tis a sin to marry, or that the virgin that now marries commits any sin; only (in such times as these) the married state is likely to be fullest of trouble, and therefore my kindness to you makes me perswade you not to marry.

28. But and if thou marry, thou haſt not ſinned; and if a virgin marry, ſhe hath not ſinned: nevertheleſs ſuch ſhall have trouble in the fleſh: but I ſpare you.]

29. But by the way let me tell you, that within a short time now 'twill come to pass, that they that have wives shall be as they that have none, all in great and equal dangers;

29. But this I ſay, brethren, * the time is ſhort; it remaineth that both they that have wives, be as † though they had none;]

* that the time is now short, or from henceforth short, that ὅτι ὁ καιρὸς συνεσταλμένος ἐστὶ τὸ λοιπὸν ἵνα

30. And they that weep, as * though they wept not; and they that rejoice, as † though they rejoiced not; and they that buy, as * though they poſſeſſed not;

† those that rejoice not, μὴ χαίροντες
* those that poſſeſs not, μὴ κατέχοντες
† those that uſe it not, μὴ καταχρώμενοι

32. All the advantage therefore I wish you, is to be as unincumbered as may be, that you may have the less perplexity before-hand, and be able to attend the service of God, more than if you were married. He that is unmarried hath but one obligation of care, how he may serve God most acceptably.

† and is distracted μεμέρισται

34. The widow and virgin being both unmarried have no diversion, nothing else to do but to serve God, and to take care to render themselves acceptable to him; whereas domestical affairs are part of the married woman's care, and it is part of her calling to be very careful to please her husband.

34. There is difference alſo between a wife and a virgin: † the unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that ſhe may be holy both in body and ſpirit; but ſhe that is married careth for the things of the world, how ſhe may pleaſe her husband.]

37. But he that hath made a firm resolution to stay a while, and finds himself able to do it, and neither from any necessity arising from himself, nor from the condition of the virgin to whom he is betrothed, is any way obliged to present marriage, but hath free power in all respects to do what he will, and hereupon judges

So that the conclusion is, that he that marries, even at this time, doth that which is absolutely lawful, and in the case mention'd, v. 36. expedient also: and again he that in the case set, v. 37. doth defer, and for a time abstain from marriage, makes a more prudent choice in the respects forementioned, v. 35. of attending the better on the service of God, and for avoiding of distraction.

39. The wife is bound by the law, as long as her husband liveth: but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will, only in the Lord.] 39. As for her that is once married, she is by that obliged to her husband as long as he lives, but if he die, 'tis absolutely lawful for her to marry another: so that in the doing of it there be no other circumstance that make it unlawful, or so that considerations of piety be taken in in the doing of it, and not only carnal desires gratified thereby.

40. But she is happier if she so abide in my judgment: and I think also that I have the spirit of God.] 40. But 'tis more for her earthy advantages to continue unmarried, and more convenient toward the serving of God without distraction, v. 35. according to my judgment, and I think the spirit of God guides me in making this judgment, though I have no express precept for it.

Annotations on Chap. VII.

a. Εὔνοια

V. 3. Due benevolence] What εὔνοια here signifies will be best conjectured by the use of the Hebrew עונה Exod. 21. 10. (mention'd after food and clothing) that must not be denied the wife. The Septuagint render it ὁμιλίαν αὐτῇ, accompanying with her; the Hebrew word also signifies εὔνοια benevolence, which is therefore here used as a modester word, instead of the other; the Syriack reads the love which he owes, and some other Greek copies read ὀφειλομένην τιμὴν due honour or worship, which perhaps is the ground of the use of the word worship retained by our Church, in the form of marriage, meaning that kindness which is here said to be due unto her: but the King's MS. hath ὀφειλὴ only, all that by vow of marriage is due unto her.

b. Ἀνεγκία

V. 5. For your incontinency] What ἀνεγκία signifies here will be best gues's'd by the Context, where the reason of the advice, συνέρχεσθαι, for the man and the wife to accompany together, being this, that the devil tempt them not, διὰ τὴν ἀνεγκίαν, ἀνεγκία being the occasion or advantage that the Devil takes hold of to tempt, must signifie their want of ability to contain: Not that it signifies incontinence, for that is a sin against the marriage vow, and will not agree with the Context, which supposes no such sin; but, I say, a want of ability to contain or abstain any longer from the lawful pleasures of marriage, as ἐγκρατὴς is he that ἑαυτὸν ἐν κράτει ἔχει, hath himself in his power, his own command, and so οὐκ ἐγκρατεύονται, v. 9. they that have not the command of themselves, so as to live chastly without marriage, and so ἀκρατὴς, and thence ἀκρασία the contrary inability to contain; which inability or weakness is an occasion of temptation, and will be an advantage also to the tempter, by which, when he tempts, he may be most probably able to overcome.

c. Συγγνώμη

V. 6. Permission] That συγγνώμη may signifie advice or counsel, will be gathered from the Grammarians, Hesychius and Phavorinus; Συγγενώσομαι, say they, (it should be συγγνώσομαι) συμβουλεύσω, giving counsel, and Συγγινωσκόμενοι, πειθόμενοι they that are perswaded by advice or counsel. And then the plain importance of this verse is, that in respect of the contrary dangers of fornication, &c. v. 2, 5. he generally gives his advice, that men should marry, &c. v. 2, 3. Yet for this he is far from giving any command, or laying obligation on any. For if upon experience, and long tryal, there be no fear of those dangers, then his advice is to live unmarried. For so he had said, v. 1. that it is good for a man not to touch a woman, and again he subjoins it, v. 8. that it was good for them to continue as he was himself, that is, in single life. And so each of these, marrying, and not marrying, is according to several circumstances, matter of counsel, but neither absolutely of precept. If there be danger of fornication, then it is his advice, that for the avoiding of that, marriage be chosen, v. 2. and to the same purpose, rather let them marry then burn, v. 9. And because every man hath not the gift of Continence, and it is not presently discerned who hath, therefore in general speaking, and as far as belongs to those who do not discern that they have this gift, the contrary danger is so strictly to be avoided, that the Apostle's advice, (though not command) is, that ἕκαστος, and ἑκάστη, men and women generally, v. 1. betake themselves to that safer course. But this still far from any universal precept; for in case security from that danger of fornication be otherwise to be had, then the Apostle's counsel and advice is to follow his example, v. 7, and 8. and either in Virginity, or Widowhood, to remain unmarried. This is the meaning of Θέλω γὰρ for I will, or would, not that he commands or prescribes that, but that, in case a man hath the gift of containing, he prefers the single life. For the Hebrews, for want of a word in their language to denote comparative degrees, use Positives instead of Comparatives, and accordingly θέλω to will, signifies here to wish rather, or to be more willing, to prefer, or recommend, as better. And that is the meaning of καλόν ἐστι it is good, both v. 1, and 8, and 26. that is, κρεῖσσον better or more eligible, if that circumstance of the contrary danger doth not hinder it, or outweigh on the other side. Of this speech of the Apostle's concerning Marriage, it is Tertullian's saying, lib. De monogam. Dixit hoc Apostolus indulgens, non præcipiens, What the Apostle here said, he spake by way of indulgence, not by way of command, rendring συγγνώμη indulgence, according to that other notion of the word, whereby it signifies pardon or forgiveness of a fault; and so saith Hesychius, Συγγνώμων, ἐλεήμων, it denotes pity or mercy. Thus it is possible Tertullian might interpret the place, being by the Montanists infusions somewhat unkind to marriage. But against this the Apostle's words are plain, (even when he advises single life as best at that present) if thou marriest thou hast not sinned, v. 28. And in this place the Context is no way favourable to that notion. For the ἕκαστος ἐχέτω let every man have his own wife, v. 2. and the γαμησάτωσαν let them marry, v. 9. (in case of the forementioned danger, διὰ τὰς πορνείας because of fornications, and εἰ οὐκ ἐγκρατεύονται if they have not command over themselves; see Note b.) is certainly more then this, even a free concession of marriage to all, and in case of that danger, an advice and counsel also. To which purpose it is observable, that as here συγγνώμη is opposed to ἐπιταγὴ command, so is γνώμη also, v. 25. where that γνώμη signifies advice or counsel, and not only permission, or indulgence, appears by the consequents, Νομίζω οὖν τοῦτο καλὸν——v. 26. I think this is good, (that is, as was said, better) for the approaching instant distresses, and again ὅτι καλὸν that it is good, or better, for a man to be so. From whence as it follows evidently, that γνώμη signifies counsel, as that looks on that which is better, and as counsel is generally opposed to precept, and as many things which are not under precept are yet under counsel; so in all reason the συγγνώμη differing so little from γνώμη, will by the opposition to ἐπιταγὴ precept (common to both of them) be determined also to this signification of advice and counsel. And so there is no question of it, that for all those who have not that command over themselves, which may give them some degree of security against the danger of fornication, it is κρεῖσσον γαμῆσαι, v. 9. better to marry, and so matter not only of permission, or indulgence, but of counsel to them.

d. Οὐκ Ἀκάθαρτα ἀλλὰ ἅγια

V. 14. Else were your children unclean, but——] The meaning of οὐκ ἀκάθαρτα, ἀλλὰ ἅγια, not unclean, but holy, in this place, appears by the Context to be clearly this, that the Children of Christians are not refused, or rejected from baptism, are suffered to come to the font, when others are not suffered: in the same sense that ἀκάθαρτα is used, when Peter refuses to preach to the Gentiles, because they are κοινὰ καὶ ἀκάθαρτα, prophane and unclean; where God, reforming his error, bids him Call no man common, which God hath cleansed or sanctified, that is, reputed fit to be made partaker (there) of the privilege of preaching, (here of Baptiſm) For the ground of this ſaying here, that Elſe were your, (that is, the Chriſtians) children unclean, but now are they holy, is only this in the beginning of the ver. For the unbelieving husband hath been ſanctified by the believing wife, &c. that is, 'tis of common experience, and from thence preſumed very probable, that a Chriſtian living with an unbeliever will inſtil Chriſtianity into him or her, and therefore they ſhould live together. This he farther proves by the practice of the Church about children, thus: Were it not for the great probability that the Chriſtian living with the heathen, ſhould infuſe Chriſtianity into him, there could no reaſon be rendred of the practice of the Church, why the Chriſtian's child, which is no more a Chriſtian then the child of an heathen, (Chriſtianity being no natural gift, born with them) ſhould yet be capable of Baptiſm, and thought fit to receive that Sacrament, when the heathen's child is not wont to be ſo admitted; and this, it ſeems, by the general judgment and practice of the Church, with whom 'tis thought reaſonable thus to preſume, that the Chriſtian's child ſhall be educated in Chriſtian knowledge, which of the heathen's child they cannot preſume, unleſs he be taken out of the hand of the parents. This conſideration thus propoſed by the Apoſtle here by the way, is of great authority to prove the Apoſtolical uſe and practice of baptizing the infants of Chriſtian parents, viz. upon preſumption that theſe parents will ſee them educated and inſtructed in the knowledge of their undertaking, and vow of baptiſm; and when any other Chriſtian will undertake the ſame for the children of heathens, there is little doubt but they may be admitted to Baptiſm alſo, paritate rationis, by analogie of the reaſon. And thus it was the cuſtom of the Jews before Chriſt, in their receiving and baptizing of proſelytes, (from whence that the Chriſtian baptiſm was deduced, ſee Note on Mat. 3. a) For, ſay they, this baptiſm belonged not only to thoſe which being of years came over from heatheniſm to the Jewiſh religion, but alſo to their infant children, if their parents, and the conſeſſus under which they were, did deſire it in behalf of the children, promiſing to let them know and underſtand when they came to age, what was required of them by their proſelytiſm, and on condition that they ſhould not then renounce the Jewiſh religion; which is ſince the office of the ſponſores or ſuſceptores, the godfathers in the Church, who do it in the name of the conſeſſus, the Church or congregation. This practice of the Church ſeems clearly deducible from this place, where by the Context is concluded, that it is ſtrongly probable, (and being by the parents and ſponſores undertaken and promiſed, it is by the Church preſumed) that the Chriſtian's child will be catechized, and conſequently that ſuch an one may be allowed Baptiſm on that preſumption, and that it was then in the Apoſtle's time the cuſtom of the Church to baptize them; which is here expreſſed by νῦν δὲ ἅγιά ἐστι, but now they are holy, the word קדש, which is vulgarly to ſanctifie, ſignifying among the Jews, to waſh, as when the High-Prieſt's waſhing his hands and feet ten times on the day of Expiation is called עשרה קדושין the ten ſanctifications, Joma c. 3. ſect 3. which being the word that notes the waſhing of ſome part of the body, and diſtinguiſhed in uſe from the word מבילה which is the immerſion of the whole body, (ſee Note on Joh. 13. b.) may perhaps be an intimation, that the primitive Baptiſms were not always a dipping, or immerſion of the whole body, but that the waſhing or ſprinkling of ſome part might be ſufficient, for that was the meaning of the קדושין. As for any privilege which the parents faith have to ſave the child, or infuſe ſaving grace into it, it is not concluſible from hence, nor any thing, ſave only this, that Chriſtian's children, 'tis preſumed, will be catechized and inſtructed in the Chriſtian faith, and ſo may, and frequently uſed to be baptized, but the children of heathens brought up with them, will not probably be ſo inſtructed, and therefore are not to be thus admitted to Baptiſm. That this ſhould be the notion of ἅγια and ἀκάθαρτα will farther alſo appear by remembring the nature of legal uncleanneſſes or pollutions. They made the man to be ſeparated from the congregation; They that were ſo unclean, might not enjoy the privileges of the Temple till they were waſhed or ſanctified; and that is juſt proportionable to the notion here given of it. And accordingly ἁγιάζεσθαι to be ſanctified, in Gregory Nazianzen and the ancients, ſignifies to be baptized.

Κοινὰ καὶ ἀκάθαρτα

V. 17. But as God hath——] In this place ſome ancient copies give us another reading thus, τί οἶδας ἄνερ εἰ τὴν εἰ μὴ ἐνδίσῃ γυναῖκα σώσεις, ἢ μή; ἐνδίσῃ—— What knoweſt thou, O man, whether thou ſhalt ſave thy wife, or no? As God hath diſtributed to every man——This we learn from Theophylact upon the place: τινὲς, ſaith he, οὕτω ἀνέγνωσαν, ſome have read thus. And then this will take away all debate, what ſhould be the proper notation of εἰ μὴ in the beginning of the verſe, reading it εἰ μὴ ἐνδίσῃ—— For though, if it were certain that that were the true reading, ſome probable account might be given of it, as that εἰ μὴ might ſignifie Only, or the like; yet when other copies have read it in a form thus perſpicuous and free from all queſtion, it will be more reaſonable therein to acquieſce, eſpecially conſidering that if it ſhould be as our copies have it, εἰ μὴ, not ἢ μὴ, yet joining that to the end of v. 16. and not transferring it to the beginning of v. 17. (as 'tis certain the ancient copies were not divided into verſes, or ſo pointed as ours now are) then ſtill there will be as little difficulty in it; for ſo the words will be very current, τί οἶδας, ἄνερ, εἰ τὴν γυναῖκα σώσεις, εἰ μή; What knoweſt thou, O man, if thou ſhalt ſave thy wife, if not? that is, whether thou ſhalt or whether thou ſhalt not.

V. 18. Become uncircumciſed] Ἐπισπασμὸς ſignifies attraction, and particularly belongs to a practice of ſome Jews, who under the Ægyptian tyranny firſt, then under Antiochus, and laſtly under the Romans, being oppreſs'd for being Jews, of which their Circumciſion was an evidence, uſed means by ſome medicinal applications to get a new præputium: And theſe were called by the Talmudiſts משוכים, that is, ἐπισπασικοὶ attractores. And that it is poſſible to be done is affirmed by Cor. Celſus the famous Phyſician, but eaſier, ſaith he, in a boy then a man. So ſaith R. Aleai of Achan, that he made himſelf a præputium, in Excerp. Gemar. Sanhedr. c. 6. ſect. 2. This the author of the books of the Maccabees affirms, 1 Mac. 1. 15. ἐποίησε ἑαυτοῖς ἀκροβυστίας, they made themſelves foreskins. So under the tyranny of the Romans there were many who therefore were circumciſed again by Bar-chuziba, when he took upon him to be the Meſſias, and got power among the Jews two years and an half, and was at laſt ſlain under Ælius Adrianus. This alſo Epiphanius obſerves of the Jews when they turned Samaritanes, and of the Samaritanes when they turned Jews; for in both thoſe caſes there was uſe of the ἐπισπασμὸς attraction, that they might be capable of being initiated by Circumciſion, of which number Symmachus is ſaid to be one, (the Greek Tranſlator of the Old Teſtament) when being hated by the Samaritanes he betook himſelf to the Jews in the reign of Severus the Emperor. Now that this practice is here forbidden the Corinthians by the Apoſtle, may ſeem to be from hence, becauſe ſome that were converted to Chriſtianity from Judaiſm, did ſo zealouſly renounce all their Judaical rites, that they uſed means to attract the præputia again, which was an act of too much ſuperſtition and curioſity, and ſo is cenſured here.

V. 23. Bought with——] In this place the whole Context perſwades to read Τιμῆς ἠγοράσθητε, interrogatively; for ſo will it beſt anſwer Δοῦλος ἐκλήθης; Art thou called being a ſervant? or is thy calling that of a ſervant? Thus v. 18. both parts of the ſpeech are delivered interrogatively, Περιτετμημένος τις ἐκλήθη; Is any man called being circumciſed? and preſently ἐν ἀκροβυστίᾳ τις ἐκλήθη; Is any man called in uncircumciſion? For the confirming of this reading, 'tis to be obſerved, firſt, That as before and after thoſe two queſtions, v. 18. the rule is given, that every man walk in, or abide in, that calling, or condition, wherein God hath placed him, contentedly, without making advantage of Chriſtianity for his pretence of a change; ſo 'tis here likewiſe, before, v. 21. (where the interrogation is varied, Art thou called being a ſervant?) and after this verſe, which aſſures us of the continuing the ſame manner of ſpeaking, and ſo that this latter is by way of interrogation alſo. Secondly, That after the firſt queſtion, and the ſhort anſwer to it, Art thou called being a ſervant? care not for it, all that follows, as far as to this, v. 23. is but as in a parentheſis, (but if thou mayeſt be free, uſe it rather, For he, &c.) and ſo what here follows, v. 23. anſwers to that, by way of parallel, Τιμῆς ἠγοράσθητε, &c.

Which

Which yet will not be a parallel, or anſwerable to the former queſtion, unleſs, as before uncircumciſion was oppoſed to circumciſion, and the mention of the latter was interrogative as well as of the former, ſo here the being bought with the price be oppoſed to being called a ſervant, (which it cannot be, unleſs it ſignifie manumiſſion from ſervice) and the form of delivering it interrogative alſo. Laſtly, 'tis apparent that the deſign of the whole place is to aſſure Chriſtians, that they are not to expect ſecular immunities or privileges by being Chriſtians, that their being ſpiritually redeemed by Chriſt doth not make them free men that before were ſervants, and this 23d verſe is a medium to infer that, and the concluſion repeated immediately upon it, v. 24. Let every one, &c. Yet ſuch a medium it would not be, (but the contrary) if ſpeaking ſtill to the perſon, or perſons, laſt ſpoken to, v. 21. that is, to ſervants, he ſhould here tell them, they were bought, or redeemed, by Chriſt, (as the ſame phraſe evidently ſignifies, ch. 6. 20.) and therefore muſt not be the ſervants of men. And that he ſpeaks to any other, viz. to free men, it can no way be collected from any words unleſs from theſe, v. 23. nor yet can it from theſe unleſs τιμῆς ἠγοράσθητε ſignifie being bought out from humane ſervitude by ſome ſum of money, &c. as we know it was ordinary to buy freedom from heathen Maſters. Therefore in all probability that is it which is here meant, and then that is beſt expreſs'd by form of interrogation.

h. Μεμέρισται

V. 34. There is difference——] For the right underſtanding of the word μεμέρισται, it will firſt be neceſſary to ſet down out of the King's MS. a various reading of this whole place, which differs much from that which is vulgarly received, and ſeems very probably to be the truer: It is thus, v. 33. Ὁ δὲ γαμήσας μεριμνᾷ τὰ τοῦ κόσμου, πῶς ἀρέσῃ τῇ γυναικὶ, καὶ μέμερισται, v. 34. Καὶ ἡ γυνὴ ἡ ἄγαμος, καὶ ἡ παρθένος ἡ ἄγαμος μεριμνᾷ τὰ τοῦ Κυρίου, ἵνα ᾖ ἁγία τῷ σώματι καὶ τῷ πνεύματι, &c. He that is married careth for the things of the world, how he may pleaſe his wife, and is divided, or diſtracted. And the unmarried woman, (that is, the widow) and the unmarried virgin careth for the things of the Lord, that ſhe may be holy both in body and ſpirit. Here μεμέρισται ſignifies being divided between two, the ſervice of God, which lies upon him as a Chriſtian, and the pleaſing his wife, which lies upon him as an husband; and contrary to this is the ἀπερισπάστως without diſtraction, v. 35. which belongs to the unmarried. Thus the Hebrew חלק, to which μερίζω is punctually anſwerable, ſignifies ordinarily to divide an inheritance, but among the Rabbines, in partes diſtractum eſſe, to be diſtracted ſeveral ways, and when 'tis rendred dividi to be divided, it is yet oft to be taken in that notion of diſtraction. Hence it is that the Hieruſalem Targum, Gen. 22. 14. deſcribing Abraham's faith and ready obedience, without any doubting or anxiety or diſtraction what to chuſe, deſcribeth it thus, Tibi perſpicuum eſt, nullam fuiſſe in corde meo diviſionem, quo tempore juſſiſti me offerre Iſaacum, &c. Thou ſeeſt, O Lord, that I had no diviſion, or diſtraction, in my heart when thou bad'ſt me offer Iſaac; and Gen. 25. 26. ſpeaking of Jacob's not believing the news of Joſeph's being alive, inſtead of non credidit, he believed not, the Targum reads, & diviſit cor ejus, and he divided his heart. The word in all other places in the New Teſtament ſignifies ſimply to be divided into two parts, Mat. 12. 25. Lu. 12. 13. 1 Cor. 1. 13. and ſo doth μερισμὸς, Heb. 4. 12. and μερισὴς, Lu. 12. 14. And there is no appearance of reaſon, that it ſhould do otherwiſe here. Now for the vulgar reading of the words, μεμέρισται in the front of verſe 34. (which indeed is very ancient among the Latines, as appears by Tertullian's uſing it De. veland. Virgin. c. 4. Diviſa, inquit, eſt mulier & virgo, quare? quoniam innupta i. e. virgo cogitat ea quæ ſunt Domini——) that cannot well be imagined in the notion of differing. For though the Hebrew חלוק ſignifies with the Rabbines, diviſio Arithmetica, diviſion in numbring, and thence differentia and diſcrimen, difference of one from another, yet firſt that importance of the Noun is not obſerved to belong to the Verb among them, and 2dly, the Verb in the ſingular cannot be applied to the two Nouns, ἡ γυνὴ and ἡ παρθένος, the woman and the virgin in conjunction, (mulier & virgo differt would not be true Latine, nor would it be better Greek) and therefore if that ſhould be the reading, the words muſt be rendred ſeverally, the woman is divided, that is, diſtracted, and likewiſe the virgin. But there would be no great ſenſe in that, the Context ſpeaking only of the diſtractions of the married, whereas in the other reading, to which we adhere, the whole Context is very current, and the meaning perſpicuous, as we have expreſſed it. But the not underſtanding of this notion of μεμέρισται for diſtraction, ſeems firſt to have been the occaſion of taking away the καὶ, and then the μεμέρισται which is in the end of v. 33. was of neceſſity to be put in the front of v. 34 and from thence all the perplexedneſs of the place, which is clearly taken away by the other reading.

Μερισμὸς Μερισὴς

i. Εὔσχημον καὶ ἐυπρόσεδρον

V. 35. That you may attend——] This rendring of πρὸς τὸ εὔσχημον καὶ ἐυπρόσεδρον τῷ Κυρίῳ ἀπερισπάστως, that you may decently wait upon the Lord without diſtraction, is avowed by the Syriack, and the figure of ἓν διὰ δυοῖν expreſſing one thing by two words, in the εὔσχημον καὶ ἐυπρόσεδρον, will bear it very well.

CHAP. VIII.

Paraphraſe.

1. Now as touching things offered unto idols, we know that we all have knowledge. Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth.]

1. Now for that other part of your letter, which enquires of the lawfulneſs of eating things offered to idols (on occaſion again of the Gnoſtick's iufuſions) and accordingly ſpeaks of the knowledge that you have (from whence the word Gnoſtick comes, ſee note on c. 1. c. and 2 Pet. 1. b. and Rev. 2. 6. that is, knowing men) that an idol is nothing, and ſo that that which hath been offered to idols may as freely and indifferently be offered to idols as any thing elſe; I ſhall now tell you, firſt, that we orthodox Chriſtians have knowledge too, to wit, that knowledge of our Chriſtian liberty, and therefore need not be deſpiſed by thoſe among you, who ſeparate your ſelves from us, in the pride of your hearts calling your ſelves Gnoſticks, which ſuppoſes all others ignorant but your ſelves; but our care is to join charity or the love of God with our knowledge, and that will encline us to ſuffer any thing for Chriſt's ſake, and ſo we ſhall not need to go to their idol-feaſts, to ſave us from perſecution, as the Gnoſticks do: and a little of this courage and love of Chriſt is much better, tends more to our profit, then all that pretended deep knowledge of their liberty which the Gnoſticks pretend to, and by that chuſe to go to the idol-feaſts, rather then confeſs and ſuffer for Chriſt. (ſee note on Rev. 2. b.)

2. And if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know.]

2. And therefore if any man pleaſe himſelf with an opinion of his knowledge, from ſuch ſubtilities as theſe, and ſo come to deſpiſe other men, and not to conſider what tends to their good and edification, this man (let him call himſelf Gnoſtick, or what he will) is far enough from the true Chriſtian knowledge, or from directing his knowledge to the right end, for that is charity, or the edification of his brethren.

3. But if any man love God, the ſame is known of him.]

3. If any man love God ſincerely, and ſo adhere to him in time of danger, or temptation, he truly knows God, and conſequently is known and acknowledged by God.

4. As concerning therefore the eating of thoſe things that are offered in ſacrifice to idols, we know that [a] an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is none other God but one.]

4. Having premiſed thus much concerning the name and ſect of the Gnoſticks, who are ſuch aſſertors of their liberty to do all things, and particularly in this matter think they have argued ſo ſubtilely for liberty to eat of the idol-feaſts, to make that an indifferent thing, becauſe forſooth an idol is nothing, I come now to the thing it ſelf, by confeſſing their objection, that an idol indeed, according to the notation of the Hebrew word, is nothing, there being but one God, and all the heathen idol-gods being but fictions of theirs, ſo far from being gods, that they are but the works of mens hands.

5. For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth (as there be Gods many, and Lords many)]

5. For though there be many called by that title, whether the celeſtial and ſupreme deities, ſo eſteemed among the heathen, or inferiour, of a ſecond order, called Baalim, or Lords, agents and mediators between the Gods and men, or whether the Sun and Stars of Heaven, or men of the earth deified. Theoph.

6. * But

6. Yet we Christians know and are assured that there is but one true God, as we had our being, so we likewise but one mediator, and us, all our prayers are

6. * But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we † in him, and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him.]

the Creator of all things, to whom all mens prayers must be addressed, as to the supreme, from whom are to think our selves obliged to be his servants, and to make all our applications to him; and so but one Lord, by whom all things were created, and by whom, as the only mediator betwixt God addressed to heaven, viz. Jesus Christ.

7. But all men do not know or think this, that these idols or heathen gods

7. Howbeit, there is not in every man that knowledge: for some * with conscience of the idol unto this hour, eat it as a thing offered to an idol, and their conscience being † weak is defiled.]

are nothing, (for sure they that are accustomed to worship them think they are something) nay 'tis clear that some men that are of opinion that idols are something, and who fear them as able to hurt, (and so that must confess, that the eating of those feasts pollutes those that have cast off the worship of them) and that continue their custom and former heathen course to this very time, though they have received Christianity, do still go to idol-feasts as such, even now that they have received the faith of Christ; and their sick, that is, wounded, sinful consciences, see note b. (that is, they that go on still in this old heathen practice, not yet laid down) are defiled or polluted by doing so. This is certainly a sin in them.

8, 9. Now this being supposed, it will follow that he that goes to the idol-Temple with these, though he be not of their

8. But meat commendeth us not to God: for * neither if we eat, are we the better; neither if we eat not, are we the worse.

9. But take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumbling-block to them that are weak.]

* or, neither if we eat not, do we any great matter, nor if we eat, do we come short, for the King's MS. reads ὅτε ἐὰν μὴ φάγωμεν ὑστερούμεθα persuasion, may yet be a means of confirming them in their error, it being certain that they will think he comes as they come, that is, with an opinion of that deity, and of the benefit he shall reap by eating of, (that is, partaking in) the sacrifice, which inconvenience being counted of, there is no so great benefit to be reaped by going and eating there, as that it should be fit to incur that danger. For though neither eating nor abstaining be in it self in the sight of God of any moment, yet this care will befit every Christian, that he so use his own liberty, that he be not an occasion of sinning (or continuing in sin) to those that are already in that erroneous sinful course, by confirming them in it.

10. For if any man that, through an erroneous conscience, goes to those idol-feasts, shall see a Gnostick, at an idol-feast and partake

10. For if any man see thee, which hast knowledge, sit at meat in the idols temple, shall not the conscience of him † which is weak be * emboldened to eat those things which are offered to idols?]

(who within himself knows an idol to be nothing, and therefore eats this but as ordinary meat) be of it, will not he by this means be confirmed to go on in his erroneous course?

11. And that Christian of an erroneous conscience

11. † And through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish, for whom Christ died.]

(see note b.) shall be confirmed in his error and sin, and consequent ruine, by occasion of this practice of thine, all which, through confidence of thine own knowledge, without care of thy brother's heathenish errors remaining in him, thou hast been guilty of, which is a sin in thee, not only of uncharitableness to him, but of injury or robbery against Christ, in betraying a soul to ruine, for the saving of which Christ died.

c.

12. And though it should be granted that your presence at idol-feasts were no impiety against God, yet sure this uncharitableness against thy brother, bringing him to a confirmation in his sinful practice, who through error is already in it, must be looked upon as an impiety and sin against God himself, who is concern'd in him.

13. If therefore this my eating in an idol-Temple of that feast, (or any use of my liberty in the same kind) be an occasion of confirming any Christian in an erroneous sinful practice, or bringing him to do any thing which is unlawful, I will sure deny my self the use of that liberty, be it supposed to be such as by the Laws of Christ truly belongs to me, when it shall prove of so dangerous consequence to my fellow-Christians.

13. Wherefore if meat * make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend.]

Annotations on Chap. VIII.

a. Εἴδωλον οὐδέν

V. 4. An Idol is nothing] The meaning of this assertion of the Gnosticks, and concession of St. Paul's, that εἴδωλον οὐδὲν ἐν κόσμῳ, an Idol is nothing in the world, must be fetch'd from the notation of the Hebrew word אליל, from אל that signifies nothing, that which hath no existence, Job 13. 4. Jer. 14. 14. Zach. 11. 17. and from thence comes אלילים idols, that is, so many nothings, so far from being Gods, that they are οὐδὲν ἐν κόσμῳ, nothing in the world, no part of God's first creation, only inventions and phancies of men, creatures of mens own creating, ποιηταὶ πονηρῶν δαιμόνων καὶ πλάσται καὶ μυσταγωγοὶ, saith Greg. Nazianzene, wicked men are the formers first, and then the worshippers of their wicked deities.

b. Ἀσθενεῖν

V. 7. Weak] That ἀσθενεῖν, signifies being sick, in the New Testament, hath been formerly made clear, Note on Rom. 8. m. And being applied to the soul or conscience, as here, it must needs signifie the disease or wound or sickness of the soul or conscience, which is sin or error. Thus in the Greek of the Old Testament, Nahum 2. 5. where we read out of the Hebrew, they shall stumble in their walk, there 'tis, ἀσθενήσουσιν ἐν τῇ πορείᾳ they shall be weak. And so generally the Hebrew כשל impingere, and offendere, to stumble, or fall on gal-traps, or any other mischief by the way, is rendred by the LXXII ἀσθενεῖν being weak, because they are wounded and galled by these means, and so made unable to go forward. So Rom. 14. 21. we have got together in the same sense σκανδαλίζεται and ἀσθενεῖ being offended (or galled) and being made weak. So Rom. 5. 6. Ἡμῶν ἀσθενῶν when we were weak signifies when we were in a wounded, mortally wounded state, noted by when we were enemies in other places, and there by ἁμαρτωλῶν ὄντων ἡμῶν, v. 8. when we were sinners, and by ἀσεβῶν, v. 6. impious or ungodly. So saith Theophylact, Ἀσθενῶν, τουτέστιν ἁμαρτωλῶν, ἀσθένεια γὰρ ἡ ἁμαρτία, ὥσπερ ἡ δικαιοσύνη ὑγίεια, weak, that is sinners, for weakness is sin, as righteousness is health. And thus, 'tis clear, it signifies in this place, the discourse being of those who take the idol-gods to be true gods, and consequently that the eating or partaking of their sacrifices, which is a part of the worship of those idols, will stand them in stead, prove beneficial to them, and therefore go on purpose to those feasts, and eat the idol-sacrifice, ὡς εἰδωλόθυτον, as, or because, (or under that very notion, or upon that reason that) it is so; which certainly is an erroneous, and so an idolatrous, sinful conscience, though it be in one that hath embraced Christianity. So v. 9. it is used again for these same men of those erroneous consciences, leading them into that heathen sin, to whom a Christian's going to (or being present at, and eating of) their idol-feasts, though he eat it but as ordinary meat, will yet be a means of scandal, that is, an occasion of confirming them in their sin. Thus again v. 10, 11. where they are called brethren, which notes that this heathen error was yet, ἕως ἄρτι, v. 7. continued among some Christians at Corinth, not the Gnosticks, (for they pretended to know that an idol was nothing, and so profess'd not to eat of those feasts as idol-feasts, but only as of ordinary meat, who therefore are here warned to take heed that they do not confirm these others in their sin) but some more rude, ignorant, heathen Christians, that through the customariness of their former practice συνηθείᾳ τῷ εἰδώλῳ ἕως ἄρτι, the custom of the idol until now, and secondly through their νηπιότης, c. 3. 1. their infancy or rawness in Christianity, (which made S. Paul look on them not as spiritual, but as carnal men, not as Christians, but Heathens still) and thirdly through the infusions of corrupt false teachers (mention'd in the following chapter, the wood, and the hay, and the stubble, v. 12. that must be fired out of the Church) and fourthly through fear of losing all that they had by the heathen persecutors (which seems to be mentioned c. 10. 13. and which occasion'd many to offer sacrifice in after-times, when Christianity had taken deeper root then it had yet at Corinth) where still in these dregs and lees of Heathenism, ism, after their embracing of Christianity; which will be no wonder to any that observes in this very Epistle, that they thought all kinds of Fornication, and even Incest, no sins, c. 5. and c. 6. 15. suing one another at heathen tribunals, no sin, c. 6. yea, and believed not the Resurrection, c. 15. And the villanies that were under pretence of Christian liberty practised by the Gnosticks, who took themselves to be persons of far deeper knowledge, at the beginning of this Chapter, were yet as gross and as heathenish and abominable as could be imagined, setting Christians at liberty from all their former obligations toward Husband, Master, Prince, and engulfing themselves in all the filthiness in the world, 1 Tim. 6. Jude 8. From this explication of ἀδυνεῖ will appear also the notion of it, Rom. 14. 21. where being placed also with προσκόπτειν stumbling, and σκανδαλίζεσθαι being scandalized, it must needs signifie to sin also.

V. 12. Wound] Τύπτειν signifying to strike, or give any blow, and being here applied to the weak or sick, that is erroneous, sinful conscience, and being parallel to σκανδαλίζειν scandalize, v. 13. must be understood in a notion which will be common to that other. Thus he that lays a stumbling-block in any man's way, at which he falls or breaks his shins, or otherwise hurts himself, is said πύπτειν to strike, or hurt, or wound him; and so it best agrees with this place, noting the confirming that man in sin, betraying him to all his after-commissions, whose conscience was before erroneous, and his practices sinful, which is as if in stead of curing a sick man, which sure stands in need of that charity, I should wound and hurt him more.

c. Τύπτειν

CHAP. IX.

Paraphrase.

1. AM I not an Apostle? Am I not free? Have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord? Are not you my work in the Lord?]

1. And that you may not think that what I say, c. 8. 13. of abstaining from many things that are lawful, is magnificently and speciously, rather then with exactness of truth, spoken by me, I shall now mention my practices of this kind in other instances. And this the rather, because of another part of your letter, which mentions the deep knowledge of the teachers you have now among you, and intimates how I am despised by them, and that particularly for labouring in the works of my calling, making of tents, and so getting mine own living among you, (see v. 3. 4.) Now hereto I make this reply, that without the vanity of comparing with them, I may surely say four things of my self, 1. that I am an Apostle of Christ, called from heaven immediately to that office; 2. that I had no obligation to do what I have done among you, (see v. 4, and 19.) that is, to preach on free-cost to you, as I have, that I discern my Christian liberty so well, that I know I might have done otherwise; 3. that though I was none of Christ's followers here on earth, yet I have been equalled to them by seeing, and being spoken to by Christ out of heaven; and 4. that I am certainly he that converted you to the faith, that planted the Gospel at Corinth, and so surely am not unworthy to be considered by you.

2. If I be not an Apostle to others, yet doubtless I am to you: for the seal of mine Apostleship are ye in the Lord.]

2. For the first of these, mine Apostleship, Whatever I am to others, I am sure I am an Apostle in respect of you. Your conversion to the faith is as great a confirmation of my Apostleship, as a seal is to an indenture or instrument, or particularly to the letters dimissory, by which messengers were wont to be sent to the Churches.

3. *Mine answer to them that do examine me, is this,]

3. For the second, that of my getting my living by my labour, the account which I give unto them that backbite me for this, (as if I knew not the nature of Christian liberty, and so out of niceness of conscience, or scrupulosity durst not receive any reward from them to whom I preach) is this;

* My apologie to them Ἡ ἐμὴ ἀπολογία

4. Have we not power to eat and drink?

4, 5, 6. That we know sufficiently that 'tis lawful for us to take along with us in our travels for the Gospel, a believing woman such as Phœbe, (see note on Rom. 16. a.) as freely as others of the Apostles generally have done, to provide for us in our preaching, that so we may be able to eat and drink, and yet not be forced to work with our own hands to get our maintenance, (see Act. 18. 3. and 1 Cor. 4. 12.) I do not believe that any greater burthen lies upon Barnabas and me, any greater necessity of getting our living by our trades, then lies upon others that have left their trades, and so I know my Christian liberty well enough.

5. Have we not power † to lead about a sister, a wife, as well as other Apostles, and the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas?

† to carry about a sister woman ἀδελφὴν γυναῖκα περιάγειν

6. *Or I only and Barnabas, have not we power to forbear working?]

* or have I only and Barnabas no power Ἢ μόνος ἐγὼ καὶ Βαρνάβας οὐκ ἔχομεν ἐξουσίαν

7. Who goeth to warfare any time at his own charges? who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock?]

7. For my Apostleship being a kind of warfare in the scripture phrase, a planting a vineyard, a feeding a flock, in all reason, in all these respects, I may expect a sufficient maintenance from them to whom I have these many relations.

8. Say I these things † as a man? saith not the Law the same also?]

† according to man κατὰ ἄνθρωπον

8. Nay this is not only rational discourse, but 'tis the doctrine of the law.

9. For it is written in the Law of Moses, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn: doth God take care for oxen?

9, 10. For when 'tis there commanded that the ox that treadeth out the corn, should, all the while he doth so, have liberty to eat of the corn before him; that precept that seems to respect the ox, belongs certainly to men, and signifies that men are obliged to reward all those that take pains for them, as the ploughman would never labour, were it not in hope of reward, and he that is at the pains of threshing, must in any reason have the encouragement of eating of the corn that he threshes out.

10. Or saith he it altogether for our sakes? for our sakes no doubt this is written; that he that plougheth, should plough in hope, and he that threshes * in hope, should be partaker of his hope.]

* or in hope of partaking, for the King's MS. reads ἐπ' ἐλπίδι τοῦ μετέχειν

11. If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing, if we shall reap your carnal things?]

11. And then much more we that have laboured spiritually for your good, planted the Gospel among you, may think it but just and proportionable, that we receive some part of your wealth from you.

12. If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? nevertheless, we have not used this power, but suffer all things, lest we should hinder the Gospel of Christ.]

12. This I know, The false Apostles that come among you make use of this power, and receive the fruits of it, and then may not I have great confidence to do it? By what hath been said, 'tis clear we might require a maintenance from you, and that we know this our liberty, v. 1. but yet we have abstained from making use of it, and have rather chosen to take any pains our selves, Act. 18. 3. 1 Cor. 4. 12. yea and to suffer hunger many times, (that you may not think we abstain from receiving from you, because we have no need of it) and so make no use of this claim of ours, as we might lawfully do, (see note on c. 13, a.) rather then be thus burthensom to our auditors, on purpose designing this, that we may not hinder the course of the Gospel, or keep men from being alacrious and cheerful in it, by making it chargeable to them.

13. Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things, * live of the things of the Temple? and they which wait at the altar, are partakers with the altar?]

* eat of that which is holy, or, feed by the temple ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ ἐσθίουσιν

13. In sacrifices 'tis clear that the priests, (see note on Joh. 6. b.) eat part of the consecrated offering, and all is not burnt upon the altar, the altar devours not all, but the priest divides with it, and eats or carries home some portions of the sacrifices.

14. Even so hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel.]

14. And accordingly God, that hath the free disposal of all men's estates, hath given an assignment to those that preach the Gospel, of so much out of their auditors substance, that they may be maintained by preaching it.

15. But I have used none of these things: † neither have I written these things, that it should be so done unto me; for it were better for me to die, then that any man should make my glorying void.]

† yet have I not written οὐκ ἔγραψα δὲ

15. But I have made no use of this privilege of an Apostle, but have preach'd to to you on free-coſt: And I do not now ſpeak of it, as if I would deſire to receive any thing from you, for I am much better pleaſed to do it thus, yea and I would rather chuſe to famiſh by doing ſo, then be deprived of this way of advancing the Goſpel, v. 12. and I am ſo far from murmuring or complaining of this, that I would not for all the world loſe this comfort and joy, that I have preached to you without receiving any thing from you, it being far a more bleſſed thing to give, then to receive.

16. For I am commanded to preach the Goſpel, and conſequently by doing ſo I can expect no extraordinary reward from God; I do no more then ſtrict duty, (ſee note a.) I am ſent by God with Commiſſion to do ſo, and that lays an obligation upon me, and 'twere a damning ſin, if I did it not.

16. For * though I preach the Goſpel, I have nothing to glory of; for neceſſity is laid upon me, yea, wo is unto me, if I preach not the Goſpel.] * if I do

17. If I did indeed preach voluntarily without a command, then even for my preaching the Goſpel, as well as for my doing it without any reward, I might have ſome reaſon to expect ſome reward from God, as for an act of free-will offering: But ſeeing I do it not ſo, now all that can be ſaid of me, in reſpect of the preaching it ſelf, is only this, that I had a ſtewardſhip entruſted to me, and I diſcharged it, which if I had not diſcharged, I ought to be puniſhed, and having diſcharged it, I can expect no future reward for doing that which I was bound to do.

17. For if I do this thing [a] † willingly, I have a reward: but if againſt my will, * a diſpenſation of the Goſpel is committed unto me.] † voluntarily * I have been intruſted with a ſtewardſhip οἰκονομίαν πεπίστευμαι

18. What is it then that ſhall bring me in a reward? whence ſhall my reward come? why, if I preach freely, and make no uſe of that liberty or power which I know I have, v. 12, 15, 17. (ſee 2 Cor. 11. 9, 10.) then this will be rewardable in me.

18. † What is my reward then? Verily, that when I preach the Goſpel, I may make the Goſpel of Chriſt without charge, that I * abuſe not my power in the Goſpel.] † What then is reward to me? Τίς οὖν μού ἐστιν μισθός; * uſe not μὴ χρησάμενος

19. For being obliged to no man, I have freely ſerved all, preached to them without any wages, that I might be more likely to bring them to Chriſt.

19. For though I be free from all men, yet have I made my ſelf [b] ſervant unto all, that I might gain the more.]

20. In like manner I have denied my ſelf the uſe of my Chriſtian liberty in many other things alſo, obſerved many ceremonies of the Jewiſh Law, which I needed not to have done, but only to gain the Jews.

20. And unto the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews: to them that are under the Law, as under the Law, that I might gain them that are under the Law:]

21. To thoſe that obſerve not the Law of Moſes, I behave my ſelf in like manner (not as if I were irregular, but ruling my actions according to the Law of Chriſt and Chriſtian liberty) that I may make work on thoſe that are not obſervers of Moſes's Law.

21. To them that are without Law, as without Law, (being not without Law to God, but * under the Law to Chriſt) that I might gain them that are without Law.] * obedient to the law of Chriſt, ἔννομος Χριστῷ

22. To thoſe which were not ſufficiently inſtructed in the nature of their Chriſtian liberty, I reſtrained my ſelf of the uſe of mine, that I might attract thoſe the more probably; and ſo I dealt with all other ſorts of men, doing that which I thought moſt probable to win them to Chriſt.

22. To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means ſave ſome.]

23. And all this for the propagating the Chriſtian faith, that I may convert the more, that by ſo doing my reward in another world may be the greater.

23. All this I do for the Goſpel's ſake, that I might be a † partaker thereof with you] † copartner of it, συγκοινωνὸς αὐτῶν

24. You Corinthians have the Græcian Games in one part of your country, and therefore cannot be ignorant of the cuſtoms of thoſe, particularly how in that of running in a race, though many run, yet only one comes foremoſt to the goal, and conſequently only one receives that reward, which by the laws of the game belongs to him that comes firſt. Do you therefore ſo run, and ſo it becomes us all to do, that we may come foremoſt, and ſo receive the prize.

24. [c] Know ye not that they which [d] run in a [e] race, run all, but [f] one receiveth the prize? [g] ſo run, that ye may obtain.]

25. Now every man that undertakes any of thoſe combats or ſtrifes, binds himſelf to ſtrict laws of abſtaining from all ſuch things as are hurtful for him, doth nothing but what is in order to his deſign. Theſe indeed in thoſe heathen games, meerly to get a crown of leaves, or boughs, which preſenrly fade or wither; but we Chriſtians, that we may obtain an unfading, durable crown.

25. And every man that * ſtriveth for the maſtery, [h] † is temperate in all things: now they do it to obtain a [i] * corruptible crown, but we an † incorruptible.] * is a combatant, ἀγωνιζόμενος * obſervers a ſtrict abſtinence. * fading † unfading

26. My running therefore is not as if I knew not my way, or my reward, if I run well; my cuffing is not a bare brandiſhing my fiſt in the air, which hath no adverſary to ſtrike at, or miſſes him when he ſtrikes.

26. I therefore ſo run *, not as [k] uncertainly; ſo [l] fight I, not as one that [m] beateth the air:] * as not at uncertainties; I ſo cuff as not beating

27. But (as in one of the exerciſes, mixed of cuffing and wreſtling, they give blue eyes and falls to the adverſary, ſo) I macerate my ſelf, and bring my ſelf under by denying my ſelf thoſe indifferent liberties which I might enjoy, leſt having preſcribed to others the way of ſtriving, and getting the victory, and the crown, I my ſelf ſhould miſcarry, and miſs of it.

27. But † I [n] keep under my body, and ° bring it into ſubjection: leſt that by any means, [p] when I preached to others, I my ſelf ſhould be [q] a caſtaway.] † I ſtrike my body, and get it under me, leſt having been a herald to others, my ſelf ſhould become a reprobate

Annotations on Chap. IX.

a. Ἑκὼν πράσσω.

V. 17. Willingly] what is the meaning of ἑκὼν πράσσω to do any thing voluntary, or, as a voluntier, appears by ſeveral parts of the Context, 1. by the oppoſition to ἄκων involuntary, as that is explain'd by a neceſſity is laid upon me, and woe is to me, if I preach not, &c. v. 16. and I am intruſted, or a truſt is repoſed in me, v. 7. For that notes the voluntary action to be that which is by law required and cannot be omitted without ſin, and ſo becometh neceſſary. So ſaith Theophylact, Εἰ δὲ ἐπιτετραμμαι, πρόδηλον ὅτι οὐκ ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ τοῦτο ποιῶ ἀλλὰ διακονίαν ἐντολῆς πληρῶ τοῦτο γάρ ἐστι τὸ ἄκων, by theſe words, If I am intruſted, 'tis manifeſt he means that I do it not of my ſelf, but perform the Lord's command, for this is to do it involuntary. And therefore to do it ἑκὼν voluntary is to do it of ones ſelf, without any command or obligation on him to do it. So Theophylact interprets it, εἰ μὴ οὐκ ἐπιτετραμμαι τὸ κήρυγμα, ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ δὲ τοῦτο ἐποίουν, it ſignifies, if this were not committed to me as a truſt, but I did it of my ſelf. 2dly, By the mention of καύχημα boaſting v. 16. and 2 Cor. 11. 9, 10. for that implies what is done, to be done without obligation, and above that which was neceſſary by engagement of any precept. And ſo 3dly, by μισθὸν ἔχω I have reward here, and v. 18. for reward ſignifies a return or retribution to ſomewhat, which a man was not bound to do. So the phraſe is uſed among the Jews, and Maimonides hath a rule, Mor. Neb. l. 3. c. 17. Ei datur præmium, qui injuſſus aliquid facit, to him a reward is given, who doth any thing unbidden. And therefore the whole phraſe here, εἰ δὲ ἑκὼν τοῦτο πράσσω muſt thus be rendred moſt clearly, not if I do, or ſhall do, this voluntary, as ſuppoſing that poſſible that he may (for ſpeaking of preaching the word, he had before ſaid, that neceſſity was laid upon him, and therefore he cannot be free, or at liberty to do or not do it) but, as ſuppoſitio non ponit, a ſuppoſition doth not affirm, ſo the εἰ is to be rendred, if, that is, on ſuppoſition that I did this voluntarily, a reward would then belong to me, εἰ δὲ ἄκων, but ſeeing 'tis not ſo, ſeeing I do it not of my own inſtinct, but by appointment from God, &c. διὰ τοῦτο οὐ φιλοτιμία τὸ πρᾶγμα, therefore there is nothing heroical, or matter of holy emulation, or ambition in it. And accordingly it follows that the matter of preaching being to him diſtinctly under precept, there was but one thing which could bring him any reward, viz. the ἀδάπανον ἐμὲ ποιῶν making it coſtleſs to the auditors, εἰς τὸ μὴ καταχρήσασθαι τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ μου, v. 18. in not making uſe of that power which he had, that is, the power of receiving maintenance from others, v. 5. which he might moſt lawfully have done, v. 7, 12, 14. and which Cephas and others freely did, v. 5. and the not uſing it would therefore be thankworthy with God, and yield him ſome reward from him. To this purpoſe clearly St. Chryſoſtome τὸ μὲν εἶναι ἐπίταγμα, τὸ δὲ ἐκ ἐμοῦ προαιρέσεως κατόρθωμα, one was a precept, the other a virtuous action of his choice, ἃ μὲν γὰρ ὑπὲρ τὴν ἐντολὴν γίνεται, πολὺν ἔχει τὸν μισθὸν καὶ οὗτος, for what is done above the command, hath proportionably a great reward. And again of the word Ἀνάγκη neceſſity, that it refers to the command, πρὸς ἀπαίδευτον ἐλευθερίας ἐν τῷ λαμβάνειν, in oppoſition to the freedom, or liberty, of receiving v. 12. So again Theophylact, τὸ εὐαγγελίσασθαι

Ἀνάγκη

Μισθὸν ἔχω

γελίσασθαι ὅτι παγμά ἐστι, καὶ χεῖρον, καὶ ἐὰν πληρῶ τοῦτο οὐδὲν καλὸν ἔργον, &c. Preaching the Gospel is a command, and so a debt, and if I do it, there is no great matter of virtue in it, τὸ δὲ ἀδαπάνως κηρύττειν περιαιρέτως φιλοτιμία, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο καύχημά ἐστι, but to preach without charging them is the ambition of my free will, or choice, and in that respect there is place of boasting, or I may boast. And so St. Augustine, Potuit beatus Paulus ex Evangelio sibi victum quærere, quod maluit operari, amplius erogabat; Blessed Paul might get his food by preaching the Gospel; but in that he chose to labour with his hands, he erogated the more, did more in God's service, then by any particular precept was required of him.

b. Δοῦλοι

V. 19. Servant to all] Servants or δοῦλοι, bondmen or slaves were wholy in the power of their masters, they had power of life and death over them, much more of their bodies for labour, without giving them any wages or reward. To do all that they are commanded is but the due debt to their masters, which if they perform, they are not praised, but punished if they do it not; whereas they that are free, if they do any office for any, they may in reason expect to be paid for it. So here St. Paul being a free man, no slave to the Corinthians, that is, under no obligation to preach without maintenance, v. 1. might in reason expect from them a reward for all his service, his preaching, &c. but he did all this for nothing, and that he calls ἐδούλωσα ἐμαυτὸν πᾶσιν, his serving them as a servant doth, without any wages, or as though he were their servant.

Δουλὸν ἐμαυτὸν ποιῶ

c. Πῶς οἶδατε

V. 24 Know ye not——] The discourse that here begins, and goes on to the end of the chapter, is all perfectly Agonistical, no way to be explained but by the observation of the customs in the Grecian games or ἀγῶνες. Of these there were four most famous in Greece,

Τέτταρές εἰσιν ἀγῶνες ἀν' Ἑλλάδα, τέτταρες ἱεροί, in the Anthologie, l. 1. the Olympick, Pythian, Nemæan, Isthmian, differing one from the other only in the places of the πανηγύρεις or celebrations. The last of them, the Isthmian, were kept among the Corinthians, and that occasions his speech in this place, οὐκ οἴδατε; do you not know? as presuming their particular knowledge of all those customs which he is about to mention or refer to.

d. Τρέχειν

Ib. Run] In every of those four ἀγῶνες, there were five exercises, as was said Note on Rom. 9. l. Wrestling, Cuffing, Running, Leaping, Quoiting, Πάλη, πυγμὴ, δρόμος, ἅλμα, δίσκος, which the Anthologie sets down with some little change, putting ἄκοντα for πυγμὴν not very fitly. Beside these five single ones, there was another kind made up and compounded of the two foremost together, Cuffing and Wrestling both, and because to the performing of that all kind of strength and agility was required, it was therefore called παγκράτιον from κράτος strenght, not fron κρατῶ to overcome. Now the particulars that are here referred to are only two of these, that of δρόμος or ποδωκείη running, the third of the five, and this of παγκράτιον, the one compounded of the other two; the former of these in this and the two next verses, the latter in the last verse of the chapter.

Ἅλμα, ποδωκείλη, δίσκον, ἄκοντα, πάλλω.

e. Στάδιον Olymp. Od. 13.

Ib. A Race] Στάδιον was the space wherein they run, ὁ τόπος ἐν ᾧ ἔτρεχον, ὡς ὃ πηχέων τριακοσίων δρόμημα, &c. saith the Scholiast on Pindarus, it was three hundred cubits long.

f. Εἰς καταλαμβάνει

Ib. One receiveth] This race is open to all to run in, that is, to all that aspire to the crown or prize, who come from all coasts to that end, and from thence the agones were called πανηγύρεις or frequentiæ, places of meeting or assembly. But when never so many ran, there was no possibility for above one to overcome, to wit, he that came foremost to the goal, for to him only the reward or prize belonged, which was called in their idiom, βραβεῖον bravium, or ἆθλον, which two words differ no more then δῶρον and λῆμμα, the first in respect of the βραβεύς that adjudges, the second in respect of the ἀθλητὴς that receives it. This he was said λαμβάνειν, or καταλαμβάνειν, or ἐπιλαμβάνειν (see note on Rom. 9. l. Phil. 3. c.) which we render by receiving, or obtaining, that is, catching of the prize or βραβεῖον from the top of the goale, the βραβευταὶ, or Judges, having passed their sentence that he hath overcome, and it belongs to him.

Βραβεῖον

g. Οὕτω τρέχετε

Ib. So run] The οὕτω here refers to the laws or rules of the Agones, the observing of which was as necessary towards the obtaining the victory or prize, as the swiftness was. For in the race, there was not only the two terms, from which, and to which they ran; the first called Κάμψις and πύρμα, the latter ἐσκαμμένα, βαλβὶς, τέλος, σκοπὸς, but also κανὼν, the rule, a white line marking out the path, within which they were to run, τὸ μεταξὺ τῆς βάμψεως καὶ τῆς σκαμμάτων, the middle space betwixt the two terms, from which, and to which they ran, or leaped, saith Jul. Pollux: and if they transgressed or ran over it, they did not νομίμως ἀθλῆσαι 2 Tim. 2. 6. run regularly, and consequently they lost the prize; so saith St. Chysostome, ἂν μὴ πάντα ἁπλῶς διέλθοι τὰ τοῖς ἀθληταῖς προσήκοντα οὐδέποτε στεφανοῦται, if they do not absolutely pass through, and perform all things that befit the combatants, they are never to be crowned. Nay, if others observe aright (that they were bounded with swords on one side, and the river Alpheus on the other) the danger was greater then that of losing the prize, if they transgressed, they not only lost, but fell into the river, or on the swords point; which is very applicable to our Christian race. Beside these many other νόμοι ἀθλήσεως laws, or rules, of combating there were, all which were to be observed in order to obtaining the crown, and that is the meaning of the οὕτω τρέχετε here, so run.

Νομίμως ἀθλεῖν

V. 25. Is temperate] What is here ment by ἐγκρατεύεται πάντα will be best collected by recounting the manner of the Athletæ in preparing themselves for the games; first Negatively, that it was not by λεπτὴ δίαιτα temperance or thin diet, but directly the contrary, many times ἀναγκοφαγία cramming, forcing themselves to eat, that by that means they might become παχεῖς and πολύσαρκοι, fleshy and corpulent. So saith * Lucian of Damosias, the Athleta, whom Charon durst not take into his boat, τοσαύτας σάρκας περιβεβλημένον, having such a weight of flesh about him. To this agrees the phrase among Physitians ἀθλητικὴ ἕξις, and athleticè and pancraticè valere, for a full habit of body. So Julian of Constantius, that he did not think agreeable to an Emperor τὴν τῶν παλαίστρας καλουμένων θρυλλουμένην εὐεξίαν, that famous full habit of the combatants, or palæstritæ, and therefore that he used τροφῆς ὑπὲ πολλῆς, καὶ ταύτης ὑπὲ κρίσει πολύτιμα πάντως ὠνισμένης, neither much meat, nor prescribed either for quantity or quality, ἀλλ' ὃ ὁπωσοῦν τύχοι but any that came next to hand. By which it appears, that the farther he was from the diet of the Athletæ, the more temperate he was esteemed, but yet withal that the diet of the Athletæ was a prescribed, set diet, both for quality and quantity, prescribing so much, and of those kinds which were fittest for the turn, to give them a full habit of body, and requiring them to force it upon themselves. And Andronicus Rhodius gives the reason of this, Ἡ γὰρ ἰσχὺς γίνεται ἐκ τῆς πολλῆς τροφῆς λαμβάνειν, strength is acquired by receiving much nourishment. It will not then be proper to render ἐγκρατεύεται here by temperance, especially when Suidas labours a whole page together to prove that it differs ἀπὸ σωφρονισμοῦ from temperance: But one of these three notions will be agreeable enough to it, and will by the way set down the manner of preparing them to their games. 1. It may be rendred continence; so the word signifies in the matter of Felix Act. 24. 25. and I conceive, Gal. 5. 22. and 2 Pet. 1. 6. where the addition of it to γνῶσις knowledge, seems to refer to the Gnosticks of that time, which pretended to great knowledge of their Christian liberty, and by that fell into all uncleanness and incontinence. So Tit. 1. 8. it signifies, being annexed to ὅσιον clean or pure, and differing from σώφρων temperate, which went before. And then the meaning of this phrase here will be, that whosoever fits himself for these agones, either wholly abstains from women, or for the time containeth, according to that of Horace, de Art. Poet.

Ἐγκρατεύεται πάντα

* t. 1. p. 266.

Qui cupit optatam cursu contingere metam,
Abstinuit Venere, &c. And so saith Eustathius on Homer Ἰλ. δ. Ἀθληταὶ δὲ τῇ ἀθλῇ πάντα καιρὸν ἐκ ἀφίεντο πλησιάζειν γυναιξὶ, The combatants, all the time of their combating, were not permitted to come near women. So Ælian of the Tarentinus Luctator, ἀθλήσεως χρόνον διατελέσαι Ἀφροδίτης ἀμαθῆ, he knew nothing of venery all the time of his combating. So Clem. Alexand. speaking of the Athletæ, saith, they did δι' ἀσκήσεως σωματικῆς ἐγκρατεύεσθαι καὶ ἀφροδισίων ἀπέχειν, contain in respect of their bodily exercise, and abstain from venery. And so in Ignatius's Epistle to the Philippians, εἴτις ἀγνεύει καὶ ἐγκρατεύεται, if any be pure and continent, &c. And after this example it was, that the ancient Christians that contained strictly, and lived a virgin chast life, were call'd ἀσκηταὶ exercisers, and thence Hesychius renders ἐγκρατὴς

Vit. Hist. l. 11. c. 3.

Par. in Titl. l. 2. c. 2.

Qqq

κράτεια continence, by ἄσκησις exercise. A second possible notion of ἐγκρατεύεται may be to signifie a constancy of mind in abstaining from all things that are hurtful; so doth Suidas render it ἡ ἀπὸ κακοῦ ἀποχή, abstaining from evil, and in Hesychius, ἐγκρᾶσθαι is ὑφίστασθαι, and so saith S. Chrysostome of Job's great constancy in avoiding the occasions or beginnings of sin, that he did πάντα σίδηρον καὶ ἀδάμαντα τῇ τοῦ ψυχῆς ἐγκρατείᾳ παρελθεῖν, go beyond iron or adamant in constancy of mind: and agreeable to this saith the Italian note here, S' astiene da tutte le cose che possino esserli in qual si voglia modo d' impedimento, He abstains from all things that can in any manner be hindrance to him. So* Antiochus Hom. 6. Ἐγκράτειαν δὲ φαμὲν οὐ μόνον τὴν ἀπὸ βρωμάτων, ἀλλὰ καὶ συνεκτικὴν, τυτέστι καὶ ἀποχὴν τῶν ἀπηγορευμένων, We mean abstinence not only from meats, but that which is comprehensive, that is, abstinence from all things that are forbidden; and so it may be applied to the matter in hand of abstaining from the use of Christian liberty, when that abstaining may tend to the edifying of the brethren, or be profitable to his ministery. Lastly it may signifie his having all things in his power, πάντα ἐν κράτει ἔχων (see Note on c. 7. b.) and then the meaning of the place will be, that the combatant keeps a mastery over himself, suffers not himself to be brought under the power of any thing, but is superior to all carnal desires, first conquers himself, then attempts victory over others also; first subjugates one desire, denieth himself the use of one liberty, then of another, and so πάντα ἐγκρατεύεται gets all into his own power.

* Bibl. Pat. Gr. to. 1. p. 1035. C.

Ib. Corruptible Crown] The ground of this phrase φθαρτὸς στέφανος a corruptible fading crown hath been mentioned, Note on Rom. 9. l. For in all those famous games of Greece, that were so honourable in respect of their institution, their authors, and the celebrity and concourse of people to them, there was yet no reward proposed or obtainable by any of them, but the leaves of some plant, or boughs of some tree, which therefore Lucian calls τὸ φυλλινὸν στέφανον, a leafy crown, and in the person of Anacharsis sufficiently derides, περὶ γυμνασ. p. 727. to which is opposed not only the στέφανος ἀφθαρτος here, but more clearly the ἀμάραντος 1 Pet. 1. 4. the not-fading crown, the not-withering inheritance; to which perhaps may be applied also that of Heb. 12. 11. where having made mention τῶν γεγυμνασμένων of them that are exercised, he saith there is laid up for them καρπὸς εἰρηνικὸς a peaceable fruit, which, saith Peter Faber, denotes the crown made of the Olive tree, the emblem and token of peace.

V. 26. As uncertainly] The phrase ὡς ἀδήλως refers to the form or manner of the stadia or courses among the Grecians, wherein every racer had his course chalk'd out to him, both the place where he set out, the goale whither he went, and the way that he pass'd, so that unless a man winked he could not but see perfectly, (for ἀδηλία and ἄγνοια uncertainty and ignorance are all one in Hesychius) which way he must go, and whither aspire. To this may be farther added the δήλωσις certainty of the victory, and the assurance that he shall have the crown, if he do regularly perform the race and overcome. So in Lucian saith Anacharsis, εἶτ' ὅταν τοῦ ἀδήλου καὶ ἀμφιβόλου τὰ νίκης ποσῶσι πονῶν, if they labour so, when the victory is uncertain and doubtful, &c.

Ib. Fight] Here is the allusion changed from that of Running, to the other of Cuffing (for that is the particular notation of πυκτεύω and πυγμὴ) or rather to that of πυγμαχίαν, compounded of Cuffing and Wrestling, and so of which πυγμὴ was a part, for so saith S. Chrysostome here, καὶ δρόμου καὶ πυγμαχίαν, &c. the Apostle speaks of two exercises, racing and that called pancratium, (see Note d. and o.)

Ib. Beat the air] Ἀέρα δέρειν or δαίειν beating, or striking, the air, belongs to that of Cuffing, a præludium or preparative to which was σκιομαχία fighting with, or beating, the air, which Virgil describes by

——— Alternâque jactat
Brachia protendens, & verberat ictibus auras.

He thrusts out his arms one after another, and beats the air with his blows; and* Lucian, Ἤν τινα ἀθλητῶν ἴδῃς ἀσκιμάχουν ἔξω τοῦ ἀγῶνος, λακτίζοντα εἰς τὸν ἀέρα, ἢ πυξ κενὴν πληγὴν τινα καταφέροντα, If you see a combatant exercising before the combate, kicking into the air, and with his fist giving it an empty blow. This was only a brandishing before the fighting, of which saith Budæus on the Pandects p. 74. that there is nothing more ordinary then that they that excel in skill and dixterity at this, (so that they can before they meet with their adversary, shew their readiness to take all advantages of striking and wounding the enemy) yet when they came to fight in earnest, and proceed à prolutione ad eruentum discrimen, from the prolution to the bloody combate, conciderint statim animo, nec artis suæ præceptorum meminerint, miscarry and fall presently in spirit, and forget all the precepts of their art. Where the opposition between this beating of the air, and bloodiness of the combate, coming to sharps, as we call it, may give us the understanding of that phrase, Heb. 12. 4. Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin, all that they had yet suffered being but a πειρυσμὸς or σκιομαχία, as it were, they were not yet come to the real blows, had but been in some skirmishes as yet. Another notion there may be of this phrase, to signifie the missing of the adversary, and hitting the air only. So saith Eustath. on Ἰλιαδ. ε'. οἱ πυγμάχοι πολλάκις ἂν ἐυστοχοῦντες μάτην κινοῦσι τὰς χεῖρας, they that contend by cuffing do many times miss, and move their hands (that is, strike) to no purpose. And thus will it here agree with the former phrase ὡς ἀδήλως for as those that cuff in the dark, though they strike never such καλὰς πληγὰς saith Aristotle, lucky blows, yet many times miss their aim, wound nothing but the air; so here, should the Apostle not be perfectly skill'd in the ἀγὼν or combate he was about, he might often lose his blows; but being perfectly instructed in his race, and what will bring him first to the goale, and being entred into the lists with his adversary, and set knowingly about his business, as it follows, ὡς παίζει καὶ δυλαγωγεῖ, he plays the pancratiasta notably.

V. 27. Keep under] What is the notion of ὑπωπιάζειν hath been formerly touch'd on Luke. 18. 5. and though there it signifie by a secundary borrowed signification to reproach, or put to shame, yet here 'tis certainly in a primary notion, to strike under the eye, or in the face, as the πύκται were wont to do. This being here joined to τὸ σῶμά μου, and applied to the matter in hand, of denying himself the use of his Christian liberty, must be rendred (according to the notion of עצע which is Hebrew for σῶμά μου my body, before mentioned, Note on Rom. 6. a. and is no more then ἐμαυτὸν my self) I do give my self blue eyes, as in Cuffing the combatant doth the adversary, pugnis ductis cæstibúsque impactis lividum reddere, I use great severity upon my self.

Ib. Bring it into subjection] Δυλαγωγεῖν to bring under, belongs to Wrestlers, who strive to throw the fellow-combatant, to get him under them, that so he may not be able to resist or strike. And this being adjoined to the former is the character of παγκράτιον, according to the plain words of Aristotle, Rhetor. l. 1. c. 5. Δυνάμῳ δὲ πάλιν, &c. παλαιστικὸς, ὁ μὲν δυνατὸς τῇ πάλῃ, πυκτικὸς ὁ δὲ ἀμφοτέροις τούτοις, παγκρατιαστὴς λέγεται, He that can oppress and get down his adversary, is called good at wrestling; he that can strike him down with the fist, an able cuffer; but he that is for both these is the pancratiasta. And so the plain sence of the place applied to the matter in hand will be this, That the Apostle is so far from making use of all his Christian liberty, that, saith he, I subdue and bring my self down, I bind my self to abstain from many things, which I might very lawfully enjoy, to labour with my hands, and suffer many hardships, which I need not; and all to acquire the crown, which belongs not to the idle person, or to him that doth no more then he is bound to, but to him that enters the lists, and overcomes there, and in order to that Abstinuit, &c. Thus is fasting expressed by the Arabians, that 'tis sui domatio & depressio, & subjugatio concupiscentiæ, (see Greg. Abul Farai De Arabum moribus p. 29. the taming and depressing of himself, and subjugating of concupiscence. And so Philo Judæus speaking of immoderate fasting (lib. Pejorem insidiari meliori) saith, they do λιμῷ καὶ κακώσει ψυχὴν καὶ σῶμα ἐπεγχειρίζειν, by fasting and ill usages subdue their body and mind, as wrestlers do their adversaries; and accordingly this of fasting, &c. is ordinarily stiled ἄσκησις and γυμνασία, exercise, relating to these agones.

Multa tulit fecitque ——— sudavit & alsit,

Ib. When I have preached] Κῆρυξ in the Olympick or Isthmian games is the præco or Herald, (the word by its origination seeming to come from the Hebr. קרא clamavit & proclamavit, to cry and proclaim, and from thence κηρύσσω and κηρύττω by an easie change) whose office it was from a scaffold or eminent place to proclaim the combate that was

q. Ἀδόκιμος

1b. A Caſt away] What ἀδόκιμος ſignifies, hath been ſaid in Note on Rom. 1. h. to miſcarry, and loſe the reward that he is contending for. Thus in good Authors ἀδόκιμον ἡγεῖσθαι and ἀποκηρύχθηναι are all one, and are oppoſed to στεφανοῦσθαι being crowned or rewarded. And ſo that will be the importance of this cloſe of the Apoſtle, that he denies himſelf many things which he might enjoy, as combatants are wont to do, puts himſelf to many hardſhips alſo, that (whilſt he is an Apoſtle to others, directing them to that courſe that will bring them to their crown, to wit, that of ſelf-denial and the croſs, by which Chriſt our captain attained it before us) he may not himſelf miſcarry, or be found unworthy to receive it.

CHAP. X.

Paraphraſe.

1. * MOreover, Brethren, I would not that ye ſhould be ignorant, † how that all our fathers were [a] under the cloud, and all paſſed through the ſea,]

* But I would not have you ignorant

a ὑπὸ τὴν νεφέλην

† that our fathers were all

οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν πάντες

1. Now, my brethren, for thoſe of you that count your ſelves ſo acceptable to God, ſuch eminent, and, as you think, ſpiritual perſons, that have attained to an high pitch of excellence and perfection, and ſo call your ſelves Gnoſticks, ſee ch. 3. 1. I deſire that you ſhould remember that the antient Iſraelites had many high dignations from God, many miraculous works afforded toward them, and yet were not all very acceptable in God's eyes; and ſo it may well be with you alſo: As for example, not only Caleb and Joſhua, that came to Canaan, but even all the reſt of the Jews (all which periſhed in the wilderneſs beſide them two) had the favour of the cloud ro overſhadow them, (as you Gnoſticks ſay you have, whatſoever you do) and ſo alſo paſſed through the Red ſea, and were miraculouſly preſerved by God (and yet after periſhed in the wilderneſs.)

2. And were all baptiſed unto Moſes in the cloud, and in the ſea,]

2. And that cloud and that paſſage through the Red ſea, which were uſed as a means to confirm the miniſtery of Moſes, to aſſure them that he was ſent to them by God, and ſo were a kind of baptizing them into the belief of the doctrine of Moſes, and were a type of our baptiſm, were allowed to them all.

3. And did all eat the ſame ſpiritual meat,]

3. So the manna alſo that came down from heaven, and in that was a type of Chriſt, (and which was indued by God with a ſpecial excellency, ſuch various reliſhes, to agree with every ones taſt, noting the various gifts of the Spirit among us Chriſtians) was rained down among them all, and gathered by all, and ſo all, as it were, partakers of ſpirituality, fed from heaven miraculouſly.

4. And did all drink the ſame ſpiritual drink; (for they drank of [b] that ſpiritual rock that followed them, and that rock was Chriſt.)]

b ἐκ πνευματικῆς ἀκολουθούσης πέτρας

4. And they all (thoſe that periſhed, as well as others) drank the water which came out of Horeb, which flowed miraculouſly, and copiouſly, and as the Jews now affirm, followed them for their uſe a great while, and that rock ſignified Chriſt; ſo that in effect all the wicked which periſhed, as well as others, had myſtically taſted of Chriſt, and ſo were partakers of this ſpiritualneſs as well as others.

5. But with * many of them God was not well pleaſed; for they were † overthrown in the wilderneſs.]

5. And though they had ſo many degrees of miracles afforded them by God, ſo many degrees of ſpiritualneſs, yet were they not finally in the favour of God, but were deſtroyed and their carcaſſes ſcattered in the wilderneſs, all of them, except only two, after all this.

6. Now * theſe things were our examples, to the intent we ſhould not luſt after evil things, as they alſo luſted.]

* theſe were types of us

τύποι ἡμῶν

6. And theſe paſſages of ſtory are very obſervable and exemplary to us, that you that count your ſelves ſpiritual, and pretend to ſuch high perfections and privileges, ſhould keep your ſelves pure from baſe ſenſual luſtings, leſt you periſh after their examples.

7. Neither be ye idolaters, as were ſome of them, as it is written, The people ſate down to eat and drink, and roſe up † [c] to play.]

† to be wanton

7. And that you ſhould not fall into the ſnares of idolaters, ſome of you going ſtill to the idol-ſacrifices, as ye were wont to do before your converſion to the faith, (ſee ch. 8. 7.) others, as the Gnoſticks, being preſent at thoſe feaſts out of a confidence, that they knowing the idol to be nothing, are not polluted by going thither (ch. 8. 10.) and imitating the idol-worſhippers in their filthy unnatural beſtial ſins (for ſo the Gnoſticks did) and ſo follow the example of thoſe Iſraelites of whom 'tis ſaid, that from their idolatrous feaſts they fell into filthy beſtial ſins, the rites of thoſe heathen feſtivities.

8. Neither let us commit fornication, as ſome of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thouſand.]

8. Neither let us Chriſtians fall into thoſe ſins of fornication and other villany, as the Iſraelites did at Shittim, Numb. 25. 1. after their idol-feaſts v. 2, 3. and were deſtroyed 23000 of them. A Judgment that might deſerve to be conſidered by the Gnoſticks of this age in the Church of Corinth.

9. Neither let us tempt Chriſt, as ſome of them alſo tempted, and were deſtroyed of ſerpents.]

9. Nor let us loath and be weary of the Goſpel, as the Iſraelites did Manna, Numb. 21. 5. and for it were deſtroyed by ſerpents, v. 6. and yet ſo do many of you by the Gnoſticks infuſions among you, which are quite weary of that heavenly Chriſtian temper of purity, and chaſtity, and ſufferings, which Chriſt commended to his diſciples Mat. 5. you muſt have ſecurity from perſecutions, and withal the fleſh-pots of Ægypt, the carnal heathen ſins, which were allowed in their worſhips: And for theſe two cauſes it is that you go to their idol-feaſts, to avoid perſecution, and to gratify your luſts.

10. Neither murmure ye, as ſome of them alſo murmured, and were deſtroyed of the d deſtroyer.]

10. Nor be you guilty of that ſin of murmuring at God's diſpenſations under the Goſpel, the nature of thoſe precepts which there he hath given us, as if the heaven promiſed were a good heaven, but the way thither, the duties to be performed, rough and unpaſſable (unleſs you may have your carnal joys afforded you.) For this were juſt after the manner of the Iſraelites, who brought up an evil report upon the land of Canaan, Numb. 13. 32. and from thence fell a murmuring c. 14. 2. and were ſwept away by the deſtroying Angel, that is, the plague, v. 36. and c. 16. 41.

11. Now all theſe things happened unto them for enſamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the * world are come.]

* ages

11. All theſe ſins and judgments on thoſe Iſraelites, who were vouchſafed ſuch wonderful mercies by God, which were his people under his immediate conduct, had ſo much of his Spirit among them, and yet ſinned ſo foully, and were deſtroyed ſo miſerably, are all emblems of our eſtate, if we do not beware of their ſins, and they are ſet down in the old Teſtament, as warnings for us Chriſtians.

12. Wherefore let him that thinketh he ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall.]

12. And therefore let him which is the moſt ſpiritual among you, that ſeems to himſelf to ſtand the firmeſt, take care that he fall not into theſe carnal ſins, which bring ſuch ruine along with them.

13. There hath no temptation taken you, but † ſuch as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not ſuffer you to be tempted above that you are able; but will with the temptation alſo make a * way to eſcape, that ye may be able to bear it.]

13. And though ſome motives there are now among you that may tempt you to join with the heathen in their idolatries, to wit, the perſecution of the heathens, among which you live, yet ought not this to work much upon you, to drive you out of your religion: For firſt, theſe are but ordinary, and to be looked for, (ſee note on Rom. 6. b.) and beſides, God that hath promiſed not to ſuffer his ſervants to be afflicted, that is, tempted (ſee note on Gal. 4. a.) above their ſtrength, will be ſure to make good his promiſe, and will give you a way of eſcaping their terrors, if you continue faithful and conſtant, that you ſhall be able to bear whatſoever befalls you.

14. Wherefore my dearly beloved, flee from idolatry.]

14. To conclude therefore, let no temptation bring you to yield to theſe ſins that are in their idol-feaſts, (ſee note on ch. 5. 1.) not at all to be brought to ſacrifice with them.

15. I need not ſpeak more plainly to you, what I mean by idolatry, you are wiſe enough to know: ſee note c. 1.

15. I ſpeak as to wiſe men: judge ye what I ſay.]

16. The Chriſtian feaſt of bread and wine in the Lord's ſupper, is the exhibiting to us (ſee note on Mat. 26. 26.) the making us partakers of the body and blood of Chriſt, (ſee note on Act. 2. c.) and is by us all acknowledged to be ſo; and therefore ſure the joining in an idol-feaſt is a participating of the idol-God.

17. And all we that do partake of that one feaſt, are by that ſuppoſed to be one body, of the ſame kind one with another; and ſo in like manner if ye join with heathens, and partake of their idol-feaſts with them, ye are to be ſuppoſed of the ſame lump and mould with thoſe heathens.

In the Jewiſh ſacrifices 'tis a known thing, that not only they that ſacrifice (the prieſts) but all they alſo that eat of any part of the ſacrifice, (the people) are ſaid to perform ſervice to God, to eat, as it were, and drink with God at the altar, and to partake of all the benefits that come from God upon the ſacrificers

18. Behold Iſrael after the fleſh: are not they which eat * of the ſacrifices, partakers of the altar?]

19. I need not then affirm (that which the objection c. 8. 4. denied, viz.) that an idol is any thing, or that that which is offered to a falſe God is in it ſelf at all different from any ordinary meat, from the contrary of which the Gnoſticks concluded, that there is no unlawfulneſs to join in eating at an idol-feaſt.

19. What ſay I then? that the idol is any thing? or that which is offered in ſacrifice to idols is any thing?]

20. No, I need not come to examine that nicety, 'tis ſufficient to ſay in plain words, that thoſe ſacrifices of the heathens are ſacrifices to devils, and that whoſoever eats of the feaſts joined to thoſe ſacrifices, doth communicate and join, and do ſervice to devils, and I would not have Chriſtians guilty of that.

20. † But I ſay, the things which the Gentiles ſacrifice, they ſacrifice to devils, and not to God; and I would not that ye ſhould * have fellowſhip with devils.]

† No, but that Ἀλλ' ὅτι

21. The Sacrament of the body and blood of Chriſt, wherein we communicate with, and partake of the benefits of the death of Chriſt, will not well agree with communicating of, and joining with devils: ſee Rev. 13. note a.

21. Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lords table, and the table of devils.]

22. Do we join devils in competition or rivality with God? do we think that we ſhall dare to give our ſelves up to all idolatry and heathen ſin, and yet that God will not puniſh us? when in the ſecond commandment he hath expreſs'd his jealouſie againſt thoſe that take in any other rival into their worſhip, and threatned to viſit and puniſh for it.

22. Do we provoke the Lord to jealouſie? are we ſtronger then he?]

23. Many things there are, (ſee c. 13. note i.) which I might lawfully do, but that they are hurtful and diſadvantageous to others, tend not to their edification, but to the ſcandalizing of them, either bringing them to, or confirming them in ſome ſin.

23. All things are lawful for me, but all things are nor expedient: all things are lawful for me, but all things edifie not.]

24. And 'tis not fit that any ſhould be ſo intent on what is lawful for him in reſpect of himſelf, or what is for his own advantage, as to neglect the benefit and advantage and edification of others.

25, 26. And whereas you object that ſome portions of the heathen ſacrifices are ſold in the markets among other meat, and that therefore, if it be not lawful to eat what is offered to idols, ye muſt not eat what ye buy in the ſhambles, becauſe that may be ſuch, and then this is a great retrenchment of your Chriſtian liberty, by which ye may lawfully enjoy any of God's creatures; I anſwer, that in that caſe I may lawfully eat whatſoever is there ſold, and not think my ſelf bound in conſcience to enquire and examine, whether what I meet with there were a portion of an heathen ſacrifice or no: For if no man be preſent to ſee and know that that which I eat is ſuch a portion, or if I know it not my ſelf, then ſure I am guilty of nothing my ſelf, nor can any other come to any hurt by this means.

25. Whatſoever is ſold in the ſhambles, that eat, * asking no queſtion for conſcience ſake.

27. Nay farther, if it be at an heathen's own table, where 'tis more probable that ſuch portions of their ſacrifices are to be met with, then 'twas in the ſhambles, yet there alſo ye may eat freely of all, and never think your ſelves bound in conſcience to enquire whether there be any of thoſe portions of their ſacrifices there.

30. For if I by grace am a partaker, why am I evil ſpoken of for that for which I give thanks?]

31. The only thing then conſiderable in this matter is the ſcandal, which tends to the diſhonour of God, and betraying men to, or confirming them in ſin, and that muſt be provided againſt, and care be taken, that in every bit I eat, or action I do, I may not diſhonour God, or do hurt to my brother.

Annotations

Annotations on Chap. X.

2. Τῇ Νεφέλῃ

V. 1. Under the cloud] The Jews have a known saying, (see Note on Lu. 13. c.) that he that enters into God's Covenant, is gathered under the wings of the majestatick presence. See Maimonides Tit. Isuribia. cap. 13. Whensoever, saith he, a Gentile will enter into covenant כנפי השכינה and be gathered under the wings of God's presence, or glory, or majesty, &c. The foundation of this speech is to be taken from that plain truth, that God obliges himself to take care of, and protect all those that undertake obedience to him; but the peculiarity of the expression refers to the manner of God's exhibiting himself in the holy of holies, viz. by the Cherubim's wings over-shadowing the covering of the Ark, to represent to us, that as the bird covers and defends the young ones with her wings spread over them, (to which our Saviour refers, Mat. 23. 37.) so doth God, that is every where present, peculiarly exhibit himself to those that keep his covenant, and think upon his commandments to do them. And what was thus represented in the Tabernacle and the Temple, was before more really exhibited in the departure of Israel out of Egypt; For there we find mention of the cloud and the fire, Exod. 13. 21. in, or by which, (the cloud by day, and the fire by night) God went before, or conducted them. Where first it must be remembred, that this going before doth not necessarily denote any distance of space from them, so as a guide goes before the rider, when he is only to teach, or direct him the way, and he follows after, but (as was more agreeable to their condition at that time, who were to be shielded and protected, as well as led, and that protection noted by God's going before them, the same God going behind them too, The Lord shall go before thee, and the holy one of Israel shall be thy reward) an encompassing them on every side. So in * Rabbi Eleezer מחנה ישראל כעיר מוקפת חומה עמוד הענן סיבבואת the pillar of cloud encompass'd the camps of Israel as a wall invirons a city; and therefore when it is said Exod 14. 19. that the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and stood behind them, I suppose it must be interpreted by v. 20. that the inner part of the cloud that was next the Israelites, being a lightsome part, and the external superficies of it not so, (now, when the Ægyptians pursued the Israelites) the cloud was so disposed, as to be behind, as well as before them, shining round about them, and yet so to be (in respect of the luminous part of it) confined to them, as to give light only to the Israelites, but none to the Ægyptians that followed them. And secondly, that the word pillar applied to it is not to be looked on as a solid body, standing, and fastned on the ground, and so still passing before them, but as pillars were anciently built hollow, as a kind of house, or dwelling-place, (and accordingly Simeon the Anchorite is call'd στυλίτης, because he dwelt always in a pillar) a concave body over their heads, and so coming down to the ground, like wings enclosing and encompassing them on every side; and accordingly 'tis here said that they were ὑπὸ τὴν νεφέλην under the cloud, (and so the cloud over them, not plac'd or fix'd before them) which is all one with what is expres'd in other places by the clouds overshadowing them that it comes upon, hovering over them, as a dove before it lights on any thing; to which the Psalmist refers, when he saith, under the shadow of thy wings I will rejoyce, and thou shalt hide me under thy wings, &c. 3dly, That this pillar of cloud, and of fire, were all one, viz. a bright, shining cloud, such as is described Mat. 17. 5. φωτινὴ νεφέλη ἐπισκιάζουσα a lightsome cloud overshadowing. For that the same word in Hebrew signifies both light and fire, hath been formerly observed, (see Lu. 22. 56.) and that a fiery or lightsome cloud, though in the day time, when the Sun shines, it shineth not, doth yet shine in the night, and give light, as fire, 'tis evident. And this may yet be farther demonstrated by a passage of Pindarus in his description of Ætna,

Which is, in his poetick expression, this plain historical truth, that *it was ordinarily seen in Ætna, that it * sent out smoke in the day time, and flames of fire in the night:* and though that Poem which Virgil left imperfect, hath confounded the times, and not taken notice (in his imitation of Pindar) of the distinctions of seasons, noted by him in the words ἀμέρσιον and ὀρφναῖον, yet hath he also mentioned both the smoke and the flames, the first in the style of a black cloud, the latter by great Globes of fire going up to heaven, Attollitque globos flammarum, & sidera lambit.

Just as here a dark smoky cloud in the day time, when the Sun out-shone it, and made the light of it useless and indiscernible; and a fiery flaming shining cloud in the night, when they needed such a conduct. And that I suppose is the reason why here is mention only of the cloud, not of the fire, though in Moses there is mention of both. All this being thus premised, it appears first, how fitly it is here said by the Apostle, that our fathers, that is, those Israelites that then went out of Ægypt, were under the cloud, and pass'd through the sea, these two being varied phrases of the same importance. For it must first be remembred that the Israelites pass'd not so through the Red Sea, as to go over it, entring on one side, and going out at the other, but came out again on the same side that they went in, as appears Num. 33. 6. (where before their passing through the sea, they pitched in Etham, in the edge of the wilderness) compared with v. 8. where after their passing through the sea, they go three days journey in the wilderness of Etham. And therefore secondly, this passing through the sea must be their entring into the channel, so as the sea first gave way to them, and then returned up to the shore again, dry ground being left to them in the midst of the channel, and the sea encompassing on every side of them, before them, behind them, on the right hand, and the left, and so as the cloud environ'd them, in like manner the sea environ'd them also, and as they were protected and secured by the one, so they were by the other. And therefore 2dly, from hence it also appears, why it is here said of them, that they were (baptized in the cloud, and in the sea, and why by both) baptized into Moses. For Baptism being among the Jews, (as well as Christians) the ceremony of initiation of all that entred into the Covenant, by the same reason that such are said to be received under the wings of the divine presence, they may also be said to be baptized in, or with, the cloud, and sea, that covering them with the cloud, and invironing them with the sea, being on God's part the receiving them under his protection to bring them safe to Canaan, and so to perform to them his part of the Covenant, and on their part, an obligation to be for ever obedient to God, under the conduct of Moses; the assuming of which, is being baptized into Moses. And this may serve for the literal explication of the verse, as it belongs to the fathers. Now for the application of it to the matter in hand, to which it is accommodated by the Apostle, it seemeth to lie thus. The Gnosticks were great pretenders to liberty, by reason of their being spiritual and perfect; and among the branches of their heresie, St. Irenæus insisting at large on Marcus's followers, observes of them, among other things, their pretence that they were φύσει πνευματικοὶ, naturally spiritual, by which means, said they, no sin was able to defile them, any more then gold was defiled by being in a sink, or the sun-beams by shining on a dunghill; then that they had a shield, or cloud, or covering, which whatsoever they did make them ἀοράτους τῷ κριτῇ invisible to the Judge, and that this belong'd to all that had their ἀπολύτρωσις, redemption, as they styled their Baptism. That these Scholars of Marcus were after the Apostle's time, there is no doubt, but yet being branches of the Valentinians, it is to be thought that they did, as the same Irenæus saith of them, take the old doctrines of the Gnosticks, and εἰς ἴδιον χαρακτῆρα μεταρμόζειν accommodate them to their own manner of speaking; and so we may, from what we find in these latter, discern the deceits of those former hereticks, that unclean sink of the Gnosticks, that pretended to that perfection of knowledge, called themselves the spiritual, and Simeon their leader pretending that he was that God the Father that appeared in Mount Sinai, they were thoſe Iſraelites, ſhielded by him with the cloud, carried ſafe through the Red-ſea, and had a ſpecial kind of Baptiſm, or πλύνεσις, which they, by their γνῶσις, that is, myſtical interpretations of Moſes's writing, made proportionable and parallel to the ſeveral things here named of the Iſraelites, v. 2. 3, 4. And this ſeems to occaſion the Apoſtle's diſcourſe in this place, where following their language of themſelves, and ſuppoſing, but not granting them parallel to thoſe Iſraelites that were ſo miraculouſly led and fed, he ſhews by their example, that if they go on in their ſins, they muſt expect that uſage that the Iſraelites then had, viz. to die in the wilderneſs, and not come to Canaan.

and
